It is twofold: first to protect life and property on the American side of the boundary from to enforce the neutrality laws. BRAZIL (Ind.) March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Nicholas Kiefner, when 11 years of age, was given a whipping by his school teacher, James Tucker, and the teacher was arrested, but acquitted by a jury, on the charge of assault and battery. That was fourteen years ago and it seems that Kiefner has never forgotten or forgiven the teacher for the drubbing. Yesterday, for the first time since Tucker was cleared by the jury, the two came face to face and the meeting was the signal for a reminder from Kiefner that he has a good memory. Walking up to Tucker, he recalled the incident, told who he was, said he had always intended to repay the whipping in kind and, with that, administered a sound drubbing to the former pedagogue.

LOS ANGELES SOCIALIST SHOT AT CASAS GRANDES.

Footsore American, Sole Survivor of Foreign Band Which Fought Rebels' Battle, Describes Death of Madero's Brother—Grandson of Italian Agitator Among Victims.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL PASO (Tex.) March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Roy Kelly, the sole survivor of the American legion with Madero's army, arrived in El Paso this afternoon in an exhausted condition, having walked the entire distance of 150 miles overland from Casas Grandes, where the terrific encounter between the insurrectos under Madero and the Federals under Col. Cuillar was fought Monday. Of the fifty Americans and foreigners who were with Madero at this engagement, Kelly alone escaped.

L. Guiterrez de Lara, the Socialistic main captain, who came to El Paso from Los Angeles, was one of the men who was killed. Guisseppo Garibaldi, grandson of the great Garibaldi of Italy, cavalry aide on Madero's staff, also was killed. These fifty Americans had entrenched in an adobe house on the outskirts of Casas Grandes early in the morning of Monday before the fighting started. They were in command of Capt. Harrington, and the main column of 250 was under command of Maj. Garibaldi.

The fighting started early and these Americans were subjected to a terrific fire from the rifles of the defenders of the town, who were using rifles and machine guns. The Americans were shot down on all sides of Kelly, who was shooting from a loophole in the wall of the house.

"A young man who was fighting alongside of me fell and was mortally wounded. I saw him take a revolver from his pocket and blow his brains out. That made me sick, but I kept pumping away with my 30-30, and when I stopped to reload some one would take my place. The roof was shot off and I saw that we could not last long.

"We decided after a few minutes' consultation to run for cover. We started from the rear door, and I was one of the last ones to leave. The barbed wire which had been stretched in the open prevented us from making headway.

"When we passed the house where Harrington was fighting we saw his body with four other Americans lying in the doorway dead. Garibaldi and young Raul Madero, brother of Francisco Madero, were running in front of me. I saw them fall and saw blood running from their mouths as I passed them.

"Johnny Greer was shot before we left the adobe, and was lying on the floor. Heath, another American, was also killed. I did not see De Lara killed, but Raul Madero came running into the adobe and shouted: 'My God, De Lara has been killed.' He had been fighting in another part of the field with 250 insurrectos."

R. F. Harrington, who was leading the American division, was from New York. John Greer was a former Deputy Marshal at Lincoln, Neb. Lieut. Valencia, another insurrecto officer killed, was from El Paso. Three others, George Moore, Sergt. Heath and Bedwell, were not known to Kelly.

It was about 10 o'clock in the morning when Kelly says they quit the adobe. He said that when they had reached the Casas Grandes River there were five of the Americans left. But the Federals opened fire and the last he saw of them was when they were running. On was wounded and had his arm in a sling. Another limped. That was the last he saw of them and he took to the hills. The firing continued as long as he could hear and he does not believe they escaped. The Americans would probably have escaped had it not been for the barbed wire fence. Many of them were hung up in this and shot and killed while trying to extricate themselves.

Madero himself was not at the engagement in person but was in a reserve camp at the rear. His brother,

GEN. MAUS HERE EN ROUTE.

Ordered by War Department to Report to Maj.-Gen. Carter—Likely to Command Brigade at Border.

Brig.-Gen. Marion P. Maus, U.S.A., late commander of the Department of the Columbia, with headquarters at Vancouver barracks, passed through the city yesterday en route to San Antonio, Tex., where he has been ordered by the War Department to report to Maj.-Gen. William H. Carter, commanding the division of troops just sent to the border.

It is understood that Gen. Maus will command one of the three brigades which compose the division of Gen. Carter. He is an officer of experience, education and long, active and honorable service in the regular army. He is a scholar and a thinker, and has positive ideas upon both war and peace. He has distinct opinions touching the enforcement of the neutrality law, and believes that the United States should do its full duty to Mexico in that regard.

Gen. Maus, being a discreet soldier talks guardedly with reference to the sensitive questions which have so recently been raised on the border, and it is certain that he will be heard from in a manner creditable to himself and the service which he adorns.

SUPREME COURT JUSTICE HEARS HABEAS CORPUS WRIT.

Woman Held in New York Asylum Will Be Temporarily Liberated From Custody of Los Angeles Cousin Upon Filing of $50,000 Bail Pending Decision.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The wealthy Mrs. Georgia Balch will be temporarily liberated from the custody of her cousin, Harlan P. Sweet of Los Angeles, and the espionage of a nurse from Bloomingdale Asylum today at White Plains, if Mr. Sweet is willing to give $25,000 bail for her and is willing to guarantee that Mrs. Balch will not visit her former home at No. 37 East Fifty-third street, now occupied by her daughter, Grace.

It was at the latter's instigation, it is alleged, Mrs. Balch was placed in Bloomingdale Asylum as an insane patient last June.

This decision was reached by Supreme Court Justice Mills at Mount Vernon when he heard argument on the writ of habeas corpus sworn out by Mr. Sweet, nearest relative of the woman, other than the daughter.

Justice Mills promised to grant Mrs. Balch her liberty pending the hearing as to her sanity before a jury, which will meet in this county next Thursday morning.

Justice Mills refused to pass on the sanity of Mrs. Balch until a decision is reached. His determination to temporarily liberate her is based on purely humanitarian grounds, as he wishes to give Mrs. Balch every freedom to prepare herself for the ordeal of the inquisition.

VELVET GLOVE IS STRIPPED FROM IRON HAND OF MEXICO.

Immediate Death Hereafter to Be Punishment for Rebels Caught in Act of Interfering With Railroads or Power Wires—Long Unused Provision of Constitution Is Revived to Give Authorities Power.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

MEXICO CITY, March 11.—Thoroughly aroused by the spread of brigandage and vandalism incident to the revolution led by Francisco Madero, and determined to protect property, the Diaz government next week will begin to wage against the lawless element a pitiless war of extermination.

Under a provision of the Mexican Constitution not used in fifteen years, the government will set aside for six months certain personal guarantees. Those detected in the act of highway robbery, of raiding a village or farm, or train wrecking or cutting telegraph or telephone wires, or even of removing a spike from a railroad track or throwing a stone at a train, will be summarily shot by those making the arrest.

The bill providing for this drastic measure was sent today to the Committee of the Permanent Federation of Congress. It was signed by Manuel Macedo, sub-secretary of the Department of the Interior, and clearly states that its enactment is the wish of the President.

That the measure did not immediately become a law is due solely to official form.

The permanent commission is a body endowed with power to act during that period when Congress is not in session. The members unanimously approved the measure, but under the law, it is necessary that the bill come up for a second reading.

It was referred to a sub-committee and this was instructed to report it to the commission Monday at a special session. That it then will be favorably acted on is undoubted.

EXPLAINS NECESSITY.

The decision to ask for the suspension of personal guarantees provided for by the Constitution was reached by the President in conference with the members of his Cabinet. This provision is one calculated to permit the Federal government to put into effect at time of extraordinary conditions, a form of government approaching that of martial law. Under the Constitution the government may go further and declare martial law, but the provision invoked does not abrogate the power of the civil authorities and does deny, in the cases of certain crimes, the right of formal trial to the accused.

Possibly the nearest approach found in the Constitution of the United States is that which permits, under certain conditions the withdrawal of the Mr. Macedo. In this the sub-secretary reviews the growth of the railroad system of the republic and calls attention to the part they have played in the development of the country.

Since the inauguration of the revolution, the note says, the lawless element has destroyed in parts of the republic railroad as well as other property, has endangered the lives of individuals, and has produced such a state of affairs that the President considers it advisable for the government to avail itself of its constitutional right to suspend certain personal guarantees.

An analogous condition prevails, according to this note, in the manner in which telephone and telegraph wires and transmission lines have been cut.

DRASTIC PROVISIONS.

Attention is called to the importance of the lines carrying electricity supplying light and power to many of the country's larger cities and the note says that the criminal elemant has at times interfered seriously with them.

The growing prevalence of highway robbery, pillage and the raiding of villages and plantations is discussed and the statement is made that the President wishes the measure adopted, also, to provide drastic means for dealing with those who commit these offenses.

In this note, Mr. Macedo indirectly quotes President Diaz as saying he regrets profoundly the necessity of resorting to means so extreme. The conditions now, however, are such that he considers the safeguarding of property of such great importance that it justifies recource to the extreme conditions of the Constitution.

Under the terms of the measure crimes specifed as those which will take from the accused the ordinary right of formal trial, include interference with the operation of trains, interference with telegraph, telephone and transmission wires, kidnaping, highway robbery and assault, or raiding of villages and farms.

It is specified that the crimes of interference with trains, cutting of wires, highway robbery and under certain conditions, raiding, kidnaping and assault, shall be punishable by death.

It is provided that in cases where the offender is detected and arrested in the commission of his act, the man making the arrest shall ask no other proof than the fact of the offense and the fact that he has a personal knowledge that the man arrested committed the act, to shoot him.

PARDON POSSIBLE.

In cases where proof of guilt is not so apparent the accused shall be given eight days for trial. This will be verbal and conducted by the authorities effecting his arrest. The first seven days

FEAR DEATH IN JURY BOX.

Italians Terrified by Camorra.

King and Government Balked Temporarily by Band of Criminals.

Threats of Punishment for Dodging Duty Do Not Deter People.

Carbineers Guard Court As Crowds Gather; Thirty-six on Trial.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

VITERBO (Italy March 11.—Formal proceedings began in the trial of thirty-six members of the Camorra, including the alleged head of the organization, Enriquo Alfano, also known as "Erricone," for the murder of Gennaro Cuoccolo and his wife, Marie Cutinellio Cuoccolo, "the beautiful Sorrentina."

For the first time in Italy, two presidents of the court were appointed to direct the trial, so that if one should unavoidably be absent, the other might take his place.

Notwithstanding the threats of the presiding judge to assess the severest fines on citizens for pretexts for not serving on the jury, almost insurmountable difficulties arose at the last moment and the trial was postponed until Tuesday.

The crown prosecutor strongly stigmatized such want of civic feeling, which he declared, if persisted in, would deprive the accused of their personal liberty and their right to be tried.

EFFORT TO GET JURY.

The authorities intend to leave nothing undone to bring the prisoners to justice and to keep out of the jury box any person thought susceptible to fear engendered by the Camorra organization or influenced by threats from supporters of the accused.

"Erricone," learning that the penitentiary in Gradi belonged to the Dominican inquisitors, and was the sea of the supreme tribunal of inquisition, made complaint to the director that he also was the victim of inquisitorial methods. He protested strongly against the accusation that he had inspired or directed, or was in any way connected, with the murder of the American detective, Lieut. Joseph Petrosino at Palermo in 1908, one of the crimes with which the governmental authorities are most anxious to connect the Camorra.

NUMBERLESS CRIMES CHARGED.

The prisoners are charged with the assassination of fellow members in the Camorra, Cuoccolo and his wife, but behind this charge are allegations of numberless murders and robberies perpetrated by what is perhaps the best organized and most desperate criminal society of modern times.

The real purpose of the government is to rid the country of this band. It is believed evidence will be brought out that will throw light on the assassination of the American detective, Lieut. Joseph Petrosino, at Palermo, in March, 1909, after he had been sent to Italy by the New York police department to seek information regarding Italian criminals.

It was Petrosino who arrested Alfano, the alleged actual head of the Camorra, after the latter had fled to New York City. The American officer sent "Erricone" back to Europe and he was arrested at Havre. Petrosino's death is believed to be the price paid for running down the man who for years had defied the authorities of his own country.

The murder of the Cuoccolos, followed by revelations made by one Gennearo Abbatemaggio, resulted in the present prosecution, which was ordered by King Victor Emmanuel and pressed by Signor Fani, the Minister of Justice.

GREAT CROWDS GATHER.

At daylight today an enormous crowd gathered in the vicinity of the former Church of San Francisco, which has been transformed into a Court of the Assizes.

Other crowds surrounded the medieval monastary of Gradi, now a penitentiary, where all but two of the prisoners have been confined, and the prison of San Lupara, in which the informer, Abbatemaggio, and the one woman prisoner, Maria Stendardo, have been held.

There was much excitement when the vans transporting the accused appeared from under the arched doors of the prison. The procession proceeded to court amid angry murmurs of the people.

Precautions were taken against an attempt to free the prisoner, who had many silent sympathizers in the throng. With the driver of each van were seated a policeman and a carbineer. Another soldier sat just inside the door. Mounted carbineers surrounded each van.

When the doors of the court were opened as many of the crowd as could rushed in, occupying every available place.

TROOPS GUARD COURT.

The crowd in the square before the building was so great that a company of infantry was called out to reinforce the carbineers and police.

YORKTOWN SAILS; SOLDIERS READY

Army and Naval Forces Rest at San Diego.

Gen. Bliss Secures Data on Peninsula Country.

Vessel's Sudden Departure Excites Speculation.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN DIEGO, March 11.—Gen. Bliss, commanding the provisional brigade in the Department of California, reported to army headquarters tonight that his forces are ready for eventualities, be they either maneuvers or service.

Admiral Thomas dispatched the gunboat Yorktown south this evening under orders from the Navy Department, and she will put in at various Mexican ports on the way south, to rendezvous with the Princeton coming north on the same errand. Admiral Thomas awaits orders, arrival of 500 marines on the auxiliary cruiser Buffalo, and the arrival of the armored cruisers West Virginia and Maryland.

BLISS'S TROOPS READY.

Gen. Bliss has put in the last two days in preparation for any eventualities. He has secured information and guides for the country south of this station, on both sides of the international boundary line. He has also secured the use of several square leagues of plain and mountain land in case he is ordered to perform maneuvers.

In case he is ordered to police the international boundary line, between the ocean and the Colorado River, a stretch of nearly 250 miles, Gen. Bliss is prepared to march his forces and detachments immediately for that duty. Despite the delay in transportation of the forces, his brigade is ready for service before any other of the army, as far as he can learn.

TAKES SUDDEN LEAVE.

Much mystery surrounds the mission of the gunboat Yorktown. It is reported here that she will call at the ports on the Peninsula of Lower California, Ensenada, Magdalena Bay and La Paz; that she is to report from each place by wireless and proceed to the mainland ports of Mexico.

Capt. F. A. Anderson, in command of the Yorktown, spent three hours this afternoon in consultation with Admiral Thomas, and sailed shortly before 6 o'clock without warning. So suddenly did the Yorktown put to sea that some of her sailors on shore were left behind.

Officers and men of the armored cruiser fleet who are on shore for any purpose whatever are on the qui vive for orders to return aboard at any time. It is believed sailing orders may be received at any moment, though what their character or the destination of the ships, none can conjecture.

The staff officers on Gen. Bliss's staff removed from the hotels and clubs in the city last night to the headquarters barracks, following the report that the forces are ready for service, and all officers and men are tonight literally sleeping on their arms.

Orders are expected both by the army branch and by the navy forces at any hour, as the naval men feel that their forces are sufficient for any duty that may be required at this time on the coast, the delayed ships being left to follow the main body.

It is 600 miles to Magdalena Bay and 1100 to the nearest safe harbor on the Mexican mainland. The nearest Mexican forces are at Ensenada, a small town ninety miles south of San Diego. General Bliss is informed that there are 500 Mexican troops in this place, but no heavy guns. It is reported that a similar force is quartered at La Paz, 500 miles south of Ensenada.

REBELS ON PENINSULA.

The only rebel forces on the peninsula of Baja California are the insurrectos under Berthold and Leyva, at Mexicali, the number of which is unknown, and 130 men under the leadership of a half-breed negro named Salinas, near Tecarte, east of Tia Juana, Lower California, about twenty miles. This force threatens Tia Juana, where are less than fifty Mexican troops.

Capt. Evans, in command of two companies of infantry on duty on the Mexican border at Tia Juana and at Campo, about twenty miles south of here, reports to Gen. Bliss that an armed band of insurrectos numbering about 130 men are in the field beyond a strip five miles south of the line.

This force is under the leadership of Francisco Salinas and is reported to be marching westward toward Tia Juana, the customs station on the Mexican side near the mouth of the Tia Juana River.

Capt. Evans reports that the men have been drifting across the line east of Campo and east of Tia Juana for some days and that they have been joined from time to time by deserters from the Mexican army. A rurale, or Mexican gendarme, was captured by this band Saturday and made his escape to Ensenada where he warned the Federal officers in command of the approach of the insurrectos. Preparations for the defense of Tia Juana have been completed. A small scouting force was sent out Saturday afternoon, but had not returned at 9 o'clock.

Mexican President Cables Paris He's Not Disturbed by America.

[Associated Press Night Report.]

PARIS, March 11.—In reply to a request for an expression of opinion relative to the concentration of American troops in Texas, Porfirio Diaz, President of Mexico, cabled the following message:

"The government of the United States has been careful to explain itself concerning the concentration of troops on the frontier of Mexico.

"There is, as the international press has already pointed out,

UNIONITE ARRESTED ON LINE.

He was brought to the army camp and identified by the civil authorities as a fellow who has been here two or three days and who had been making anarchistic statements to many different people.

He then claimed to be simply a German scientist whose hobby was electrical fixtures.

"I used to wire houses and install electric alarms and bells," he said, to the officers.

"What do you do with these fine field glasses in your business?" asked an officer.

"I was working on a big ranch and had to have the glasses to find the cattle," he answered promptly.

"What were you doing with dynamite?"

"Oh, I use a little in my experiments," he said, evasively. He had a quick excuse for each piece of peculiar apparatus.

CURSES GOVERNMENT.

Finally growing wrathy he cursed the government, said that he paid taxes to keep the ruffian soldiers in idleness and that the whole system was wrong.

"I am not an insurgent and would not go across the line if I had a chance," he then affirmed. "I don't want to get mixed up with them. I am a socialist but independent of every organization in the world. Governments are wrong as they are and the time is coming when we will have things fixed to suit ourselves."

The officers have him sized up as a labor union anarchist, who came here because of an opportunity to work off some of his dynamite and stir up some excitement and attract some attention. He might have had designs against the United States soldiers encamped here as he would have had an easy escape across the line after pulling off his dynamite stunt.

Officers searched his camp in the river bed to find some traces of laid wires, but found none.

He is being held now by the civil authorities, charged with being a suspicious character, carrying concealed weapons and unable to explain the use he was to make of the high explosive. He may be taken to Los Angeles and further investigated. He is a German, about forty-five years old, has the usual anarchistic beard, but speaks good English.

Charge Is Made Against Them of Violating Neutrality Laws by Taking Recruits Over the Border.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NOGALES (Ariz.) March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Charged with enlisting men and with crossing the border as soldiers, Francisco Cabueta, Rafael Quieros and Diego Castelium were arrested at Oro Blanco today for a violation of the neutrality laws. The three men are believed to be the three that escaped at the time the Federals captured R. Dracome and twelve rebel recruits at Altar, Sonora. Dracome is said to have visited the insurrecto junta in Los Angeles several times recently in connection with the gathering of rebel forces.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NOGALES (Ariz.) March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A strong force of rurales, a portion of Col. Kosterlitsky's command, is now along the border on the Mexican side of the line to prevent the insurrectos from receiving supplies, arms, ammunition and recruits fro mthe American side. This rurale force is almost as strong in numbers as the force of United States cavalry stationed here. Col. Kosterlitsky, who was here last night in attendance at the ball given for the American and Mexican army officers, returned today to headquarters at Magdalena.

DYNAMITE SHIPMENT O. K.

MEXICO GIVES PERMISSION.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

MEXICO CITY, March 11.—Rescinding its order that no more dynamite should be shipped to mines, the Mexican government has notified agents at Torreon for a French dynamite company that they may send the explosive in whatever quantity they choose and over whatever railroad they select. This order has given much satisfaction to the mining interests and doubtless will prevent the closing on May 1 of the American Smelting and Refining Company's plant at Velardena and of all its plants in Mexico on June 1.

BIG SHIPMENT TO TEXAS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, March 11.—The largest single meat shipment on a United States order since the Spanish-American war, left the Union stock yards for Texas today. There were six carloads of bacon, corned beef and other meats, and several more are ready for transit. "This is scarcely enough for twenty days," said Col. Thomas Cruz, chief quartermaster, "and we shall have heavier requirements for some time to come. We may have to provide hay and grain from here."

Why The Times Prints More Classified Advertising Than Any Other Newspaper in the World.

REASONS

VOLUME OF CIRCULATION: The Times has more bona fide subscribers than any other newspaper in the Southwest.

QUALITY OF CIRCULATION: The Times is largely read by our "average intelligent citizens," progressive and industrious—the people who make the "wheels go round," and who watch the advertisements for money-saving bargains and money-making opportunities.

CHARACTER OF ADVERTISING: The Times does not print turf, matrimonial, or objectionable medical advertising or announcements of questionable financial enterprises. This inspires confidence in the character of the advertisements published.

CLASSIFICATION OF ADVERTISING: The Times will not mis-classify advertisements merely to satisfy the unreasonable exactions of patrons. It has 75 classified headings and numerous sub-headings, which cover everything, so that readers can find readily just what they want.

IMPARTIALITY: The Times does not give large advertisers any advantage over small patrons. All "Liner" advertisements, short and long, are set in type of the same size.

LOW RATES: The Times advertising rate per line, measured by the quantity and persuading power of its circulation, is lower than the rate of any other paper of the Pacific Coast.

VOLUME OF ADVERTISING: The Times regularly prints more advertising than any other newspaper in the world, and more "Liners," month after month, year in and year out, than the aggregate of all its local rivals.

RESULTS: The overwhelming preference of local business men, experienced advertisers, for The Times as a sound advertising medium indicates the result-getting power of its columns. The best criterion of the profitableness of a paper's columns to its advertising patrons is the extent to which those columns are used. This is indisputable—beyond question.

SPECIAL FEATURES: The Times' splendid new mechanical equipment; its attractive typographical appearance; its Free Information Bureau, and its efficient Telephone Department, also have been helpful in the attainment of the recognized advertising supremacy of the paper. No newspaper anywhere gives closer, more painstaking or more conscientious care to its "Liners," short and long alike, than does the Los Angeles Times. A little one-time, 25-cent notice receives as careful attention as does a $10.00 advertisement.

STANDING AND PRESTIGE: Its editorial excellence; its unparalleled news service, covering the entire civilized globe; its pleasing literary qualities; its vigorous patriotism, courage and loyalty, and its bold, rock-like stand for the precious principle of Freedom in the Industries; its devotion to the best interests of Los Angeles and the great Southwest, and the fighting spirit, "staying qualities" and intellectual brilliancy of the editor and principal owner, have given The Times its widespread influence, and justify it in refusing to take a back seat.

For the week ending Saturday, March 11, The Times printed 14,319 agate "Liners," or 2566 more than the aggregate number printed by the four other Los Angeles papers, and 6706 more than its nearest local competition.

Outspoken.

MEXICAN MINISTER OF FINANCE SPEAKS FREELY ON SITUATION.

Characterizes as Absurd Newspaper Reports of Plan to Place Him in Presidential Chair—Deplores Mistaken Ideas Prevalent Regarding Intentions of United States and Declares That Intervention Would Mean War.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, March 11.—"After Diaz, what?"

Senor Jose Limantour, Mexican Minister of Finance, in his apartment overlooking Central Park, addressed himself to the question with an indignation foreign to his usual poised and courtly manner.

He had been shown the report printed in some evening newspaper that American financial interests with dominant holdings in Mexico have set on foot a plan to procure the resignation of President Diaz and to set up Senor Limantour himself in the executive chair. The suggestion that private capital, and foreign capital at that, could make and unmake Mexican administrations and ministries provoked both his ridicule and his anger.

"How stupid," was the first word.

"I should be the last person to suspect of lending myself to such a design," he added, "even if by a stretch of imagination one could suppose it true. It is no secret that President Diaz has several times asked me to accept the Presidency at the expiration of his term. I have always refused, because the duties which I now fulfill are those most congenial to me and because I believe I can be of most service to my country by continuing with them. There is no truth in the report.

"If it is true that the insurrectionists, or certain of their leaders, hold me in some esteem, that is because I have acted as adviser for the grandfather of these Maderos who are now leaders in the present uprising. They have grown to be a wealthy family, and their wealth would seem to indicate that they have prospered under the government which they now attack."

EXPLAINS DIAZ'S ACTION.

The Mexican Minister was asked to explain a dispatch from Mexico City received this afternoon that the government proposed to suspend the constitutional guarantees throughout the republic, with the explanation that "this means a mild form of martial law."

"Not at all," he said, "what it means is not martial law, even in a mild form, but an abbreviation of civil procedure. Prisoners will still be tried before a civil judge, but the court procedure will be curtailed.

"To return to President Diaz for a moment, I wish to make myself plain. Much has been printed as to the effect that his death would have on Mexico. President Diaz is truly a great man and his death would be an inestimable loss to Mexico, but even a national bereavement does not mean that civil government would disappear from the face of the land.

"It has been said, I think that the government has under advisement a programme of reform, 'independently of the present unrest.'

"In any event it is certain that such a programme is under consideration and that its development only awaits the laying down of arms by the rebels.

INTERVENTION MEANS WAR.

"Now, as to this matter of intervention, the word has been much used and loosely used, although I recognize that it has not been employed by your government. I wonder do the newspapers that print it and the persons who speak it so freely, realize what it means?

"I have said today that I am a great believer in the keen sense of justice of the American people. I wish to reaffirm that most emphatically, and wish, most seriously, to call attention to what intervention, so called, in this case must mean.

"When an armed force crosses the occupation, and what do invasion and occupation mean except war?

"I ask the sober sense of the great masses of the American people to dwell on that word. What has Mexico done to deserve a threat of war? None has been made by the American government, but the inference of such a threat has been taken by the newspapers.

"I do not believe it is warranted by the wishes of the American people. On the border there may be those who sympathize with the insurrectos. We know, in fact, that there are trouble makers in plenty, and that leads to another point.

"I said this morning that 'possibly most of the money for the movement had been raised in the United States.' Understand, I do not wish to imply that responsible persons have interested themselves.

"I do not say that much money has been raised, because much has not been needed; but I do say that we have positive evidence from many sources to show that the aggregate of small contributions from Americans has enabled the insurrection to endure even as long as it has."

"Then you do not approve," it was suggested, "of the assignment reported today, of two American war vessels to patrol duty along the Mexican coast."

"I cannot say that I disapprove of what may be the wise judgment of a friendly power," replied Limantour, "but I may say that I do not understand. It does not appear to me how these two ships can be co-operating with the roops in general maneuvers at so great a distance from their natural base.

"Shall I say what it seems to mean to? I think it is an attempt to impress on us what a powerful neighbor we have in the north, how wide her arms can stretch. And such an impression does not need to be conveyed anew, because there are already 15,000,000 persons in Mexico who realize how great is the United States."

So closed the interview, and Senor Limantour hurried to an appointment with Senor de La Barra, the Mexican Ambassador, who came from Washington this afternoon. A long telegram was received by Senor de La Barra, and he said that if important news developed from it there would be an announcement later.

REBELS IMPRISON AN AMERICAN.

State Department Informed of Occurrence in Chihuahua by Vice-Consul—No Reason Assigned.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 11.—K. C. Hays, an American, has been taken prisoner by the Mexican revolutionists in Chihuahua. This information reached the State Department in a telegram from American Vice-Consul Leonard, who said that while he had had no communication with Hays, he did not consider him in danger.

Nothing is known here as to the American's antecedents or the reason for his arrest.

The detention of Hays, it is said, marks a departure in the previous policy of the insurrectos, who, it is pointed out, have refrained in the past from interference with Americans in the slightest degree.

In view of their past intense regard for American interests, it was suggested in some quarters that possibly the revolutionists had resorted to a change of policy to involve the Mexican government with the United States.

Rebels Learn Federal Force Is Massing to Make Attack on Mexicali and Abandon Previous Plans.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

MEXICALI (Mex.) March 11.—The projected movement of the insurrectos toward Ensenada has been delayed indefinitely by news brought from Calexico that the Mexican Consul stationed there has received advices to the effect that a formidable force of Federals is nearby and preparing to attack Mexicali.

Gen. Leyva today admitted that John K. Turner is in this vicinity, awaiting a favorable opportunity to cross the line from the American side. The insurrectos accept as true the report that Turner has received from the junta a commission, which endows him with dictatorial powers over them, if he should care to exercise them.

Gen. Leyva has rejected a suggestion that he issue a manifesto calling an election for the purpose of selecting officers for a provisional government of Lower California. He was told that the establishment of such a government might answer the criticism that the insurrectos are inviting interference on the part of the United States, by failure to make any efforts to restore normal conditions.

To this the insurrecto leader replied. "If the United States intends to interfere it makes little difference what we do."

YOUNG CONVERSE AND BLATT IN DANGER OF REMOVAL.

Father of Glendora Boy Writes That Only Immediate Action at Washington Can Prevent Such a Step—Says Evidence Is Conclusive That Boys Were Kidnaped.

Only the fact that the railroads are out of commission in northern Mexico has prevented the removal of Lawrence F. Converse and his companion, Blatt, from the prison at Juarez to one at Chihuahua. Unless the American government takes immediate action in the case of these American boys, it is believed at El Paso that their transfer to Chihuahua will take place before the protest from Washington can arrive. Grave danger for the boys exists in such a transfer, according to their attorneys and friends at El Paso, who fear their chances in a remote city are not good. It would be much more difficult for the Americans in defense to present evidence before a court in the interior city. Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Converse, the parents of the Glendora boy, are becoming frantic in the face of the desperate situation, and it is feared that Mrs. Converse cannot much longer bear up under the terrible strain. They are at El Paso.

Converse has written Webster Davis of this city all of the facts in the case as he finds them, and he speaks with pathos of his wife's inexpressible suffering. He has forwarded to Davis a full copy of the evidence made by the defense, and this evidence seems to show conclusively that young Converse and Blatt were 500 feet from the Mexican boundary line when Mexican citizens forced them from United States territory into Mexico, where they were received as prisoners by Mexican soldiers and thrown into jail in spite of their protests. Affidavits to this effect were made by several eye witnesses. Converse says he has tried to see or have read to him the evidence against the boys, but that his efforts have been in vain. The preliminary hearing was in secret. Neither the prisoners nor their lawyers were represented in any way. The court has told Converse that as soon as the boys appoint a lawyer of record he will send the papers to Chihuahua. It will then be the privilege of Converse to employ a Mexican attorney, who can then ask permission to see the evidence.

Out of his great hope that the United States government will intervene before the boys can be sent to Chihuahua, Converse has refrained from entering this laborious routine. He is convinced that unless the strong telegram sent to Washington by Consul Edwards receives immediate attention the boys will be hurried away.

Young Blatt is the son of an influential eastern family and he is equally well represented by legal counsel.

READY FOR BLANCO.

FEDERALS ARE IN FORCE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

DOUGLAS (Ariz.), March 11.—That the insurrecto force under Gen. Blanco left Cuchiverachi early Thursday afternoon, headed northward and today entered the Cenizas Spring Canyon, about twelve miles south of Agua Prieta, is the statement of two cowboys who have just arrived here from over the divide. They say that he has more arms than men, many of them carrying two guns. It is probable that an advance guard sent out to round up horses caused the scare in Agua Prieta Thursday night.

If Gen. Blanco should attack the border town he is apt to have a warm reception. Two hundred regulars and one machine gun sent from Cananea in response to the call for help, are at Cachuta ranch, and a troop train made up in Agua Prieta tonight has gone to the ranch to bring them over.

REPORTED MASSACRE.

FIGHTING NEAR CANANEA.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NOGALES (Ariz.) March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] That insurrectos surrounded and annihilated a force of 100 Federals who were sent out from Cananea to repair water mains which had been cut, is a report received here today. The Federals, thinking only a small band of rebels were operating in the district and that this command had destroyed the mains, started out to find them. The insurrectos that surrounded the Federals are said to have numbered 600. They were also reported to be marching on Nogales, but have not been sighted in this district. No confirmation of the reported fight can be secured.

WATONGA (Okla.) March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A lynching on the main street of Watonga was averted today only by the pleading of Sheriff Sutherland, after Charles Hawkins and Joseph Stiles, escaped prisoners, charged with selling whisky, had run down Mrs. James Haverson, wife of a Methodist minister of Winfield, Kan., in a wild drive away from the County Jail. A rope was placed about the neck of Hawkins when he was captured, and the crowd started to hang him. Sheriff Sutherland intervened and succeeded in saving his life.

Honest Confessions

A Doctor's Talk on Food.

There are no fairer set of men on earth than the doctors, and when they find they have been in error they are usually apt to make honest and manly admission of the fact.

A case in point is that of a practitioner, one of the good old school, who lives in Texas. His plain, unvarnished tale needs no dressing up.

"I had always had an intense prejudice, which I can now see was unwarrantable and unreasonable, against all muchly advertised foods. Hence, I never read a line of the many 'ads' of Grape-Nuts, nor tested the food till last winter.

"While in Corpus Christi for my health, and visiting my youngest son, who has four of the rudiest, healthiest little boys I ever saw, I ate my first dish of Grape-Nuts food for supper with my little grandsons.

"I became exceedingly fond of it and have eaten a package of it every week since, and find it a delicious, refreshing and strengthening food, leaving no ill effects whatever, causing no eructations with which I was formerly much troubled), no sense of fullness, nausea, nor distress of stomach in any way.

"There is no other food that agrees with me so well, or sits as lightly or pleasantly upon my stomach as this does.

"I am stronger and more active since I began the use of Grape-Nuts than I have been for 10 years, and am no longer troubled with nausea and indigestion." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

No More Wrinkles BEAUTIFUL BUST

Superfluous Hair Vanishes Like Magic by a New Discovery.

Pimples and Blackheads Removed Forever.

Let this woman send you free, everything she agrees, and beautify your face and form quickly.

She Looks Like a Girl of 18.

This clever woman has not a wrinkle upon her face; she has perfected a marvelous, simple method which brought a wonderful change in her face in a single night. For removing wrinkles and developing the bust, her method is truly wonderfully rapid.

She made herself the woman she is today and brought about the wonderful change in her appearance in a secret and pleasant manner. Her complexion is as clear and fair as that of a child. She turned her scrawny figure into a beautiful bust and well developed form. She had thin, scrawny eye-lashes and eyebrows, which could scarcely be seen, and she made them long, thick and beautiful by her own methods and removed every blackhead and pimple from her face in a single night.

You can imagine her joy, when by her own simple discovery, she removed every wrinkle from her face and developed her thin neck and form to beautiful proportions.

Nothing is taken into the stomach, no common massage, no harmful plasters, no worthless creams.

By her new process, she removes wrinkles and develops the whole figure plump and fat.

It is simply astonishing the hundreds of women who write in regarding the wonderful results from this new beauty treatment, which is beautifying their face and form after beauty doctors and other methods failed.

Mary Merritt, of Wis., writes her wrinkles have entirely disappeared. Miss Hanson writes, her bust is beautifully developed and wrinkles gone. Mrs. Markham writes, her wrinkles vanished over night.

Miss Alice Day writes, every blackhead and pimple has vanished forever.

The valuable new beauty book which Madame Cunningham is sending free to thousands of women, is certainly a blessing to womankind, as it makes known her remarkable methods of beautifying the face and figure of unattractive women.

All readers should write her at once and she will send you absolutely free all she agrees, and will show all readers how to remove wrinkles in 8 hours; how to develop the bust; how to make, long, thick eyelashes and eyebrows; how to remove superfluous hair; how to remove blackheads, pimples and freckles; how to remove dark circles under the eyes; how to quickly remove double chin; how to build up sunken cheeks and add flesh to the body; how to darken gray hair and stop hair falling; how to stop forever perspiration odor.

ARIZONA CAN'T ENTER.

President Will Not Sign Act of Admission With Freak Constitution.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Arizona will never be a State of the Union with the freak Constitution which her voters sent to Congress. It may be possible that the new Congress will admit Arizona, but President Taft never will stand for the un-American Constitution as it is now written, as he believes it at variance with the Constitution of the United States and repugnant to American principles.

Lee Gates's new Constitution for California, providing for the recall of judges, would not have a ghost of a show if it needed the approval of the President. The President's attitude on these questions has been clearly indicated and there is no doubt about it. He will not sign the act admitting Arizona, with the present Constitution if it is passed up to him.

ONLY NEWSPAPER TO ARRIVE AT SANTA BARBARA.

Breaks the News Blockade by Means of a Daring Boat Voyage Up the Coast—Launch Arrives With the Papers in Afternoon. Great Rejoicing.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Times of Los Angeles studded its firmament of accomplishments with another star when it broke the news famine yesterday in Santa Barbara by one of the greatest features of press distribution in the annals of the Coast.

The launch carrying The Times of this morning arrived here shortly after 4 o'clock this afternoon, closing one of the most hazardous trips that any sea captain ever undertook in order to deliver to a marooned population the news of the world. It was the only newspaper to reach Santa Barbara today, rail communciation being cut off.

Capt. Al Hyder of the "O. D." the spirited little gasoline boat that carried the papers stated upon his arrival that the sea was heavy during the entire trip and that he had attempted to land at Ventura with papers but on account of the great surf was unable and brought The Times copies on to Santa Barbara.

When the news was communicated here from The Times office in Los Angeles that a water route for delivering the papers would be established, there was a great hurrah and hundreds of people gathered at the dock to witness the arrival of the boat. Inquiries were made to both the agent for The Times and the correspondent, asking "If it could be possible that The Times was really coming." When the inquisitors were informed that it was so, there was a general rush to the water front in an endeavor to get a copy of the great publication. The supply sent was inadequate for the demand.

There is rejoicing by the detained guests of the hotels here over the fact that The Times has broken the news famine and when it was announced that an attempt would be made to continue the service, The Times was given a vote of thanks for its enterprise.

Yeggmen Steal $180 From Martinez, Cal., Store—Man Sees Outlaws Fix Charge.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

MARTINEZ (Cal.) March 11.—Safe crackers looted the safe of the Concord Department Store at Concord, seven miles from here, at 2 o'clock this morning, getting away with $180 in cash.

John Lambert, a baker, whose shop is across the street from the store, watched the robbers at work, not daring to interfere or give the alarm until they had left with their booty. He tried to telephone, but the safe blowers had cut the wire.

After completing the job the bandits stole the station agent's railroad velocipede and made good their escape, abandoning the vehicle at Walnut Creek. The officers went there to try to pick up their trail, but later in the day concluded the fugitives had doubled on it and made for San Francisco, as the looted cash box was found near Richmond.

Lambert said there were two burglars, and gave the officers a good description of them.

SCANDAL DUE ON ATTACHES ROLLS

Wives, Sisters and Cousins Drawing Clerk Pay.

Uncles and Aunts Help Keep Money in Family.

Brothers and Fathers Fall Into Soft Jobs.

BY W. R. WILLIAMS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With the announcement that Theodore Roosevelt can not be here until April 4, came a sudden change in plans for an adjournment of the Legislature next Saturday.

When it was announced by insurgent leaders, a week ago, that steam would be put on and a high-gear sprint made for a finish on March 18, there was some reason to believe that it could be done. But now everything has been upset. Speaker Hewitt says adjournment April 1 will be about the right guess, while Senator Boynton hopes it will be March 25. Everybody else is in doubt.

The suggestion that the Legislature remain in session until Roosevelt gets here to speak before it would be accepted as a good reason for continuing, but it means no more pay for the members. It would be great for the attaches, who get paid by the day, but not for the members who get paid $1000 for the session, whether it lasts sixty days or six hundred days.

The work of the past week has been rapid in the Assembly, but not in the Senate. It has been a matter of criticism all through the session that the Assembly has no orators. Perhaps the Senate would be nearer the end of its work if it was in the same shape, but the people in insurging last fall gathered all the eloquence in the upper chamber. Consequently two or three hours of debate on a bill is the usual thing, and while speeches that change no votes are being made all the rest of the machinery halts.

ATTACHES SCANDAL.

Speaking about attaches is done in whispers now, for they are becoming a burden on this sanctified Legislature as well as a reproach. If the session is to last until April it will be the most costly the State ever had. The Constitution limits it to $1000 a day for both houses, and the pay roll and maintenance has been at the limit since the first week.

Today the Assembly spent half the morning wrangling whether all the attaches should be discharged tonight and hired over again Monday in order to save $450 and keep the aggregate expense within constitutional bounds. The plan was adopted and the howl is terrible.

In the Senate throughout the week Roseberry's Attaches Committee has been trying to reduce the list of employees by two a day and has succeeded for a couple of days. But the list is still regarded as too large and further reductions are proposed. In both houses it is estimated there are now 112 employees of all sorts, including those who work and those who do not.

In days past and gone, when everything was a reproach to the present insurgents, the attaches were a scandal about which they prated. But the present Legislature seems to be no different from others, for Assemblymen have their daughters on the pay rolls and one has his wife. There are also brothers and sisters and cousins and uncles and in some cases there are enough assigned to one job to do it thoroughly three times over.

In the Senate there is a similar situation. One Senator's wife is said to be on the pay roll under another name. There are, in each house, clerks of this and that committee, who report and draw pay and that is about all.

This criticism, which some of the older members are pointing to, is not visited on the secretary's desk in either house. Secretary Parrish in the Senate, and Clerk Mallory in the Assembly have efficient forces, for the most part composed of men who have had experience in previous sessions when everything was so bad.

MUCH WORK AHEAD.

It has been an open charge on the floor of the Senate that many of the stenographers do not work and those who do are over-worked. It was answered by the charge that the man who made it, Senator Lewis, brought a decrepit man from his county for the pay roll and had no reason to complain.

During the session all these features have been noted by old members and before it closes a stir is promised by open criticism on the floor of both houses.

Struggling for early adjournment, the houses have yet to act on reapportionment, revenue and taxation legislation made necessary by the new system; the short ballot, the board of control bill, the tide-lands bills and the direct primary laws, all measures deemed important since Lissner fixed them up at his ante-session conference in San Francisco.

Some are beginning to sit up and take notice, but there is yet much to do. The Governor, having a change of heart, has sent out an order that board of control and short ballot measures be rushed through, and tonight the Judiciary Committee is working out some modification of the control bill so that it may get on the files Monday.

The New Calcium Sulphide Treatment Does Wonders to Every Kind of Skin Eruption.

Trial Package Sent Free to Prove It.

You don't want to wait forever and a day to get rid of your pimples or other skin eruptions. You want to get rid of them right now. Next week you may want to go somewhere where you wouldn't like to have to take the pimples along.

You can get rid of them just in time by taking Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

These wonderful little workers have cured bad boils in three days, and some of the worst cases of skin disease in a week.

They contain as their main ingredient the most thorough, quick and effective blood cleanser known, calcium sulphide.

Remember this, too, that most pimple treatments reek with poison. And they are miserably slow besides.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers have not a particle of poison in them. They are free from mercury, biting drugs or venomous opiates. This is absolutely guaranteed They cannot do any harm, but they always do good—good that you can see in the mirror before your own eyes a few days after.

Don't be any longer humiliated by having a splotchy face. Don't have strangers stare at you, or allow your friends to be ashamed of you because of your face.

Your blood makes you what you are. The men and women who forge ahead are those with pure blood and pure faces.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers will make you happy because your face will be a welcome sight not only to yourself when you look into the glass, but to everybody else who knows you and talks with you.

We want to prove to you that Stuart's Calcium Wafers are beyond doubt the best and quickest blood and skin purifier in the world—so we will send you a free sample as soon as we get your name and address. Send for it today, and then when you have tried the sample you will not rest contented until you have bought a 50c box at your druggist's.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package, free. Address

MANY ELK AT KLAMATH FALLS.

Deputy Game Warden in Northern California Encounters Big Band Feeding in Flat Lava Country.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

KLAMATH FALLS, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] There are now two hundred big elk grazing in the lava regions less than forty miles south of this city, according to John A. Smith, deputy game warden for part of Northern California, who is in the city from his home at Mt. Hebron in Siskiyou county.

Warden Smith has been closely patrolling the lava beds this winter and he says on this trip he saw seventy-five of these fine animals in one band. They were so tame that he was able to get up to within forty yards of them before they went scampering off over the hill out of sight, and even after they saw him they did not appear greatly excited.

He says he saw several other smaller bunches of elk and, in all, he estimates that about two hundred are feeding in the flat country around the lavas at this time. The big bunch was seen not far from the lower end of the Lower Klamath Lake, just over on the foothills of the Van Brimmer mountains.

Deputy Game Warden Lewis of this city expects to make a trip to where the elk are wintering within the next few days and attempt to get a picture that will prove that the Klamath basin is still one of the big feeding grounds for elk.

Love (?) Affair.

GOVERNESS SUES RICH EMPLOYER FOR BREACH OF PROMISE TO WED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Winfield S. Hobbs, wealthy contractor and widower clubman with much property, was sued today for breach of promise to marry by Miss Lela E. Lowe, a governess in his home. Three years ago Hobbs's wife died at their home, leaving him with several children, the eldest, a son, now 23 years old.

Prior to the wife's death, Miss Lowe was engaged as governess for the younger children and has continued in that position up to the present time. Soon after the death of his wife, the governess alleges her employer began to make love to her. She reciprocated his affection and on May 2, 1909, he proposed marriage and was accepted.

All went well in the household until about two weeks ago, when Hobbs, it is said, went to Los Angeles, saying he would return in a few days. No word came to Miss Lowe until three days ago, when the eldest son of the clubman appeared at the house with a message from his father, directing Miss Lowe to quit her position as governess and leave the premises at once.

The message staggered Miss Lowe. The son apparently knew nothing of his father's whereabouts and Miss Lowe could not communicate with him directly. All the son knew was that Miss Lowe was told to leave. The governess at once began an investigation. It is said they learned that after leaving San Francisco Hobbs transferred all of his large property interests estimated to be in excess of $100,000, to the son. Then she began the suit.

FIRE IN RED BLUFF THEATER.

RED BLUFF, March 11.—Fire early today in the gymnasium of the Red Bluff Theater, destroyed apparatus valued at $1000, and damaged the building to the extent of $3000. The auditorium of the theater was not damaged.

DR. C. M. HORN

DENTIST

"Never Hurts a Bit"

We are told that the constant drop, drop, drop of water on a stone will eventually wear a hole in that stone—

But it takes time—

I keep hammering away at my slogan:

"I never hurt a bit"

in the hope that in due time I will wear away that inborn fear of the dentist that is rooted deep in the breasts of people who should come to me today in order that I can save their teeth—and also, save them future trouble and pain.

Teeth don't cure themselves—

The case I told you about last week, of the man who suffered with an impacted wisdom tooth, should warn those with bad teeth to come to me, in time.

Teeth have so great a bearing on the general health that it is folly to neglect them, as well as dangerous.

That man took desperate chances and escaped blood poisoning, simply because I was skillful enough to effect a cure.

It was an "eleventh hour" case. Don't delay if your teeth need attention.

Come to me today—

And, remember—

"I never hurt a bit"

FISHER ENTERS OFFICE MONDAY.

New Secretary of Interior Is Very Reticent.

Will Not Discuss Changes He Has in Contemplation.

Ballinger to Leave for West Within Ten Days.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 11.—Walter L. Fisher, who on Monday will take the oath of office as Secretary of the Interior, succeeding Richard A. Ballinger, resigned, spent part of today at the scene of his new duties. He said he had no set policy, nor has he made any plans for the future administration of the department.

Immediately after being sworn in he will devote several weeks, and probably months, to studying the details of the department. Before then, he said, he could reach no determination as to what policies would be pursued or whether there would be any reorganization.

Assistant-Secretary Pierce, who has announced he would tender his resignation when the new Secretary took charge, has consented, at Fisher's request, to remain in the service for a short time.

Secretary Ballinger said today that since his resignation was accepted he had felt there had been a great weight taken off his shoulders. He left the office, he said, with the feeling that during his administration he had discharged his trust the best he knew how and that he had acted to the best of his executive ability in all matters.

Discussing the proposed suits against the "arch conspirators," Mr. Ballinger said he did not propose to jum the matter. What action was taken, he said, would be done after some thought and consultation with counsel. He said he would not even act upon his own judgment.

One of the last official acts of Mr. Ballinger was to sign the first water-right certificate which has ever been issued. It was made out in the name of Lyman N. Huggs, who receives the benefits of the water served by the Minidoka project, Idaho. It shows that Huggs has paid his ten annual installments of $165 each on account of the building projects.

Mrs. Ballinger, wife of the Secretary, departed for Seattle tonight. She will be followed in about ten days by the Secretary.

FRUIT RULING MADE PLAINER.

Technical Change in Decision Regarding Precooling of Citrus Product.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Interstate Commerce Commission today reissued its decision (No. 1477,) in the case of the Arlington Heights Fruit Exchange against the Southern Pacific, extending the date on which it is to take effect from April 1 to April 15, and changing the wording in the order so that it shall read of "For pre[illegible]oling oranges" to "Oranges [illegible] pre-cooled and pre-iced. [illegible] is asserted that the first ord[illegible]-supposed pre-icing, and [illegible] the change is technical and not [illegible] change in substance.

ADMITS RUSSIAN LABORERS.

TWENTY-EIGHT GO TO SEATTLE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, March 11.—Secretary Nagel admitted today, twenty-eight Russians destined for Seattle, who had been held at Ellis Island, N. Y., because immigration inspectors reported labor conditions were unfavorable at their objective point. The immigration authorities thought the Russians were likely to become public charges if they went to Seattle and wanted to divert them to Iowa. Secretary Nagel, in admitting the men, held that unfavorable labor conditions alone could not be held as a bar to immigration.

DONATES INNESS'S WORK.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, March 11.—Announcement was made today of the presentation to the Chicago Art Institute of eighteen of the best paintings of George Inness, the American landscape artist. The presentation was made by Edward Butler, a Chicago merchant, and himself a painter. The cost of the collection was $150,000.

WHERE IS THIS SLIP?

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SPRINGFIELD (Ill.) March 11.—States Attorney Burke today ordered a subpoena duces tecum for United States Senator Joseph W. Bailey of Texas, summoning him as a witness in the case against State Senator John S. Broderick of Chicago, who is charged by former State Senator David W. Holstlaw with paying him $2500 on July 16, 1909, in Broderick's saloon in Chicago for Holstlaw's vote for Lorimer for United States Senator. Holstlaw produced a deposit slip for that amount on the "State Bank of Chicago," in which bank he said he deposited the money. The deposit slip was taken to Washington by the sub-committee investigating Lorimer's election and the last knowledge of the whereabouts of the slip was when Senator Bailey held it in his hand during his speech in the Senate in defense of Lorimer, and denounced it as a forgery. Bailey's explanation was that while he was addressing the Senate some one erick's case is set for trial Monday, March 20.

REVERSES RATE LAW.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

TOPEKA (Kan.) March 11.—The Supreme Court decided today that the law fixing a rate of 1 cent a mile for the transporting of members of the National Guard from one place to another inside the State, is unconstitutional.

COMPENSATION ACT GETS BY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

TOPEKA, March 11.—The workmen's compensation act, drawn by the joint Committee of Labor, was passed by both houses of the Kansas Legislature today. The act will apply only to hazardous employment where fifteen or more persons are working. New York is the only State that has a similar statute. If a workman dies of injuries his dependents shall receive three times the amount he earned the preceding year, but not to exceed $3600, and not less than $1200. In case he leaves no dependents, the expense of medical attendance and funeral shall be paid by his employers.

DEATHS GROW IN CHICAGO.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, March 11.—Chicago's death rate is increasing despite scientific advancement toward prevention of germ diseases. This is the conclusion reached by the City Health Department, and discussed in the quadrennial report yesterday. Revised figures give Chicago's death rate for 1910 at 15.21 a thousand, which is smaller than that of the other larger cities, although it is the highest death rate in Chicago sonce 1907.

NOTABLE WOMEN MEET.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, March 11.—A former "first lady of the land" met and discussed the work of one who has been described as the greatest living woman in the United States, when Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt shook hands with Miss Jane Addams at Hull House yesterday. The meeting was at Mrs. Roosevelt's request. Miss Addams showed the former President's wife through the west side settlement house, and explained every phase of the work being carried on there, to the delight of her visitor.

CANDIDATES GROW ON TREES.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, March 11.—Independent candidates for Mayor of Chicago had their final opportunity last night to enter the field for the April election. The Board of Election Commissioners and the City Clerk kept their offices open until midnight to receive petitions. No Republican or Democrat filed an independent Mayoralty petition, and as a result, Charles A. Merriam, Republican, and Carter H. Harrison, Democrat, who had feared their calculation might be upset by the entry of a third contender, now may breathe more freely. The Socialist-Labor party filed a petition containing 7500 signatures for candidates for Mayor, City Treasurer and City Clerk. Anthony Prince, a brick-layer, is their candidate for Mayor. The Socialist-Labor

QUININE DOESN'T CURE BAD COLDS.

HOW TO REALLY BREAK A SEVERE COLD AND END ALL GRIPPE MISERY IN JUST A FEW HOURS.

Tells Times Readers It is Almost Useless to Take Quinine for Colds in California—An Effective Compound Which Should Surely Be in Every Home Here in Los Angeles.

You will distinctly feel your cold breaking and all the Grippe symptoms leaving after taking the very first dose.

It is a positive fact that Pape's Cold Compound taken every two hours, until three consecutive doses are taken, will end the Grippe and break up the most severe cold, either in the head, chest, back, stomach or limbs.

It promptly relieves the most miserable headache, dullness, head and nose stuffed up, feverishness, sneezing, sore throat, running of the nose, mucous catarrhal discharges, soreness, stiffness and rheumatic twinges.

Pape's Cold Compound is the result of three years' research at a cost of more than fifty thousand dollars and contains no quinine, which we have conclusively demonstrated is not effective in the treatment of colds or grippe.

Take this harmless compound as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine, made anywhere else in the world, which will cure your cold or end grippe misery as promptly and without any other assistance or bad after-effects as a 25c cent package of Pape's Cold Compound, which any druggist in the world can supply.

ROADS TO REFUND CHARGE.

Interstate Commerce Commission Rules Southern Pacific Must Return Surplus Tariffs to Shippers.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Inter-State Commerce Commission has issued the following reparation orders: George A. Carter vs. Southern Pacific Company authorizing the refund of $504 overcharge on fifteen carloads of cattle shipped July 12, 1910, from Kirkland, Ariz., to Imperial, San Monte Fruit Company vs. Southern Pacific and others authorizing refund of $46.92 overcharge on carload of apples shipped September 9, 1910, from Watsonville to Colorado Springs and diverted to Victor, Colo.; Earl Fruit Company vs. Southern Pacific and others authorizing refund of $92.01 overcharge on two carloads of apples shipped September 1 and 6 from Watsonville to Houston, Tex.; Riverside and others, authorizing refund of $26.60 account overcharge on carload cement from Bloomington, Col., to Clifton, Ariz., January 11, 1910; Quartette Mining Company vs. Santa Fe and others, refund $56 on carload mine timbers from Los Angeles to Searchlight, Nev., April 4, 1910.

LADY APPOINTED.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mary S. Nally has been appointed postmistress at Keenbrook, San Bernardino county, vice E. J. Von Ehwegan, resigned.

WASHINGTON BRIEFS.

Bureau Investigates Crime.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—An investigation into the case of the Papago Indian who was found dead in Arizona with his hand tied to the tail of a wild horse, which had to be shot before it could be captured by soldiers who discovered it, has been instituted by the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Boundary Commissioner.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—President Taft has appointed former Senator Cockrell of Missouri, as commissioner on the part of the United States, to retrace and definitely determine the boundary line between Texas and New Mexico, as provided for in a resolution adopted by the last Congress. Texas also is to appoint a commissioner to act with Mr. Cockrell.

There was a big slide of earth at the north end of the Gatun lock of the Panama Canal Friday night. The mass buried a steam shovel and caught a gang of workmen, killing two Spaniards and an Italian, and injuring several others.

Cystitis

Or Inflammation of the Bladder is a Most Painful Disease That is Very Prevalent. If Not Attended to Promptly Serious Complications May Arise.

Mrs. M. E. Read of 612 W. Beach St., Biloxi, Miss., writes: "I took four bottles of Warner's Safe Cure for Cystitis (inflammation of the bladder) and it cured me. My trouble was of long standing, and it seemed to get worse in hot weather or when I took a cold. Should I need any more medicine for the same trouble I would certainly use it again. I always speak a good word for your remedies whenever I meet any one with kidney, liver or bladder troubles.

"I never gave a testimonial before, but I am willing to in this case. If at any time any one wishes to write me for further information on the subject I will gladly answer them."

If you have pains in the back, uric acid poison, Bright's disease, inflammation of the bladder and urinary organs, jaundice or torpid liver, you should take Warner's Safe Cure for the kidneys, liver and bladder at once and continuously until cured. It makes the liver active and heals the diseased kidneys. Put up in 50c and $1.00 sizes and sold by all druggists.

Warner's Safe Pills, for constipation and biliousness, purely vegetable, absolutely free from injurious substances, are a perfect laxative. They do not gripe or leave any bad after effects. 25 cents a package.

If you have never tried Warner's Safe Cure, send us your name and address. We will send you sample bottle, together with a sample of Warner's Safe Pills, free of charge. All we ask is that you mention the Times when writing. Warner's Safe Cure Co., Rochester, New York.

In contradiction of rumors that the citizen soldiers of the United States are to be called for active service, officers of the army today pointed out that such action would be impossible, because there is no contingency, as prescribed by law, which would warrant it.

The Dick law, enacted eight years ago, prescribes the constitutional causes authorizing the President to call out the militia. This act, carrying out the intent of the Constitution, enables the President to call to arms the militia of the States, Territories and District of Columbia to "repel an invasion by a foreign nation, to suppress a rebellion in the United States, or to enable him to execute the laws of the union."

As the country now faces none of the emergencies, it is added, it would be impossible for the President to call out the militia.

The officers who will constitute the staff of Brig.-Gen. A. L. Mills, commanding the first separate brigade now mobilizing at Galveston, are: Lieut.-Col. G. T. Bartlett of the general staff; Maj. Clarence J. Manley, Medical Corps; Capt. B. T. Clayton, quartermaster's department; Capt. C. O. Sherrill, Corps of Engineers, and Capt. Morton J. Henry, subsistence department.

Gen. Mills has been instructed to detail from the officers on duty an acting brigade adjutant and an acting judge advocate.

The army division, which is assembling at San Antonio, is officially designated by the War Department as "the maneuver division."

the conditions in Mex- and the mobilization of troops I can say nothing. Good would indicate that had I bearer of information that taken on the part of Washington officials, I would not have been permitted to stay at Crawfordsville, Ind., for a week before going to Washington to deliver such a message.

"I was called to Washington to consult with officers there on questions between the government of the United States and the government of Mexico—questions of importance to both, but I cannot say what they were."

When asked whether he brought information to Washington that led the administration to believe a demonstration necessary, Mr. Wilson shook his head negatively, and pointed out again that he did not go directly to Washington from his post, but stopped in Indiana a week before he was in consultation with the administration.

REFUSES TO TALK.

Asked whether he would express any opinion as to the object of the massing of troops in Texas, now that President Taft has admitted they are not there solely for maneuvers, Mr. Wilson said:

"It is the President's privilege to express himself as he pleases. I am not at liberty to say anything, much as I would like to talk on the situation.

"I shall leave Indianapolis some time today for Crawfordsville, and remain there while my mother's condition is serious. I hope to be en route to Mexico in the near future."

In dispatches from Washington, it was stated that Mr. Wilson was to be called to account by the United States government for interviews he was stated to have given the New York papers, in which he was quoted as referring to President Diaz, of Mexico, as an old man past eighty, and bordering on senility.

were telephoned to- J. B. Morales, Chief of Police Ensenada. Morales stat- Salinas's band of guerrillas men, composed of Mexi- and desperate characters. Tecarte early this morn-

Morales stated that Salinas's men are well armed and are prepared to do more damage than any of the rebel forces that heretofore have sought to gain power in Lower California. According to reports here this is the band recruited in El Cajon.

In order to escape the United States troops guarding the border, Salinas took his men into Mexico by way of San Ysidro, eighteen miles from Tia Juana, following the Cottonwood River bottoms. It is believed they crossed Thursday night.

According to report a squad on Friday night approached so close to the outposts of Tia Juana that they captured a gendarme on guard. Early this morning the gendarme escaped and returned to Tia Juana, with the news that the place is to be attacked at daybreak Sunday morning.

Walter Dupee tonight learned that his ranch had been raided. He does not know at this time the amount of his loss. He believes that only horses were stolen. Dupee had a guard at his place, but the force was so small his men could not resist the invaders.

Plans for her wedding at Monroe were cut short today by the accidental death of Peter Palmgren, who was to have been the bridegroom. Palmgren was caught by a tree he was felling and his head and arms were terribly crushed. Frantic with grief, Miss Johnson, who had been making preparations for the wedding scheduled for today, hurried to Monroe to find him dead. Palmgren's father has wired from Minnesota that he will Tattoo Mark Better Than Ring for Wives, Says Methodist Minister.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "Married women should be tattooed." A bas the wedding ring! Vive the tattooed lip and chin! The Rev. Francis Rawei, a Methodist minister in Auckland, N.Z., urged Chicago husbands to tattoo their wives. Mr. Rawei talked on "From Cannibalism to Culture." "I think this is a magnificent custom," he said as he threw on the canvas a picture of a New Zealand woman thus tattooed. "These marks are put on the chin in order that the young men may know that a woman is married. When I go to Washington I am going to suggest this to President Taft as a convenient manner of conveying information of women's married state."

eighth day sentence shall be pronounced. If the penalty be death—and the authorities are left no other choice in most cases—the execution must not be delayed except for the purpose of seeking executive pardon. This right is granted.

So broad is the clause covering the interference with trains, that it includes even the throwing of a stone at a passenger train. Placing obstructions on the track, changing signals, derailing in any manner a train, damaging in any way the rolling stock, even the removal of a piece of timber or a bit of iron, the drawing of spikes from the ties, or the commission of any act calculated to endanger life or property or to impair the efficiency of the service, are features of this portion of the law and for the commission of which death is the penalty; summary death if detected in the commission, and death at the end of eight days if found guilty.

In reviewing this provision, President Diaz is prepared to use again that weapon with which he whipped his country into order many years ago.

The reason for the destruction of property this time is different, but Senor Diaz believes that what was efficacious then will be today. In its application, this law will fit the foreigner as it will the native. In the ranks of the rebels, there are numerous Americans and a few of other nationalities.

FOREIGNERS SUBJECT.

Should any of these soldiers of fortune be captured while in the act of blowing up a bridge, they will not be entitled under this clause to any more mercy than is accorded to the Mexican revolutionists.

Although the mere announcement that the government intends to deal mercilessly with those detected in the acts of outlawry will have a most beneficial effect, Minister of War Gonzales Cosio believes the full force of the measure will not be applied.

"The efficiency of the system will begin to be left," said Mr. Cosio, "when the first penalty is inflicted on the persons of those arrested in the commission of their crimes."

Minister Cosio was discussing that clause, which provides that those detected in the commission of those acts for which the death penalty is prescribed, shall be executed summarily by the arresting force.

That the War Department expects to co-operate in carrying out the provisions, there is no doubt.

The Minister said that in order to make more effective the action of the executive in reviving this long unused provision of the Constitution, the guards along the common highways as well as along the railroads will be doubled.

Passenger Train Wrecked in North and Passengers Go Hungry After Consuming All Meat Available.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MADELINE (Cal.) March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A passenger train struck a snowdrift, between Madeline and Alturas, Wednesday, and three cars turned turtle. No injuries were reported, but the passengers were compelled to suffer considerable hardship.

Before the situation was relieved a quarter of beef—the only available food—was cooked over a coal oil stove and consumed without seasoning. After this gave out the passengers missed five meals, which added to their trying experiences.

The supply of coal was consumed before the wrecker arrived and the coaches were heated with green juniper wood cut by the train crew. This fuel was also burned in the engine to keep steam up, while the crew dug snow for hours.

appeared to be in good health, with the exception of the priest, Ciro Vitozzi, who seemed to be ill, and Maria Stendardo, who limped as she entered.

The priest, who once obtained Erricone's freedom by telling the authorities that another man had confessed the murders under the seal of the confessional, was allowed, when the proceedings opened, to sit outside the prisoners' cage.

When the jury had been sworn, President Bianchi questioned the prisoners closely concerning their careers. This examination concluded, a mass of documents was presented by Cavaleri Santoro, the King's prosecutor, who has charge of the prosecution. These included the testimony of more than 400 witnesses.

The most interesting paper was a report from the New York Police Department concerning the arrest of Erricone in that city, and what the American detectives had been able to learn about him and his associates. The report was signed by Joseph Petrosino.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations made by Gennaro Abatemaggio have been grouped under six heads. They were made to Marshal Capezzuti of the Legion of Carbineers in Naples, who, in the guise of an aspirant to membership in the Camorra, bought some information of the murders, he explaining he would require them to hold over the heads of any member who might oppose his entrance to the "Beautifully Reformed Society."

When Abbatemaggio learned that he had been duped, he made the best of the situation by becoming a police spy and repeated his revelations in the form of a confession. As taken down by the police, they are as follows:

(1.) Cuoccolo was murdered in revenge by the Camorra, the death sentence having been pronounced by its tribunal of high justice.

(2.) The murder was provoked by the fact that Cuoccolo had placed himself in opposition to the head of the society, Lugi Fucci; to Gennaro Abilio, head of the Camorra in the Vesuvian villages; to Gionnai Repi, nicknamed "The Teacher," because he had taught in the schools of Naples and to Guiseppe de Marinis, known also as O'Mandriere, a cattle driver.

Repi, in his old age, was the reputed keeper of a gambling house in Naples and another in Paris, near the Palace de L'Etoile. He was also known as the receiver of stolen goods, especially jewels, stocks and bonds, which he took to Paris to sell. Repi and Ibelli Dined with Alfano on the night of the murders.

(3.) Maria Cuccolo, the "beautiful sorrentina," was murdered immediately after her husband had been killed, for the reason that had she been spared, she would kave known who the murderers were and have denounced them. Another motive was the anger of the Camorra, because, with her husband, she had retained some very valuable jewels that had been stolen, refusing to surrender them, although great pressure had been brought to bear upon her by the society.

(4.) The hatred of the instigators of the crime was due to the menacing and high-handed attitude of Cuoccolo, most acutely felt by Alfano, otherwise known as Erricone who had been struck in the face by the condemned man. The particular grievance of Repi and O'Mandreire was the comptition Cuoccolo had established in securing a percentage from stolen goods.

(2.) The executors of the crime were two desperadoes, one Morra, and Currado Sortino. After the first murder, which took place near the tram station, Morra and Sorrtino gained admission to Cuoccolo's house, by saying they had a message for his wife, killed him and stole everything in sight.

(6.) While the crimes were being executd the heads of the Camorrea were banquetting at Miami A'Mare. Two men entered the dining-room and approaching Alfano, said:

"It it done."

Thereupon Alfano gave a sigh of relief and ordered wine for his visitors.

This latter circumstance was later substantiated by witnesses.

Abbatemaggio also said that in 1906 sixty of the most influential Camorrists met and discussed the necessity of ridding themselves of the Cuoccolos, whom they considered dangerous to the society.

Abbatemaggio himself was chosen as one of the executioners of the "Suppression." At the last moment, the informer, who, although a thorough criminal, had never committed murder, withdrew on the ground that he was ill. He was excused, but admonished not to reveal what he knew on pain of death.

POWDER COMPANY PROMISES TO REBUILD DESTROYED VILLAGE.

Pleasant Prairie, Wis., Devastated by Explosion, to Be Restored—Every Cent of Actual Damage Will Be Paid—Officials of Concern Decide Important Details at Conference—Three Victims Succumb to Injuries.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

KENOSHA (Wis.) March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The rebuilding of the town of Pleasant Prairie and the payment of every cent of actual loss claimed by any person as a result of the explosion of the powder plant on Thursday evening, is the promise of the E. I. DuPont-deNemour Powder Company, made this evening after an all-day meeting of officials and directors of the company in the ruins of the plant at Pleasant Prairie.

The announcement came coincidentally with the recording of three more deaths resulting from the explosion and preparation by Chicago's building department for an investigation of local fireworks plants.

The three deaths reported today were as follows:

WILLIAM P. ROBINSON, 62 years old, assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Kenosha, succumbed in the morning to heart disease, brought on by excitement following the explosion.

MARGARET KINGMAN, aged 85 years, died at Bristol Friday morning as a result of the shock.

MRS. CAROLINE HARTL, 57 years old, succumbed at the Kenosha Hospital Friday night.

Officials of the powder company who arrived in Pleasant Prairie in the morning stated that the village would be rebuilt and all losses paid, as a moral and not as a legal obligation. Among the officials was George Patterson, the company's general superintendent, who minimized the company's losses.

LOSS EXAGGERATED.

"The whole plant is not near worth what is said to be the loss," said Mr. Patterson, "and it is not a total wreck, by any means. There will be powder shipped out of it in a week if the company wants to use it."

Judge J. P. Laffey of Wilmington, Del., general counsel for the company, gave out an official statement in which he said:

"I want to say that the company is very sorry that the explosion took place, and that we feel especially sorry for the loss of the life of "Old Man" Thompson. He was a valuable employee of the company and his loss will be deeply felt.

"This explosion is so unusual in its character that there is nothing in the making of powder to compare with it. It is not accounted for in any experience of the past, and it is possible that when we have sifted the matter we may learn that which will be of great value to the business in the future.

"In regard to outside losses, it always has been the policy of this company to treat them as a moral obligation, and the company will recognize the obligation exists here."

Meanwhile the movement at Pleasant Prairie to oust the powder mills from the State of Wisconsin is growing rapidly and members of the Wisconsin Legislature are expected to go to Kenosha tomorrow as guests of Assemblyman M. J. Sholey, who will have them taken to Pleasant Prairie for a personal inspection of the havoc wrought by the explosion. State Senator Isaac T. Bishop sent word in the morning that he had in preparation a bill for introduction in the Senate Monday, which would eliminate powder mills from thickly settled portions of Wisconsin and especially from Kenosha county.

Plate glass companies who suffered loss have decided to start suits against the powder trust at once. Company agents stated at Waukegan that this policy would be adopted by Lloyds, the New York Plate Glass Company and the New Jersey Plate Glass Company.

Human Energy
The Price of Success.
The Ability to Achieve and the Wil to Accomplish.
How Physical Vigor and Brain Power are Attained Remarkable Contribution Dealing with a Subject of Vital Interes

Few subjects present more interesting aspects than that relating to success attendant upon the efforts of individuals to whom we are in the habit of attributing unusual natural gifts and abilities. Scarcely a day passes that we do not read or hear of the great financial achievement of some new star in the firmament of greatness or of some scientist who has gained added distinction through the exhibition of activity and accomplishment greater than his fellows.

And to quote the critic: "The contemplation of the subject gives us pause." And well it may. That energy is not actively employed by thousands of people who possess it in latent state can scarcely be denied, for even the most lethargic are at intervals possessed of energy in abundance, which is not maintained in continuity. Continuity counts. Desultory effort, intermittent activity are unavailing. Attack and maintain require that power be exhibited in its dynamic phase.

Human energy is an external exhibition of inner power. A man can be compared to a steam engine. Power is generated in accordance with his mode of life. I assert that as a man lives, eats, thinks, so is he. Further, the degree of his might is in direct ratio to his physical perfection and ability to generate power and deviation from perfection makes certain the probability of ineffective energy.

A symposium of successful English merchants declared that "there are two physical qualifications which are of extreme importance for success in life; the first a good set of teeth—in these days easily acquired—and secondly, a good stomach. A combination of these should endow a man with a good temper and a spirit of perseverance which will triumph over all obstacles."

I believe that millions upon millions of dollars are expended annually in the treatment of malnutrition in its variously exhibited forms, which would be saved by proper attention to those physiological processes beginning with complete mastication by a full set of teeth. Thorough mastication in fletcherizing the food, and scientific dieting are, by many, considered to be vague whims of mentally befogged faddists; but those conditions manifesting themselves so universally in constipation, lack of energy, lack of endurance and impaired brain power are largely due to ignorance and neglect of these important considerations. Thousands of people are "running down," "petering out," because they no longer supply the fuel of life to the body properly and adequately prepared for physiological functioning of brain and of physical requirements. Thorough and complete mastication of food is essential to its proper digestion and assimilation because only so can nutrition be complete in compensating for daily withdrawal of force and the storing of reserve power. The blood, the source of nutrition to every part of the body, would speedily become impoverished if the materials which it distributes to all the various tissues were not re-supplied to it. The elements required for development, repair and vital force, do not originate in the blood, but must be furnished from without. These el ments are derived from food. Ther is no permanent source of strength b in food.

Thorough mastication depends upo sound and useful teeth, since prope chewing of the food is the first ste in digestion. Mastication is the k which unlocks nutriment from th food. A mouth filled with broken an defective teeth, diseased gums, and v tiated saliva cannot properly perfor its functions. A person who has n a full complement of teeth is a dent cripple and a dental cripple cannot g full nutritional value from food, so fu physical power, energy and vigor ca not be attained until the art of th dentist has restored a full masticati surface by the replacement of missin teeth with those which fulfill the r quirements indicated.

By so much precisely as the pow of mastication is reduced, and i proper performance hindered throu the loss of teeth, by so much will th process of nutrition, and healthy, vi orous, perfect structural formation b impaired. If a man or woman has lo three molar teeth, he then has but se enty-five per cent. of the full mastica ing surface he should have and th complete mastication of food is onl enty-five per cent. of the full mastica digestion, assimilation and nutritio are in like degree inefficient. Perfe mastication is the first step in th process of digestion and when pro erly performed insures perfect sto ach, digestion and the harmonious c ordination of related physiological p cedures which reflect themselves vital energy, brain power and vigor and these again in the forcefulne and success of the individual.

To have good teeth is something p sible to every one who gives heed personal needs, for they are neces ties and not luxuries and to disrega the need for them is to cheat on self and prolong the conditions due a lack of them. You should Obey th Insistent Impulse! See Painle Parker first. By so dong you ma the first move essential to improv ment of your dental apparatus. procrastinate from week to we from month to month is to invi rather than obviate negative co tions of health and success. I prea painless dentistry and I practice wh I preach. I can fill, crown, treat a extract defective teeth painlessly. can do the best work that dental s ence has evolved. I have the co-o eration of skilled, experienced sp cialists selected because of exce tional fitness for the work they My charges are moderate in all stances, and yet I do not cater to t patronage of those who seek that wh is proclaimed the cheapest in price, b rather to the intelligent majority wh realizes that abidingly satisfacto dental work, like every other servi is worth a reasonable price. Russia Demands Control of Policing Powers.

Steady Decrease in Number of Deaths Reported.

Bandit Bands Wiped Out in Northern Manchuria.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PEKING, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Russia has renewed the demand that she be allowed to control plague quarantine stations and police the Chinese cities and towns from Aigun to Hun Chun and along the Siberian border.

China expresses her willingness to co-operate in enforcing a dual quarantine, similar to that maintained in conjunction with the Japanese along the Yalu. As to the general situation, there is a steady decrease of mortality in all the known centers of infection except at Mukden, where the rate is stationary.

There are no statistics from Northern Manchuria, but general reports indicate an improvement in conditions.

One phase of the situation in that section that is not unwelcome in Peking is that the plague is destroying the mounted bandit bands which the authorities have been unable to suppress.

Foreign experts are gathering for the international plague conference at Mukden on April 3. Dr. Brocquet, the French representative, has arrived at Peking.

Doctors Farrar and Petrie from England, after inspecting from Harbin, Fuchiaten and Mukden will reach here tomorrow. Dr. Strong, the American, is now at Mukden conducting bacteriological investigations.

CHOLERA AT HONOLULU.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

HONOLULU, March 11.—Another case of cholera developed today among the persons segregated after contact with previous victims. This makes twenty-six cases, of which twenty-one have proved fatal.

In a report to the Board of Health, Dr. Clegg, of the United States Public Health and Marine Hospital service, expresses the opinion that the disease was brought to Honolulu from the Orient, by what are known as "chronic bacilli carriers," not necessarily suffering from cholera. Its slow development apparently precludes the theory of origin from infected water or food.

Resent Interference With Right to Dress as They Please—Large Feet One Reason Why Ankle Dress Failed to Gain Favor—Artist Pleads for Pantalettes.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] British resentment of restrictions on personal liberty promises to result in a vigorous movement in favor of the "harem" skirt. The action of the mobs in Vienna and Paris in attempting to block the innovation by violence has produced a feeling of disgust in London. Leading merchants intend to stock up with the "harem" garment and push its sale. Many letters are appearing in the press in favor of the new garment. The celebrated artist, Harry Furniss (says today:

"One or more of the fashionable portrait painters should paint some of their fair sitters in 'harem' dress. I am convinced that if the artists and their sitters lead the public will follow. I do not mean follow in the sense that cads and cadesses follow women, whether in the 'harem' or any other new costume, in the public thoroughfares and jeer and insult. But more considerate people could see in the quiet of the Royal Academy how artistic and attractive the new dress is.

"In the name of common sense, let us adopt the ankle dress as permanent and muzzle the changing, uncomfortable, microbe gathering costumes which the ever-designing dressmakers invent.

"The reason many English women object to the ankle skirt, I am told by their French-American rivals, is because they have big feet. The fact is, in bygone days English women wore large and shapeless boots.

"What has done more to scotch if not kill, sensible dress is the name."

Uprising Against Turkish Officials Feared When Snows Melt in Balkans—Situation Grows Tense.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

VIENNA, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Private advices from Sofia indicate that grave apprehension exists over the situation in Albania. It is feared that when the snow melts in the Balkans the Albanians will revolt and murder the Turkish officials.

The existing discontent has been greatly intensified by a recent affair in the Turkish Parliament, when the Albanian leader, Ismael Demal, was insulted by the Grand Vizier and his ears were boxed by a Young Turk deputy.

The Turks' action in disarming the Albanians has only had the effect of relieving them of antiquated weapons which are now replaced by the most modern guns.

"Always distrust negations," he continued. "Always try for a positive form of any comprehensive denial. Its promulgator is probably stepping out of bounds into the cheap and easy region of negative speculation. He is like a rationalistic microbe denying the existence of a human being.

"People are too much given to supposing that the universe is limited to the simplicity of their first every-day conception of it. The region of the miraculous, as it is called, has been hastily and illegitimately denied. In judging of what are called miracles we must consider historical evidence and literary criticism. We need not urge objections to them on scientific grounds.

"Do not let us imagine that existence hereafter is something so wholly remote and different that we cannot learn of the testimony of experience here. This is not a subject on which we should come ligthly or hastily to a conclusion. It is of the utmost importance to humanity and I call on the people not to accept assertions without severe scrutiny and, above all, to keep an open mind.

CROWN PRINCESS FOR AMERICANS.

TAKES UP CUDGELS IN HIGH ROUMANIAN SOCIETY.

Refuses to Accept Invitation to Elaborate Function Unless Friends From United States Are Included in List of Guests—Secures Immediate Results.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BUCHAREST (Roumania) March 11. [Exclusive Dispatch.] Crown Princess Marie, daughter of the Duke of Edinburg, and Queen Victoria's grandchild, who will eventually succeed Carmen Sylva as Queen of Roumania, has taken up the cudgels for Americans.

The society women of Bucharest had shown themselves hostile to what they call "the American invasion," and had decided not to invite Americans to their smartest functions. Princess Marie, who is very fond of everything American and is a personal friend of many American people, including the Astor family, was highly indignant when she learned this, but waited for a favorable opportunity to give her opinion.

It came in the shape of a charity ball of select dimensions given by some of the great ladies of this country. On receiving her invitation the Crown Princess asked for the list of the invited guests.

"Why are there no American ladies here?" she asked Countess Fulchiano, who presented it.

The Countess explained that the ball was to be "a very select and highly national function."

"Nonsense!" was the reply. "There are several American women in town, the wives of diplomats, engineers and prominent American business men. All these ladies are my friends. If they are not immediately put on the list of guests I shall not go to the ball—nor to any similar entertainment."

This declaration had a tremendous effect. All the prominent American women in the city at once got invitations to the ball and the "American boycott" is a thing of the past.

George J. Not Connected With Independent Move.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, March 11.—In regard to many published statements suggesting that George J. Gould is endeavoring to recede from an agreement with Kuhn-Loeb-Rockefeller interests as to the new control of the Missouri Pacific, his brother, Frank J. Gould, last night said such reports were unwarranted and that he might unintentionally have been the author of them.

He said that, as one of the largest individual stockholders of the Missouri Pacific, he believes with the other stockholders, that independent minority interests should have representation on the new board of directors, and adds that R. Lancaster Williams of Baltimore has secured sufficient proxies, independently of him, to be elected a director of the road.

But being convinced that a considerable number of stockholders are desirous of an independent representation in the directorate, he gave his individual proxy to Middendorf, Williams & Co., and has advised other holders to do the same. Mr. Gould was emphatic in declaring that the hints or suggestions that George Gould desired to recede from any stand previously taken by him, or that he was directly or indirectly connected with the movement to secure representation for the independent interests on the board, were without the slightest foundation.

Dainty Chicago Miss Mistakes Port Officer's Courtesy for Introspection and Investigation Reveals More Merchandise Than She Lists at New York Port.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Marion Whitley, a seventeen-year-old Chicago and Gary (Ind.) heiress, who is described by the ships news reporters as having "raven tresses," a peachblow complexion, and who is by far the prettiest and daintiest little creature that ever crossed the Atlantic, was arrested for smuggling today.

If it had not been for the fact that Miss Whiteley is burdened with the distinguishing characteristic of George Washington, she would have evaded the formality of paying duty on several hundred dollars' worth of jewelry and Parisian finery.

Deputy Surveyor O'Connor saw that the girl was alone, and offered to assist, intending to pass her trunks as quickly as possible.

"Did you put down all your purchases in your declaration?" the deputy asked.

Miss Whiteley hung her head, blushed and failed to answer. The deputy became suspicious and repeated the question.

"I cannot tell a fib," replied the dainty miss, and the roses grew upon her cheeks. "There is just one little hat there that I did not put down."

"Are you sure that is all?" demanded the deputy, after the hat had been produced.

"Well, I have a pair of cuff buttons for my guardian, but surely you would not make me pay duty on them, too."

The inspectors found in addition to the hat and cuff buttons valued at £700, a Paris gown of the very latest style. She was taken before Gen. Henry and let off with a good lecture.

That Feeling Of Fullness

Disappears In Five Minutes After Taking a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet.

A Trial Package Sent Free on Request.

All of the unpleasant sensations attendant upon eating too heartily are instantly relieved by a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet. Like sticking a pin into a rubber balloon. The reason is simple and easy to understand.

Inflation Of The Stomach From Undigested Food Quickly Relieved By A Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet.

When you take food into a stomach that is tired and overtaxed the gastric juices do not form fast enough to digest it properly. So the food becomes sour and at once begins to throw off gases. Your stomach becomes inflated just as surely as if you attached a toy balloon to a gas jet. Then the gases and foul odors issue forth and pollute your breath, making you an object of nausea to your friends. Your tongue quickly becomes coated and you can taste the foulness that is within you.

Now all this condition is changed almost instantly by a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet. This little digester gets busy at once—supplies all the digestive juices that were lacking—digests the food in a jiffy and opens up the clogged stomach and bowels. It also sweetens and refreshes the mucous lining of the stomach and bowels and restores peace and content.

If you will give Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets a chance they will not only sweeten your stomach but also your disposition and you will never have another stomach ill.

One grain of a single ingredient in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest 3000 grains of food. This saves your stomach and gives it the rest it needs. All muscles require occasional rest if they are ever overtaxed. The stomach is no exception to this rule.

Try a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and you will wonder how you ever got along without them. They are sold at 50 cents by all druggists everywhere. A trial package will be sent free on request to F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

FINAL CROSS COUNTRY RUN.

Seventy-five Entries for Big San Bruno Race.

Five Long Distance Men Are on Scratch Mark.

Boediker, Fast Marathon Man, Likely Winner.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The cross-country season will come to a close tomorrow with the annual handicap event to be held under the auspices of the Pacific Association of the Amateur Athletic Union. Seventy-five runners may compete on the seven-mile course selected by the officials of the Visitacion Valley Athletic Association.

The entry list is the largest ever received in this vicinity for a cross-country race with the exception of the famous Dipsea run.

Conspicuous in the line-up of the run tomorrow morning is the fact that there are five competitors on the scratch mark, an unusual condition. Otto Boeddiker, William Howden and John Burke of the Olympic Club; James McGee, unattached, and William Rohberg of the Visitacion Valley Athletic Association are the aspirants for prizes, who will have to show speed over the hills in the neighborhood of San Bruno.

Boeddiker is well known as the fastest Marathon runner ever developed here, and twice-winner of the time prize in the Dipsea race. His team mates, Howden and Burke, are also well known as winners of time prizes in several long races. Burk and William Rohberg, the fifth of the scratch runners were close rivals in the recent five-mile run held under the auspices of the Hayes Valley Carnival Committee, the latter winning the time prize from Burke by a few feet.

With a handicap limit of six minutes, it is figured the ability of the many entries has been evenly guaged in the various allowances made by the handicap committee. There will be thirty runners on the limit mark, many of the novices, while the intervals will be announced in starting signals every half minute. The last of the handicap runners will leave but a half minute before the scratch-men, which will surely result in many close finishes.

Too Much Class.

SOX REGULARS SKIN SEALS.

WIN THROUGH ABILITY TO HIT LONG'S PITCHERS.

Gardner's Batting and Fielding Big Feature of Ragged Contest on Slippery Field—Home Talent Fails to Do Anything With Heaving of Big Leaguers.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Bostons drew first blood against the Seals. What is more, they did it in decisive fashion and when they had finished there was little chance to question their victory.

Danny Long had two-thirds of his squad in the game, for nineteen of their names appear on the score sheet and the Bostonians, much to their own regret, as well as that of the fans, were lacking their one main star, Tris Speaker, who was sick with a cold, and that other stalwart outfielder, Harry Hooper, who had been allowed to take a trip to Sacramento to receive a trophy at the hands of his friends. In spite of this handicap, and the fact that Purtell, an infielder and Mahoney, a pitcher, had to take those vacant posts, the easterners showed they had their eyes on the ball, for they gathered nine hits, one of them a home run by Gardner, and three of the others good two-baggers.

It was not much of a game as games go, for it was the first practice for ten days running worth a mention, and errors were numerous. Four thousand hungry baseball fans, who were not sure a game could be played, piled into Recreation Park to satisfy their appetite for baseball and to cheer for their local favorites. They had that opportunity with San Francisco 3 to 1, in the lead at one time. But the Longites couldn't hold that lead and thanks to Gardner's batting, as well as to a wild throw to the outfield by Catcher Schmidt, when the session was ended it was 6 to 4, in favor of the men of the cultured city of Boston.

GROUND TOO WET.

With the condition of the ball grounds, it was hard to judge either club or the quality of ball that was displayed. The outer gardens were so slippery that the fielders had trouble keeping their feet when on the move and the diamond itself was not much better. The air, too, was decidedly chilly, and the weather not of the kind that would bring players up to their best efforts.

With all that, the visitors had by far the better of the argument. They hit better, getting nine as against six for the Seals and save for their setback in the third, they fielded better. Patsy Donovan worked two of his pitchers, Wood and Cicotte. The former had poor control, but he was sending the ball over the plate and putting all that he had on the sphere.

Four of the San Francisco twirlers were given a chance to shine. Frank Eastly who was in for four innings, was in the best form. Thanks to a slippery left field that prevented Powell from traveling around as fast as he should have done, the Red Sox got a tally off Eastley at the start, but after that he held them down.

It was on Harry Sutor that the white man's burden fell most despairingly. The two runs that came from a walk and the right field homer are to be charged to the southpaw, but Catcher Schmidt's ill-advised throw down to second when he had two out and the correspondingly wild toss by Tommy Madden from center field were responsible for the two tallies that gave the Bostonians a lead that was never overcome. One more run came off Browning, who gave a walk and a two-bagger and Harry Fielder finished in the ninth by holding his major league opponents to an infield hit and runs.

SEALS ALL OUT.

Practically every man of the Seals, a single during the afternoon and after touching Wood up for two in the third, they got no action until they landed on Cicotte for two more healthy singles in the seventh.

Gardner, covering second for the Red Sox, was easily the feature man for the visitors. He led off with a two-bagger and later got his home run. His fielding, also, was sensational. Most of the men in the line-up were new to the Coast fans, although Duffy Lewis and Tom Madden, the latter formerly a Portland catcher received good "hands" when they came up for the first time.

TICO IN HARD LUCK. KID CAN DO BETTER.

Tico, the Oxnard busher, had his first chance yesterday in what might be called a real game to show what he could do but failed. With two on bases and no one out, Tico was told to sacrifice and in trying to do so, bunted two fouls. On the next pitched ball he was caught unawares and fanned.

On the contrary Patterson made a double and a single in four times at bat and yet some of the fans were inclined to compare the two players in the way of showing what a busher and an experienced man did. Patterson led off in his first two times at bat and hit safely but in the eighth with a man on second and two out, a hit would have scored another run but Pat could not get it.

With two on and two out in the first it was up to Stinson to hit in a run but he could not and Brown could do no better in the fourth. These statements are only necessary in view of the fact that some of the spectators have an idea that Tico is a weak one.

MAY HELP TICO.

The title to Tico of Oxnard has been vested in the Vernon team by the National Commission and Hap Hogan goes so far as to state that he will pay Tico's fine of $100, if the boy wants to borrow the money. According to Hogan's story there is a misunderstanding about Tico signing with Vernon and that the fine is an unjust one.

Hogan stated last night that in all probability the Vernon team would keep Tico as he was a very good prospect and several clubs were after him. Tico is suspended, except in exhibition games and cannot play in a regular Coast League game until the fine is paid.

GOSSIP ALONG GASOLINE ROW.

Leon T. Shettler is willing to post a forfeit to race an Apperson against any girl driver. He reiterates his first statement, however, that he will no race on any course without the sanction of the A.A.A. or of the proper authorities. Shettler claims that some of his friends have misunderstood him and says he still is willing to race. He says he was willing to go to the Motordrome but was told by Teddy Tetzlaff that it was impossible to get on the boards.

Now that the Motordrome can be secured for the woman's race there seems to be no reason why it should not be held. Before any girl driver is chosen, however, she must prove that she is willing to race. The water is to be pumped out of the subways.

P. A. Renton was one of the interested spectators at the start of the Lozier-Apperson race. He was to be the official starter. Renton was accompanied by Mrs. Renton and he drove the handsome new Overland coupe.

Mrs. Roger Miller was to be one of the judges. She looks well as the wheel of a Pullman and knows an automobile well enough to have acted in an official capacity.

Mrs. Walter G. Hemenway was to have been the referee. She is sorry that the race could not be held, as she would have been one of the interested officials. She was absolutely non-partisan. She drives a Stoddard-Dayton.

H. H. West of the Western Rubber and Supply Company was in San Francisco a few days last week. "No," said Mr. West, "I didn't have time to study trade conditions. I was too busy studying flood conditions and wondering if I could get home. We think it has been raining some down here, but you should see the San Joaquin Valley. It is under water for miles. When I got back I found a letter from one of my traveling salesman, saying that if we expected him to continue work in that section we would have to send him some kind of a boat.

Martin Wins Race.

Martin of San Francisco easily won the twelve-hour roller skating race at the Palm rink last night, having made 160 miles and twelve laps. Wolfe of Los Angeles was five laps in the rear. The third man was Saffell of Bakersfield, who covered 158 miles and sixteen laps, and the fourth man was Willie Wolf, a 16-year-old boy, who made 153 miles and fifteen laps. Fuller had covered 100 miles and Panpier sixty-one miles before they retired on

STAND PATS ARE TRIMMED.

"Insurgents" Defeat Them in Six-Inning Game.

Good Work-Out for Angel Team at Springs.

Tozer Wins for His Squad With Three Bagger.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MURRIETTA SPRINGS, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Insurgents trounced the Stand Patters in a smashing six-inning battle this afternoon by a score of 2 to 1. The regulars could do little with "Con" Concannon, the juvenile from Perris, who twirled for the victors. The southpaw held his opponents safe at every stage of the game and let them down with three safe bingles, one a scratch.

The Insurgents broke up the game in the fifth with two slashing singles and a three-sacker by "Bill" Tozer, scoring two runs. The Stand Patters tallied their lonesome score in their half of the fifth on two singles.

"Lefty" Criger southpawed for the losers and pitched a safe game, holding the Insurgents in his mitt until the fatal fifth.

HOT SOCCER GAME.

After the baseball game, the two teams lined up in a regular soccer game and the old boys put it all over the strangers. Daley and Teck were the star soccerites and covered oodles of territory.

Big Coleman hit Right Fielder Teck with a high fast one on the back of the head in the morning practice, knocking the fast Santa Ana boy to the ground for a second, but Teck was up in a few moments and contiqued playing, although he suffered great pain. If the ball had struck Teck two inches higher, it would have been curtains for the recruit. Teck donned his uniform in the afternoon and played right field on the regular line-up.

The boys were as playful all day as a flock of kittens. They fairly reveled in the sunny going. The field dried up remarkably fast and was in fairly good condition for the big game. Dillon has scheduled a nine-inning game for Sunday afternoon.

Doc Finley said this afternoon that there was not a cripple in the twenty-three men here now, a particularly fit condition when the large number is considered. Sore muscles abound, of course, but none of them serious enough to keep the boys out of uniform. A large number of the hotel guests witnessed the game today. The play by innings:

FIRST INNING.

Insurgents: Tozer out Rawlins to Deal, Wheeler fanned. Delmas flied to Teck; no runs.

Stand Patters: Daley singled over short and was caught off first, Delmas to Dillon. Teck ozoned. Howard walked and out stealing second; no runs.

SECOND INNING.

Insurgents: Dillon doubled to right and went to third on a wild throw to second by Criger. Abbott out, Akin to Deal. Delhi walked. Lockhart popped to Metzger. Dillon out stealing; no runs.

Stant Pats: Akin out, Cannon to Dillon. Metzger lined to Lockhart. Deal fanned; no runs.

THIRD INNING.

nIsurgents: Concannon fanner. Crips out, Metzger to Deal. Tozer same route: no runs.

Stand Pats: Rawlings out, Tozer to Dillon. Wheeler dropped Grindle's dinky pop. Criger hit into a double play, Metzger to Delmas to Dillon; no runs.

FOURTH INNING.

Insurgents: Wheeler fanned. Delmas out, Akin to Deal. Dillon walked and stole second. Abbott flied to Crips; no runs.

Stand Pats: Daley walked and stole second. Teck flied to Crips. Howard fanned. Akin out, Concannon to Dillon; no runs.

FIFTH INNING.

Insurgents: Delhi singled over second. Lockhart sacrificed. Concannon struck out. Crips singled to center. Tozer lined out a screaming triple to deep center scoring Delhi and Crips. Wheeler fanned; two runs.

Stand Pats: Metzger flied to Lockhart. Deal singled infield. Teck ran for Deal. Criger out. Concannon to Dillon. Grindle singled to center, scoring Deall Criger out, Concannon to Dillon; one run.

SIXTH INNING.

Insurgents: Delmas out. Criger to Deal Dillon popped to Akin. Abbott popped to Metzger; no runs.

Stand Pats: Coleman pitching for Insurgents. Daley out, Coleman to Dillon. Teck popped to Coleman. Howard out, Delmas to Dillon; no runs.

Rawlings, Vaughn, Teck and Metzger, the Angel recruits, showed up in fine shape, and Lockhart played a pretty game in center. The line-up:

AIR-COOLED KID'S AIR-DRIVEN MOTOR.

Ralph Hamlin owns an air-driven, air-cooled automobile which created a sensation yesterday. The Franklin six-cylinder is equipped with a propellor seven feet, six inches long, which drives the car thirty-eight miles an hour. Hamlin operated the propellor with a clutch and stopped and started easily.

With 1000 revolutions a minute the Franklin went whirling along. It is a four-wheel drive. There is no connection with the rear axle and the propellor is rigged to a frame above the rear wheels, which is protected in such a way that a pedestrian is in no danger.

The rear axle is of the full floating type and the machine works well without a differential. It is a novel plan and Ralph is having lots of fun blowing the hats off his friends and whirling the dust into the eyes of those who watch him skim along the streets.

NEW MEMBERS FILL THE BOARD.

VESTRYMEN ELECTED AT CHRIST CHURCH APPROVED.

Harmonious Meeting Is Held and Vacancies Filled With Men Prominent in Congregation and Business Affairs—Rector Lee Will Be Asked to Again Fill Pulpit.

At a largely attended meeting of the membership of Christ Episcopal Church last night eight vestrymen were elected to take the places of the eight who had resigned.

Rev. Baker P. Lee's resignation having been accepted by the old vestry some dissatisfaction was created, which led to the old vestrymen resigning. Those elected last night are men prominent in the congregation and in the city. They are D. K. Dickinson, E. P. Johnston, H. S. Jones, H. Clay King, J. A. Kingsley, C. Modini-Wood, Thomas L. Winder and John Parkinson.

The resignation of Mr. Lee was to take effect Easter Monday. It is understood that one of the first acts of the new vestry will be to extend a call to him to again become the rector of the parish.

The meeting last night, which was attended by about 400 persons, was harmonious. It is the belief that Christ Church will continue to grow in the future as it has in the past, under Mr. Lee's rectorship.

Mr. Lee's resignation was brought about by a dissatisfied condition in the congregation. It is claimed that a portion of the congregation would not work harmoniously with him and this state of affairs jarred on the rector. The resignation of the old vestrymen and the election of the new ones will, it is believed, clear the atmosphere.

It is intimated that not much pressure will be necessary to induce Mr. Lee to again fill the pulpit in view of changed conditions brought about by last night's election.

EMIGRATION AN AID TO ITALY.

Fortunes Sent Home by Citizens Who Leave for United States—Government Encourages Movement.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ROME, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Advantages derived by Italy from emigration were enumerated by Premier Luzzatti in an important debate in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday. He said that $214,000,000 had been sent home by emigrants to the United States in the last three years and that the financial prosperity of the country was due mainly to this fact.

Emigration, said the Premier, contributed to the development of the shipping and national industries and to increase of imports, and hence the government was bound to encourage it. The special precautions taken during the cholera outbreak were justified. he maintained, because they were intended to prevent a decrease in emigration.

The Premier expressed the hope that the time was near when Italian prosperity and industrial developments would reach a stage where the country would not need the aid of emigration. Then, he concluded, steps would be taken to diminish the exodus of workers and Italy would export goods only and not men.

EARTHQUAKE FELT.

SAN JOSE, March 11.—A sharp earthquake was felt here this afternoon and the following record was made at the Santa Clara College observatory. "An earthquake of considerable intensity was recorded this afternoon at 1:29:28 o'clock. The double amplitude was 51,95,17 millimeters on north, south, east, west, and vertical lines respectively. The period was seven-tenths of one second, The origin 118 kilometers southeast by east."

SETTLES YOUR OUT-OF-ORDER STOMACH AND ENDS ALL INDIGESTION FIVE MINUTES LATER.

Heartburn, Stomach Gas, Dyspepsia and Headache Will Vanish Before You Realize It—Thousands of Readers of The Times Will Find a Permanent Cure for Stomach Trouble at a Very Nominal Cost.

The question as to how long you are going to continue a sufferer from indigestion, Dyspepsia or out-of-order Stomach is merely a matter of how soon you begin taking some Diapepsin.

If your Stomach is lacking in digestive power, why not help the stomach to do its work, not with drastic drugs, but a re-enforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach.

People with weak stomachs should take a little Diapepsin occasionally and there will be no more Indigestion, no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, no heartburn, sour risings, Gas on Stomach or Belching of undigested food, Headaches, Dizziness or Sick Stomach, and, besides, what you eat will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odors. All these symptoms resulting from a sour, out-of-order stomach and dyspepsia are generally relieved in five minutes after taking a little Diapepsin.

Go to your druggist and get a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin now, and you will always go to the table with a hearty appetite, and what you eat will taste good, because your stomach and intestines will be clean and fresh, and you will know there are not going to be any more bad nights and miserable days for you. They freshen you and make you feel like life is worth living.

Los Angeles Woman Wants Husband to Pay Doctors' Bills—Shadows Annoy Her.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Myrtle M. Kump of Los Angeles, wife of Frank H. Kump, a wealthy ex-brewer, has suffered a nervous breakdown and must be placed in a private sanatorium.

Dr. T. J. Beattie, her physician testified in Judge Goodrich's court today. She has a suit for divorce pending against Mr. Kump and applied for more money to pay her doctor's bills, hosptial bills and expenses in a sanatorium, She is now receiving $150 a month.

It developed in the testimony that the reason of Mrs. Kump's breakdown was the constant presence of detectives said to be in the employ of Kump in the vicinity of her home, and on the street cars when she went downtown.

The detectives hired rooms near her home and remained there watching her home day and night, it was asserted; the same detectives also followed her when she went East last summer in company with George M. Shelley, former Mayor and former postmaster of Kansas City. Mrs. Kump presented doctors' bills amounting to $300, hospital bills of $300 and other expenses which she has asked that Kump be required to pay.

Judge Goodrich will decide the case Monday. Kump is past 70 years of age, and has been in the divorce court seven times, having married one of his wives three times.

Man Whom Senator Gore Charges With Offering Him Money Runs for Mayor of Gore's Home Town.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LAWTON (Okla.) March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Jake Hamon, accused by United States Senator T. P. Gore, of having offered him $50,000 as a bribe in connection with the McMurray contracts, today filed his name as a candidate for Mayor of this city, the home town of both himself and Gore. Republicans who are backing Hamon declare that they believe the people will support him for the place, thereby taking a direct slap at Gore.

TO CANCEL TAX SALES.

Thompson's No. 116, which permits Supervisors to cancel tax sales in certain cases instead of requiring redemption and refunding process when erroneous assessments have been made.

Walker's No. 1170, giving the Governor the power of appointment of the State Harbor Commissioners and making them removable at his pleasure. By this act the Governor is able to reorganize the commission.

Shanahan's No. 253, prohibiting the use of salmon or steel head trout roe for bait.

Bill's No. 11, permitting branches of the State bacteriological laboratory at Berkeley, now under State Board of Health, to be established in such other parts of the State as the board deems necessary.

Walker's No. 638, permitting propagation of pheasants or their importation from abroad and the killing and sale of such propagated or imported birds only.

Birdsall's No. 4, for a State highway from Myer's Station, El Dorado county to McKinney's, Placer county, forming a connection through the mountains to Lake Tahoe, for motor vehicles.

AMENDING POLITICAL CODE.

Roseberry's 298, 299, and 300, amending the Political Code (section 1560 to 1564) by which county superintendents in counties where there are more than twenty school districts may abandon the usual five-day teachers' institutes and holiday institutes in different parts of the county.

ASSEMBLY BILLS IN FORCE.

Assembly bills now in force as laws are:

Maher's No. 539, forbidding catching fish in Monterey Bay, Santa Cruz county, except by hook and line; and Griffith's No. 716, forbidding the same in the Napa River in Sonoma, Napa and Solano counties.

Held's No. 98, permitting the killing of tree squirrels in Mendocino county.

Hewitt's No. 832, which permits levee districts to issue bonds for levees, ditches and canals.

Jasper's No. 972, which forbids taking steel head trout except between April 1 and November 1 with hook and line when over six and one-half inches in length.

Flint's No. 7, which gives fraternal and beneficial organizations owning cemeteries control of them.

Presiker's No. 508, permitting trustees of cities and towns to appoint the Marshal instead of providing for his election. This law is anti-liquor because many Marshals, being independent of the trustees, fail to enforce liquor laws.

Freeman's No. 622, permitting the pledgee or trustee of stock to vote it if there is no other representation.

FOR LOS ANGELES ROADS.

Cogswell's No. 429, authorizing Supervisors to maintain and repair highways constructed by the counties. It is intended to equip the Los Angeles Supervisors with power to maintain the good roads of that county.

Griffin's No. 781, making the Attorney-General, State Engineer and State Controller a commission to pass on bonds of irrigation districts and pass on their engineering rights, market value of lands and physical feasibility of project.

Crosby's No. 1003, permitting the Governor to authorize organizations, not militia, to have arms and drill, intended to permit school companies; and No. 991, revising the law governing the National Guard.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL PASO, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Robert McSweeney, a former resident of San Diego and other cities of California, died yesterday as a result of concussion of the brain, received in a fall down the steps of the State National Bank building ten days ago. He was rendered unconscious by the fall and was taken to the County Hospital where he regained partial consciousness and was thought to be recovering from the accident. He said, before his death, that he had a wife living in San Diego who owned a lemon orchard near there. The body is being held pending advice from his relatives in California.

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt and Miss Ethel Roosevelt passed through Kansas City yesterday morning on their way to California. They did not leave their train.

Gathering Gold From Trees

How One Man found Both Health & Wealth

"They shipped me West in 1903," he said, and a husky looking specimen he was—two hundred pounds of ruddy, well dressed manhood, who looked as if his dinners tasted good.

"They tried to send somebody with me—just to keep me company, they said—but I refused. I knew by the way they looked that they thought I would be coming back a few months later—in a box.

"I landed down Riverside way, and after a few days' rest, got out among the oranges in the sunshine.

"In thirty days I felt better—and in thirty more I took a job in a packing house. They were short of help, and though I didn't need the money, I wanted something to do, and so got busy.

"Within three months I selected ten acres for my own—got my trees set out—and looked at my bank book. My savings of Twenty-Five Hundred Dollars had shrunk considerable—but I knew I had a winner, and I stayed with it.

"I worked for experienced growers and learned all they knew about the orange business, and put my knowledge into my own ten acres.

"They'll bring me Five Thousand Dollars this winter—and I wouldn't sell my grove for Twenty Thousand.

"I've got my health back, and I'm Gathering Gold from Trees."

This is not an unusual experience—though the man was unusual. If you've got a small capital and good common sense, you can do as well.

Better buy now, though—for good orange land is getting rarer and rarer. Buy at Orange Vista, down in Riverside County, 'The Home of The Orange"—you'll never have a better chance.

Here are the facts—vital to success—decomposed granite soil, at an elevation of 1600 feet—and frostless. Every 10 acres gets 60 inches of water for 24 hours every 30 days—and that is more than you need.

Near good town and railway, with excellent train service to Riverside and to Los Angeles. Advantages of good schools, including High School, stores, telephones, churches—and all the comforts.

This is an ideal spot for orange grove homes. Beautifully located near the foothills, with a glorious mountain view.

Ten acre plots at $200 an acre. Small cash payment, balance during four years' time. Get one of my circulars and learn about my Free Excursions.

DRUMMONDS ASK FOR FIELD CASH.

NEED TWO MILLIONS TO CUT INTO SOCIETY.

Former Wife of Chicago Merchant Prince Plans Splurge in London During Coronation Festivities. Visits Windy City to Negotiate With Trustees of Estate.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Maldwin Drummond, former wife of the late Marshall Field, Jr., who came to Chicago last week with her English husband to negotiate with the trustees of the Marshall Field estate, is still pleading with guardians of the Field wealth for an increased personal allowance. Capt. and Mrs. Drummond need at least $2,000,000 for the entertainment of British nobility and foreign potentates during the coronation ceremonies of King George, in June.

Mrs. Drummond's visit to Chicago, which she stated was for business reasons only, and which has been marked by no social entertainments, has not yet been crowned with the success that she anticipated.

The delay of the Field trustees in complying with Mrs. Drummond's demands for this great sum of money is prolonging the stay of the Drummonds here indefinitely.

MRS. SAGE MAKES ART GIFT.

Beautiful Collection of Japanese Netsukes, Originally Owned in Pasadena, Donated to Museum.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, March 11.—Mrs. Russell Sage is the donor of the most important recent acquisition to the Metropolitan Art Museum here—a collection of Japanese "netsukes." The collection includes 2546 specimens of these marvelously carved trinkets which Japanese wear on the cords of the tobacco pouches or any receptacle that may hang suspended from the belt. The netsukes were collected originally by A. C. Vrooman of Pasadena, Cal. They were seen there by Mrs. Sage, and after her return east she made the purchase.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

Pasadena.

TOLERATE IDEA GRACEFULLY.

Annexation Bugaboo Does Not Frighten Them.

Not Exactly in Favor But Will Talk It Over.

Sewage Question Further Complicates Situation.

(Office of The Times, 28 S. Raymond avenue.)

PASADENA, March 12.—"Consolidation with Los Angeles under a borough form of government is growing on the people in jumps," stated one of the leading men of Pasadena yesterday.

"There is absolutely no way to stop it. The attempt to inject it into the spring campaign as a paramount issue only serves to cause the people generally to give the matter close study, a thing which has never been done before. The statements, emanating now from the campaign headquarters, so far overdraw the situation that the main issue of consolidation is clouded. This will go ahead unchecked for a time until, with a sudden jerk, the people will wake up and, feeling so sore over having been misled, they will demand consolidation to avoid internal strife in the city."

The above statement was made by a man who has been opposed to annexation and consolidation and who, at the present time, does not care to have his name used because of the severe criticism which would follow.

The line up of the politicians, in the ranks of the two candidates for Mayor, would indicate that consolidation will be one of the real issues in the campaign regardless of the fact that every effort has been made to keep it out. The Metcalf party is standing pat against consolidation in any form, shape or manner, while the Thum party does not seem to be afraid to discuss the matter.

NEW FEATURE.

A new feature which has been brought out during the last few days will probably have much bearing on the case in a short time. It was announced yesterday by several of the leading men of South Pasadena that a move is now on foot to annex that city to Los Angeles just as soon as it can be done. South Pasadena needs sewage facilities. So far that city has used cesspools over the entire city. Property owners and real estate men realize that a modern system must be installed. The City Engineer of that city has made an exhaustive study of the question. He has made measurements and surveys of every possible outlet for sewerage, and has stated that the only outlet is through Los Angeles. The business interests of that city have decided the city must have sewers and must join Los Angeles to get them.

Coupled with that statement is another to the effect that a move is to be started to get better sewerage facilities for Pasadena. It is stated that the people living in the southern part of Alhambra and south of that city will shortly bring legal proceedings to stop Pasadena from dumping sewerage on its sewer farm. It is also stated the present sewer farm is inadequate to take care of all the water passing through the sewer, and that the land of the farm is rapidly becoming water-logged or soured.

It is also stated by the South Pasadena City Engineer that Los Angeles will have to build additional sewer facilities to provide for South Pasadena and Alhambra. Those who are studying the situation in Pasadena state that Pasadena will have to go to the sea with her mains. In other words, it will have to utilize the Los Angeles sewer, and such being the case, should go in with South Pasadena.

It was given out last night by politicians that if the Metcalf party forces the water question and consolidation into the issues of the campaign that the sewerage question will also be brought in by the other side with which broadside it is hoped to pour a killing fire into the enemy's ranks.

ANNOUNCE THUM BOOSTERS.

Yesterday afternoon those having charge of the management of Thum's candidacy for Mayor announced a committee of one hundred, who will have entire charge of the campaign. A meeting of the committeemen will be held tomorrow night, when the campaign manager will be selected and plans laid out for a vigorous campaign. It has been unofficially announced that Dr. Solan Briggs will be the campaign manager.

The committeemen are: George L. Andrews, G. M. Adams, Elliot Alden, R. S. Allen, George E. Abbott, G. F. Aspinal, C. F. Baker, L. A. Bartlett, L. F. Bassett, C. W. Bell, G. L. Bertonneau, F. E. Wood, M. E. Wood, George W. Woodhouse, E. N. Wright.

A meeting of the committee will be held Monday evening, March 13, at 7:30, in room 619, Chamber of Commerce Building, for the purpose of organization.

BUYS SITE FOR HOME.

J. E. Henry, a retired paper manufacturer of Boston, has decided to make his future home in Pasadena and yesterday completed the purchase of a beautiful tract of land lo-plans are being drawn by Myron Hunt for a $30,000 residence which will be built during this summer. The property is a part of the old Rosenbaum tract which was cleared and laid out several years ago by him.

RUMOR REVIVED.

The rumor that a large brick business block is soon to be built on the corner of West Colorado street and Delacy opposite the new Pasadena Theater Building has been revived. The lot is being used at the present time by the Pasadena Tourist Club as a horse-shoe pitching court.

LAUNCH NEW LEAGUE.

The Public Schools Athletic League was formally launched yesterday afternoon at a meeting held in the Board of Education rooms. The officers elected were Dr. Webster, president; J. V. Ellot, vice-president; Henry Newby, treasurer; C. Claud Braden, secretary; directors, Thomas Earley, Dr. John Willis Baer, Dr. J. A. B. Scherer, Dr. Robert J. Burdette, Rev. Robert Freeman, A. L. Just ask telephone operator for Times Classified Department. The telephone charge will be paid by The Times and bill mailed for the ad at regular rates. One cent per word daily, 1 1-4 cents Sunday. The Times regularly prints more "Liner" advertisements than the aggregate number printed by all the other Los Angeles papers.

Ocean Park.

SLOT MACHINES CAUSE TROUBLE.

NEIGHBORING TOWNS DON'T ADOPT SAME REGULATIONS.

Restrictions Have Been Thrown About the Insidious Vice, However, Until Its Fangs Are Drawn and the Minimum Amount of Damage Is Done—Will File Suits.

OCEAN PARK, March 11.—At the beach the line is drawn on the slot machine, but it is no figurative line. It is the real imaginative wall that separates the cities of Santa Monica and Ocean Park. North of this barrier, in Santa Monica, it would be a crime of no less degree than insurrection for cigar dealers to permit these seductive card games to be whirled at their stores.

South of the bulwark a city ordinance recognizes these gambling devices by collecting a license for the permission of their operation. Until quite recently it has been permitted the patrons to "play back"— that is to collect their earnings in coin, provided the money were at once run through the machine again. But the police placed a ban on this practice. Since then the dealers have been paying the winners in checks, slugs, tickets or other representatives of value. Again the police have stepped in to demand a rigid enforcement of the ordinance, which provides that the winnings shall be paid only in merchandise. With the ban placed on payment in checks or tickets, the police believe they have the game practically killed, as those who would "buck the tiger" do not care to load themselves with merchandise.

The proximity of the two cities has been responsible from time to time for considerable trouble and misunderstanding in the matter of the enforcement of police regulations, as the ordinances of the two cities have not been drawn along the same lines.

The Chamber of Commerce has received a favorable report from the committee that was recently named for the purpose of moving in the direction of attempting to secure reduced trolley fares on the Los Angeles Pacific between the sea and the city.

Chairman Stewart of the committee, co-operating with the city attorneys of this city and Santa Monica, says they are now preparing the papers that will institute suits for hearing before the State Board of Railroad Commissioners. The new law clothes that body with authority to arrange rate schedules if it should be made to appear to them that the present charges are too high. This committee expects to be able to convince the commissioners that the present charge of 55 cents for a one-way ride is exorbitant, and also that the 50 cent round-trip rate is too much. They will also set up the plea that the present rates are maintained in discrimination against this beach, which is nearer to Los Angeles than either Redondo or Long Beach, while the fares charged between all beach points and Los Angeles are the same, regardless of mileage. For instance, it is fourteen miles to Venice by trolley, whereas it is twenty-one miles to San Pedro. The concensus of opinion of the membership of the Chamber of Commerce is that the rates are too high for either the good of the beach or the railroad

Santa Monica.

LANDSLIDES ARE REPORTED.

Rains Do Great Damage Along Northern Coast.

Hueneme Railroad Is One of the Sufferers.

Bridges Wrecked and Track Buried Under Debris.

SANTA MONICA, March 11.—Homeward travelers, who have been stormbound up the Coast for several days, report that the recent rains and swollen streams have wrought considerable damage along the beach from the mouth of Topango Creek to beyond the following Point of Dume. The improved country road extends only as far up the beach as the Malibu pier, a mile above Coal Canyon.

The damage between here and Topango consists of landslides and the wrecking of a number of small bridges. The Topango bridge is gone and Malibu Creek, during the flood, was a roaring river, ten feet deep and twenty times as wide. There are from five to ten landslides during every mile of road, from the Malibu's south line to the point, and all of the small bridges have been washed away.

The Malibu, Port Los Angeles & Hueneme Railway line, which runs for ten miles along the beach on the Rindge ranch, is washed out in many places. All the bridges are wrecked and at many places the track is covered with debris, washed down by the flood or by earth that has slipped down from the sides of the deeper cuts. The descent of all of these mountain streams into the sea is rapid, and the great volume of water that fell continuously for so many hours lost no time in seeking the level of the sea. Its force must have been terrific, judging by the damage done.

BIG CAMPUS.

The determination of the City Council to vacate Fifth and Sixth streets, between Fremont and Michigan avenues, will result in giving the High School district a campus of fourteen acres for the Polytechnic High School soon to be built. Condemnation proceedings are being instituted to purchase for school uses the blocks of lots lying between Seventh and Fourth streets and Fremont and Michigan avenues. While these proceedings are being pushed, the Board of Education is giving consideration to plans for the buildings to be erected. It has been decided that the group system will be employed and that there shall be at least three structures. The central one will be the administration building, which is to contain the recitation rooms. Another will be the girl's hall, which will provide accommodations for the domestic science, art and music departments. The boys' building will provide for the manual training, chemistry, physical culture and agricultural departments.

VALUES INCREASE.

Mrs. A. E. Summers, the Los Angeles "Oil Queen," today closed a lease, whereby she is to receive annually for the next ten years, as rental for the land alone, a sum equal to the amount paid for the property nine years ago. The rental is $100 per month, and the property consists of a forty-foot lot on the ocean front, just north of Kinney street, fronting the new Thompson Scenic Railway. The man, who has taken this lease, is an amusement promoter from the East, who will immediately improve the property by the erection of a handsome brick theater building. Property in this immediate vicinity today has a market value of $500 per front foot, as compared with $30 nine years ago.

NEW BANK.

The Merchants Commercial and Savings Bank, a new financial institution making the sixth bank for this beach, will open its doors for business early in May. The location selected is the Speedway corner room in the new brick building being erected on Marine street.

The prime mover in the establishment of this bank is President C. P. Thomas of the Merchants National Bank, who recently came here from Spokane to make his home and promptly followed that decision by going into business and purchasing a $10,000 residence on the sand. George W. Thomas, stockman and trader of Ontario, Or., will be at the head of the new institution and will at once come here to reside. Associated with them will be C. D. Francis, cashier of the Merchants National.

Fifteen of the substantial capitalists of the beach are to be associated with the new concern, which will organize and choose its officers within a few days.

WORK ON ROLL.

Work is to be started on the construction of the mountain roll on the new pleasure pier March 25. This is the information given out today by D. H. Cleghorn, inventor of the device, who was here from Oakland today conferring with E. G. King, secretary and treasurer of the Mountain Roll Amusement Co. The contract for the placing of the concrete piling has been let to Charles Corbaley. This new amusement thrill will cost, according to the estimates of the inventor, $75,000. It will occupy a floor space of 90x350 feet on the pier. Present plans are that the device will be completed and ready for dedication when the pier is finished May 30.

NEWS BRIEFS.

The Masonic fraternity has acquired property on Oregon avenue near Second street and is considering plans for the early construction of a Temple. The ground floor is to contain storerooms, with public hall and lodge rooms on the other floors. The corner lot adjoining has just been acquired by J. B. Newman, who is said also to be considering the erection of a brick block.

S. A. Gerard was today granted a permit for the erection of a $5000 apartment house at Hill street and Trolleyway. The structure, which is to be of three stories, will contain eighteen apartments.

Miss M. Carney, who was a teacher in the Heald Business College here before that institution was swallowed by the consolidation, will establish a business college. She has secured rooms in the new Butler block at Third

WOMAN'S LODGE HAS ELECTION.

Choose Officers and Elects Delegates to State Convention to Be Held in Highland Park.

REDONDO BEACH, March 11.—The annual election of officers of Chapter H, P.E.O., was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. F. Sprinkle. Officers chosen were: President, Mrs. C. W. Gassel; Vice-President, Mrs. W. F. Sprinkle; Recording Secretary, Mrs. J. C. Gillepsie; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. A. T. Hembree; Treasurer, Mrs. J. H. Cavanah; Journalist, Mrs. George H. Anderson, Guard, Mrs. F. L. Perry.

Mrs. Grassel and Mrs. Hembree were elected delegates to represent the chapter at the State convention to be held April 5, 6 and 7, in Highland Park, and Mrs. J. H. Cavanah and Miss Lucy Whichelo were chosen as alternates.

LOCAL SHOWS.

A home talent vaudeville performance will be given at the Pavilion Theater, March 22, under the direction of Art Phillips, a local artist of considerable talent. A leading feature of the programme will be a series of living pictures representing the seasons, and famous paintings. Mr. Phillips is preparing special scenery for these pictures.

Another home talent entertainment to be given soon is the cantata, "Cinderella in Flowerland," to be given March 15 and 16, by the Methodist Sunday-school.

SENIOR CLASS IS ECONOMICAL.

GRADUATING GOWNS TO BE NEAT AND INEXPENSIVE.

Thrifty Young Women Exhibit the Quality Which Will Fatten the Family Bank Account if Practiced After They Take Charge of Household—Boys Also in Line.

LONG BEACH, March 11.—The young lady members of the high school senior class which graduates in June, sprang a pleasant surprise today on their parents and the faculty when they decided unanimously to wear graduating gowns uniform in goods, colors and style and costing but a fraction of what is usually spent for such eventful occasion in lives of sweet young graduates.

The movement was started a week ago and a committee, of which Miss Ruth Craig, daughter of the shipbuilder, is chairman, was selected to devise a gown and make a report. The committee conferred with Miss May Torrey, teacher of sewing, and Miss Clare Binhisel, teacher of arts and craft and their advice brought about a speedy decision as to the style of gown. A model doll was draped in the design suggested and this dressed doll was submitted to the class who at once decided the dress was "to sweet for anything" and approved the ideas of the committee.

The actual cost of the goods will be $2.30. Those who have sewing as one of their studies will make their own dresses, while mothers and older sisters will look after others not so skillful with the needle. As explained to the reporter the gown is simple and girlish. The material will be fine sheer lawn, which will be trimmed with a little bit of valenciennes lace. The dress will include a plain tucked skirt, with a tucked yoke and sleeves of elbow length. All dresses will be of ankle length. With the dresses black shoes will be worn and the girls will wear wreaths of green and white, the class colors, and carry daisies, the class flower.

A uniform style of hair dressing will complete the details. The idea of the class is to eliminate any jealousy or heartburnings, so common because of former extravagance of dress and preserve a cordial feeling.

BOYS IN LINE.

The boys of the class not to be outdone at first proposed to wear cap and gown, which was popular until the girls' economy was made known when they followed suit and after turning down a proposition to rent the suggested apparel finally decided to all wear dark suits.

WATERS RECEDE.

The waters on the flats northwest of town are receding rapidly and there is more ground in sight this evening than for several days past. Anaheim bridge is still standing and will be strengthened at once. The house of Wm. George, who with his family were rescued by life guards and the police yesterday afternoon is in bad shape. It sank several feet in the mud yesterday and this morning only the top of the roof was visible and it showed signs of disintegration. Mr. George visited the place today and says all of the buildings and corrals are a total wreck. The San Pedro branch of the Pacific Electric will not be ready for traffic for several days, in consequence of which boat travel has greatly increased.

Along the beach at Seaside Park there are dead carcasses of birds, chickens, pigs and dogs which came down Cerritos slough from above and after passing through the entrance drifted ashore on the beach.

DOMESTIC TURMOIL.

J. R. Williams, a well known citizen who some time ago brought suit for divorce which was denied, has filed two suits against his wife, one to eject her from the home place on Eighth street and the other to quiet title to the property. When the pair separated there was a division of property and Williams secured a release and quit claim to the home property, which he rented. The first of the year when the tenant vacated Mrs. Williams moved in and refused to allow any one else to enter, the next day filing a homestead on the property, which Williams wants set aside.

COMPLICATED BIDS.

So complicated were the several bids submitted last night for the mechanical equipment of the new polytechnic school that the school board took all under advisement for a week. A Michigan company submitted a lump bid for $24,298 which is more than the board wishes to expend and the plans for equipment will probably have to be revised and some things eliminated.

CHECKED THEM UP.

Keepers of the gun club preserves outside the city say the storm has resulted in ducks of all varieties flocking to the ponds. Billy Franks of the Cerritos preserves, says he saw several large flocks and that on his club grounds alone there were over 15,000 of the feathered tribe.

and landed after an hour's fight a sixty-five pound electric shark. Both the wet line and gaff hook carried enough current to give Dugger a severe shock. Another freak on the wharf caught this morning, in a net, was a tiny "pipe fish," ten inches long and as big around as a straw.

SHORT NEWS STORIES.

Dr. W. Harriman Jones has filed suit against Dr. Thomas Cummings to recover $4000 which he claims Cummings is wrongfully withholding after a disagreement. Cummings claims a partnership which Jones denies, alleging that Cummings was only his assistant.

With a warning from the Mayor that unless some immediate action was taken in the sale of the pier bonds voted a year ago and repairs made to the outer wharf, additional expense would be incurred by the weakening of the piling, the Council last night ordered the clerk to readvertise the bonds for both the outer wharf and the new pier at Devil's Gate. It is said that the city has a buyer for both issues of $125,000.

After a few changes in the pending water ordinance, the Council last night again postponed final action one week. Incidentally the question of municipal ownership of water was brought up and discussed and the water company representatives who were present tentatively agreed to a sale to the city at a price to be fixed by appraisers. The First Ward League, which favors the movement, has volunteered to secure the necessary signatures to a petition calling for a bond election to purchase both plants. No final action was taken.

LADIES TALK ON LITERATURE.

Ancients and Moderns Included in the Finished Addresses of the Feminine Speakers.

SOUTH PASADENA, March 11.—"Book Day" was te topic for the meeting of the Women's Improvement Association held in their hall this week at the corner of Meridian and Mission streets, the afternoon being in charge of Mrs. D. L. Baker, who read a paper giving a general survey of the whole field, giving a list of the books for juveniles and for the busy woman. She also compared the reports of the Los Angeles librarian with the South Pasadena librarian report, and from both it was noted that the class of literature most in demand was on soil culture, gardening and poultry raising.

Mrs. John E. Carson gave an excellent paper on magazines and periodicals, and Mrs. George W. Bell read a paper on classic literature in the past century, reviewing Dickens, Shakespeare, Thackery and Scott, the programme ending with two violin solos by Mrs. Merritt.

NEWS BRIEFS.

William F. Axtman, No. 3105 Monterey Road, who some time ago purchased the Alhambra Advocate, a local weekly newspaper of Alhambra, has sold same to James J. Conrad, formerly of Tacoma, Wash.

At the regular semi-monthly meeting of the South Pasadena Chapter of the P.E.O. held at the home of Mrs. George W. Fleer, No. 811 Bushnell avenue, Thursday, the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. John Doyle; Vice-president, Mrs. O. B. Manchester; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Frank Stephens; Corresponding Secretary, Miss Ethel Kohl; Treasurer, Mrs. C. H. Woodruff; Chaplain, Mrs. Charles Bingham; Guard, Miss Ethel Strong; Journalist, Mrs. P. H. Updike; Pianist, Miss Viola Kohl; Chairman of Social Committee, Mrs. T. W. Bishop; Delegates to Convention, Mrs. John Doyle and Mrs. Charles Bingham; Alternate Delegates, Mrs. W. A. Pradshaw and Mrs. T. W. Bishop.

Clifford B. Walker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Walker, No. 1421 Mission street, ranked second in a crowd of 125 college men in a competitive examination for entrance into the new Bellevue Hospital, New York, last week. Mr. Walker entered his senior year at the Johns Hopkins University last October, and when he gets his degree in June will enter Bellevue.

TROPICO.

TROPICO, March 11.—Daniel Webster, C. C. Rittenhouse, E. W. Richardson, C. A. Bancroft and John Hobbs, Trustees elected Thursday to serve for the recently incorporated town of Tropico, with Stuart M. Street, City Clerk and John A. Logan, Treasurer, and James L. Fishback, City Marshal, met at the residence of Daniel Webster Friday evening, and discussed matters pertaining to the best interests of Tropico. These officers will be officially inducted into office Thursday evening.

Tuesday evening the Tropico Chamber of Commerce, with Frank H. Davis as president, will hold the regular meeting in the old quarters, Richardson Hall. A permanent meeting place will then be selected.

The recent heavy rains caused no serious damage to property in the city of Tropico.

Piles Driven Away FREE

Cases of Extreme Torture Cured So Quick As to Amaze All Who Know The Terrors of Piles.

Even a small and recent case of piles is bad enough but thousands are in abject misery. Great protusions render life a torture in every community and yet, right within elbow room is certainly a drug store that has the wonderful Pyramid Pile Cure. If not, it will be mailed free upon receipt of the regular price—50c.

It works like a hundred swift streams of water on a sudden blaze, puts the fire out, saves lives, saves the nerves, prevents gangrene, stops all pain, all itching, all bleeding; reduces all swellings, internal or external, cures quick and complete to stay cured. Many severe cases think they are hopeless, must be operated on, have part of their anatomy cut and carved. Don't let it happen.

Remember, anything cut off is gone forever. Pyramid Pile Cure saves all this, cures rationally, restores the parts to normal healthy conditions. You can easily and quickly prove this by sending your name and address to Pyramid Drug Co., 278 Pyramid Bldg., Marshall, Mich. A free trial will at once be mailed sealed in plain wrapper and you will never afterwards be at a loss to know what to advise when you hear of a case of piles, no matter how severe it may be.

southwest of here that was under water will soon be drained off into the drainage ditches. The break on the west side of the river south of First street, through which most of the overflow went, is being repaired today.

The Pacific Electric has had a great deal of trouble keeping debris from lodging against its bridge across the Santa Ana River north of Fifth street. At one time during the night a number of ranchers whose lands were overflowed last year because this bridge turned the current out of the channel, became alarmed when word came that a great rush of water was coming down the river. The ranchers thought that the disaster of last year would be repeated, and there was serious talk of dynamiting the bridge if it was found necessary. However, the rush of water did not come. Instead the river began to go down.

The approaches to the Chapman-street bridge across the Santa Ana River at West Orange are washed out, and the bridge is closed.

SHORT NEWS STORIES.

A conference of the State Executive Committee of the Christian Endeavor and the local committee having in charge the arrangements of the State Christian Endeavor convention to be held here June 7 to 11, was held at the First Christian Church here today. Preliminary arrangements for the convention were made. J. P. Wells, State chairman, of Los Angeles, presided.

Marriage licenses were issued here today to David F. Field, 40, and Alice Brown, 33, both of Santa Ana; Harry Barter, 28, and Mary F. Hoover, 28, both of Magnolia. Mrs. Alice Brown was the divorced wife of Luther Brown, formerly a Los Angeles attorney, now chief detective of the United Railroads of San Francisco. The divorce occurred in 1903.

SHOULD THERE BE TWO PURSES IN THE FAMILY?

Club Women Display Amazing Unanimity in Arriving at the Conclusion That There Should Be Two in the Interest of Domestic Peace. Ladies to Give Vaudeville.

RIVERSIDE, March 11.—"Should There Be Two Purses in the Family" was the interesting subject with which the Home and Philanthropy class of the Woman's Club wrestled at the meeting yesterday.

The subject was cleverly presented by Mrs. J. F. Brown. In the paper read by Mrs. Brown she argued that the women of today pride themselves upon their independence and their ability as managers, hence they should have a share in the handling of the family purse, though the best results are frequently obtained by family consultations over investments, as well as expenditures.

In the discussion it was brought out that the man who gives his wife an allowance regularly has less to worry about than he would if he attempted to run his own affairs and those of his wife.

The ladies of the Universalist Church are perfecting plans for the vaudeville entertainment to be given on Friday, March 24, in the Woman's Clubhouse. The management is in charge of Mrs. Marion Tracie Whiting, whose work in directing such presentations in the East has gained for her an enviable reputation. Local artists will contribute toward the entertainment, whose chief feature will be the famous trial scene from the "Merchant of Venice," with Mrs. Whiting appearing in the role of Portia, in which she achieved favorable comments while playing a few years ago to the Shylock of Robert Downing, the famous tragedian.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Jacob A. Riis, the celebrated New York reformer, lecturer and writer, will be the guest of honor at a dinner to be given on Monday evening by the gentlemen of the First Congregational Church in the refectory of the Glenwood Mission Inn. His talk before the church men is being anticipated with no small amount of pleasure.

No trains have entered or departed from Riverside today, except over the Santa Fe, on account of the washouts on the Espee and on the Salt Lake. There is a wide gap in the Southern Pacific right of way near Colton, while the Salt Lake has washouts north of this city and on the south side also. The Santa Ana River here is out of its banks in places and the West Riverside bridge is impassable, necessitating a detour by the travelers from West Riverside to this city by way of the bridge near Crestmore, three miles north of here.

HOODOO NUMBER NOT UNLUCKY.

Numeral 13 Considered Favorable Omen by Gen. Hodges Who Is to Retire From Army March 13.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Thirteen is a lucky number for Maj.-Gen. C. L. Hodges, in command of the Department of the Lakes, who will retire from active service in the army Monday.

Gen. Hodges tonight was the guest at a sort of farewell dinner at the Union League Club and Monday night former comrades who served with him in the Army of the Potomac will give a banquet for him at the Grand Pacific Hotel.

It was at the Union League Club affair that Gen. Hodges expressed his firm belief in the numeral "13" as a good omen, in spite of the fact that it generally is considered unlucky.

The following are some of his reasons for it:

He was born March 13, 1847, at Providence, R. I.

Entered the Union army in 1861, just before he was out of his thirteenth year.

Promoted thirteen grades in the army.

To retire on the thirteenth day of the month.

Gen. Hodges has served in nearly every war the United States has engaged in since 1861, excepting the Boxer uprising in China.

"I was born in 1847 and joined the army in 1861, so you see I was pretty young—almost 14," Gen. Hodges said. "I joined the Sixty-fifth New York and served in the Army of the Potomac all during the war. I was wounded May 10, 1864, at Spottsylvania Courthouse, Virginia, and October 19, 1864, at Cedar Creek. I was mustered out of the army in 1865, and held the rank of sergeant.

ARMY ECLIPSES GLENN CURTISS.

Birdman Is Now of Secondary Importance.

Says He Will Sell Government Machines.

Alleged Murderer of Santa Anna in Ensenada.

SAN DIEGO, March 11.—The sudden arrival of United States troops, so far as public interest is concerned, has completely overshadowed Glenn Curtiss and his aviation experiments.

According to report, Curtiss is preparing to open a branch experiment camp on the Atlantic Coast. He may go there himself. He is not yet ready to so announce his plans. However, he will ship to Hampton Roads his hydroaeroplane, which will be used there in conjunction with the assembling of the Atlantic fleet the latter part of March.

Curtiss, it is stated, plans to ship the machine after March 17. Jerome Francfulli, who represents Curtiss in the East, is now arranging a programme which will include a mimic attack on Fortress Monroe. Also it is planned that Curtiss will give instructions to the naval officers of the Atlantic fleet.

Curtiss said today that he is negotiating with the government for the sale of two of his machines, each at an approximate cost of $6000. One will be for use of the navy and one for the army.

RELATIVES LOCATED.

Circulars sent to Baptist ministers in Texas giving an account of the death of Thomas McMicken, who was killed in an automobile accident near Mirimar, have resulted in the discovery of the deceased's parents who reside in Oriana, a small town of the Lone Star state. McMicken was chauffeur for E. W. Scripps, who caused the circulars to be sent. He learned that McMicken's parents were members of the Baptist church and by sending the circulars to almost every Baptist preacher in the state he was able to locate them. Scripps will send the personal effects of the deceased to the parents. The remains were buried here.

SAINZ AT ENSENADA.

Chief of Police Wilson is advised that Jose Sainz, the Mexican murderer once extradited from Lower California and who several months ago made a sensational escape from the Santa Ana jail by overpowering Sheriff Lacey, is now a police officer at Ensenada.

Residents of Ensenada coming to San Diego report that Sainz, armed with a 45-calibre revolver parades the streets of Ensanada with much gusto; that he exhibits the gun with the remark that it is the same weapon he took from the body of his victim whom he killed in Orange county and for which he is wanted there.

Following the sensational escape of Sainz and a companion from the Santa Ana jail, Sainz made his way to his old haunts at Tecarte. At the outbreak of the insurrection he is said to have first allied himself with the insurrectos. Fearing his possible capture he deserted and repaired to Ensenada, where he offered his services in defense of his country. According to information received by Chief Wilson, he was placed in charge of the rurales, since when he was given authority to preserve the peace of Ensenada. It is understood here that the authorities of Santa Ana have again started proceedings of extradition.

LOCOMOTIVE ARRIVES.

The insurrection in Lower California has had no effect on progress of the San Diego & Arizona Railroad. The insurrectos have encouraged rather than attempting to molest building operations. A second locomotive has arrived to be used in hastening construction work. The engine came direct from the Baldwin works. It has 50-inch drive wheels with tractive power of 30,000 pounds. With the tender its weight is 237,000 pounds. It is equipped with oil-burning furnace. The cost was $16,000. When the road is ready for operation the engine will be placed in regular service.

IS SUSPECTED.

Charged with exploding dynamite in the streets of Ensenada, and suspected of being an agent of the rebel forces, a man believed to be J. H. Dick, who is wanted in Los Angeles on a charge of murder, is in the cuartel in Ensenada, according to information which reached San Diego last night.

Investigation of the man's record by the police at Ensenada leads them to believe he is the man the authorities of Los Angeles have been searching for.

A detective is to go to Ensenada in an effort to identify the man and if he proves to be the fugitive extradition proceedings will be begun, it is

PURIFICATION COMES TOO HIGH.

ILLINOIS GRAND JUROR FINDS PEBBLE IN GRIST.

One of State's Richest Counties Can Afford to Prosecute Only Tithe of 3500 Vote Sellers, According to Farmer Who Says Inquisitors Have Done Duty by Indicting 100.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DANVILLE (Ill.) March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Vermillion county's loudly proclaimed purification of politics is to go up in a puff of smoke. A bare 100 indictments for vote selling and other election irregularities is to be the farcical result of the six weeks of "strenuous labor" of the vote probe grand jury.

This ending was vouched for by two grand jurymen today.

"We want to get back to our plowing, and we've done our duty, anyhow," one said. "Just think," he added, swelling up with pride, "we've been up hearing witnesses for six weeks."

"You mean that fewer than 100 indictments have been voted when you acknowledge that 3500 voters have been paid for their franchises at every election?" was asked.

"Yep, that's about it," was the answer. "We're satisfied that we have cleaned things up pretty well. Just think, if we indicted a couple of hundred how much it would cost the county to try them. The county can't afford it, so we're going to quit."

Both of these jurors acknowledged that the fact that the fund for grand jurors had run short had affected their decision somewhat. When Isaac Woodyard was retired by illness from foreman of the inquisitorial body the slump began.

Several hundred indictments had been tentatively decided upon, and evidence upon which at least 700 more could have been based was given by the 600 witnesses who have testified in the long session.

When the jury reconvened last Monday the five "insurgent" members began an attack on these bills.

As the names were brought up for a vote on indictments the "insurgents" attacked them. When Friday afternoon came all but sixty-five names had been wiped off the slate.

Mrs. Hattie Hamilton, 918 Glen Ave., Latonia, Ky., writes:

"I have taken two bottles of Peruna and commenced on the third one. I did not really need the third one, but thought it best to take another bottle.

"I have always weighed 102 pounds, but since I began taking Peruna I weigh 120, for the first time in all my life, and I am now thirty-three years old. Your medicine has surely done me a great deal of good, and have recommended it to several others who have begun taking it.

"My mother, who is seventy-six years old, had grown so weak she could scarcely walk. She took two bottles of Peruna and is fleshier and looking well."

Peruna Their Family Medicine.

Mrs. Anna C. Hyde, 712 E. Yamhill street, Portland, Oregon, Vice President Literary and Educational Organization of New Hampshire, writes:

"I am pleased to endorse Peruna as an all-round good family medicine, and one that is safe to give children. I give it to mine at the least suggestion of a cold, and take it myself to build up my strength and nerves.

"My sister, who is living with me, uses Peruna, too, and she is loud in its praises."

Constipation, Torpid Liver.

Mrs. Anthony Rauch, Cor. Lawn and N. Sandusky Ave., Bucyrus, O., writes:

"I was suffering from obstinate constipation and torpid liver, when I took your advice and purchased six bottles of Peruna and Manalin. When I had taken only one bottle I felt much better, and since I have taken two more bottles I feel entirely well, but I will continue taking the medicine for a short time to make sure of my cure.

"I think Manalin is one of the finest remedies for constipation that I ever tried. I will never be without it. It has made me so strong. I can do a day's work and never tire. I am so glad I do not get those dizzy spells any more. I haven't had one since I took your medicine.

"I cannot thank you enough for what your medicine has done for me. All sick people should give it a fair trial."

Mrs. Gus H. Carlson, Box 201, Ortonville, Minn., writes:

"I had catarrh of the kidneys and bladder. I have taken Peruna until now, and I do not think I need to take it any longer.

"I feel well, and my tongue is clear, and I have no bitter taste in my mouth. I am very thankful for Peruna."

Remarkable Growth Of Academy.

Again Forced to Move.

"Little more than eighteen months ago Mr. J. Woodward Logan and family came to Los Angeles.

A beautiful bungalow was purchased on West 31st street, and there it was that Mr. Logan again commenced teaching a limited number of pupils music and dramatic art. In less than six months it became necessary for Mr. Logan's limited number of pupils became unlimited, to move his studio to the new and larger building at 2132 West Jefferson st., instituting a regular academy system of teaching. Two months later the adjoining building, 2126 West Jefferson street, was also leased.

The school as an academic institution has made such rapid strides under the personal direction of Mr. Logan that it has again been forced to move. This time, as an incorporated institution, into the large and handsome building situated on the corner of South Figueroa and 22nd streets, the former Knights of Columbus club house. The building has been remodeled and renovated throughout.

The faculty now consists of twelve of Los Angeles' best teachers.

Mr. Logan, in speaking of the academy's remarkable success, mentioned the fact that all of the academy's pupils are kept interested, thereby keeping them busy. His own words were, "If a pupil is interested they are bound to succeed in music as in everything else."

BREVITIES.

The Midway View Oil Co., which is operating on section 2, Twp. 11, Range 24, in the big well district of the Sunset-Maricopa oil field, are now down over eleven hundred feet on well No. 2. Well No. 1 is keeping up a steady flow of oil and is being run into steel storage tanks. This stock is one of the favored investments among the unlisted securities. Officers and directors of the company, are Lee C. Gates, president; Thomas Hughes, vice-president; Charles H. Treat, secretary; Robt. N. Bulla, and N. W. Thompson, and the offices of the company are located at 402 Laughlin Bldg.

One of the principal necessities of a hat is that it is becoming. Perfect order work makes this; you get exactly what you want, besides you only pay for what you get. Long personal, practical experience is, however, absolutely necessary to make perfect order work, and as Mrs. Kruseman, the milliner, 1302 Pico, corner Rich, has this, her splendid work finds the greatest appreciation with a great number of prominent ladies who consider it a pleasure to recommend her. Mrs. Kruseman gives the same careful attention to retrimming.

The tourists' souvenir problems are satisfactorily solved by selecting from my stock of Arizona rubies, tourmalines, Kunzites, abalone pearls, etc. These native gems are the choice of discriminating souvenir seekers—they are unique, appropriate and low in price. You can buy them unmounted or made up into charming rings, brooches, neck pieces, fobs, etc. Inspection is invited. Come tomorrow. A. E. Morro, goldsmith and jeweler, Fourth and Broadway.

See Dr. Garfield for Kryptok invisible Bifocals, the lenses are for near and far vision in a solid glass. They give you the eyesight of youth. I make Kryptoks as low as $8. Examination included. EVERY $100 WILL MAKE YOU $100.
I will give you absolute proofs that my plan is sound, tried, absolutely safe, practical, legitimate, conservative—that I can not only double but triple your money, your savings, in less time than by any other method known, and that I can demonstrate to you by facts and figures based on experience of many years operation that 10 to 30 per cent. and more interest, dividends or income—whatever you may want to call it—is not only possible, but can be relied upon.
It is not an experiment, as many men have made millions in the same way. You know many of them by reputation. I will tell you who they are and the secret of their success. They have kept quiet about their enormous profits so as to avoid competition. The whole thing is very simple, yet will be a revelation to you when you "know."
I offer to send you full information for the mere asking. After you have read my pamphlet describing this wonderful business you will agree that I am right—you will convince yourself.
There is no catch or trick in my offer. It is plain business. This is not a scheme, a plan to get rich over night, a gamble, or speculation, but a tangible meritorious enterprise which talks for itself.
Good opportunities do not linger long. A word to the wise is sufficient. Send for particulars at once.

PERSONAL—
MRS. MASSON, the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store) by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.
The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigation along psychological lines that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT information.
PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.
Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity can all be told you through scientific palmistry WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.
MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.
HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

WANTED—INVESTIGATION. THE
LOS ANGELES
MOTION PICTURE
OPERATORS' SCHOOL

Particularly wants theater owners. If you are not a first-class operator yourself, you do not know what your operator is handing you or your audience. Four-fifths of you are not getting results and losing patronage, because you haven't equipped properly or are employing a cheap man. Our graduates are getting top wages and giving perfect pictures. Forty of our fifty-three graduates learned as a business. The balance get at least $21 because they absolutely make good—some make better. The answer: Learn the vital part of your business, hang a real operator on machine crank, pay him real money, and watch patronage grow.

GOOD OPERATORS ARE WORTH MORE THAN "FIRST RUNS."

As a trade — we teach it thoroughly. We have the only licensed, experienced, competent, good-natured American instructor in captivity, west of Chicago. We sell nothing, rent nothing—do nothing but teach properly. Graduates all boost. Come on in.

416 N. SAN PEDRO ST. (Two blocks east of postoffice.) F6691.

WOOLWINE MOTOR CAR COMPANY.

WOULD YOU—
Buy an automobile from a man going out of the business at a price that is away below the market?
WOULD YOU
trade good real estate, price the same as these machines? Not advanced so that we both waste our time?
If so I will make a trade.
WOULD YOU
buy one of these cars and pay PART CASH and the balance on INSTALLMENTS? If so investigate these machines and submit your proposition. I MUST SELL THOSE CARS AT ONCE, as I have the Pacific Coast agency for NUVIDA WATER and am forced to travel continuously. The autos are guaranteed by me to be EXACTLY as represented.

YOU LOSE MONEY
If you buy a new car at list prices, and you also lose if you buy a second-hand, worn-out junk at a give-away price.
The buyer of the AUTOMOBILE CLEARING-HOUSE ASSOCIATION is one of the very oldest automobile dealers in America; he has purchased for and from the largest concerns in the world, where experience and good judgment were absolutely required.
If you will examine the large stock of the AUTOMOBILE CLEARING HOUSE ASSOCIATION you will readily see what this means to you. It means automobiles at half the list price, and sometimes less; he only selects the cream of what is offered. See our stock and you will be convinced.

FOR SALE—
WHO WANTS BABY CHICKS? 5000 ON SALE EVERY DAY; ALL KINDS; WE HAVE MOST EVERY KNOWN VARIETY ON HAND EVERY DAY THIS COMING WEEK. Now is the time to get your baby chicks; these chicks are hatched from the best selected thoroughbred eggs from the best breeders in the SOUTHERN PART OF THIS STATE. We have been in this business for years, know every breeder, know how good the stock he has, and know what we get; there is no guesswork on getting your chicks here. You get better stock here than you can get from most breeders as they usually hold the best at very high prices. We buy on contracts for eggs by the thousands from large breeders, and get them at a price so we can hatch them and resell the chicks; many chicks bought here at few cents each turn into very valuable birds. We ship chicks everywhere safe within 48 hours; 64-page catalogue tells all about how we ship, and give full details and pictures of all varieties we sell. Thousands of eggs hatching every week here in sight in Success Incubators; pay us a visit, you're welcome.

HATCHING EGGS, every kind, on hand fresh every day. We sell at prices about half what breeders would ask you for a setting of eggs. Turkey eggs we sell at $2 per dozen for the Mammoth Bronze, most every breeder asks $5 for them. We buy them on contracts for thousands of them, and get them so we can sell at these low prices; we sell White Orpington eggs from our own flock at $5 for 15 eggs, and they run 95 per cent. fertile. We sell all variety of hen eggs; also goose, duck, turkey, etc.—

THOROUGHBRED POULTRY—Laying hens, pullets, cocks, cockerels, everything in the way of fancy and select thoroughbred poultry. Come and see our yards and what we have. We sell more poultry, eggs and chicks than all other dealers put together, simply because we buy so many we can make a lower price. Be sure to investigate the fireless brooders. We sell them at low prices with chicks.

Pay us a visit, you're welcome.

AGENTS WANTED. Phones A2242, Main 2242.

IF THE RIGHT MAN READS THIS ANnouncement, he will investigate, and if he knows anything about oil investments, he will accept this offer. It is an opportunity to buy a substantial interest in a valuable piece of proven oil land (not a lease) surrounded on three sides by producing wells or drilling rigs. Arrangements already made for development without stockselling or any further outlay, by owners. $750 will buy the interest. From the price it would appear like a cheap wildcat proposition, but it is not in any sense, and the owners are substantial well known local men. No oil investment outside of Union Oil or a few such stocks will give such certain large returns with so little risk. For obvious reasons this advertisement is anonymous, therefore for interview address, N. box 61, TIMES OFFICE.

PRODUCING PROPERTY.
40 ACRES KERN RIVER FIELD. 12 PRODUCING WELLS. COMPLETE EQUIPMENT 12 MONTHS OLD, MODERN IN EVERY RESPECT. SHOWS 30 PER CENT. ON SELLING PRICE, IN 1 YEAR. 12 MORE WELLS CAN BE DRILLED AND WILL SHOW 60 PER CENT. PROFIT. THIS IS A GRAND OPPORTUNITY, ONE VERY SELDOM OFFERED. NO AGENTS. PRINCIPALS ONLY. ADDRESS G. BOX 97, TIMES OFFICE.

ONLY TEN CAN GO ON OUR EXCURSION.
SATURDAY, MARCH 18TH.
TEN LOCATIONS IN CALIFORNIA.
Government land to be taken up under the "Desert Act" or "Homestead," 320 or 160 acres pieces, of the richest land outdoors. Comes directly under the largest irrigation project of the West. If you "really" want a fine piece of Government land, make reservation "now" for our "Excursion," for we can only make "Ten" locations in this district. Land taken up all around it. We have "seen" it. "We want you to SEE it." CALIFORNIA LAND CO., 642 SAN FERNANDO BLDG., FOURTH & MAIN STS. READ THE ABOVE AD. AGAIN.

FREE GOVERNMENT LANDS.
BEST OF SOIL AND CLIMATE.
Near railroad. After much time and expense we have located 10,000 acres of BEST GOVERNMENT LAND and will start to locate parties Tuesday p.m. Land is best of soil, very deep, no alkali. Sufficient rain falls to raise hay, grain, corn, potatoes, peaches, apples, apricots, grapes, olives, etc. No cold weather. Enough timber on some of the land for fuel and posts. Land can be irrigated little cost. Can be taken up under homestead or desert claim laws and should be worth $300 per acre when proved up. Our locating fees, $1 per acre. Call Monday and Tuesday.
ROOM 66,
619 S. OLIVE ST.

BEST STATE LAND, HAS BEEN TAKEN once. I search out some that has been filed on and CAME BACK. SINCE 1853. Some fine for fruit and stock ranches with permanent water. Valuable homes, safe, sure and profitable investment. I would take thousands of acres, but our right is for 640 acres. All that filed that I searched for are SATISFIED, none have offered to sell. Some are looking for send piece. NOTHING FREE. For ten dollar check and promise to pay 50 cents an acre when filed, I will send you particulars and a marked map of ten pieces of State land you can buy, that I search out nearest any town you mention. Use your right; write now. JOSEPH CLARK, Public Searcher of State Records, 830 M. St., Sacramento, Cal.

No one can do a good job of patent work who is not a trained practical mechanic and mechanical engineer; the value of a good invention depends upon the ability of the patent attorney. A poor patent on a good invention is worthless.
We are the only Patent Solicitors who are practical mechanical engineers, working mechanics and draughtsmen, and who are able to assist in perfecting inventions and putting them in shape for patenting, and manufacturing; over 25 years' experience with large industries in the east, and over 8000 applications handled; we can prove our integrity and ability, furnish reference, show licenses and samples of the best patent work ever performed.
The following patents have recently been issued to Southern California.
Los Angeles.
Walter T. Carter, Change-speed gearing.
Louis and G. Gans, automobile accessories.
Edward P. Lynch, machine for separating solutions from crushed ores.
William S. Snyder, furniture.
Bert Van Vorce, ice-cream stand.
James A. Wray, separable steel square.

Iowa Traveling Salesman Charged With Attempting to Force Himself Into One Occupied by Pretty Girl.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ANDERSON (Ind.) March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Pullman Car Company has succeeded, after six weeks of investigation, in causing the arrest of Benjamin Barnes of Dubuque, Iowa, on the charge that he attempted to enter a berth occupied by Miss Cecil Hill, pretty nineteen-year-old adopted daughter of Prof. William Hill of the University of Chicago, while she was a passenger in a sleeping car.

Barnes, who is a traveling salesman, is in jail at Anderson, as it is alleged the offense was committed in Madison county. Because she believed it her duty and for the protection of women who must travel alone, Miss Hill decided to brave publicity and appear as prosecutor.

Miss Hill is a student of Earlham College. The incident, she says, occurred just outside Anderson, on January 27. Miss Hill had left Richmond at midnight. Barnes says he will prove an alibi.

Tons of Dynamite Loosen Mighty Rock Mass.

Tamped in Tunnels Great Force Is Set Free.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CORONA, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] More than sixteen tons of dynamite buried in a hill, an electric spark, a mighty muffled puff—and a trembling of the earth as tons of rock were lifted into the air—such was the blowing up of a hill of porphyritic rhyolite at the Corona Rock Company's quarry two miles east of here at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

It was as if one of the titans of old had forced his mighty shoulders underneath the hill and lifted it ten or fifteen feet. The rock, crushed to powder, rose like clouds of dust or vapor. Large pieces of it were hurled 100 feet.

The Santa Fe tracks which were close to the quarry, were twisted and in a number of places, broken. For 100 feet the rails were bent ten feet from a straight line. Tons of rock lie on the tracks, putting out of commission the only overland line into Los Angeles, this fact due to washouts across the valley. The debris is being blasted from the tracks. The shocks were felt in town.

Between 80,000 and 100,000 cubic yards of rock were shattered. The cost of the dynamite alone was $25,000. Train wrecker and crews are on hand, but it is not yet known when the tracks will be cleared. Even the nearby telephone wires were broken.

LIKE FINGERS AND HAND.

The main tunnel was 3x6 feet and 110 feet long. Diverging from this at nearly right angles were five drifts of different lengths, three on one side of the tunnel and two on the other. The five drifts totaled 195 feet, making 305 feet of tunnelling, all of which was laboriously performed by drilling and dynamiting the solid rock, inch by inch.

The 33,000 pounds of stick dynamite was placed at the extreme ends of the drifts. The five charges were connected in series. Wires were strung outside and underground, 600 feet of wire being required inside the tunnel and drifts and 2000 feet, outside. This done, the tunnel and drifts were filled with dirt and carefully tamped to exclude air and all was in readiness for touching off with the blasting battery, 100 feet from the portal of the tunnel.

A. H. Crane of San Francisco was in charge of loading the dynamite and also of the blast. Assisting him was H. F. Smith of the powder company.

The 300,000 cubic yards of rock, equivalent to about five acres, which the company wishes to open up, cannot be managed with one blast. The work will have to be done in detail by a series of three or more tunnels, penetrating the hill in different directions, a blast of dynamite to follow the completion of each tunnel.

MORE BLASTS TO FOLLOW.

Conley Fredericks, an expert miner, who had the contract to drive in the tunnel just blown out, is now on the ground to start another. The next blast may be twice as large as this one, but conditions, after the work is under way, will determine the amount of dynamite required.

As the Corona Rock Company's plant will handle about 1400 cubic yards of rock every two days, the need of immediately starting operations to blast more raw material can readily be seen.

The important part in the preliminary arrangements for such a blast and also one of interest from a technical standpoint, is the manner in which the electrical appliances are tested every hour during the loading of the dynamite in the tunnel. The tests of the wires and fuses in the tunnel and drifts and on the outside were made at the entrance to the tunnel by means of a galvanometer, this precaution being taken to prevent accident.

TESTED BY RESISTANCE.

When the circuit was completed the resistance shown on the scale of the galvanometer was approximately fourteen ohms. A slight break in the circuit at any point would have been detected immediately by the indicating needle of the galvanometer, which would not move were the circuit broken.

The electric battery of the galvanometer is made of chloride of silver. An electric current given off by such a battery is very feeble—too feeble to explode a fuzee, but is nevertheless sufficiently strong to indicate accurately the resistance in ohms of many thousand feet of wire or upward of seventy-five fuzees.

This is the first blast in this section where precautions of this nature were taken while loading a tunnel with explosives. It was also the largest from the point of quantity of material, dynamite and amount of explosive used. At the blast below Prado several months ago 30,000 pounds of powder was used to blow up a hill of clay.

The blast was exploded two weeks prior to the date set, on the advice of the powder company's expert, who said that unless this were done it would explode itself, with possible widespread damage.

The detonation was heard for many miles, but, aside from the interference with the railroad traffic, no damage was done.

COMING BY SPECIAL TRAIN.

"The Bachelor's Baby" Bound to Get Here on Time Notwithstanding Transportation Difficulties.

"The Bachelor's Baby," to be presented at the Mason all this week, is a determined traveler when Los Angeles is the goal. The company, which was in Salt Lake yesterday, found that on account of transportation troubles, due to washouts, it could not play Ogden and get to this city on time for Monday night's engagement. Accordingly the Ogden date was cancelled, a special train arranged for, and already it is speeding hither, via San Francisco. It is due tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

This determination to get here, regardless of the great expense of traveling so far by special train, shows marked enterprise, and also indicates the importance theatrical companies attach to Los Angeles as a play center.

ROOSEVELT DAY TO BE LIKE HIM.

Y.M.C.A. WILL SEEK THOUSAND MEN AND BOYS.

Week From Next Tuesday Named in Honor of Ex-President, Who Will Speak in Association Lobby. Banquet Last Night to Set It Going—The Colonel's Dates.

Roosevelt Day, Tuesday, March 21, is to be the next hummer at the Young Men's Christian Association. The day has been so named in honor of Col. Theodore Roosevelt, who has consented to make a brief address in the association lobby on that day. Through an arrangement made by Arthur Letts, president of the association, Col. Roosevelt will be met at the railway station by a delegation of citizens, and will be taken direct to the Y.M.C.A. building, where he will make a brief address at 11 o'clock a. m. The meeting will be open to members only, except to a limited number of men outside the association, who will be so fortunate as to receive "guest cards" from members.

The day is set apart as the annual membership "boost," when the effort will be to enroll 1000 new members during the one day. On Monday evening, March 20, a dinner will be served in the association banquet hall, at 6:30, at which time each member present will receive on guest card, which will admit any gentleman who is not a member, to hear the address of Col. Roosevelt. Members will be admitted on their membership cards.

Immediately following the address, a complimentary dinner will be served to all workers, and reports will be heard of the success of the forenoon's work. Every member is urged to sidetrack everything else on Tuesday and give that one day to the campaign.

The Los Angeles association, with some 5200 members, is the largest in the world, but a number of other cities are in the lists this year, striving to take the honor to themselves. The unique position has been held by this city for the past two years, and city pride is at stake. Men outside the association should be anxious to aid the institution in holding its place, and they can do it by giving their membership to one of the canvassers, or by telephoning it to the office.

The movement to set the preliminary work going was inaugurated at a banquet held last night, attended by about fifty of the most active members, many of them prominent business men. E. C. Lyon, chairman of the Membership Committee, presided, and rousing speeches and much enthusiasm marked the gathering.

Frank G. Terrill made a lengthy and eloquent address on the high aims presented by the association, and said that united effort on the part of the 5000 members could easily accomplish securing an additional thousand in one day.

Rev. G. A. Henry made a telling and practical address on the importance of "seeing your man in his office," and make no apology for going.

General Secretary Luther said he had heard somebody say that people would get tired having them come after new members.

"I hope that 1000 men will just get up and kick and snort because we're after members," he said. "That's what we're here for, and the more noise they make about it, the better it will be for us. A Y.M.C.A. without members would be a mighty dead thing."

At the close of the banquet all those present were supplied with the necessary blanks, and will begin at once to round up their men for Tuesday.

Col. Roosevelt's appointments, after leaving the Y.M.C.A., will be his address in the Auditorium at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, before the teachers, High School pupils and students of the State Normal School, Tuesday evening, in Pasadena; Wednesday afternoon in the Auditorium, this city. This last-named meeting is under the auspices of the City Club, and no charge will be made, but no one can get in the house without a ticket. Each member of the club will get two tickets, and Secretary Henderson said last night that the method of giving out the other tickets has not yet been determined.

RIVALRY AT GREAT BANQUET.

State Presidents Vie in Having Largest Representation When Federated Societies Gather at Annual Event.

The banquet of the Federation of State Societies which will be held in Hamburger's Cafe next Friday evening promises many unique features. There will be a table for each State, and rivalry for first place. Several States are working for the largest attendance. More than 1000 invitations have been sent out by President Will D. Gould of the Vermont Society, and Shaw, Davison and Wright of the Iowa, Nebraska has been arranged, and in the speechmaking line, nothing desired is left out.

The programme begins with an invocation by Dr. Hugh K. Walker, followed by the introductory remarks of Frank M. Dowling, toastmaster, and Newton J. Skinner, president. Toasts will be responded to as follows:

"The Wearing O' the Green," Mrs. M. G. Gonzales; "The Federation," Edward Winterer; "The Pioneer," W. L. Eaton; "The Panama Canal," Samuel R. Van Sant; "Greater Los Angeles," Willis H. Booth; "The Southwest," E. W. Chaffin; "California," Dr. Matt S. Hughes; "Our Country," ex-Vice-President Fairbanks.

Selections by the orchestra, vocal solos by Mrs. Gonzales, and national songs by the assemblage will conclude the programme.

DIES IN BATHTUB.

Body of Former Merchant Who Lived in Los Angeles Twenty Years Is Found in Icy Water.

G. W. Goode, 70 years of age, and a resident of Los Angeles for the last twenty years, was drowned in his bathtub at No. 333 South Hope street, yesterday evening.

Mr. Goode was a retired merchant. About a month ago he was divorced, his former wife going to live at No. 1620 Orange street, with their 10-year-old daughter.

The separation from his little girl made the septuagenarian exceedingly despondent. It was feared last night by the Coroner's office that, while the dead man may have been the victim of an accident, due to one of his frequent fainting spells, he might have been driven to desperation by loneliness and have committed suicide by drowning.

The body was found in the bathtub by members of the lodging-house family, who thought the bathroom was closed longer than might be expected. The man's body was found stiff and cold in the icy water, indicating that he had been dead several hours. The body was removed to the Bresee Bros. morgue, by order of the Coroner.

GREAT MASS MEETING.

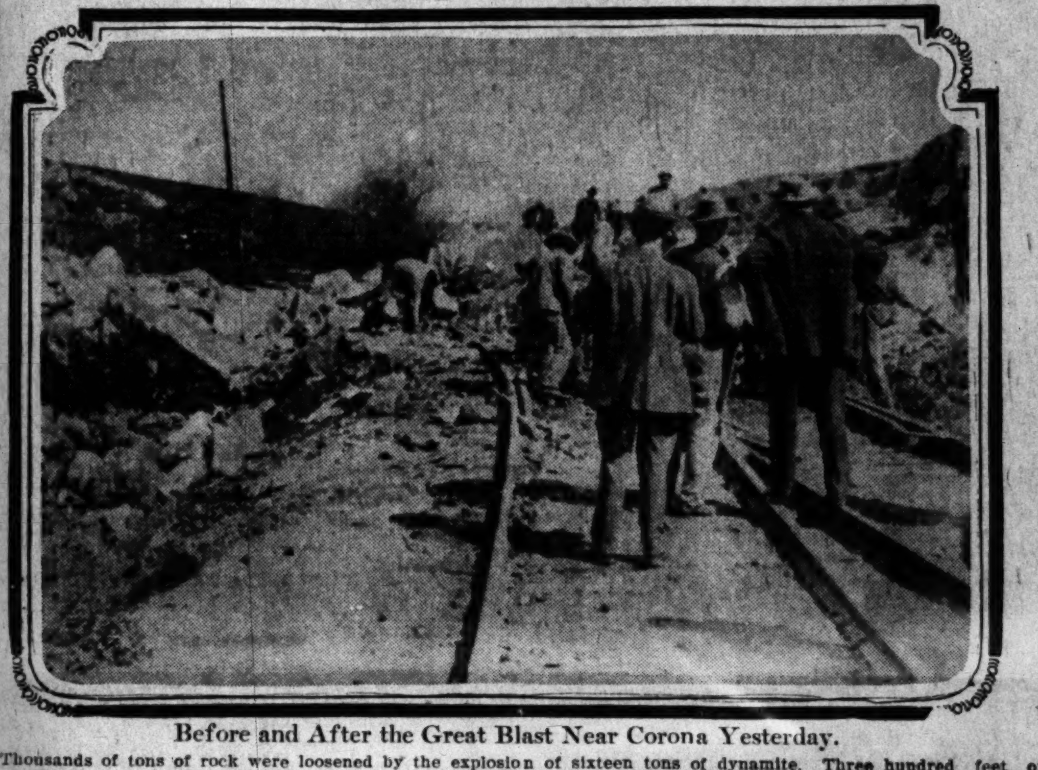
The opening mass meeting of the Laymen's Missionary Conference, will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock, in the First Methodist Church. The speakers will be Hon. Charles W. Fairbanks and Col. E. W. Halford. The conference will continue on Monday and Tuesday afternoons, and a banquet will be held at the Federation Club each evening at 6 o'clock. The afternoon meetings, in the church will be for men, but women will be admitted to the gallery at the night meetings.

TRAVEL TALK TO Y.W.C.A.

The members of the Young Women's Christian Association will be given a treat on Monday evening at 8 o'clock, when Mrs. A. C. Smither will deliver a travel talk on "Glimpses into Palestine and Egypt," illustrated with the stereopticon.

REORGANIZED TEXAS SOCIETY.

The reorganized Texas Society will hold a meeting in Taft Hall on Tuesday evening, to which all former Texans are cordially invited, as well as their friends. The new officers are M.



Before and After the Great Blast Near Corona Yesterday.

Thousands of tons of rock were loosened by the explosion of sixteen tons of dynamite. Three hundred feet of Santa Fe main line track two hundred feet distant was buried several feet with debris and two hundred feet of the track was forced ten feet out of line. The county road three hundred feet away was also covered several feet deep and rendered impassable. Rock fragments weighing a ton or more each were hurled hundreds of feet and buried in the ground where they struck. The rails in the damaged track were broken, twisted and rendered useless. It was necessary to get new rails from Los Angeles to replace the broken ones.

Soldiers Home.

HOBSON'S SLEEP WILL BE SWEET.

GOVERNMENT SENDS BATTERY OF HOWITZERS TO COAST.

Possibility of Invasion Reduced to the Minimum—Three Veterans Visiting in As Many States Die While on Furlough—Officials Desire Notification.

SOLDIERS' HOME, March 11.—No longer need the Pacific Coast bewail its limited defenses, or Los Angeles fear invasion by Bulgaria or Servia or any of those great powers, for, even now, there are, or should be, in transit from the United States Ordnance Department, for this place, a consignment of peace-compelling material sufficient to strike terror into the hearts of any foreign foe.

A park of artillery, consisting of howitzers and field pieces, is assigned for permanent duty at the Soldiers' Home, and will soon, with concomitants of caissons and carriages, be in position to speak for themselves.

These formidable engines of war, to be sure are only intended for the further ornamentation of the beautiful military parks, so far as can be learned, but Hobson may sleep without fear of an immediate invasion.

Quite frequently the death of a member takes place while he is on furlough, and the records of status in the home can only show, "Dropped for absence without leave," or "Failure to renew his furlough." This is cruelly misleading to relatives or others interested in the member, giving the impression that the man is still living. The reason is that no notice of the death is received at this office.

If Coroners or other county officers could be induced to send a postcard giving only the facts of death and date, all this could be obviated, and the final status appear correctly on the great register.

The foregoing statement was suggested by the receipt today of three notices of death of members having taken place at widely different points in the United States, viz.: Florida, Texas and Arizona—and by thoughtfulness of local authorities of those places, were made known to the adjutant of this place. They were: William Biggs, formerly of Co. L, First Michigan Light Artillery, who was run over and killed February 23 on the Texas Pacific Railroad track near Clyde, Tex.; Biggs was a native of Canada, and aged 66. He is survived by a brother, David Biggs, who lives at No. 420 Market street, St Louis, Mo.

Elias V. Bugee, formerly captain of Company G, Eighth New York Cavalry, a native of New York, admitted from Seattle in 1897, died while on furlough at Zephyrhills, Fla., January 18, aged 68.

James Wright, formerly of Company C, First West Virginia Artillery, a native of Ohio, admitted from Los Angeles in 1903, died at Kingman, Ariz., while on furlough, January 20, aged Seventy-second Pennsylvania Infantry, a native of Pennsylvania, admitted from San Diego, Cal., in 1907, died March 9, aged 67.

Peter Mangels, formerly of Co. A, Ninth Illinois Infantry, a native of Germany, admitted from Comptonville, Cal., in 1893, died March 7, aged 73.

Calvin B. La Shells, formerly of Co. E, 112th Illinois Infantry, a native of Illinois, admitted from Vallejo in 1906, died March 10, aged 68.

Bernard F. Mullany, formerly of Co. C, Fourth United States Artillery, a native of Ireland, admitted from Los Angeles, in 1889, died March 10, aged 78.

UTAH JOINS TH EFEDERATION.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of former Utah people was held yesterday in the Mason Operahouse building to organize a State association, Utah having been awarded a membership in the Federation of State Associations at the last Executive Board meeting. After greetings of old friends, the meeting was called to order by C. H. Parsons, secretary of the Federation of State Associations. Maj. M. A. Breeden, former Attorney-General of Utah, was unanimously chosen president and V. Rapp secretary of the new organization. Another meeting will be held at rooms 316-318 Mason Operahouse building at 2:30 p.m., Tuesday.

UNDELIVERED TELEGRAMS.

Telegrams are at the office of the Postal Telegraph Cable Company for W. A. McCaffrey, John R. Phillips, M. N. Winans, T. L. Meyers, S. S. Carlise, Cecil Lightfoot, Henry Dickinson, Jas. Bind, C. O. Patioo, Von G. Jewett, Geo. A. Wuest, Mrs. Lizzie L. Corbet, H. S. Brooks and J. W. Whitehead.

PHI ALPHA DELTA.

The Phi Alpha Delta fraternity held an installation of officers at Levy's last evening, followed by a banquet. Both local and northern men gathered at the feast. The tables were handsomely decorated with palms and carnations.

KERN COUNTY.

SNOWS FORMS BARRIER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BAKERSFIELD, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Four or five feet of snow in Tejan Pass, south of Lebec has put the automobile road through the canyon to Los Angeles out of commission and it probably will be a week or ten days before it is opened. The other road, via Tehachepi, is in fair condition. The roads to the west side of the oil fields are muddy and the road to Lost Hills, is very muddy. There have been no floods in the county and none are expected. Kern River is flowing about 7000 feet, but the banks will carry nearly three times that volume.

Overlands Return.

SAN BERNARDINO, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Salt Lake is the only railroad tied up in this county on its overland run. Today Salt Lake overlands east bound, which left here yesterday and the day before, after being stalled at Otis by a minor washout, were brought back, owing to bad washouts in the Meadow Valley Wash in Nevada.

Tonight all Southern Pacific, Santa Fe and Salt Lake trains between here [illegible]

Stops Going.

WAGON ROADS MUCH BROKEN.

Repairs on the Rail Lines Go Ahead Faster.

Worst Breaks in Ventura and Santa Barbara Counties.

Snow Blocks Traffic in the Tejon Pass.

Restoration of railroad bridges and trackage in Southern California washed out by the floods went on rapidly yesterday. Here and there a broken link was mended and the interrupted traffic restored. Within two or three days it is expected, that all the lines, both steam and electric, with some exceptions, will be in operation again.

In the wagon roads there are a good many gaps here and there, so that it will be several days before automobilists may with confidence start on long trips.

Rerouting of trains and change of place for departure of steamships is still a confusing element occasioned by water damage to tracks. The steamers Yale and Harvard, of the Pacific Navigation Company, are now using the docks at San Pedro instead of East San Pedro, which are reached by the Pacific Electric cars, instead of the Salt Lake Railroad, the regular means of transportation to the Pacific Navigation Company's docks.

The explosion of a quantity of dynamite at Corona on the Santa Fe line by way of Fullerton and Placentia at noon yesterday put the only transcontinental line then in service out of commission for several hours. The San Gabriel River flood had already put the Salt Lake, Southern Pacific and the Pasadena route of the Santa Fe out of service. Late yesterday afternoon the Salt Lake Railroad completed the repairs to its main line track at Newmark and offered the use of its reopened line east of Riverside to its blockaded rivals. The debris was cleared from the Santa Fe tracks near Corona late last night, again opening the line for traffic. The Southern Pacific tracks and the Pasadena route of the Santa Fe, damaged by the flood from the San Gabriel River, will be repaired tomorrow or Tuesday, it is expected.

The Santa Ana line of the Pacific Electric was restored to service yesterday. No through cars will be operated over the Whittier-La Habra line for two or three days.

"We will be operating through trains on all lines damaged by the storm by Monday or Tuesday," said Paul Shoup, vice-president of the Pacific Electric, last night.

"We will have the coast line in operation between Los Angeles and San Francisco by Monday or Tuesday," said H. V. Platt, general superintendent of the southern district of the Southern Pacific, last night.

Reports from Caliente are to the effect that the washout on the Salt Lake railroad in Meadow Valley wash, will be repaired within four days. The Salt Lake expects to have its line between Los Angeles and San Pedro in operation again tomorrow.

HOUSES AND BARNS GO.

Caught between the Southern Pacific and the Pacific Electric bridges and the county bridge a cluster of houses and barns went down in the big flood at El Monte. One after the other a barn rented by Mrs. J. Hicks from Mr. Rabb, a house belonging to Robert Irvin, another occupied by Mrs. Laws, and a three-room house in which a family of Mexicans was living, plunged into the river and were carried away. Across the county road from the cluster was a big barn owned by William Ward, about 50x150 feet. After the flood water had swallowed about four acres of ground it undermined this bridge and yesterday it stood nose down in the waters awash about it. The county bridge was moved from its supports about twenty feet instream. Yesterday workmen cut the bridge in the hope of turning the flood nearer to the original channel, which was partially successful.

ORANGE COUNTY.

SULPHUR HILL BLOCKADE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA ANA, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Chapman-street bridge at West Orange on the main road between Anaheim and Santa Ana is impassable, the east approach having been washed out. Supervisor Struck will have the damage repaired within a week. Travelers may take the Olive road east of Anaheim or go through Garden Grove, taking Fifth street into Santa Ana.

The Santa Ana River Canyon road is blocked at Sulphur Hill, ten miles above Olive. A hillside over a cut slid on to the road. Several days will elapse before the road can be cleared.

South of Santa Ana the road to San Diego is in good condition except for a small strip between Tustin and Culver's Corners. The mud is deep and autos are certain to stick. Going by the Irvine ranch house furnishes a detour that avoids this bad strip which Supervisor Leck says will be impassable for autos for several days. Teams can go through all right.

SAN DIEGO COUNTY.

TRAVEL LITTLE INTERRUPTED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The San Diego county roads are in good condition. The recent rains did not reach flood proportions. A warm sun and light winds today dried what little mud resulted fro mthe rains of the last few days. Except in a few spots where the Highway Commission has the roads plowed, the highways are in fine condition for automobiling. Tourists who contemplate auto trips Sunday need not fear San Diego county.

SANTA BARBARA.

COUNTY ROADS BLOCKED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Every wagon road through this county in some part of it is closed to traffic. County Engineer F. F. Flournoy stated today that it will be sixty days, at least, before a vehicle of any kind will be able to travel from the Ventura to the San Luis Obispo county line.

The San Marcos Pass route will probably be opened first and this can only be done by putting in pontoon bridges over the Santa Ynez and Santa Maria rivers. The route from Santa Barbara would be through the towns of Santa Ynez and Orcutt to Santa Maria. How soon the route over the Gaviota Pass can be opened Mr. Flournoy would not state, as every bridge, with the exception of two steel ones, has been washed out and sev[illegible] stretches of the road [illegible] pletely [illegible] ers of land under the desert act as in the vicinity of this particular tract. All these courageous dwellers in the solitudes will come in for the benefit that should be theirs because of their willingness to endure the hardships of pioneers in a new country. The lesson is significant.

Almost anyone with a little capital to tide him over can still secure at a modest outlay a foothold on Southern California soil. More would be doing it if they but had some working idea of the inducements that are being offered to get actual settlers into some of the new and promising territories along the Colorado River.

Earth Not Growing Bigger.

In a letter recently addressed to this department, an old resident of the Southland, a hale man past eighty, puts in a quaint but striking way the land situation in Southern California. "As long as I can remember," says this venerable correspondent, "the earth has been just 25,000 miles around. I can't recall, old as I am, any time when the oceans and other bodies of water didn't hog just as big a percentage of the earth's surface as they do now. I think I can swear that in all of my long sojourn in Southern California this end of the State has not grown a bit bigger. If the boundary lines ever advanced a single foot, I didn't hear of it.

"All the time, too, this world, this hemisphere, this country, this rich section of California has been filling with people. Heavens, how they have multiplied! The land has neither shrunk nor grown, yet here the number of men, women and children to the square mile has gone on and on increasing year after year. Why, I'm only a little past eighty and I've seen a change that makes me rub my eyes.

"If I were a young man and wanted to ever own a little land in some parts of the world, and especially in this part, I would be getting a little nervous. I'm mighty glad I got mine when I did."

PLAN FINE GARAGE.

New Home of Packard to Be at Hope and Tenth—Sales Total Hundred and Fifty Thousand.

R. A. Rowan & Co. report sales through their agency for the past week aggregating $147,000. An account of these transactions follows:

The H. J. Wollacott Estate sold to Chas. E. and Earl C. Anthony the southeast corner of Tenth and Hope streets, 120 feet on Hope by 165 feet to a twenty-foot alley on Tenth. The consideration was $90,000 cash. It is the intention of the buyers, who are local managers for the Packard Automobile Company, to erect a fine three-story garage on the site.

Dr. William Niven sold to Tom Stephens Wotkyns of Troy, N. Y., 50x155 feet at No. 1026 South Olive street, the consideration being $45,000. The site is improved with a one-story garage which is rented to the Bekins Company, agents for the Lozier car. The purchase was made for investment.

Will Keller, president of the Globe Milling Company, bought from Henry Klein the northwest corner of Sixth street and Shatto place, paying a consideration of $12,000 cash. The lot is 110x217 feet in size. It will be improved with a fine residence by the new owner.

BUYS FOR FIGUEROA.

The Vaughn-Middleton Company reports the following sales: James Maxwell, et al., to A. H. Turner, 60x150 feet at No. 1055 South Figueroa, improved with ten-room house, $30,000. Fairchild Investment Company to local investor, 50x165 feet, 133 feet north of Sixth street on west side of Flower, $20,000. Amelia Hilderbrandt to O. C. Link, nine-room residence at No. 122 North Rampart boulevard, lot 55x125 feet, $8000. Tennie D. Siddall to Walter Campbell, two lots northwest corner, 68 feet on Jefferson street, 100 feet on Budlong avenue, $5000. W. E. Henry to local investor, ten-room residence at No. 520 Kingsley drive, lot 60x150 feet, $12,000. George Kitchens to John Curtis, lot 20, Houston Heights Tract, west side of Harvard boulevard, north of Sixteenth street, $2500. David S. Johnson to William G. and Lotta Hopper, six-room house at No. 2208 Sheridan street, lot 52x150 feet, $2500. Margaret C. Gillmore to W. E. Baxter, lot on west side of Fourth avenue, between Pico and Sixteenth streets, $2600. J. A. Vaughn to Joseph Bittystein, southwest corner Oxford and Second, 94x150 feet, $5500. J. F. Hill to John Curtis, 60x150 feet north side of Ingraham, between Western and St. Andrews place, $2500. R. L. Baker, lot in Millside Tract at Wilmington, $1000. W. D. Farmer, lot in Millside Tract at Wilmington, $1200. John Staub to Amelia Hildebrandt, forty-foot lot on Twenty-eighth street, east of Fifth avenue, $1000.

WILSHIRE DISTRICT SALES.

Through the agency of the Victor G. Kleinberger Company, A. B. Wilmans has sold to Dr. Monroe Lewis the eight-room Swiss chalet residence at No. 607 St. Andrews place, the consideration being $10,500. The same firm reports the sale for Dr. Monroe Lewis to a local investor of a lot 60x170 feet in size on the west side of Commonwealth avenue, ninety feet north of Sixth street, for a consideration of $4500; the sale of the northeast corner of Ingraham street and St. Andrews place, 70x140 feet, to P. S. Clapp, for $3250.00, and of a lot on the north side of Ingraham street, 60x140 feet, east of Wilton place, for $2150.

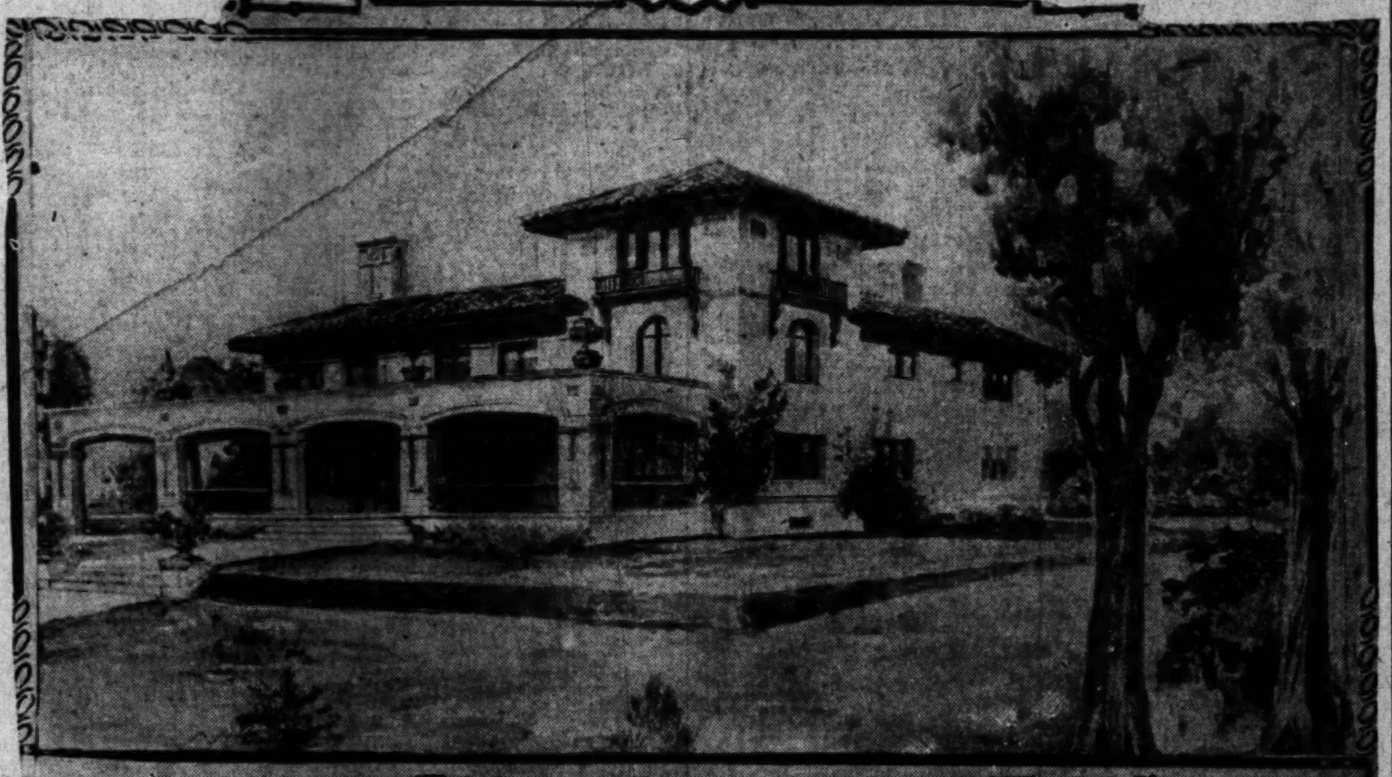
OTTERBEIN ACRE SALES.

The Mason & Moon Company report the following sales in the Forster-Rowland tract: Gus Schultz, five acres, $150; E. Schultz, five acres, $1500; E. W. Ostrup, five acres, $1500; R. H. Jack, five acres, $1500; J. W. Hendricks, thirteen acres, $3900; C. C. Bell, ten acres, $3000; Bishop Wm. Bell, seven acres, $2100; Baker Home for Aged, twenty acres, $6000; W. H. Mott, five acres, $1500; S. Dunphey, four acres, $1200; J. A. Eby, five acres, $1500; E. E. Richards, ten acres, $4500; M. E. Eaton, one acre, $500. The same firm reports the sale of 150 acres to J. D. Kwie for a consideration of $40,000. This land is five miles west of the Forster-Rowland tract, and will be subdivided at once.

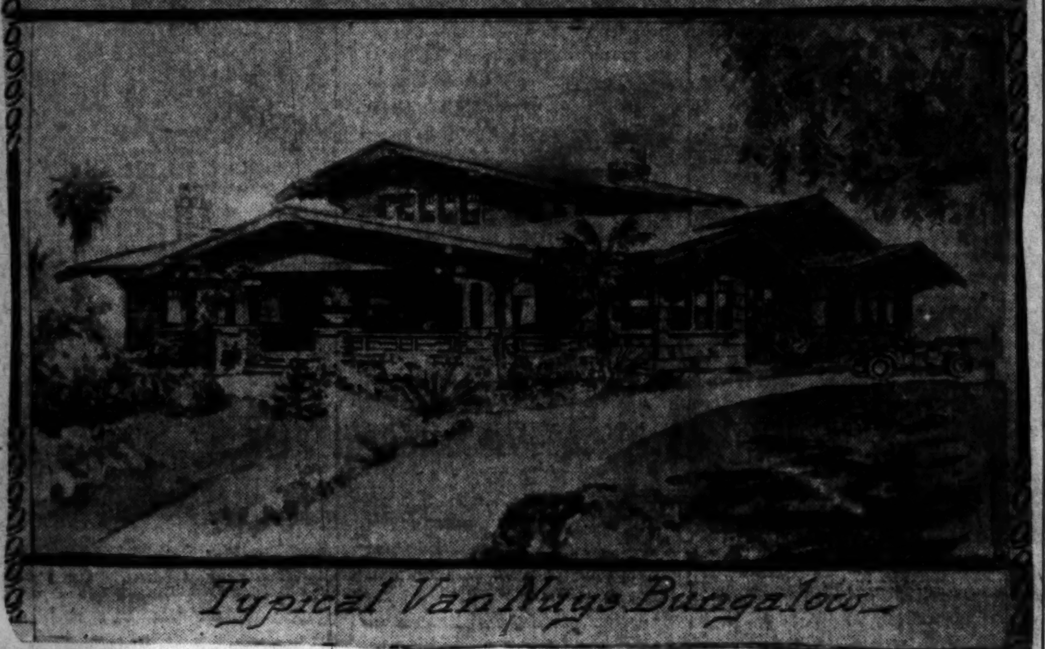
ASSOCIATION TO MEET.

The regular monthly meeting of the Federated Improvement Association will be held Thursday evening at 8 p. m. in the music room of the Blanchard Hall building. Affairs of importance to all interested in furthering the affairs of various civic improvements of the city, will be discussed.

Homes Under Way and Projected in the New Town of Van Nuys



Palatial residence of H. J. Whitley



Typical Van Nuys Bungalow

Two Houses Being Erected by H. J. Whitley, general manager of the Los Angeles Suburban Homes Company, in the Southland's latest townsite, in the rich San Fernando Valley. The upper dwelling, which is of the Italian Renaissance type, will be occupied by Mr. Whitley as a home.

Rome Bested.

VAN NUYS, BUILT IN DAY, WILL BE NEW SHOW PLACE.

Plans for Beautiful Dwellings in San Fernando Valley Townsite Insure Its Place Among Leading Residence Suburbs—Acreage Sales in Great Ranch Property Reach Two Hundred Thousand Dollars.

ROME was not built in a day, which is where the new townsite of Van Nuys in the San Fernando Valley has it on Rome. Van Nuys was built in a day, in the sense, at least, that its future was definitely settled in just one day of less than ten hours. The life of the place began with a whirlwind auction of lots to persons who had actual building projects in mind, and these individuals may be said to have constituted the population of the town from the date of its sensational opening. A good percentage of them now have houses under way or in near prospect.

Two of the houses already started in the new town are pictured on this page of The Times. The smaller probably is more nearly typical of the homes that are being reared or which will soon be reared in Van Nuys, but there are many palatial residences of the type of the larger structure in early prospect. In fact, Van Nuys bids fair to become one of the showy residence suburbs of the Southland.

Both of the houses were designed by Ye Planry Building Company, which concern is also making tentative plans for fifteen other Van Nuys homes which will represent an outlay of close to $75,000. In the offices of other local architects and architectural companies plans are under way not only for new homes in the townsite of Van Nuys, but for acreage sites in different portions of the great Lankershim and Van Nuys ranch properties.

The larger of the houses pictured is being erected as a home by H. J. Whitley, general manager of the Los Angeles Suburban Homes Company, which owns and controls the rich San Fernando Valley holdings, with the exception of the Van Nuys townsite, which is being handled by W. P. Whitsett. The dwelling will be of the Italian Renaissance type and of solid brick construction, with white glazed brick exterior. The roof will be of vitrified green tile. The residence will be two stories in height and sixty by sixty-four feet in size, a feature being a wide porch across the entire front, above which will be a balcony. It will be one of the most imposing suburban homes in this section.

The interior will be finished in Juanacosta mahogany on the first story, the floors throughout being of oak. The rooms will be large and elegantly appointed and most of them will contain stone or tile mantels.

The place will stand a block west of the depot of the new townsite, its site being a large and unusually attractive lot. It is the plan of the owner to handsomely landscape the grounds.

The other house, which is also being erected by Mr. Whitley, is being constructed as an investment. It will be an eight-room frame bungalow with shakes exterior and a brick porch. Its site is on the east side of the boulevard, about three-quarters of a mile south of the railroad.

LANDS SELLING FAST.

In no other part of Southern California has real estate activity been so pronounced in the past month as in the property of the Los Angeles Suburban Homes Company, of which the Janss Investment Company is the general sales agent. Exclusive of the sales in the Van Nuys townsite which in the past six days alone aggregated $30,000, the sales of acreage in the Lankershim and Van Nuys ranch holdings reached a total of close to $200,000 in the month just closed.

It is stated by the Janss company that most of these buyers of San Fernando Valley acres intend to improve their sites with permanent dwellings and to bring the land at once to a state of productiveness. The buyers are said to have been, without exception, persons who had made a careful study of the valley and its prospects.

Following is the list of sales reported for the last month: Otto and Rose Emerick, five acres; G. M. Wile, five acres; G. D. Campbell, ten acres; S. V. Rehart, ten acres; S. V. Rehart, ten acres; L. G. Wiley, five acres; Andrew Johnson, five acres; John Kinsey, ten acres; S. V. Rehart, ten acres; J. W. Duke, ten acres; R. S. Field, ten acres; Etta B. Walker, five acres; Frank S. Foy, five acres; Mary E. Marston, five acres; J. A. Nelson, ten acres; Julia M. Nelson, ten acres; John Imbach, twenty acres; C. A. Crissey, fifteen acres; P. F. Geb, twelve acres; S. T. Meyer, twenty acres; Carolyn Frankum, five acres; H. M. Binney, five acres; A. E. Bagley, twenty acres; M. A. McCrystal, ten acres; A. Hortenz, ten acres.

J. H. Calhoun and J. L. Ash, ten acres; E. L. Shaffer, five acres; R. A. Haskins, twenty acres; G. G. Allen, six acres; A. G. Herron, twenty acres; G. A. Anderson, twenty acres; Louis Heath, five acres; Joseph Schallert, five acres; V. V. Leroy, ten acres; Mrs. MacLean, five acres; V. S. Siffard, five acres; Errol W. Morse, five acres; W. W. Wemott, five acres; J. M. Prendaville, five acres; W. W. Mack and W. F. Goller, ten acres; Mamie A. Hunter, ten acres; J. N. Velk, ten acres; Edward Sherman, ten acres; A. N. Barnum, five acres; A. G. Sternberg et al., forty acres; James A. Russell, twenty acres; P. P. Anderson, five acres and W. B. Caldwell, five acres.

MILLION MARK PASSED.

Building Permit Valuation First Ten Days of Month Far Ahead of Corresponding Period Last Year.

The building permit valuation for the month of March to date passed the $1,000,000 mark before the close of business yesterday in the offices of the City Building Department. This big total was represented by 243 separate construction items. The official valuation figure for the period from March 1 to March 10, inclusive, was $995,506, this being brought past the $1,000,000 total by the permits issued yesterday morning after the report was out.

For the corresponding period last year 411 permits, representing a valuation of $592,380 were taken out by the builders of the city. Of the aggregate for the present month 109 permits and $236,348 valuation are accounted for by the activities of the homebuilder, who, in spite of the recent rains, has been decidedly in evidence. A permit for the eleven-story Union Oil building at the northwest corner of Seventh and Spring streets called for $700,000.

Following is the tabulated report of the chief inspector of buildings:

	Permits.	Valuation.
Class A, Steel Frame....	1	$700,000
Class C	1	12,174
Class D, 1 Story Frame..	85	128,150

Sheds, Barns (Frame)....	43	8,423
Brick Alterations	17	10,118
Frame Alterations	69	26,680
Demolitions	1	400
Total	243	$995,506

Comparison with last year from March 1 to March 10, inclusive, 411 permits; $592,380 valuation.

WESTERN AVENUE WAY.

The Victor G. Kleinberger Company reports sales in its Thirty-ninth and Western tract, to the following persons: R. Bergen of Denver, lot on north side of Thirty-ninth street, 100 feet west of Manhattan Walk, $875, and lot on the same side of Thirty-ninth street, 200 feet further west, $850; H. C. Griffith, four lots, one on north side of Thirty-ninth, just east of Manhattan walk, $1000, one on south side of Middleton Place, 200 feet west of Western avenue, $1100, one directly opposite, on north side of Middleton place, $1050, and one on north side of Middleton place, 140 feet west of Manhattan place, $875. Mr. Griffith buys these lots for immediate improvement with four six-room Swiss chalets. May E. Pierson, lot on south side of Thirty-eighth place, about 175 feet east of St. Andrews place.

MAGNIFICENT HOME.

WILSHIRE DISTRICT.

JUST BUILT.

HANDSOME 14-ROOM HOUSE, BEAUTIFULLY AND ARTISTICALLY FURNISHED, EAST FRONT, ON A LOT HAVING A FRONTAGE OF ALMOST 100 FEET, WITHIN A FEW FEET OF WILSHIRE BLVD.

HERE IS A HOUSE WHICH AT ONCE COMBINES ALL THOSE FEATURES WHICH THE HOMESEEKER DESIRES; NEW AND MODERN CONSTRUCTION; LARGE FRONTAGE, EASTERN EXPOSURE, SWELL LOCATION, ON THE HIGH GROUND. IT READS GOOD AND IS BETTER THAN IT READS.

AS YOU ENTER THE LARGE RECEPTION HALL, YOU ARE AT ONCE IMPRESSED. THE HALL IS FINISHED IN ENGLISH "FUMED" OAK, PIANO FINISH, WAINSTCOTING 5½ FEET HIGH, ON THE SIDE WALLS. A COSTLY CHANDELIER HANGS FROM THE CEILING IN WHICH ARE SET 4 TIFFANY GLOBES.

TO THE LEFT OF THE HALL IS THE LARGE, SPACIOUS LIVING-ROOM, ALSO FINISHED IN ENGLISH FUMED OAK, JUST A TRIFLE DARKER IN COLOR THAN THE HALL.

THE CEILING HAS BEAUTIFUL OAK BEAMS, ARRANGED IN A MANNER TO MAKE IT LOOK AT ITS BEST.

THE MANTEL IN THIS ROOM IS ALL THAT SKILLED WORKMEN CAN PRODUCE—OLIVE GREEN GRUBY TILE WERE USED IN THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE MANTEL—A COSTLY SET OF ANDIRONS ARE SET IN THE GRATE.

THE CHANDELIER IS ONE OF THE LATEST DESIGNS AND SENDS FORTH A SPLENDID MELLOW LIGHT WHEN LIGHTED.

THE DINING-ROOM IS DIRECTLY BACK OF THE LIVING-ROOM AND IS FINISHED IN MAHOGANY—THE SIDE WALLS ARE WAINSCOTED IN MAHOGANY UP 6 FT. ON THE SIDES AND FROM THERE ON UP THE WALLS ARE FINISHED IN PADDED ENGLISH TAPESTRY.

THE SOUTH SIDE IS BUILT IN CABINET EFFECT TO A HEIGHT OF 3½ FEET ABOVE THE FLOOR—CASEMENT WINDOWS ARE ALSO ON THIS SIDE OF THE ROOM JUST ABOVE THE CABINET.

THE MAHOGANY BUFFET IS A THING OF BEAUTY AND JUST ABOVE IS A LARGE ART-GLASS WINDOW.

A SEVEN-GLOBE CHANDELIER FINISHED IN ART-GLASS GIVES A FITTING FINISH TO THIS BEAUTIFUL ROOM.

A PASS PANTRY SEPARATES THE DINING-ROOM AND KITCHEN AND CONTAINS ALL OF THE LITTLE ESSENTIALS SO NECESSARY IN A ROOM OF THIS KIND.

THE FRONT ROOM ON THE NORTH SIDE OF THE HOUSE IS MADE INTO A LIBRARY, OR CAN BE CONVERTED INTO A BILLIARD-ROOM IF DESIRED.

IT HAS A LARGE CLINKER BRICK MANTEL OF FINE DESIGN, RUNNING FROM THE FLOOR TO THE CEILING.

A WINDOW SEAT 12 FT. LONG, UPHOLSTERED IN CRAFTSMAN CANVAS IS A FEATURE OF THIS ROOM.

A BUILT-IN BOOKCASE OF AMPLE SIZE AND PRETTY DESIGN IS ANOTHER FEATURE.

THE WALLS ABOVE THE WAINSCOTING ARE FINISHED IN STENCILED CRAFTSMAN CANVAS.

A 3-LIGHT SYSTEM FOR BILLIARD TABLE AND BUILT-IN CUE AND BALL RACK ARE HERE FOR YOUR USE IF DESIRED.

YOU WILL HAVE TO SEE THE INDIAN ROOM TO GET THE PROPER IMPRESSION—IT IS A BEAUTY AND YOU WILL ENJOY IT VERY MUCH.

A LARGE BREAKFAST-ROOM IS FINISHED IN OATMEAL CANVASS WAINSCOTING, PADDED CLOTH TAPESTRY ABOVE IT, A BUFFET WITH PASS INTO THE KITCHEN, FOOT BUTTON AND 3-LIGHT CHANDELIER FINISHED IN "MURPHY'S GOLD"

THERE ARE SIX BEDROOMS UPSTAIRS, TWO ON THE SOUTH SIDE OF THE HOUSE AND TWO ON THE NORTH SIDE, WHICH HAVE A BATHROOM ALL IN WHITE, AND HAVING TILE FLOOR, IN BETWEEN AND BY A UNIQUE ARRANGEMENT BY LOCKING THE HALL DOOR AT EACH END OF THE HALL, WHICH OPENS INTO ANOTHER LITTLE HALL, THESE BEDROOMS ARE INACCESSIBLE.

THE BEDROOMS ARE ALL DONE IN WHITE, WITH PLENTY OF CLOSET ROOM.

THE LARGE FRONT BEDROOM HAS A PRETTY DRESSING-ROOM ATTACHED, WHICH IS SO ARRANGED AS TO SERVE ITS PURPOSE IN THE BEST POSSIBLE MANNER.

A SEWING-ROOM, SLEEPING PORCH, SERVANTS' QUARTERS, SERVANTS' BATH, BIG CEDAR CLOSET, LARGE GARAGE, WITH CHAUFFEUR'S ROOM, AND THE FRONT TO THE GARAGE, ARE ALL FEATURES WHICH DESERVE MORE DETAILED MENTION. IF YOU ARE INTERESTED IN A HOUSE OF THIS CHARACTER AT A PRICE OF $40,000, CALL ME UP BY 'PHONE, OR DROP ME A CARD AND I WILL BE PLEASED TO SHOW THE HOUSE TO YOU.

SOUTHWEST BARGAIN; OWNER GOING EAST.

$4000.
$4000.
$4000.

Business interests demanded that the owner of this beautiful bungalow go East shortly after we had sold it to him, and the new little home must be sold again.

It is a bargain. Six splendid rooms, all with hardwood floors, modern bath, every late bungalow feature and wide, cement veranda, make the place mighty attractive.

The owner will lose money at this price, but he is very anxious to sell and you will be the gainer. This will not last long; let us show you first.

HOME NEAR THE UNIVERSITY.

$4500.

The splendid location of this bungalow should appeal to you—only a block west of Figueroa street and close to the University of Southern California. The house has seven rooms and large bath, and stands on an east-front lot, looking directly up a broad street. There are hardwood floors, cellar, furnace, hammered brass and copper fixtures of special design, and fine garage. Property would be cheap at $5500; mortgage is $3000, balance must be cash. 'Phone us and we will tell you more about this decided bargain.

BARGAIN IN HOME, SOUTHWEST.

$5250.
$5250.

Located on Normandie, just a little south of West Adams, we have a very complete home which we can sell at a sacrifice. There are eight large rooms, cellar, furnace, hardwood floors—in fact, everything is modern, although the house is four years old. This property would be cheap at $6500, but, in order to move it quickly, the owner (who is a non-resident) has advised us to put it at $5250. Almost any terms will handle it; let us show it to you.

SOMETHING ESPECIALLY FINE IN A BUNGALOW.

$6500.
$6500.

This is one of the handsomest bungalows we ever saw; it has an air of artistic beauty which distinguishes it in a street of pretty homes. Standing on a fine sixty-foot, east-facing lot, in one of the best Wilshire districts, the building has been designed after broad and spacious lines, which give us seven commodious rooms and two porches, each like a room in itself. All floors are hardwood; there is an old-time log fireplace in addition to the furnace pipes, and a sleeping porch adds a last "comfy" detail. We believe you will find no house more typically and deliciously bungalow style in Los Angeles. And it is worth every dollar of the price, $6500.

CATALINA NEAR WILSHIRE.

$8300.

Here is the opportunity you have been waiting for; a good home in this desirable location, facing east, on Catalina, and only a block south of Wilshire. It is four years old, but about $300 spent will make it like new. Seven large rooms are strictly up-to-date; hardwood floors throughout, cellar, furnace, etc. See this snap; it must be sold. The furniture can be bought cheap as the owner has left for the East, giving the property into our hands with instructions to do the best we can with it.

WESTMORELAND AVENUE.

This is a real snap and must be seen to be appreciated. Located in the Westmoreland tract near Tenth street, and only a short block from the West Ninth street car line—has eight large rooms and outside sleeping balcony, on a lot 60x165 feet. All houses on the street sit back forty feet, with very beautiful palms in the parking, making a most attractive outlook. The downstairs, with its extra large living-room, is finished in slash-grain Oregon pine; upstairs in white enamel. Cellar, splendid furnace, garage and other desirable feature complete the best buy in that section. Terms can be arranged.

This is near Wilshire blvd. and has been used but a short time. Just like new—nine beautiful rooms, with hardwood floors, cellar, furnace, large garage, in fact, every modern idea has been incorporated in the property, and it stands among twenty-five thousand dollar homes. This is a bargain, and a similar chance for property on this street will not come again for some time. To see it is to buy it. Reasonable terms can be arranged.

KINGSLEY DRIVE HOME.

Almost completed, located on Kingsley Drive, just north of Wilshire blvd.; has nine spacious rooms, including four delightful bedchambers and two tiled baths, also two sleeping decks. The lower floor is finished in Peruvian mahogany, Circassion walnut, quartered oak and eggshell enamel, with hardwood floors throughout. The arrangement is perfect, having reception hall and large living-room combined, from which leads the massive stairway; adjoining the living-room is the beautiful dining-room. Breakfast-room, kitchen, maid's room and bath and, last but not least, a conservatory 14x16, in cement and glass, with pergola effect, complete this floor. The bedrooms and tiled baths are most conveniently arranged, being very light and airy. See this home! It is a beauty and something entirely different. Cellar, automatic heater and garage complete one of the best buys in the Wilshire section and it's close to the boulevard!

BEAUTIFUL ST. ANDREWS BOULEVARD HOME.

$21,500.
$21,500.

This magnificent 12-room house, just completed, is one of the best we have had listed in over a year.

The exterior is of stone, cement and frame, and has a very imposing appearance. The lower floor consists of a huge living-room, dining-room, library or reception room, finished in solid oak and mahogany, and a dainty breakfast room and perfect kitchen in white enamel. Also a large reception hall in selected mahogany, with massive stairway.

The second floor has four extra large bedrooms and a sleeping porch. There are two fully tiled bathrooms and a shower bath on this floor.

The third floor has a fine billiard or card room, two bedrooms and a good bathroom.

The walls of the first floor have been beautifully decorated by hand and the second-floor walls are tastefully papered. Furnace heat to every room, even those on the third floor. This house cannot be adequately described in an advertisement—it must be seen to be fully appreciated.

The workmanship is exceptionally good and the property is worth every dollar asked for it.

At first sight the house gives a very favorable impression, with its wide cement porch and sandstone trimmings. The interior is a work of art; living-room, hall, staircase and den are furnished in genuine mahogany, and the dining-room in quartered oak. Decorations on both floors are all hand work of the art noveau design, done by a well-known artist. Not a scrap of paper in the house. Electroliers are of special design and of unusual value. Chambers are large with spacious closets and built-in cabinets. A commodious sun-room connects with a bed chamber, making a convenient suite. Servant's chamber and bath on the first floor. Artglass windows, mirrors, bookcase and built-in features are so arranged as to produce a complete and artistic home. If you desire a property of this size, you cannot duplicate this value in the Wilshire district.

BEAUTIFUL 11-ROOM HOUSE.
GREAT BARGAIN.

$15,500—In all the years of our experience here this is the biggest bargain and the biggest value for the price we have ever had. Located on high ground, west side, large east-front lot, new, never occupied, consists of 11 large beautiful rooms. The large living-room and library finished in Tabasco and Peruvian mahogany, large reception hall and dining-room in fumed oak all rubbed down to a piano finish. Handsome wall coverings, elegant fixtures, hardwood floors throughout, even on third floor; there are four large sleeping rooms and inclosed sleeping porch and two beautiful tiled baths on second floor. Large finished tile room on third floor. Servant's room and bath on first floor off back porch; furnace and automatic Ruud water heater; two-story garage. In fact there is nothing lacking, absolutely complete and a beauty. It is in the $20,000 class. If looking for a home of this description see us promptly.

ELEGANT WILSHIRE
10-ROOM HOUSE.

$12,500, without doubt the best value we have had in a long time in this beautiful 11-room residence, just completed, located on the best street off the boulevard Large east front lot, 60x150, commands a charming view of the mountains. Has cement porch, with brownstone trimmings across the front. Rooms all large; reception hall, living room, dining-room and library beautifully finished in oak and mahogany, beamed and paneled, with all built-in features; maid's room with private bath is off the kitchen. The upstairs is composed of five large sleeping rooms, all daintily finished and decorated and in white enamel. Also inclosed sleeping porch, a large bath with tiled floor and walls, together with a shower, also tiled. Equipped with expensive and the latest fixtures and oak floors throughout. Stairs lead to the attic; concrete basement, with best furnace and automatic water heater. Large garage with cement drive. Will take pleasure in showing you this delightful property. Worth $15,000.

WILSHIRE BARGAIN—10 ROOMS.
$10,000—New 10-room house near the boulevard on east-front lot, 60x150. A finely constructed house, very beautiful interior, with mahogany finish, hand rubbed; daintily decorated throughout; all hardwoods floors; five sleeping-rooms, two baths, large sleeping balcony; Gruby tile mantel, brass trimmings; fine library, furnace, water heater, large garage, wide cement walks and drive. This place is a sacrifice. Must be sold.

FOR SALE—HOUSES:
$2850.
Whe have three of the prettiest bungalows in the southwest, located just one block from the car line in an extremely desirable neighborhood, which we can sell for $2850.
These bungalows are finished with all built-in conveniences, including hardwood floors, beautiful built-in buffet, beamed ceilings, living room and dining room wainscoted, handsome paper and beautiful fixtures, in fact they are the most charming bungalows built in the southwest, which is acknowledged by everyone to have more future than any other section in Los Angeles.
These houses are well arranged and absolutely complete and ready to move into.
Large payments are not what we want, but desirable people, therefore for the next few days we will make the terms unusually good to the right parties and will accept a payment of

FOR SALE—HOUSES:
NINE ROOMS,
WESTLAKE DISTRICT,
$6500
$500 Down
It is a splendid East front house, located on Corondalet street, and in the Westlake district, on a 50-foot lot. It is surprising that we can offer a house of this size with big cellar, furnace, hardwood floors, etc., at the figure above mentioned, but we originally owned the lot when it was in acreage and we built the house on it, therefore we can sell it at a bargain and $1000 less than you can duplicate the property.
If you want to buy close-in, in the highest class residence district in Los Angeles, brand new house, on easy terms, or discount off for cash It's well worth looking into this property. It is absolutely the finest bargain in high-class residence property that we know of.

FOR SALE—HOUSES:
5-ROOM BUNGALOW.
$2400.
That's the price and $250 under the market value. Location ideal.
Terms $200 down
Balance easy.
Gas, electricity, fine car service. It is just such a bungalow as ordinarily sells for $2800.
We were the original owners of this property in the form of acreage and subdivided it. For this reason we can sell this house at this remarkably low figure.
The street on which it is located is built up in beautiful homes.
It is a real bargain.

FOR SALE—

$350 BUYS THIS
72x300 LOT.

Buy land close to a growing city and you must inevitably win the profit that the city's growth invariably brings. You know how true this is, and you also know how rarely you can purchase such land at a low price—it is almost out of the question. Now here is a big lot that I'll sell cheap, and that will make you money just as surely as the sun rises and sets. It is only 17 minutes out on the best car line, with garden soil and abundant free water delivered in large steel mains; good neighbors here; pleasant surroundings; the lot is nice and level, all ready to build on; $10 cash takes this, and $10 monthly pays for it. The price is only $350.

Per Acre
RICH SANDY LOAM SOIL

This is the only land in the San Fernando Valley with FREE WATER.

This water right is deeded free with the land, and is appurtenant to it. When the purchaser buys the land he also has the water right.

Only Five Miles From Hollywood

The soil is described by experts as a Fresno sandy loam, easily worked, and wherever orchards, gardens and alfalfa are planted shows remarkable fertility.

CHICKEN RANCHES.
FRUIT LAND. ALFALFA LAND.

Imagine, what it means when you can get on an electric car in the city and within 30 minutes be at your own farm, your home; where you can have all the comforts of country life, and at the same time be close to a great and growing city. Then picture to yourself what land will be worth five years from today that you can buy now at such low prices and on easy terms. Come to our office and make arrangements to see the property for yourself.

FOR SALE—

$10 SECURES.
A WHOLE ACRE.

You would like to get out of the city, wouldn't you? You'd like to shake off this rent-paying habit; get the children off the city streets, in short, you'd like to have a real HOME; where you can enjoy the healthful California sunshine; have a garden and chickens, and so cut your cost of living materially. Better get this acre at Somerset, $10 cash secures it, and $10 monthly pays for it. Somerset is a pretty, suburban place, only 30 minutes away by trolley. It has good schools, stores, telephones, and the usual suburban conveniences. The soil is a real rich sandy loam, and I furnish abundant water free. You don't have to give up your work in town to live at Somerset, for the car service is excellent. Think what a home place you could build up on this acre with your chickens, garden and fruit trees; a steady source of income. If you look into this proposition you'll find it just as good as it looks. Come in and get full information; then see Somerset. Excursions every hour daily, and up to 2 p.m. Sundays.

A WHOLE ACRE LOT.

In a district where acre lots are becoming scarcer every day, and where, in ONE YEAR, 50-foot lots will sell for the same price as whole acre lots, today. On the Venice Short Line, just beyond the subway. When the subway is completed this elegant property will be 15 minutes, or less, from downtown, and at the same time, only a few minutes from several of the finest beaches. Just think, then, of a "Whole" EAST FRONT acre, close to car line, for ONLY $1550 ONLY $1550
On Easy Monthly Payments.
This is a great bargain, and the price is only for a QUICK SALE. WHY should anyone buy acre lots, or any other kind of lots, out in remote sections, where there is NO FUTURE, when, for LESS MONEY, you can buy an elegant "Whole Acre" in a locality that you can soon reach quicker than residence districts right in town. In a very few months the poorest located "Acre Lot" along the line of the subway will be a bargain at $2500. If you wish to secure this choice one at $1550, BE QUICK. -City office open Sunday morning.

FREE EXHIBIT OF CALIFORNIA PRODUCTS
INTERESTING TO HOMESEEKERS!

I want every man or woman who is interested in the purchase of land to come in and see my handsome free exhibit of California products. If you're a practical rancher, you'll be delighted. If you're a city man, intending to "go back to the land," you'll get pointers that will be of real value to you. These products will give you an idea of what my fertile Fresno Valley lands will produce—that rich acreage which you can buy at only $40 an acre up. This is ideal land for the man with a small amount of money, for he can secure it for as little as $2.50 per acre cash and $2.50 per acre monthly, or by making a small cash payment and paying the balance during four years' time. It is located just south of Fresno, crossed by the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe railways, each having stations at the tract. The soil is rich and deep, with abundant cheap ditch and pump water. Successful crops are alfalfa, corn, tobacco, figs, walnuts, peaches, apricots, vegetables and berries. Conditions are perfect for general farming, dairying, poultry and hog raising. No pioneering or hardships here. Good town close by with schools, stores, telephones, free rural delivery, etc. Again I say, come in and see this exhibit. You'll want my free booklet, too, and to learn about my Free Excursions.

8¼ ACRES OF CHOICE UNCLEANED FOOTHILL LAND.

North of Glendale; high elevation; mountain scenery; many choice live oak trees; most of this piece lies well but has considerable rock. The soil is very fine and the elevation is good; a most desirable property for a country home; plenty of water. Now is the time to buy in this section as the boulevard is being made and other improvements going in, which will tend to raise the prices considerably. This piece is far below the present market value.

ALFALFA LAND INVESTMENT.

We have a very attractive cheap alfalfa land proposition for some man looking for a safe, sound investment in low-priced lands. We can arrange a cash rent lease on this property, to run for three or five years, that will net owner 12½ per cent. on total amount of investment; and at price of the land now it is to speak very conservatively, reasonably sure to double in value within that time. Total investment will amount to about $3000. For particulars inquire of MR. HITTE, with

M. M. DAVISON & SON.
206 Wilcox Bldg. Second and Spring.

FOR SALE—

1040 acres, very rich land in Yolo county only a short distance from Sacramento and on main line S.P.R.R. Mostly all level with fine large oaks scattered over property. Price $80 per acre on easy terms. A fine buy to hold or to subdivide.

2335 acres, northern part of Yolo county a fine stock ranch, well improved, would subdivide nicely. Has two living streams and plenty of oaks. Price $20 per acre on terms.

1200 acres in San Benito county, a fine dairy ranch—750 acres, level and can easily be irrigated, price now $50 per acre.

SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY—

FOR SALE—

SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY.

Here is a bargain for you, Mr. Homeseeker. 160 acres of as good land as can be found in California, improved as follows:
40 acres in alfalfa, checked and bordered.
320 acres in barley, checked and bordered, and a magnificent crop to date. All under complete system of canals. Prices, per acre $100

40 acres, good stand alfalfa	$125
80 acres, fenced, plowed, fine artesian well	$55
40 acres fine land	$50
80 acres, nothing better	$75
160 acres, would be a snap in Southern California at $500 per acre	$75
40 acres best alfalfa land	$75
320 acres with two 8-inch artesian wells, great for dairy or hog ranch	$60

All of the above described lands are under one of the best irrigation companies in California, gravity water from Kings River.
No charge for water, only a maintenance charge of 25 cents per acre annually. The soil is dark sandy loam and easy to cultivate. Distance to railway station 3 to 5 miles. Terms easy. Balance 6 per cent.

FOR SALE—
KERN COUNTY
ALFALFA LANDS.
$65 PER ACRE.
TRIPLE WATER INSURANCE.

Your water supply is absolutely assured—laterals of the great Stine Canal are on the land—water stock in the canal is included in the purchase price of the land. Artesian wells on the tract have been flowing for twenty years. Inexhaustible supply of pumping water at 50 feet, with 15 foot lift. Land is ridged for flooding, that means big saving in money, labor and time. Soil is 60 feet deep, rich, dark, sandy loam, without alkali, unsurpassed for growing alfalfa, grain, corn, vegetables. Big spreading trees give homelike appearance. Located on the railroad near Bakersfield, fastest growing city in the San Joaquin Valley. Remember all this can be had for only $65 an acre, in 40-acre lots. You could not buy neighboring lands in sections for $100 per acre. The world affords nothing better.

FOR SALE—

FURNITURE AND LEASE OF A 5-STORY FIREPROOF NEW APARTMENT HOUSE CLOSE IN. THIS HOUSE WAS FURNISHED LESS THAN SIX MONTHS AGO AND HAS BEEN FULL SINCE IT WAS OPENED. THE RENT IS EXCEPTIONALLY LOW, AND THE TEN-YEAR LEASE ALONE IS WORTH $5000. THE BUILDING IS STRICTLY MODERN, HAVING AUTOMATIC ELECTRIC ELEVATOR, STEAM HEAT, HOT AND COLD WATER, TELEPHONES IN EACH ROOM; AMUSEMENT HALL AND ROOF GARDEN. BEING ON A CORNER, THE VIEW IS UNEXCELLED AND THE LOCATION IS ONE OF THE BEST.

The PRICE OF THIS HOUSE IS $16,000, HALF CASH AND THE BALANCE ON TERMS. THE REASON FOR SELLING IS A PERSONAL ONE AND HAS NOTHING TO DO WITH THE MERITS OF THE HOUSE. THE HOUSE AT PRESENT IS CLEARING $600 PER MONTH AND IS OCCUPIED BY A STEADY CLASS OF BUSINESS PEOPLE.

IF YOU ARE NOT A SIGHTSEER AND MEAN BUSINESS, WE WILL BE GLAD TO SHOW YOU THE HOUSE AND GIVE YOU FULL DETAILS. NOTHING LESS THAN $8000 CASH WILL BE CONSIDERED.

FOR SALE—

APARTMENT-HOUSE.

WE HAVE AN APARTMENT-HOUSE OF ABOUT 120 ROOMS FOR RENT, FURNISHED, LOCATED WITHIN EASY WALKING DISTANCE. THE HOUSE IS STRICTLY MODERN, HAVING STEAM HEAT, HOT AND COLD WATER, AUTOMATIC ELECTRIC ELEVATOR, TELEPHONES AND EVERY MODERN CONVENIENCE. THE FURNISHINGS ARE IN EXCELLENT CONDITION AND OF GOOD QUALITY, MUCH OF IT BEING MAHOGANY. THE RENT FOR THE BUILDING AND FURNITURE IS LITTLE MORE THAN THE BUILDING ALONE WOULD RENT FOR AT THE PRESENT TIME. THE NET PROFIT OF THE HOUSE IS $600 PER MONTH, BEING IN A FIRST-CLASS DISTRICT. THE HOUSE IS FULL THE YEAR ROUND. A DEPOSIT OF $5000 IS REQUIRED AS SECURITY, WHICH WILL BE RETURNED AT THE EXPIRATION OF THE LEASE. THE PRESENT TENANT WISHES TO RETIRE FROM BUSINESS. WE WILL GLADLY GIVE PARTICULARS TO RESPONSIBLE PEOPLE, FINANCIALLY ABLE TO HANDLE IT.

AN ATTRACTIVE BUSINESS PROPOSITION.
It is well known that the question of supplying FERTILIZERS to the fruit and other lands of this country is becoming more and more a serious problem as the years pass. FERTILIZERS are as staple today in the markets as flour, meat or any other of the essentials of life. The demand for fertilizers is far in excess of the supply, so much so that shiploads of NITRATES, used in making fertilizers are continually being received through the port of San Pedro from the nitre beds of Chili for local consumption.
I CONTROL THE ONLY NITRATE BEDS HAVING A COMMERCIAL VALUE IN THE UNITED STATES, convenient to water for manufacturing purposes and to railroads for transportation facilities.
I desire to interest capital with me to develop these nitre deposits and to virtually control the markets of the country.
THIS IS A BIG STATEMENT, but I am prepared to PROVE my assertions to capital. It is not sentiment I want, BUT CAPITAL.
Address M, box 94, TIMES OFFICE.

GREATEST AUTOMOBILE AGENCY OPportunity ever offered in Los Angeles. Can secure controlling interest or buy outright centrally located garage lease for term of years and get four 1911 cars and benefit of extensive preliminary advertising on two makes of cars which are second to none and destined to become the most popular cars ever handled and sold in the history of the City of Los Angeles, the greatest auto center of America barring New York City.
Can be made a corporation and new owner could have controlling interest, other matters of vital importance open for discussion but must be private, will deal in person with principals only, and names and addresses must be furnished in answer to this or no attention will be paid. From $10,000 to $15,000 necessary; can show the goods. Buyer can secure services of salesman and one of the best mechanics in these States. Address H, box 74, TIMES OFFICE.

I SELL THE EARTH.
R. S. BASSETT.
SPLENDID BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY.
Net profits $500 per month. Though stock is worth $10,000, it can be sold for $8000. Owner will allow two months of thorough investigation, giving prospective purchaser complete charge of the business, asking only that he put up in escrow the sum of $5000, and allowing him to withdraw the amount if the proposition be not satisfactory to the prospective purchaser after the investigation has been made. What fairer proposition could one ask for?
R. S. BASSETT, L.A.R.B.,
202½ S. Broadway.

WANTED — EXPERIENCED CLOTHING and furnishings goods or general merchandise man to take charge and open a branch store for corporation composed of experienced and successful business men. To one who can show past results an opportunity will be given to invest a small amount in the capital stock of the corporation, although the money is not as much desired as the right man. Company will operate a chain of stores throughout Southern California and wants to become associated with the livest wires in all towns wherever there is an opening for these lines. Unless you can produce evidence of your success don't bother to answer, as we want only the highest class men in these lines. Address L, box 83, TIMES OFFICE.

HAVE AN OPENING FOR MAN AND wife. Wife to look after office, telephones and calls; man to see to the outside business. A thousand dollars in monthly payments are now in force and in 6 months time will produce $250 to $300 per month. This is an honest, straightforward business and in big demand. This won't last longer than the 15, so if you care to interest yourself you must act quickly. Owner has other interests and must sell at once. Best of references. $1200, $1000 cash, balance on terms. See R. J. VAN HOUTEN, 561 O. T. Johnson Bldg., or owner at 308 Severance Bldg., Sunday P. M., only.

FOR SALE—ONE OF THE BEST LOCATED meat and produce markets in the city, doing $50 to $60 cash per day. All modern improvements, two delivery horse and wagons. Electric hamburger and bone mill. Meat slicer, all new, no competition within one mile; rent $25 per month, two living-rooms. Every opportunity given responsible parties to investigate. My reason for selling don't know the business. One who does can make big money. Take Garvanza car on Main, get off at North Ave. 24. See Model Market in corner building. Owner.

REMEMBER — THE BEST PLACES ARE NOT ADVERTISED. If you are looking for a business of any kind, it will pay you to see me before buying. I am a salesman, call on the trade daily, have done so for years. Know every place in town, whether paying or not. Tell me what you want and I will tell you where to find it. It will cost you nothing, so don't fail to look me up. Write or call any day between 12 and 1:30 o'clock.
FRANK A. ENTER, 508 Mason Bldg.
4th and Broadway, Los Angeles.

FOR SALE — AN EXCEPTIONAL OPPORtunity to buy a well established manufacturing business in whole or controlling interest. Good demand for output with excellent future. Equipment the best and credit the highest. Present owners have too many interests to give business proper attention. Goods well worth more than inventory. Will sell at invoice price which is about $30,000 or will sell controlling interest and give management. No debts to assume. If interested phone MANAGER, 31025, or East 282.

FOR SALE — EXCEPTIONAL OFFERING, in good store, bakery, grocery and meat market combined. Sales more than $650 per week. No soliciting, practically no delivery. Bakery equipment complete. Fixtures good and grocery stock well selected. Business could be doubled by doing a general grocery business, either credit or delivery, or by putting on bakery wagons. Price $4000; about $3000 will handle. Location good and place has always made good money. Address GG, box 184, TIMES OFFICE.

$9000 NET PROFIT A YEAR CAN BE earned in a manufacturing business, producing products that are as staple as flour and sugar. CHARLES H. TREAT, SECRETARY.
ROBT N. BULLA. N. W. THOMPSON.

AN OPERATING AND PRODUCING CORPORATION.

THE MIDWAY VIEW OIL CO. is operating on proven territory in the Midway Sunset oil field, Kern county, California.

Well Number One is completed, and a steady producer; well Number Two drilling; now down 1090 feet.

Oil from Well Number One if flowing into the metal storage tank recently erected, from where it is piped directly to the private shipping track, installed by the Midway View Oil Company, and is connecting with the main line of the Sunset Railroad.

Our equipment of tools and machinery is one of the best in the Sunset oil field.

Out of a capitalization of one million shares there have been issued only 350,000 shares, and there still remains in the treasury a stock reserve of 650,000 shares; the company has paid cash for its property lease and equipment, and has no debts except current monthly bills.

For more extensive development of our present property, and the purchase of additional properties, we are offering One Hundred Thousand shares of our stock at a very low figure, an don easy terms of payment.

Sunset field companies are now becoming the big dividend payers of the State, and we invite your attention to Midway View stock while it can still be purchased at a low figure.

Following Example.

"What in the world are you doing, Hilda?" exclaimed Mrs. Bale, as she entered the nursery, where her six-year-old daughter was stuffing broken toys, headless dolls, ragged clothes and general debris into an open box.

"Why, mother," cried Hilda, "can't you see? I'm packing a missionary box just the way the ladies do; and it's all right," she added, reassuringly. "I haven't put in a single thing that's any good at all."—[Woman's Home Companion.

Remembered Only the Money.

"There was $105 in the left trousers pocket," panted a white-faced man as he all but fell into the little tailor's pressing and cleaning shop.

The tailor glanced at the excited citizen and went on pushing the goose.

After a minute the new arrival got his breath, but lost his temper. "I say, there was $105 in the left trouser pocket," he repeated, shaking his fist.

"Vell, didt I sedt dere vasn't?" the little tailor asked. "Dere iss de pants. Mebbe he iss dere yedt," pointing to a pair of trousers on a nail.

The left pocket gave up a roll of bills and a cigarette case, the right pocket a bunch of keys, a penknife and a pound of other junk; the right back pocket a magazine pistol and a handkerchief, the left back pocket a big memorandum book and the fob pocket a watch with fob and charm attached, and some bills tightly folded.

After the absent-minded one had given the tailor $5 for his "honesty," the knight of the goose soliloquized: "Some day dot feller fergit his bants."—[New York Sun.

Limiting Height of Buildings.

New York is one of the few cities of the world that do not impose a limit on the height of buildings. Some years ago twenty stories was a great height, but now forty and fifty story buildings occasion no surprise. Recently announcement was made of a building that will contain sixty stories.

In most other large cities some restriction is in force. For instance, in Boston a building cannot be taller than 110 feet, in Chicago 200 feet is the limit. In foreign cities the height of a building is generally regulated by the width of the street it stands on. In England, under the law of ancient lights, the top of a building must fall within an angle of not more than 45 degrees drawn from a point in the middle of the street.—[New York Sun.

LANGLEY'S SALVATION.

BY IAN GROSVENOR.

Bartzfontein Deeps lagged, a drug in the market.

At no time had they been responsible for the inauguration of a boom, though under Roger Langley's careful manipulation of a tricky market the holders of Bartzfontein scrip had discovered their invested capital sextupled. Shrewd in business, if young in years, Langley, keeping a close touch on the African pulse, juggled all bearing influences with the skill of a seasoned financier. For six weeks he had fought as desperate a battle as any man could wage, to wrest fame and fortune on the floor of the Kaffir market. Not a Bartzfontein was offered he did not buy, raising closing prices with each successive deal, till a sudden unloading of 5000 shares found him cornered and commenced the inevitable steady bearing he so dreaded.

Outwardly calm, Langley bought the block, to be confronted by a fresh 5000. Sick at heart, he purchased these, with the result that the closing market registered a slight advance on its opening. Impressed by his reckless policy, buyers became more frequent during the last half-hour, the outcome of which was a slightly steadier trade at irregular yet firmer rates.

So far Langley & Co. had weathered the storm, yet, in the seclusion of his office, the stock broker realized himself to be that which his staff already guessed—a ruined man. Only by a miracle could he be saved before the advent of a settling day, which would find him unable to meet obligations into which he had so blindly rushed. Haggard, he feverishly totted up the amounts due, then crumpled the fateful paper in his hand, flinging it into the midst of a dully glowing fire, as the door opened to admit the person of his head clerk.

"Mr. Cluer," he remarked, deferentially. "He says it is most important he should see you before morning. His business concerns Bartzfontein Deeps. Shall I show him in, sir?"

Langley nodded, a hunted look invading the depths of his eyes as he did so. That the senior partner of Cluer, Hallum & Co. should desire to see him was in itself significant of coming disaster. Like a criminal awaiting judgment, he leaned back in his chair, toying nervously with a document on the desk before him. A moment later the man he most dreaded to see stood within the precincts of his office.

"Good evening." The salutation escaped Langley's lips in an almost mechanical utterance. "What can I have the pleasure of doing for you?"

An odd smile twisted the corners of Cluer's lips. To all intents and purposes Langley was as calm and sauve as though he had negotiated a successful coup, instead of tottering on the brink of ruin. Shrewd in his knowledge of men and their ways, Cluer noted the uneasy, hunted light in Langley's eyes. They hinted of easy victory to the man who ignored his companion's iron will.

"I have called to see you in re Bartzfontein Deeps," replied Cluer, airily. "Thank you—I will take a seat. There was a big flutter in Deeps today, was there not? We sold out to the tune of ten thousand."

"I bought them in."

Once again Langley's voice became purely mechanical in its accent.

"Quite so. Er—have you any objection to my smoking a cigar? Thanks." Answering the permission of his companion's curt nod. Cluer lighted his weed, then added, "We have thirty thousand Deeps to sell ourselves, whilst Howard & Davies have another ten. Would you care to buy them at par, before we put them on the market tomorrow morning?"

Langley swayed slightly in his chair, the veins standing out in great knotted cords upon a brow already damp with the dews of a ghastly apprehension. In the agony of his mind he could have strangled the calmly-speaking man before him. Except for a slight ashening about the corners of his mouth, the stock broker's expression became sphinx-like.

"I cannot buy," he said, uncertainly. "Their selling will produce a heavy bear, and I shall be able to take them in at a lower quotation than you offer, tomorrow, should I wish to increase my holding."

Cluer laughed cynically.

"Gad, but you bluff well. I congratulate you on the knack," said he. "You're a plucked one to face ruin so cheerfully, hanged if you're not. Still, you can't blind me. I know that so far as your smash is concerned all is over bar shouting. This week sees settling day and—already it's the talk on 'Change that you'll be hammered. You're smashed to all intents and purposes already, my boy. You have close on a hundred thousand to meet three days hence, and the only asests you can produce are Bartzfontein scrip. Can you tell me what they'll be worth when the Financial Patriot has lashed into them the day after tomorrow, and forty thousand have been offered in open market? What will your holding be worth, eh?"

"The reef is gold-bearing," rapped back Langley, stung to a sudden fury. "Joisey has stated it is one of the richest in existence, and Joisey as an expert has a name to conjure with."

"Yet Joisey is writing the article in Wednesday's Financial Patriot," sneered Cluer. "He is declaring himself mistaken. You're right! Joisey's is a name to conjure with. With his at the bottom of the column, it will be tantamount to signing the Bartzfontein's death warrant!"

"The article will be a lie," panted Langley.

"What of it, so long as he is well paid for the job?" Cluer paused, to add, "I have paid him quite a comfortable little sum for his services in this respect. Langley, I have you in the hollow of my hand. You are mine to do with what I will, and I intend to use my power to the full tonight. I can beggar you, my friend, and rest assured I shall, unless you acknowledge me your master."

Startled at the very intensity of Cluer's low-voiced passion, Langley stared into the nervously working features of the man before him.

"I refuse to treat with you in any fashion," said he, curtly. "I must ask you to close an interview which is alike uncomfortable for me and degrading to yourself. If you feel you have a grudge against myself we will fight the matter out in open market. Good evening."

Cluer rapped out an oath beneath his breath; then, of a sudden growing unexpectedly calm, snapped, "Langley, we were good friends till Maisie Grant crossed your path. Stand clear; let me win her, and I pass my word I'll see that neither the market is beared nor Joisey's article allowed to appear. Come, man," he whispered, feverishly, "is it a deal? You're no fool, and——. Thunder, you must see I can smash you irretrievably within the next two days if you refuse the bargain I'm offering you. Ah! would you? Sit down, Langley. I came prepared for some sort of a flare-up of this kind. Sit down, fool!"

Muttering an imprecation, Langley did as he was ordered. There was a peculiar persuasiveness in the leveled revolver muzzle that refused to allow of any argument on his part.

"Good," sneered Cluer. "I thought you'd see reason with this pointed at your head. Sit still, my boy, and let us talk this little matter over as men of the world. There are thousands of prettier girls than Maisie on this sordid old globe of ours, and they're only awaiting your choice. With money you can marry whom you like. Penniless, you'll win neither love nor friends. Well, which is it to be? A surrender of Maisie, or—do I smash you tomorrow by the most colossal bearing Bartzfonteins have yet had to negotiate? I am waiting for your answer, my friend."

"And, by heavens, you shall have it," snarled Langley, gripping the arm of his chair to keep at bay the awful sense of creeping hysteria threatening to overwhelm him in the presence of his enemy. "You shall have it, you blackguard! I'll never give up Maisie to you or any man. You can smash me, and I know you will. But, by every power there is in heaven or earth, you cannot make me sell the woman I love and who, thank Heaven, has given me her heart in keeping."

Cluer shrugged his shoulders.

"As you will," said he. "I have given you your chance, not so much for your sake as for my own. Maisie is not the sort of girl to fall violently in love with the man who ruined the one she preferred; still, if I can't have her, I'll take deuced good care you don't. I'll smash you, Langley. I'll have you hammered, sure as my name is what it is, if the answer you made a moment ago is a final one."

"It is—quite final."

Cluer rose, picked up his hat, and, still covering the infuriated stock broker with his weapon, backed towards the door.

"Having no time to waste with fools, I'll leave," said he, closing his fingers round the handle. "Good night."

Without awaiting a reply, the financier opened and closed the door, rapidly behind him, leaving his late companion pale and shaken in his chair as a result of the interview.

So a remorselessly stalking ruin had at last found Langley out, and doing so had run him to earth. Dazedly the stock broker realized the fact. Three days later would see him hammered, discredited. Worse than all, it would witness the loss of all he held dearest and most sacred in his life. Cluer, in his implacable hate, had crushed him beyond all hope of redemption, and in doing so had left him but one path to tread—that of suicide.

Suicide! The reflection at first made him shudder beneath the touch of its suggestion, yet as the seconds sped the thought in its train brought a sordid consolation. At all events it would earn a forgetfulness of all that a loss of Maisie's love would mean for him. The idea calmed the fierce riot of his soul, producing a mental apathy that found its expression in the carefully-worded lines of a letter. Addressing its envelope, he rang a bell at his side, and, holding the fateful missive in his hand, awaited the advent of his head clerk.

"You can close up now so far as you fellows are concerned, Challis," said he, giving the man the letter. "I shall probably go on working for a couple of hours or so. I'll lock the office tonight."

The clerk nodded.

"Good evening, sir," said he, with the phlegm of his kind. "I fear you have been hard hit over Deeps, sir. If I may be permitted to say so, I am sorry—so are all the office."

Langley's lips twitched.

"Thanks," said he, shortly. "I am buying forty thousand more tomorrow. I shall save the situation, never fear, Challis. Good night."

Langley resumed his writing, watching the retreating figure of his head clerk out of the tail of his eye.

Calmly the stock broker waited till a silence in the room without announced to his listening ears the desertion of the outer office; then, drawing a cigar from a box before him, he gravely lighted it. For an hour he smoked with an almost unnatural tranquillity, then opened a drawer and took a revolver from its depths.

Transitorily he toyed with the weapon, preparing himself for the ordeal of raising its muzzle to his temple, when the battering of a telephone bell at his elbow made him temporarily abandon the idea of self-murder.

"Heavens!" said he, at the conclusion of the conversation. "Why shouldn't I? She won't get my letter till the morning, and it would make my exit easier, perhaps, were I to spend my last evening on earth in her company. Eight-thirty! I shall just have time to dress and get there."

Slipping the revolver into his pocket, he rose and, going to the peg whereon hung his hat and coat, passed out into the street.

Dressing with an immaculate care, Langley entered a taxi, to be driven rapidly in the direction of Grosvenor Square, where Henry J. Grant, the British Oil King, leased his mansion.

Turning into it, Langley found the square illumined by a ruddy glare which rendered the night clear as day, his surprise, however, verging into a very real fear on observing the house he had it in his mind to visit girt by flames.

In a moment he had sprung out of the halting taxi and, flinging the chauffeur a sovereign, raced to the scene of the blaze. So far, the engines had not arrived, the police having all their work cut out to keep back a rapidly-gathering crowd of sight-seers. Forcing his way through the throng, Langley gained Grant's side, to learn to his horror that of the entire household only one unit had failed to escape—Maisie—who was doubtless imprisoned in an upper room.

White to the lips, Langley listened to the man's distraught utterance, and before any had time to gauge the thought struggling for mastery in the stock broker's mind the latter had left the Oil King's side to gain the entrance of the blazing house.

For a moment he stood on the steps, clearly outlined against the glare, then disappeared, lost to view amid the belching sheaves of eddying smoke sweeping from the open hallway.

Luckily for himself, Langley knew the plan of the house so perfectly that he could have found his way to the drawing-room blindfolded, and well for him it was that such proved to be the case. Acrid, the smoke swirled round him to ever-thickening clouds of flame-reddened fog, almost choking him in its pungent cling. Dashing forward, he took the stairs at a run, to gain the first floor as the steps he had so recently traversed subsided in his wake amid a rushing roar of leaping flame.

With his retreat cut off, Langley searched the drawing-room floor for the girl whose life he had risked his own to save. Drawing blank in his quest, he gained and examined the second floor, easing the pressure of his lungs by the winding of a water-soaked towel about his mouth.

Dazed, gasping beneath a combined influence of smoke and heat, Langley persevered in his self-imposed task till a chance stumble revealed the woman he loved lying swooning at his feet. Bending, he raised her in his arms; then, staggering across the landing, reeled into a front room and raised a window.

From below pulsed out the echo of a loud-throated cheer, redoubling in its volume as a fire-escape rushed into position and rapidly raised its vermillion head in the direction of the window against the sill of which he rested.

The firemen won the contest, forestalling the flames' advance by seconds only, since barely had they time to gain the level of the pavement before the flooring, so lately serving as support for Langley and his precious burden, collapsed amid a burst of flame, the force of which wrenched the windows from their parent walls. Saved in the nick of time from a certain and ghastly death, Langley listened to the crash of glass raining on the paving flags around him; then, a sudden unconsciousness sweeping over him, the stock broker spun round on his feet, to sprawl heavily to the level of the roadway.

When he recovered consciousness it was to find himself lying on his own bed, with his valet standing by its side. To his relief, Langley realised himself to be unhurt from the previous night's horror, and with merely the presence of a splitting headache to serve him as its remembrance. Starting, he glanced at the glare of sunlight flooding his room, then looked inquiringly at his man.

"What's the time, Jones?" said he, quietly.

"Twelve, sir."

Langley frowned; then, rising carefully from his bed, discovered he could stand. Satisfied on this point, he decided to go to his office. Calmly he descended; then, hearing he had been the recipient of an invitation to lunch with the Grants at the Savoy, decided to obey the injunction. Transitorily he had forgotten the fact that his name was that of a ruined man, though its knowledge was brought sharply back to his memory when, on stepping into his taxi, he caught sight of a newspaper boy's contents bill, flaunting the words "Stock Exchange Sensation" to the eyes of all and sundry.

Hurriedly buying a copy, he opened the same, to read with staring eyes that Bartzfontein Deeps had risen thirty points within the first half-hour of the market's opening, gaining another twenty within the succeeding fifteen minutes, owing to a determined buying on the part of F. M. Grant, the Oil King. The long-delayed bull had at last commenced, and with an intensity which produced a feverish boom almost equalling that of rubber. Startled, Langley reread the dancing lines, and doing so realized that from being a ruined man he was worth, roughly, half a million.

Leaning out of the taxi's window, he redirected his chauffeur—this time to the Savoy Hotel.

Here a fresh surprise awaited him, as on entering the Grants' private sitting-room he found it untenanted, save for the presence of Maisie herself. She welcomed Langley's advent with the utterance of a little cry of pleasure as, allowing him to hold both her hands in his, she falteringly thanked him for her salvation of the previous night.

"I only did what any other man would have done in my place," he stammered. "As a matter of fact, I came here today to offer, not to receive, thanks. Mr. Grant's buying has boomed Bartzfonteins to an extraordinary extent. They've risen fifty points in two hours. This morning, Maisie, I was a ruined man. Now I am worth the best part of half a million. I'm Mr. Grant's debtor to my dying day."

"And yet daddy did not buy. He acted under my instructions and with my money. Dad, however, squared Joisey on the 'phone last night."

"You bought Bartzfonteins!" whispered Langley, aghast at the revelation. "Why?"

"Challis brought me your letter himself last night. He swore he would keep an eye on you today, and so did Jones. I wanted the Bartzfontein rise to be a surprise to you, for I knew what it would mean to any company if dad bought heavily." Slowly Maisie raised her eyes to Langley, then added with an exquisite blush, "I did it, Roger, because—because three days ago you—you said you loved me, and—and I thought you—you might like to say it again, be-because—Roger, I love you so."

A happy gasp escaped Maisie's quivering lips as, gathering her up in his arms, Langley stayed her further utterance with a rain of kisses.

"By thunder," he laughed, in a gust of happiness, "Challis is a trump! I'll have him as best man at our wedding, if I may."

"I think he deserves it, dearest," whispered Maisie as, nestling yet closer in her lover's arms, she upraised her lips in sweet temptation.

Tin Production Decreasing.

The world's use of tin is steadily increasing and the demand for it is constantly growing, notwithstanding its displacement in many instances by aluminum and other metals. New tin deposits are discovered from time to time, and certain districts already known are increasing their output, but the production of some of the important tin-mining regions of the world is declining and that of others cannot long be maintained. The reserve stocks held in various parts of the world are accordingly being greatly depleted and the price of tin is gradually becoming higher. The discoverer of a deposit rich in tin would have a "veritable gold mine." Tin has been found in various parts of the United States and [illegible] in paying quantities.—[Opportunity.

THE HIGH FINANCIAL ADVENTURES OF SIR JOHN KYNNERSLEY.

XII.—HOW SIR JOHN MANAGED THE MONEY SYNDICATE.

BY A. C. FOX-DAVIES.

WHEN the whole thing was at an end, there were some who admired the consummate genius of the idea, and there were some who paid tribute of commendation to the marvelous skill with which every detail had been planned; there were others who termed the affair the most colossal swindle of the century. But as a matter of fact, there was no one who read the daily papers who ceased to marvel at the gorgeous audacity of the controlling mind.

The first step was the purchase of an undeveloped but "reputed gold mine" in Rhodesia, South Africa. The purchase of the farm at a cost of £200 was concluded, and the mine was registered as a limited company with a capital of £1,000,000. The capital stock was all allotted in the three (fictitious) names of the promoters, and none of the shares were offered to the public. As the promoters asked for no money from outside, the whole deal was carried through without the slightest publicity, and had been an accomplished fact for some eight or nine months before the next step was taken. Nobody for a moment ever connected the two incidents until the end of the deal, when everything had been accomplished.

The front page of a well-known London halfpenny morning paper was secured for a week. Each day saw the same advertisement, though in varying terms, of which a single one may serve as a sample:

"If you Gamble why bother to play Bridge?

"The 'Money Syndicate,' which has exclusive information, can gamble to better advantage than you can by yourself. Every member of the Syndicate is risking his entire capital, but money begets money, and the greater the amount of pressure that can be brought to bear by the extent of capital, so much greater will be the certainty and the percentage of profit. That is axiomatic.

"The whole thing is a gamble, but if you like to come into the gamble we shall be glad of the help of your capital. Will you join us? We don't want the widow's mite. We are gambling, and we will not accept more than £10 from any single person. But if you are a sportsman, and want to gamble on a certainty to show big profit, then send us any sum between £1 and £10 for investment, and ask no question, and take what money we shall send you in return. Don't say your thanksgivings till you've got your money back. We know you will then, but we shall have done with the matter at that stage. A full account of all operations verified by a firm of chartered accountants will be sent to every person who subscribes, and the Syndicate will close its operations within three months.

"Those who come into the present gamble with us will have the first chance on future occasions, of which there will be several. We estimate the profits on the present deal at 300 per cent."

The foregoing is a good example of the advertisements which appeared day after day for a week. Sir John Kynnersley, who (using another name) had inserted them, had not misjudged their probable effect. At the end of the week he found he had received a quarter of a million. With that amount of capital a great deal can be accomplished. Seeking the advice and assistance of one of the cleverest brokers on the London Stock Exchange, Sir John sold some number of bears very successfully; and then after quietly purchasing the entire capital of a certain small and speculative limited company, he continued buying until the brokers who had sold to him, finding themselves unable to deliver the scrip, were glad to get out at the price he suggested, which, to do him justice, was far below the market quotation.

This operation was repeated twice or thrice, always with the same results, and at the end of two months, the syndicate distributed a dividend of 20 per cent. At the end of three months, every subscriber received in addition for each £1, two £1 shares in the Rhodesian gold mine previously mentioned, and Sir John paid the cash capital into an account of his own. As a little careful manipulation had raised the quoted price of the gold mine shares to 40s., the promise of the advertisement appeared to be more than fulfilled. A brief note pointing out the inadvisability of putting so large a number of shares upon the market for realization, for the mere purpose of the liquidation of the syndicate in cash, and advising that the shares should be held as an investment, accompanied the share certificates and the final statement of account, as an apology for the course which had been pursued in winding up the syndicate.

Sir John Kynnersley, having very carefully liquidated and transferred the capital of the company in a perfectly untraceable manner before posting the scrip of his gold mine, found himself a day or two after its delivery sitting in the smoking-room of his club, scanning the financial papers for comment on the action of the Money Syndicate. But apparently no one had yet tumbled to the fact that the syndicate had been formed and had operated exclusively with the final end in view of disposing of the gold mine.

Sir John was also puzzled greatly. He now possessed in round figures some six or seven hundred thousand pounds. All of his friends—and they were many—who knew him as Sir John Kynnersley, were perfectly aware that his income, when he came into the title, was only some £400 to £500 per annum; and knew also that practically all his capital had been lost over the ill-fated blacking company, into the affairs of which Aaron Koodoorian, the financier, had betrayed him. The baronet cared nothing for money itself, but he did care exceedingly for the comfort and ease of life which money could buy for him. He had no intention of foregoing these, but he had become much too wily a man to suddenly blossom into a wealthy person, without providing any explanation as to where that wealth had been derived from. Society, he knew, was very curious, and he could come to no decision in the matter.

But there were other forces at work. The Money Syndicate, in the course of their preliminary operations, had been "bearing" certain stocks heavily, and "somebody" had been badly squeezed. As the baronet subsequently ascertained, it was Koodoorian who had provided the bulk of the 20 per cent. dividend which the Money Syndicate had distributed in cash. Had he thought, he might have known this from the beginning, for the stock broker he had consulted had reason to hate Koodoorian almost as much as had Sir John, and this the latter knew. It was only natural, therefore, that the dealings of the Money Syndicate should possess no little interest for Koodoorian, who, by a curious coincidence, was probably the only man in London, and in the financial game, who personally knew the locality in which the reputed gold mine was said to be situated.

Remembering it as a poverty-stricken farm, he had been surprised to hear of its conversion into a gold-mining es-very naturally, concluded that gold had been found there since he had known the neighborhood. But when the accounts of the Money Syndicate were published, Koodoorian smelled a rat, and was probably the first to do so. He at once saw that the dividend which had been paid had resulted from the "bear" operations, which had left the capital intact. The whole of this had been absorbed in the purchase of the gold mine shares. If these were worth the quoted price, then the deal was a good one; otherwise it was as closely akin to fraud as was possible.

Koodoorian soon satisfied himself that there had never been any real dealings in the shares, and that the price was fictitious. He cabled out to a friendly prospector in Rhodesia, and on receipt of a reply, he communicated the result to one of the financial papers, writing a letter to the effect that the estate was now, as in the past, a farm, and a poor one; that the occupant was totally ignorant of anything in the nature of gold prospecting ever having taken place; that a careful examination had not revealed the slightest probability of the presence of gold, and that no one was aware any had ever been found in the locality.

And then the storm burst. The shares came down with a run, and an offer of a small parcel at sixpence failed to secure a purchaser. Inquiries quickly proved that the Gold Mine Company had relinquished their registered office and dismissed their secretary, and that the addresses of the directors filed with the government were no longer occupied, and very likely even the names were fictitious.

A question was asked in the House of Commons concerning the refusal of the public prosecutor to interfere. The Attorney-General, in sarcastic tones, replied that as far as the gold mine was concerned, no single solitary technical offence had been committed, and no shareholder could allege that he had been misled into an investment by the statements of the directors in the prospectus, for two simple reasons—the first of which was that there never was a prospectus; and the second reason was that, as far as he could ascertain, none of the present shareholders had become so in a bona fide manner, or by their own consent. To buy an estate for £200, and after changing its character to sell it for £250,000, might be reprehensible, but was not in itself a crime. He understood that in the city it was considered "good business."

So much for the Gold Mine Company. The Money Syndicate, he would remind the House, was advertised as a gamble, concerning which no questions were to be asked; and he had not the smallest intention of advising the Crown to institute a prosecution to which there would be a perfectly legal defence. "The whole of this series of transactions has been, I have personally very little doubt, a gigantic swindle, but at the same time its conception has been sufficiently careful for it to be perfectly legal. In my official capacity," ended the Attorney-General, "I am only concerned with legality and illegality, and not with morality or immorality."

The next day Dennis Yardley called on Koodoorian. The money lender was as surly as a bear with the proverbial sore head.

"Well, what do you want?" he snapped out, as the detective was ushered into the inner office.

Yardley coolly seated himself, put down his hat and gloves on the floor beside him, helped himself to one of the money lender's cigars from the box on the table, and lit it.

"Oh, yes, make yourself at home; don't mind me," said Koodoorian. "Shall I send for champagne?" he added as a sarcastic after-thought.

"That's very good of you," said Yardley.

"It will be when I do it. What do you want? I can't afford to pay you any more for continual failures."

"I came in for a quiet chat, that's all."

"Well, then, you can go away; I'm busy."

"Oh, all right, only thought you would be interested in a little fact or two about the Money Syndicate," and the detective rose to go.

"Why didn't you say so before? Who put you on that?"

"Oh, never mind who put me on to it. You're going to pay."

"I'm damned if I do!"

"Oh, you'll be glad enough to pay later on. Ever go to the offices of the Money Syndicate?"

"Yes; several times."

"Whom did you see?"

"Morgan, the manager."

"I saw him last night. He told me that he was engaged by telegraph; only had one interview with his principal, which took place walking up and down the Thames Embankment one night; had full instructions given him then to engage an office and staff and open a banking account. All subsequent instructions came by telegrams or the telephone. The manager signed all checks. There isn't a single scrap of writing of any kind, for the originals of the few telegrams are printed. Most of the instructions were telephoned. Morgan never knew either the name or the address of the man he was working for. Now what does that remind you of?"

"An old Kynnersley trick when robbing me!" gasped Koodoorian.

"Same here. And now," continued the detective, "the secretary of the gold mine never saw his principals. He never set eyes on his directors. He never did a stroke of work for the company except file his statutory returns; and there was only one directors' meeting held, as far as he knows, and that he only 'attended' through the telephone, the minutes being dictated to him by that medium. The deeds for the transfer of the estate were prepared by the solicitors of the company. Who do you think the firm was?"

"I don't know."

"It was Stanger and Strangman, who have appeared before in Kynnersley operations, and the whole thing is just one more of Kynnersley's frauds. Koodoorian, you did a bad day's work for yourself when you took that man in in the blacking business. He'd have been a jewel of a partner for you."

Koodoorian sat stupefied. The detective went on: "And you read what the Attorney-General said—that the whole thing was legal?"

There was a pause, and then, "I'll break him, I'll break him!" Koodoorian shouted, as he stormed up and down his office.

The next day a warrant for the arrest of Sir John Kynnersley was issued from Bow street, and Sir John was remanded on bail for £2000, on an accumulation of charges brought against him by Koodoorian. Yardley had pleaded hard that the baronet should also be charged with fraud in connection with the presentation of Miss Koodoorian at court, but on this point Koodoorian had been firm and not a word of this was to be breathed in court. Yet all the other frauds Sir John had perpetrated upon the money lender were to be aired to their fullest.

There is no need whatever to trace cuting counsel through the evidence as he built up the case against Sir John Kynnersley. Nor does it seem necessary to detail the manner in which Yardley had collected a most damning array of facts. When the case for the prosecution closed, and the perspiring barrister sat down, he had established a good many very inculpating facts, and had woven them into a powerful speech, which, to the man in the street, pointed to certain conviction.

But there's many a slip between the cup and the lip, as the old proverb has it, and as Koodoorian found out to his sorrow even when he was taking some degree of comfort for the loss of thousands of pounds to Sir John Kynnersley in a mental picture of Sir John languishing in a prison cell. Sir John had conceived and carried out his various frauds upon Koodoorian with a cleverness unequaled in British criminal history; so that when the very able counsel he had employed, the cleverest junior member of the bar, Mr. Ashley Tempest, had got in his side of the case, tending to show that all the charges against his client were based solely on suspicion, Sir John Kynnersley's stock rose wonderfully. And the concluding speech of Mr. Ashley Tempest clinched matters in his favor.

"Gentlemen," he said, in closing, "you have heard the evidence. You know that Koodoorian plundered my client of the bulk of his possessions; but, not content with that, he has trumped up this frivolous charge, to sustain which there is no particle of evidence. Now, you have had under cross-examination Sir John's factotum, and the waiters at his club, his bankers, his tailor, and his solicitor. One of the waiters thinks that nowadays Sir John more frequently indulges in a sixpenny cigar than formerly, but otherwise they all agree that Sir John had not altered the penurious style of his living—where is the money he is said to have obtained from Koodoorian? There isn't a trace of it, nor is there a scrap of genuine evidence against Sir John Kynnersley. A very clever series of crimes have been committed, and nobody can discover the culprit. But, really, that is no reason for making Sir John Kynnersley into a scapegoat."

The jury, at the end of the trial, without retiring, acquitted the accused, who, in the words of the judge, left the court without a stain on his character.

. . . .

Some three months later all the friends of Sir John Kynnersley were congratulating him upon his good fortune in succeeding to the bulk of the estate of M. le Terier of Paris, a wealthy recluse, with whom the Morning Post announced that the baronet was distantly connected.

"You seem to have struck it rich, Kynnersley," said one of his friends.

"Well, I must say I grudge some of the old boy's legacies. Of course, I never expected to come into his money; but, as I have done, I don't see why he need have left good solid shekels to rescue homes, and prisoners' aid societies, and things of that sort. It comes altogether to nearly £10,000."

"How much do you get?"

"Just over six hundred thousand, I believe; can't say to a pound or two till it's settled up, and there are all kinds of taxes and duty to be paid. So I suppose I ought not to grudge the legacies; but you can take it from me I do. The will won't be proved for a month or two, and then the estate has got to be realized. I dare say it will be six months before it really makes much difference."

Sir John left the smoking-room, and, passing through the hall, ran against Mr. Ashley Tempest.

"Hullo, Tempest, heard my news? Won't you congratulate me?"

The barrister quietly placed his hands behind him and passed on. It was the cut direct.

Wonderful Invention.

POTENT ENGINES OF DESTRUCTION

SUBMARINE TORPEDOES MARVELS OF INGENUITY.

One Brooklyn Concern Makes All Used by the United States Navy. Two Hundred of These Projectiles Made Each Year and All Subjected to Severe Tests.

Few people have anything but a vague conception of what the submarine torpedo really is, says the Brooklyn Eagle. To the great majority, a torpedo is some sort of a wonderful invention like a gigantic steel cigar, filled with some high explosive, which is shot out of a long gun just below the water line of a warship, and after a few moments strikes the hull of the enemy's vessel, explodes and sends all souls on board to a watery grave.

In a measure this is true. But it does not convey to the mind a proper understanding of the marvelous ingenuity displayed in the manufacture of the torpedo, by which it is almost human in its self-propulsion, self-steering and perfectly automatic adjustments to fulfill every requirement demanded of it. From the instant the torpedo leaves the ship on its errand of destruction to the moment it strikes its target, every action of the projectile is controlled by internal mechanism which guides it straight and true on its course, correcting every deviation caused by the elements.

Visitors to the Bliss factories are denied the privilege of inspecting all the secret processes of manufacture of the Bliss-Leavitt torpedo. Although the company's government contracts do not permit of such close-hand examination, the officials of the company extend every courtesy possible in the collection of such facts as are permissible for publication.

Briefly reviewing the history of the torpedo, it is interesting to note that as far back as 1750 there had been movable torpedoes. It was not, however, until the close of the Civil War, in 1867, that the torpedo was started upon its present rapid development. During the Civil War, the Confederates employed the movable or stationary torpedo in the destruction of Federal war vessels.

Several ironclads, thirteen wooden ships, seven transports and a number of other vessels were either destroyed or damaged by striking floating torpedoes anchored in the channels, or by torpedoes exploded from small boats alongside. Of course, this was extremely dangerous to the attacking forces as well, and many lives were sacrificed, as was the case in some of the attacks upon the Federal fleet off Charleston.

FIRST AUTOMOBILE TORPEDO.

use of the clumsy movable torpedo has been responsible for the ambition of inventors to perfect a dirigible torpedo. In 1864 an Austrian naval engineer named Lupius had so far succeeded in his plans for an automobile torpedo that he engaged Robert Whitehead, then manager of an engine-manufacturing concern at Fiume, Hungary, to assist in the developmet of the torpedo. From that time on, Mr. Whitehead advanced so rapidly with his torpedo improvements that today the Whitehead torpedo is known the world over as a marvel of mechanical genius.

His first torpedo was a steel shell 14 inches in diameter, containing 18 pounds of dynamite, and weighing 300 pounds. Its motor power was compressed air up to 700 pounds to the square inch, which was all the boiler-plate shell would stand. Naturally its speed was slow, being about six knots an hour.

In connection with the earlier stages of torpedo development, the names of Admiral Howell of the United States Navy, Simms, Harvey and Schwartzkopf must be linked with Whitehead's, since each contributed much to the progress of the invention.

DEVELOPS OTHER INDUSTRIES.

Before explaining some of the details of the Bliss-Leavitt torpedo which have made it the highest type of destructive engine in the world, it should not be overlooked that the torpedo has been largely responsible for some of the greatest improvements and inventions in other kindred industries. The wonderful strength and resistance of steel can be directly traced to the necessity for better hardening processes to which the torpedo called attention. Also, the successful invention of submarine vessels is but the outgrowth of self-propelled submarine torpedoes.

The Bliss-Leavitt type of torpedo is manufactured in two sizes, 16 feet 4 inches in length, 18 and 21 inches in diameter. Its weight complete is 2000 pounds. It is divided into four compartments designated as the head, the air flask, the afterbody and the tail. Each torpedo is supplied with two heads, one for practice purposes and the other the war-head.

The air flask is a shell or cylinder of special grade of nickel steel finished to a thickness of 7-16 inch. Each end of the flask is fitted with a heading, one of which is removable to permit of cleaning out the flask when necessary. There are three compartments in each flask; a main air chamber in the center, with a buoyancy chamber at each end. The main compartment contains the compressed air by which the engine is propelled. The forward chamber contains a draining device for removing any water which the condensed air may create. The after chamber is the location of the diving gear and alcohol bottle from which the fuel for heating the compressed air is supplied.

STARTING VALVES.

In the main compartment there is also a starting valve and a charging valve. When the torpedo leaves the launching tube, the starting valve is operated by the tripping of a small latch at the top of the torpedo. This results in the igniting of the super-heating apparatus and the compressed the turbine propelling engine. The object of the super-heating of the compressed air is to increase its power, thereby increasing the range and speed of the torpedo in its flight. This range is thus brought up to about two miles at a speed of twenty-eight knots an hour.

CHARGING VALVES.

The charging valve is an ingenious arrangement for setting the firing hammer of the torpedo's nose into proper position for exploding the cap and so the main charge of 200 pounds of gun cotton. When the torpedo is first launched this hammer is separated from the cap so that should the torpedo strike some object at closer range than intended, the explosion could not occur. Only after this hammer has been screwed down into place by a small auxiliary engine in the time set by the launching officer, does the torpedo become ready for its destructive business.

The turbine engine which drives the torpedo through the water is of the balanced type; that is, two turbine wheels revolve in opposite directions, each driving two four-bladed propellers in opposite directions. This is to prevent the torpedo from rolling in the water and keeps it on an even keel. The engine weighs forty-five pounds and develops as high as 125 horse power.

KEEPS TORPEDO UNDER WATER.

The driving gear is a mechanism for keeping the torpedo at a constant level in the water at about six feet below the surface. It is a pendulum scheme which controls lateral and horizontal rudders. Should the torpedo slant downward, the swinging out of place of the pendulum sets the rudders into proper position to restore the torpedo to its proper level.

The most wonderful, perhaps, of all the intricate mechanisms in the Bliss-Leavitt torpedo is the gyroscope, which automatically steers the torpedo. As nearly every one knows, the gyroscope wheel is a peculiar defier, seemingly, of the laws of gravity. A rapidly rotating wheel within rings, it will tend to maintain the original axis at which the spinning wheel was started. Therefore, if for any reason the torpedo should be deflected to the right or left from its original course, the gyroscope, keeping true to its original direction, will operate vertical rudders, bringing the torpedo back to its first line of flight. The gyroscope might with truth be called the pilot of the craft.

The afterbody is the compartment wherein is contained the turbine engine and the gyroscope.

The tail of the torpedo, like the tail of a fish, is intended solely for propulsion purposes. Within it passes the shaft to the screw propellers. It also contains a reversing mechanism, which is necessary to drive the propellers in an opposite direction to prevent the entire torpedo from rolling about. On the outside of the tail are four large fins designed to keep the torpedo square in the water.

EXHAUSTIVE TESTS MADE.

So exacting are the requirements in torpedo construction, and so accurate must they be in the performance of tests of each finished torpedo must be made both in the factories and in the ocean by the Bliss Company, before it can be delivered to the government.

There are over a thousand men employed in the factories of the Bliss Company—all expert mechanics in their particular branches. Before taking the finished torpedoes out for sea testing, they are rigidly tested by specially designed machinery to determine the accuracy with which each working part is adjusted. In fact, all through the process of manufacture, each piece or part is carefully tested for its strength and perfection.

The final tests are made under the scrutiny of the United States government engineers at the company's proving grounds, or waters, rather, at Sag Harbor, L. I., in Noyac Bay. These requirements must be positively complied with: At a range of 4000 yards a buoy is set at which the torpedo is fired, and which it must strike in three successive shots. A horizontal deviation of 50 yards and a vertical variation of 18 inches from the center of the buoy is all that is allowed.

The torpedo is launched or shot from its tube by means of compressed air, at an initial velocity slightly in excess of the required speed of the torpedo when under its own propulsion.

TWO HUNDRED EACH YEAR.

These tests at Noyac Bay are conducted until the freezing over again the following winter. This is necessary because of the large number of torpedoes which the Bliss Company manufactures—about 200 each year—every one of which must be put through a long series of rigid tests. The company maintains for this purpose a specially built and equipped barge or "gun-boat," called the Eliphalet W. Bliss, and a fleet of small launches which are used in gathering up the torpedoes after they have been shot out of the target. The launches tow the projectiles back to the "gun-boat," where they are hoisted aboard for further testing.

Occasionally a torpedo runs wild in the bay from some derangement of its mechanism, and a long, careful search is instituted for the disobedient submarine floating a few feet under the water's surface. Then, too, a torpedo has acted so badly once in a while as to take in water and sink to the bottom of the harbor. In these rare cases the company has to send down a diver to search for and recover the torpedo. A Bliss-Leavitt torpedo is worth from $5000 to $7000, so extreme measures are taken when necessary for their recovery.

In this connection it should be stated that torpedoes in war time are expected to sink, should they fail in their mission. To accomplish this, a special contrivance is attached to each, wherewith flooding valves are opened after the expiration of a time-clock adjustment, and the dangerous demon sinks to the place where it was intended its victim should go. Were it not for this, the vessels of the attacking fleet would be as liable to destruction from running into their own submerged floating torpedoes as would the enemy's.

night with Angel Tampasas, an Italian boy who conducts a popcorn stand at Fifth and Central avenue, the victim.

The matter was reported to the police yesterday. Tampasas said he had been approached by two Italians he had never seen before, but who apparently had considerable money. They suggested that they all go into business and that Tampasas act as treasurer and keep the money. He agreed instantly.

A small tin box was secured and he was told to put all his money into it so as to show "good faith." He had but $210 and he placed it all in the box. The older Italians then left the room. Some time afterward when Tampasas could not resist the temptation to open the box and look at his own money and that of his friends who had also placed their funds in the box he pried the cover loose and gazed at several packages of brown wrapping paper.

The Italians had "switched" boxes.

PICKET LOSES ON APPEAL.

CONVICTION OF MESSENGER IS SUSTAINED.

Superior Court Upholds Verdict of Lower Tribunal in the Case of J. Eagen—Hope of Escape on the Point of a Technicality Is Shattered—Attorney's Verbosity Fails.

The verdict returned by the jury which convicted J. Eagen, a messenger boy, of picketing in front of the A.D.T. office on Third street about the middle of November, was upheld by Judge Willis of the Superior Court Friday afternoon and the hope to which the unionites clung was swept away.

Eagen was convicted within five minutes of the time the jury retired. He was sentenced to $50 or fifty days in the City Jail by Police Judge Rose, and, acting on the belief that a technicality would free him, Eagen announced that he would appeal.

The case consumed several days in the Police Court when it was first tried. Eagen had no witnesses in his behalf, and did not take the stand. His case, viewed from the side of the court attaches, was the "flattest" ever tried in the police courts.

The prosecution had but one witness, but he was a good one. It is generally conceded that the evidence of the prosecution must be corroborated, but the manner in which the witness who had been approached by Eagen told his story, convinced the jury instantly. When no witnesses were placed upon the stand by the defense and the latter was seen to depend upon the verbosity of the lawyer for the defense, who had been brought down from San Francisco, the verdict was seen at a glance.

In summing up his case, Assistant City Prosecutor Nimmo declared that, though his witnesses had been few, and in fact he had produced but one who was actually approached by Eagen, he still claimed a verdict of guilty because Eagen had not produced any evidence whatever to combat the evidence of the one witness who had been approached.

It was then that the unonite attorney conceived the wild idea that Nimmo had committed an error, and that he had made a technicality upon which the case could be appealed.

The unionite attorney carefully prepared his appeal then, erroneously quoting Prosecutor Nimmo with having called the attention of the jury to the fact that Eagen had not taken the stand in his own behalf. As it is not permissible for the jury to accept the defendant's reticence to testify in his own behalf as an admission of his guilt, the unionite attorney thought he had a great point, but he overlooked the fact that the prosecutor did not say anything of the kind.

When the case was called in the Superior Court and the arguments were opened to secure an appeal of the case, Judge Willis simply referred to the records, discovering that the unionite attorney was "in wrong," and dismissed the appeal.

The conviction of Eagen is a hard blow to the unionites. Overconfident by the previous disagreements of juries they had become very bold. Open picketing was beginning to become common, but now a real case of bold and brazen picketing has become rare. In place of the old form, the unionites have recently taken to hovering about the local industries like gnats hoping to intimidate by their numbers.

It is getting so, however, that it takes two or three now to look like a complete man, as the habit of the unionites to shun everything that looked like toil has not been conducive to corpulent forms.

LEMON RATE HEARING.

Final Testimony Heard Yesterday Before Court of Commerce Which Takes Case Under Advisement.

Final testimony in the lemon rate hearing was heard in the United States Court of Commerce yesterday. The case was taken under advisement until April 3, when the five judges of the court will convene in bank at Washington, D. C.

At the same time the magistrates will determine the appeal from the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the switching charge cases.

In the latter litigation there is involved no dispute of facts and the higher tribunal will simply have to pass upon the law.

As these were the only cases set for hearing before this court during its session here, adjournment was taken until March 30, when the court will convene in Chicago. The next session will be very brief, and the judge will move on to Washington to join his colleagues.

The fight in the lemon case was to obtain a reversal of the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission reducing the rate from $1.15 to $1.

Th Commission decided that the railroads have no right to charge $2.50 for each car they set at warehouses in San Francisco, San Diego and this city. The railroads appealed on the ground that the extra service required in switching the cars entailed additional expense which might reasonably be charged to the shippers or recipients of the goods.

THIEF SELLS HORSE.

A well-dressed man hired a horse and buggy at the Blue Front livery stable, No. 307 South Los Angeles street, yesterday afternoon and sold it a short time later at a stable at No. 556 Central avenue. The proprietor of the latter place became suspicious a short time after he had made the purchase and telephoned to the Central Police Station. His message was received in the detective bureau within a few minutes after the complaint of the stable where the horse had [illegible]

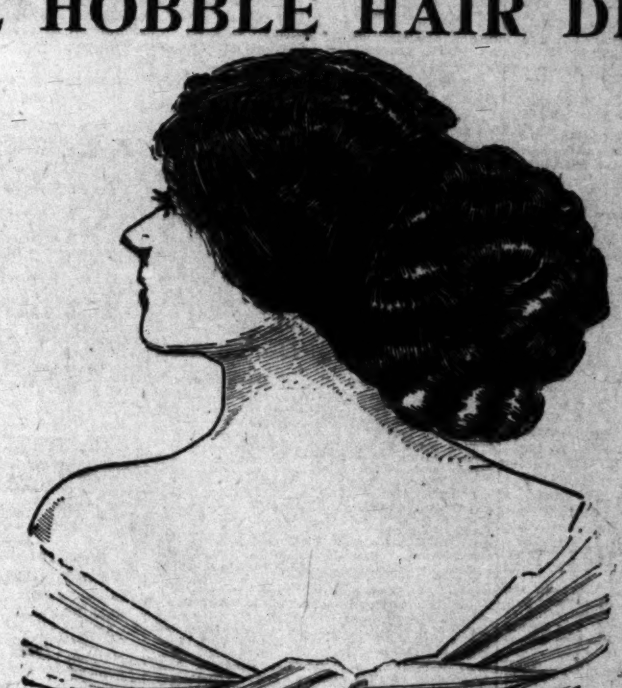
THE HOBBLE HAIR DRESS



HERPICIDE CO.

Model and Description by Madam Lulu Butler,
Principal, Madam Butler's School of Beautifying Arts, Detroit, Mich.

THE HOBBLE (See Note.) Wave the hair entirely around the head. A side parting is made and that portion of the hair brought to the crown of the head and formed into puffs and ringlets.

The main portion, or unwaved center of the hair is fastened and made into puffs and ringlets which are pinned to a wire frame covered with crepe wool. It is this wire foundation which makes the hair stand out. The finishing band of ribbon produces the Hobble effect.

Newbro's Herpicide
Makes Elaborate Hairdressing Possible

Hair that is uneven, dull and brittle will not work up nicely and never looks tidy and pretty. Regular and intelligent applications of Herpicide will do much to insure everyone having a nice head of hair. A truly wonderful scalp prophylactic, Herpicide destroys dandruff, keeps the head and scalp clean and sanitary and stimulates the flow of nourishment to the glands. It prevents the hair from falling out and on account of its exquisite and refreshing odor Herpicide is a most delightful and elegant dressing. The terrible itching which indicates the presence of dandruff usually stops almost instantly. Herpicide contains no grease and does not stain or dye.

LOS ANGELES EXCHANGE.

Trading Is Heavy in Consolidated Midway and Mexican Petroleum Common—Latter Makes a Loss.

California Midway was more active than usual on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange yesterday and closed at 56 1-4, a good gain. Consolidated Midway was again a center of interest, and thousands of shares changed hands during the one call. A substantial gain was scored in this issue.

Mexican Petroleum common, probably because of the war talk, lost a half-point and was a very heavy trader. Palmer Oil again made a gain of two and a half points, closing at 1.47 1-2 bid.

Twelve shares of German American Savings Bank sold at 335.

WHEAT STILL ON UPWARD FLIGHT

NERVOUSNESS CONTINUES OVER HESSIAN FLY.

Crop Experts Hurried Out to Investigate and Report on Extent of Damage Done in Illinois and Chicago—Oats Close Shade Off and Provisions Take Slump.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, March 11.—Nervousness regarding possible alarming discoveries by crop experts who had been hurried out from here to investigate rumors of Hessian fly infection in Illinois and Indiana wheat fields turned prices suddenly upward today. Closing figures were firm at a net advance of ⅝ to ½c. Corn finished ⅛ to ¼c higher than last night; oats unchanged to ⅛c off, and provisions from 2½ to 22½c, lower. May wheat ranged from 90⅝ to 91⅛@91¼c, with last sales ⅝c up, at 91⅛c. May corn fluctuated between 49⅝ and 50¼c, closing firm at 50@50⅛c, a net gain of ⅛ to ¼c. Cash corn was steady. No. 2 yellow finished at 47½@48¼c. May oats touched as high and low points limits, 31⅜ and 30⅞@31c, with the close ⅛c off at 31⅛c. There was no special demands for hog products. Accordingly the market dragged lower and in the end was 15 to 22½c under last night for pork; 2½ to 5c down for lard, and 5 to 7½c for ribs.

Cash quotations were as follows: Flour, steady; winter patents, 3.90@4.30; straights, 4.00@4.80; spring patents, 3.90@4.90; straights, 3.00@4.10; No. 2 rye, 87⅞; feed or mixing barley, 60@75; fair to choice malting, 90@99; flax seed, No. 1 southwestern, 2.55; No. 1 northwestern, 2.68; timothy seed, 11.25; clover, 14.95; mess pork, per bbl., 18.25@18.50; lard, per 100 lbs., 9.02½; short ribs, sides, (loose) 8.75@9.50.

New York Cotton Market.

[Special Service to The Times by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members of the New York Stock Exchange, 118 West Fourth st., Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, March 11.—Logan & Bryan's letter says: "Ignoring all questions of the mill stocks of raw cotton being smaller than a year ago and ignoring the question of the world's shelves carrying less dry goods, we have the indisputable evidence that the cotton mills of the world have thus far this season taken 534,000 more bales than to same date last year and part of this gain over last year has been made since January 1, since which date although daily offering protests of bad trade the world's mills have actually taken 3,059,000 bales against 2,554,000 during same time last year, an excess of nearly 20 per cent. a percentage which if maintained through the balance would carry the year-end mills takings to 12,600,000 (an unthinkable quantity as the cotton would not be attainable.) To complete the mills' takings up to 12,000,000 we merely have to ask them to take 4,252,000 for the balance of the year against 4,060,000 last year, an excess of barely 5 per cent. over last summer and it is to be remembered that the mills were largely shut down last summer and working on short time. A 12,000,000 bale crop will leave no larger visible supply than we had at the end of last year, but it will leave more hungry spindles and more bare shelves than a year ago and it is quite possible the crop is under 12,000,000."

Official Figures of February Exports Show Striking Increase Over Those of Corresponding Month in Previous Year—Bank Statement Shows Loss in Cash Reserve.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, March 11.—Movements of a number of securities which are ordinarily inactive were the chief characteristics of today's stock market. Wabash 4's and Wabash-Pittsburg Terminal certificates were dealt in to an unusually large extent, and at one time the Terminals sold 3 points up. Canadian Pacific made another high record. Federal Sugar lost 5 points and Central Leather lost more than a point. Business, as in the last few days, was light, almost to the verge of stagnation. Official figures of February exports showed a striking increase from the corresponding month last year, being $49,545,000 in 1910, and $67,968,000 this year. The total for eight months ending with February is $718,142,000, contrasted with $594,421,000 in the preceding period. The weekly bank statement revealed the expected cash loss of about $4,000,000, the first shrinkage reported in several months. The bond market was steady. Total sales, par value, $2,256,000. United States 2's advanced a quarter, and 3's and 4's lost a quarter on call during the week.

USES NEW ROAD TO CONFIDENCE.

COMPANY FOLLOWS PROPOSED LAW IN ORGANIZATION.

Pacific States Finance and Holding Company, Composed of California Men, Will Do a Fidelity, Surety and Bank Deposit Insurance Business—The Officers.

The Pacific States Finance and Holding Company, with a capitalization of $1,000,000, is the most recent addition to the great financial institutions of Los Angeles. It is an insurance company that will engage in a general fidelity, surety and bank deposit insurance business. The need of a company of this character in California may be fully recognized when it is known that during the year 1909 the foreign concerns operating here collected over $650,000 in gross premiums from California business men, out of which they returned less than $50,000 for losses.

There is now before the Senate bill No. 265, which limits the amount of money that may be expended in the organization of a company to 15 per cent. of the capital, exclusive of surplus. The Pacific States Finance and Holding Company will complete its organization in full compliance with the provisions of bill No. 265, although it has not yet become a law. The men at the head of the new company are in hearty sympathy with the proposed law.

It is a well known fact that many insurance companies organized in the past have used from 25 to 50 per cent. of the capital in organization expenses, feeling that such a course was necessary in order to secure good stock salesmen. The Pacific States company, in obeying the law before it is a law, is taking an advanced step in the way of establishing itself in the public confidence.

The officers of the new company are: N. Blackstock, president; Niles Pease, vice-president and treasurer; H. Perk, Jr., secretary; directors, Carl F. Schader of Ocean Park, A. Levy of Oxnard, Frank X. Pfaffinger, Baird Pallette, F. S. Taggart and F. M. Bruster of Los Angeles, and Charles F. Blackstock of Oxnard. Messrs. Pallette and Perk have had wide experience in the insurance business, and the other officials are men of large affairs. It is the plan of the Pacific States company to distribute its stock among the representative business men of the Pacific States territory.

WOMEN FIGHT CONSTITUTION.

INDIANA SUFFRAGISTS OPPOSE NEW INSTRUMENT.

Leader Declares Democratic Party Will Be Sorry "It Didn't Pick Us Up," and Predicts Organization That Will Cause Legislature to Sit Up and Take Notice.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

INDIANAPOLIS (Ind.) March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The new Constitution proposed for Indiana will never be ratified by the people of the State if the suffragettes and the women of the Indiana Woman's School League are successful in the anti-Constitution campaign, which they inaugurated at a stormy meeting this afternoon. An organized movement will be begun immediately to arouse sentiment against the adoption of the instrument.

"If that Constitution is adopted," declared one of the speakers, "the women of Indiana will not be granted suffrage for years."

The speakers, many of whom are prominent socially, were not backward in expressing their opinions of the Democratic party.

"The Democratic party will be sorry it did not 'pick us up,'" declared Dr. Amelia Keller. She said that by the time the Congress convened again, the women of the State would be so thoroughly organized that the Legislature would realize who was "agin' the government."

Mrs. W. T. Barnes declared that if the women of the State failed in their attempt to get the people on their side they would resort to the injunction and in that manner defeat the Constitution. She said that the present Constitution had endured since 1851 and that women of the State preferred the old document to the one proposed by the last Legislature.

Mrs. Felix McWhirter, wife of a former Prohibition presidential nominee, asserted that the votes for women would bring better men to the Congressional halls. "We do not say that we will make everything good," she said, "but the women will improve the morals of the people."

She told how the women of Indianapolis had obtained a matron for the police station when practically every man derided the idea. "Now they would not do without a matron," she declared.

Miss Belle Ohair said she believed that the proposed Constitution had been directed against suffrage for women and advocated a State-wide organization to combat the forces working to prevent equal suffrage.

TOWN LETS OPPORTUNITY SLIP.

Glendale Will Not Install Exhibit at Lands and Products Exposition as Announced.

GLENDALE, March 11.—After several days of earnest work, E. D. Goode, E. U. Emery and E. B. Riggs have given up the proposition of having an exhibit from this city in the Pacific Land and Products exhibition which will be held in the Al Malikah Shrine coliseum in Los Angeles from March 18 to April 2. A meeting was called at the high school auditorium late this week to which but few of the residents turned out. Efforts were made toward soliciting the necessary money to carry out plans and designs, but those in charge failed to meet with any support on the part of the residents and business men. In the exhibit Glendale was allotted a space 10x24 feet and the plans were to arrange the Glendale booth with the miniature of the Glendale high school, which was used in the Pasadena rose tournament, in the background.

The movement was being backed by the Glendale Chamber of Commerce, but this body did not receive the support of other improvement organizations and civic bodies. Those who were boosting the move have informed Mr. Munger, manager of the exhibition, that Glendale will not be represented and the allotted space is not being reserved. The Glendale Chamber of Commerce feels deeply the opportunity Glendale is missing to boost the town.

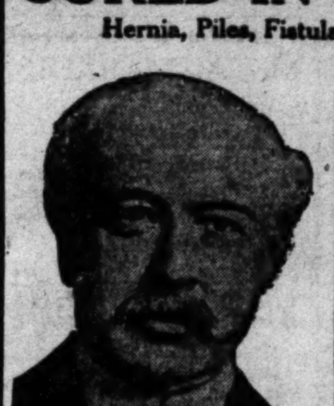
NEWS BRIEFS.

The Glendale trustees are showing much indignation and concern over the proposed legislation whereby one city may be consolidated with another against its will. The trustees have ordered that letters be sent to the Glendale Chamber of Commerce and the Glendale Valley Improvement Association with the request that they join with the trustees in sending resolutions to our representatives in opposition to the proposed legislation and that the city attorney be requested to prepare the same.

The annual meeting of the membership of the First Presbyterian Church of Glendale will be held at the church on the evening of March 29. The reports of the different departments of the church's work will be heard and officers elected. The accounts of all the societies of the church will be audited by a committee appointed by the session on the Monday evening previous. J. E. Colvin is chairman of this committee.

CURED IN FIVE DAYS

Hernia, Piles, Fistula and Varicose Veins



H. J. TILLOTSON, M.D.
Established 30 Years.

I am the only Specialist in Los Angeles who is sole owner of his office and equipment, who does not advertise a fictitious name and photograph. I publish my true photograph, correct name, personally conduct my office. I am the longest established, most successful and reliable, as medical credentials and press records prove. Imitation of my copyrighted announcement is an evidence that I am a bona fide Specialist. I make this statement that you will know you consult a Specialist, who sees and treats patients personally. I possess skill and experience acquired in such a way that no other can share, and should not be classed with medical companies. Experience is the safe standard by which judgment may be valued, and it is unwise and expensive to embrace the statements of medical companies. It is impossible for a medical company to attend college. Companies have no diploma or license to practice medicine in California or any other State. Medical companies usually are named after a doctor. A portrait, whose personality and identity are indefinite, is selected and published as the legitimate specialist of the office. Hired substitutes, ordinary doctors with questionable ability give consultation, examination and treatment.

A thorough investigation should be made by every ailing person as to the specialist he consults. Duty and destiny to self and those who depend upon you demand the best medical attention. I have the ability and can give you this service. I have always charged a very reasonable fee, so that my services may be obtained by any man who sincerely desires to be cured. I make no misleading statements or unbusinesslike propositions; neither do I desire to be particularly independent, and I would like to have you for a patient, if you will come to me on a strictly professional basis, and the inducements that I offer, which are my ability and thirty years' successful experience. Time-saving treatment and guarantee of cure of certain diseases.

NO MONEY REQUIRED TO COMMENCE TREATMENT. Many patients have no confidence in their doctor, because he demands pay before a cure has been effected, and there are many who have been misinformed about their condition, or through unsuccessful treatment have become skeptical and think there is no cure for them. I want an opportunity to treat such cases. It makes no difference about the financial part, as I accept pay for my services as benefits are derived, when I am satisfied the patient is reliable. Health is capital at interest. I will prove my ability to cure you before asking pay for my services.

WRITTEN GUARANTEE.

Dr. Tillotson's written guarantee means a cure or no pay for services. I guarantee to cure certain diseases or refund every dollar you have paid me for my services. My services cost you nothing unless I cure your Varicose Veins, Hernia, Piles, Fissures, Ulcerations, or any disease I guarantee to cure. My terms are reasonable and no more than you are willing and able to pay.

Many Cases Cured Permanently in One TREATMENT. Most Time-Saving. Most Natural. Most Safe. No Detention from Occupation, Family or Home. A Radical and Permanent Cure. I Will Give $500 to Any Charity as a Guarantee That Every Statement in This Announcement is True.

I cure rapidly, painlessly and at small expense. Cured Patients are My Testimonials, however, I do not make patient's Names Merchandise by publishing them. I will give conclusive evidence of my merit which is obtained and maintained by ability. I invite you to come to my office; I will explain my treatment for Hernia, Piles, Fistula, Varicose Veins, Pelvic, Nervous, Blood, Kidney, Bladder and Rectal Diseases. I will give you free a physical examination; if necessary, a microscopical and chemical analysis of secretions to determine existing pathological and bacteriological conditions. Every person should take advantage of this opportunity to learn their true condition. Certainty of cure is what you want.

Varicose Veins

In the cure of Varicose Veins, Rupture and Associate Diseases of the Pelvic Region, I am successful in bringing to bear the curative power of Nature's forces in such a manner as to supplant the old-time, wide-open surgical operations. Once it required several weeks to cure these conditions and the method which some still use is such as to endanger the life of the patient and require a long period of convalescence. Now an absolute cure can be accomplished in a few days and with perfect safety.

TRUSSES SELDOM CURE RUPTURE.

Disregard for existing Hernias has cost many lives. The smallest hernias are the most dangerous to life, because of the increased liability to strangulation. I am aware that a great deal of fraud has been practiced on the public in connection with the alleged cure of Rupture, and when I say positively that I cure Rupture, to stay cured, I do not expect any one to accept my statement without investigation of my professional work. My claim to your confidence is based on absolute facts, accomplished results. A personal consultation. I will make a free examination and can explain every detail of your Hernia and demonstrate to you the curative value of the method I have discovered. I invite the careful investigation of any person who sincerely desires to be cured. I cure Rupture in selected cases, with perfect safety, and entail no suffering, and do not detain you from occupation under Written Guarantee. Many cases cured to stay cured by one treatment.

PILES, FISTULA, RECTAL DISEASES.

These diseases are very common; most frequently found in persons of middle, or advanced age; are exceedingly annoying, often very painful and sometimes very dangerous, and frequently unfit one for pleasure or occupation. My treatment and successes are the result of years of experience; my treatment is kindly applied. I cure Piles without cutting. Some cases are cured by one or more treatments. If I do not cure your Piles, Fistula and other Rectal Diseases, my treatment does not cost you anything. Gentleness in treatment comes from treating many cases, so I guarantee a cure of Piles, Fistula, Fissures, Ulcers and all curable Rectal Diseases.

LIFE'S BLOOD STREAM.

The great clearinghouse of a person's body is the blood stream. Your blood cells are your bank account. Your only defense against disease is by and through blood corpuscles. My blood-making, blood-purifying remedies have been tried and proven. My blood-cell remedies nourish, strengthen and increase the blood cells and nourish the nerve centers. I want to prove to you at my expense that my blood-making, blood-purifying remedies give power to weak brains and life to nerve centers.

KIDNEY AND BLADDER DISEASES.

With these diseases you may have more complications than are presented by any other diseased organs. By my searching illumination of the bladder I determine accurately the diseases and by my microscopical examination and urinalysis I make sure of the condition of the kidneys, thus laying foundations for scientific treatment.

Free Consultation

I offer not only FREE Consultation and Advice, but of every case that comes to me I will make a Careful Examination and Diagnosis without charge. Ailing persons should not neglect this opportunity to get expert opinion about their trouble.

A WORD OF ADVICE.

Before beginning treatment elsewhere, take my friendly advice and ask the doctor to tell you of his qualifications to cure you, and then be sure he shows you the proofs of his ability. Mere talk means nothing; promises and guarantees without ability behind them are of no value to you or any one else. After you are satisfied and begin your treatment it is up to you to see the promises are carried out. If you should be unfortunate enough to select the wrong doctor and find it out in time, come to me and I will be glad to do all that can be done for you.

KIDNEY AND BLADDER DISEASES.

You will have more complications with Kidney and Bladder diseases than are presented by many other organs that are diseased. With my exact microscopical examinations and urine analysis and searching illumination of the bladder I diagnose the diseased conditions of the kidneys and make careful preparations for the correct treatment and future care.

VARICOSE VEINS.

Varicose veins do more to destroy human vitality than many other diseases put together. They sap up the strength of the body. You come to my office with your varicose veins, and you leave me an absolutely well man. One treatment is all that is necessary. Not weeks nor months of endless doctoring, but one single visit. I permanently cure you without the loss of time, no pain whatever, and no after trouble.

I will cheerfully donate $1000 to any charity if any statement in this announcement is not absolutely true.

ECZEMA BROKE OUT ON FACE AND BODY

When Two Months Old. She Scratched, as It Itched. Did Not Sleep for More than a Week. Was In a Terrible Condition.

Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and In Two Weeks She Was Well.

"When my baby was two months old, she had eczema and rash very badly. I noticed that her face and body broke out very suddenly, thick, and red as a coal of fire. I did not know what to do. The doctor ordered castile soap and powders, but they did no good. She would scratch, as it itched, and she cried, and did not sleep for more than a week. One day I saw in the paper the advertisement of the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, so I got them and tried them at once. My baby's face was as a cake of sores.

"When I first used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, I could see a difference. In color it was redder. I continued with them. My baby was in a terrible condition. I used the Cuticura Remedies [Soap and Ointment] four times a day, and in two weeks she was quite well. The Cuticura Remedies healed her skin perfectly, and her skin is now pretty and fine through using them. I also use the Cuticura Soap to-day, and will continue to, for it makes a lovely skin. Every mother should use the Cuticura Remedies. They are good for all sores, and the Cuticura Soap is also good for shampooing the hair, for I have tried it. I tell all my friends how the Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured my baby of eczema and rash." (Signed) Mrs. Drew, 210 W. 18th St., New York City, Aug. 28, 1910.

For more than a generation, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment have afforded the purest, sweetest and most economical treatment for affections of the skin, that torture, disfigure, itch, burn, crust, scale and destroy sleep. A cake of Cuticura Soap (25c.) and a box of Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are often sufficient. Sold throughout the world. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., sole props., Boston, for free 32-page Cuticura book on how to treat skin and scalp troubles.

Great Hall Will Be Ready for Saturday Opening.

Imperial Valley Towns Join in Big Event.

At midnight yesterday the host of exhibitors at the Pacific Lands and Products Exposition began the installation of exhibits in Shrine Auditorium. That great hall will be a scene of animation from now until the opening of the land show next Saturday.

Even though it is now too late for exhibitors to get floor space, applications continue to pour into the exposition offices in the Grosse building. All the space that is left anywhere in the great building is a few feet here and there which is available for small concessions. It is expected that the last of these little areas will be closed out early this week.

The work of decorating the auditorium will be pushed until the last moment. The large replicas of the Owens River aqueduct and the harbor, which are to be interesting features of the show, are nearing completion, as is also the model of the city market.

A caller at exposition headquarters yesterday was Charles W. Hays, who brought news of extensive preparations that were going on in the Imperial Valley for a comprehensive exhibit from that rich section. All the towns of the valley are joined together for one splendid display.

T. F. Burke, secretary of the Board of Trade of Bakersfield, wired that the Kern county exhibits are on the way to Los Angeles. He added that arrangements are being made for a special train excursion for Kern county bay, which has been set for the 29th inst., and of which he and R. G. Baltnaugh will be in charge. A big crowd is expected from Bakersfield and its vicinity on this day.

George L. Walker of the Palmer Oil Company left San Francisco last night to take charge of the installation of the exhibit of that company. This display, it is said, will be highly instructive in character.

In order to carry out its decorative and display plans at the exposition, the Janss Investment Company leased several hundred additional square feet at Shrine Auditorium last week. In one of the new booths the company will hold one of the largest poultry shows ever seen in Southern California. In another section will be exploited citrus lands of Yorba Linda and La Sierra Heights.

The managers of the land show have set aside a day to be known as "Suburban Homes Day" on which the great opportunities of the San Fernando Valley and other close-in suburban districts will be set forth. The day will be marked with lectures, stereopticon views, and the distribution of souvenirs.

BAKERSFIELD PLANS INVASION.

TWO HUNDRED BOOSTERS TO TAKE THE ANGEL CITY.

They Are Convinced That All the World Recognizes Their Paramount Petroleum Importance But They Have Other Assets Which They Would Tell About.

BAKERSFIELD, March 11.—Kern county will send a special train with 150 to 200 boosters to the Pacific Land and Products Exposition at Los Angeles on March 29, which has been set aside by the management as Kern county day.

This decision was reached last night at a mass meeting called by the Board of Trade, the Realty Board and the Merchants' Association jointly, and a committee appointed to sell tickets to assure the special train reported today that there was no question that the necessary number would be disposed of. Great interest was manifest last night and today in the project. Prizes have been offered for the best suggestions for badges, and advertising committee is interesting residents in different parts of the county in the project, and Boards of Trade in other Kern county towns have been asked to cooperate.

The purpose of the expedition is to advertise Kern county's agricultural resources among the tourists congregated in Los Angeles and the residents of the southern part of the State who will attend the exposition.

Kern county oil is advertised all over the country, and the boosters will not undertake to add to the county's fame as the greatest petroleum producing county in the West, but it is the belief here that Kern county's agricultural and horticultural opportunities and particularly her citrus belt are not appreciated, and it will be the effort of the delegates to the exposition to bring these features of the county's resources to the front.

Kern county has secured space in the exposition and will be represented by an oil exhibit, part of which will be a model of a derrick built true to scale and operating a miniature pump with a small motor. Grains and oranges will constitute the chief remaining features. Secretary T. F. Burke of the Board of Trade will go to Los Angeles with the exhibit in a few days and will remain in charge during the exposition.

The special train from this city will start on the evening of March 28, and will return the night of the 29th. A part of the plan not yet fully developed is to bring back a trainload of tourists and home seekers. The Kern county delegation will wear conspicuous badges and Kern county features will dominate the day's programme at the exposition. The committees working out the details are N. R. Solomon, H. G. Parsons and H. A. Blodget, on General Arrangements and Programme; Homer Katze, Dr. McNew and Martin Coyne, Advertising, and E. L. Willow, R. G. Ballagh and Roy Brown, Soliciting.

DINUBA WANTS TO CELEBRATE.

Valley Town Arranges for a Festival to Be Given During Month of April Under Commercial Organizations.

DINUBA, March 11.—Commercial organizations of this city have made arrangements for a big celebration which is to be held this year on the 29th of April. During the past, Dinuba has been somewhat famous for her Thanksgiving celebrations. It is the plan to change this time to bring it nearer to the raisin day festival at Fresno, with the purpose of attracting some of the attendants from the neighbor city to the north.

Field sports will occupy the morning, for all of which liberal prizes will be offered and a large number of amusements are being provided for the evening hours. Among other features there will be a grand display of Dinuba section products which will occupy a prominently located pavilion.

WAS A VERTIBLE BLESSING.

Rain Storm Which Devastated Several Sections of State Was a Godsend to Porterville.

PORTERVILLE, March 11.—Although the total rainfall for the present storm, continuing until today has been almost one and one-half inches, the storm which has been so destructive in other portions of this State has been a veritable blessing to the grain fields and the orchards of the Porterville section.

Today when it seemed certain that a flood from the Tule River must be the result and at a time when the river bank was running full of water, a message from the hills brought the cheering tidings that the heavy rain had turned to snow, and much lower down on the hillsides than is usual for this time of year.

Damage during the present storm was confined to the washing out of about fifty feet of a temporary cribbing which had been built across the head of the Porter Slough to carry the P. N. E. Railroad.

WATER SUPPLY.

Work was completed today on the auxiliary well for the city water department, the bore showing an astonishing capacity. Although no perforating was completed up to today, the water stood 200 feet in depth in the casing, indicating that the total capacity of the bore will be close to 100 inches. This total, added to the present well in the east side residence district, will supply water enough for the city up to a population of 10,000 people. A new customer for the department was added today when the Southern Pacific Railroad shut down their pumping plant here and asked for connection of their tanks with the city water mains, water to be furnished to them at a special price on meter.

TO PREPARE BOOTH.

H. H. Davis, with a number of local workmen, left here this evening for Los Angeles, where they are to be in charge of the construction of the Porterville booth which is to be installed at the Land and Products Show to be held in the southern metropolis the last of this month.

F. L. Kennedy, the secretary of the Porterville Citrus Association, who has been placed in charge of securing the fruit for this exhibit, reported to the Chamber of Commerce today that he had procured nearly half a carload of extremely fine fruit. One of the features of the exhibit of which much is to be made will be several boxes of oranges which were picked and packed on the 20th day of October and which have kept in perfect condition, in spite of the fact that they have been given no care and have been allowed to remain upon the open floor of a packing house from that time until the present.

CHANGE LINES.

At the last moment several changes were made in the boundaries of the territory which it is proposed to annex to the city limits and as the description stands at the present time a total area of 560 acres will be added if the proposal carries and in this territory there will be a population of quite 500 people.

Members of the commercial organizations are busily engaged in a careful canvass of the territory and there is every indication that the proposal will be carried by a safe majority.

ESCONDIDO MAKES A CONTRACT.

Engages Lighting Service for Five Years—To Greatly Increased Street Illumination.

ESCONDIDO, March 11.—The city has entered into a five-year contract with the Escondido Utilities Company for the lighting of the city streets with 106 of the eighty-candle-power tungsten lights, which is an increase of about forty per cent. over the number of lamps used under the present contract.

Additional lamps will be installed where lights are needed in the existing system, and important extensions will be made, especial attention being given to roads used by automobiles in entering and departing from the city. On the north, Lime street will be equipped with lights to Washington street, and out Washington to Quince street, while on the south the lighting will be in force from Grand avenue to the city limits at Idaho street.

SCHOOL PLANS.

Addresses on the desirability of teaching domestic science and agriculture in the public schools were given at the High School hall last evening by three educators of the county, President E. L. Hardy of the State Normal School at San Diego, Mrs. Caldwell, also of the Normal School and H. J. Baldwin, superintendent of the county schools.

Escondido is the first High School in the county to take up the teaching of agriculture and the first to have a Parent-Teachers' Association. Today the plan of holding local teachers' institutes in the county was started by the holding of an institute in Escondido, the principal speakers being Prof. Hardy, Prof. Baldwin and Mrs. Caldwell.

FIGHT "INDUSTRIAL."

Arroyo Seco Chamber of Commerce Meeting Adopts Resolution Against Proposed Extension of District.

Resolutions condemning the proposed extension of the industrial district to Avenue 36 were adopted at a meeting of the Arroyo Seco Chamber of Commerce, held Friday evening at Miller's hall in Garvanza.

In support of the resolutions it was urged that such an extension would be prejudicial to the widening of Dayton avenue from Avenue 36 to the park at Avenue 35 and Pasadena avenue as an entrance to the Carlotta Boulevard.

There was an address by Rev. Dana W. Bartlett treating of city improvements and illustrated with stereopticon views.

A meeting of the chamber will be held Tuesday evening at the office of the secretary at Avenue 57 and Pasadena avenue to discuss measures to oppose the contemplated industrial extension.

LOWER RATES ALL SUMMER.

Railroads Announce Cheaper Tickets to West.

Many Thousands of Colonists Expected to Come.

President Ripley Compelled to Travel by Boat.

The big spring movement of colonists, which started Friday with its promise of 40,000 of them for Southern California, has been followed by the announcement of reduced round trip all-summer rates to California. The colonist traffic is on a one-way thirty-day rate, in effect from day before yesterday.

The summer tourist tickets will be sold from eastern points to California and return from June to September 30. The rate from Kansas City and other Missouri River cities will be $60; from Chicago and near-by points, $72.50; from St. Louis, Little Rock and New Orleans, $70; from St. Paul and Minneapolis, $73.50. There will be proportionately low rates from other points, including New York, Boston, Baltimore, Washington and Philadelphia.

The advance tide of the big spring colonist movement will reach Los Angeles Monday, a movement that the railroad men declare will be the biggest in the history of western railroading. John J. Byrne, assistant passenger traffic manager of the Santa Fe syestm, who has just returned here from the East, made a careful study of the conditions affecting this class of passenger traffic.

"While the spring colonist movement is generally not as heavy as the one in the fall of the year, actual investigation makes it safe to say that this year will see a larger movement of colonists into Arizona, Nevada, Utah, New Mexico and California than ever before. Recent visits with our agents in the East and the Middle West made it apparent to me that more people were coming West in the spring of 1911 than any one year hitherto. This view has been justified in the fact that this office has already been advised that twenty colonist cars have been reserved to handle the business from points along the Mississippi River. The movement is not confined alone to the Middle West States. They are coming from all section of the country. We are getting a great big share of the business from all parts of the country."

T. C. Peck, general passenger agent of the Salt Lake Railroad, is of the opinion that the bulk of the colonist movement will be from points west of the Mississippi River.

"The colonists will begin arriving tomorrow and Monday in Utah, Nevada and New Mexico, and Tuesday and Wednesday in Arizona and California, with the probability of a small advance guard from Colorado points arriving in Los Angeles Monday. The Salt Lake will handle about 300 a day during the thirty days the rates are in effect. The other two transcontinental lines centering here will handle 400 each a day, which will bring in about 1100 colonists a day for a month, a total of 35,000."

"We are informed that the colonist rush this year will be the biggest in the history of our railroad," said F. E. Batturs, general passenger agent of the Southern Pacific at Los Angeles.

Ripley Taken to a Boat.

In common with a good many others, E. P. Ripley, president of the Santa Fe railroad, took passage on the Santa Rosa, of the Pacific Coast Steamship Company, in order to reach his winter home at Santa Barbara. Ripley made the trip from Santa Barbara to Los Angeles by way of San Francisco, the valley lines and Barstow, but despite the fact that he is head of 10,000 miles of railroad, and privileged to ride free on the 205,000 other miles of railroad in the United States, he had to leave his luxurious private car in the Santa Fe yards in Los Angeles and journey to Santa Barbara by boat.

Mr. Ripley was averse to discussing the lemon rate case now pending before the recently-created commerce court beyond the statement that the Santa Fe is now transporting the lemons at a loss.

"We have done our best," said he, "to find a way to fix the cost of handling our business so as to determine what is a fair rate to charge. If any one knows of a better way we would be glad to know it. We voluntarily reduced the rate on lemons to aid the development of the industry, and raised it again when we believed the growers could reasonably afford to pay it.

"It is hard to make any statement as to the probable effect of the recent decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission refusing the proposed increase in rates. That is a problem for the immediate future to work out, but the railroads are not working over time planning expenditures for improvements until we know where we are going to get the money to make them.

"I said recently in The Times that the government is the most extravagant of all of the many extravagant institutions of the present time. Apropos of this the Santa Fe railroad could take over the postal system of the country and run it at a profit on the present rates charged for postage instead of the present deficit of $15,000,000 to $16,000,000.

"No," said Mr. Ripley, in response to a question, "there isn't any union station proposition pending for Los Angeles that I know anything about. The Times has a good idea in its suggestion for the improvement of the Los Angeles River bed and the use of the part not needed for the river channel as a great highway for transcontinental railroad lines, street car and vehicular traffic. It is the only logical highway artery into the city and so far as I can see the only way for relieving the constant traffic congestion that now exists on your uptown streets."

Mr. Ripley was accompanied to Los Angeles by W. B. Storey, chief engineer of the system, who is here on an annual tour of inspection of the lines of the company.

Soldiers All Through.

Yesterday completed the movement of United States troops through Los Angeles for the mobilization ordered at San Diego. The Eighth Infantry, which left Monterey Monday night, reached Los Angeles yesterday morning in two special trains, which were transferred to the Santa Fe tracks for the run to San Diego.

SPEEDER CHASER BETTER.

Frank L. Coe, the motorcycle patrolman who was injured when thrown against a telephone pole on Pico street while pursuing a speeder early in the morning of November 21, was removed from the California Hospital to his home, No. 1010 East Forty-second street, yesterday. "Pat," as he is generally called, is recovering rapidly.

ADVANCE IN WILMINGTON.

Three Business Buildings Under Construction and at Least Three Others to Be Started in Near Future.

WILMINGTON, March 11.—There are three fine new business buildings now under construction here and at least three others to be started in the near future. S. E. Kennedy of Long Beach, Dr. O. H. Mennett of Los Angeles and E. J. Gallehue of San Pedro are the prospective new builders and the combined cost of the structures they are arranging to put up will be in the neighborhood of $40,000, making the total for brick business blocks in Wilmington in the fiscal year more than $90,000. E. Tisnerat of Long Beach has the plans drawn for two brick business buildings on Seventh street, just east of Canal street, as has also Charles Menveg for one on his lots near Canal and Front streets, but neither of them has yet fully decided to go ahead.

The largest of the three structures about to go up will be Mr. Kennedy's, which will be located immediately south of the Masonic building. It will be 58x80 feet, with two stories and basement. The walls will be of brick and concrete. There will be no necessity for excavating, as the surrounding land is to be filled with dirt from the harbor to a height of seven feet. The one-story brick building now occupying this lot will be wrecked.

E. J. Gallehue's new building will be located a short distance south of Kennedy's and will be 30x70 feet, with two stories and basement. The walls will also be constructed of brick and concrete.

Dr. Mennett will build at the northeast corner of Canal and First streets, where he has a frontage of forty feet. This structure, which is to be of brick, will cover the entire width of the lot and have a depth of eighty feet. It is to be one story and basement.

WILL ATTEND RATE HEARING.

Attorney Will Go to Washington to Represent the San Pedro Traffic Bureau This Month.

SAN PEDRO, March 11.—Representing the San Pedro Traffic Bureau, Miner P. Goodrich, attorney and secretary of the organization, will leave Monday for Washington. He will appear before the Interstate Commerce Commission when the Pacific Coast terminal rate hearings come up March 20.

The railroads have asked the commission to except all California terminals, whether on the sea coast or in the interior, from the provisions of the long and short haul clause of the new railroad law.

The Traffic Bureau will contend that only seaports are entitled to terminal rates and that the new law does not contemplate any other exceptions to the long and short haul clause save to meet water competition.

The contention will be made that the lowest rate to which interior points are entitled is the seaboard terminal plus the local back, provided the combined terminal rate and local is less than the intermediate transcontinental haul.

The Traffic Bureau is supported by practically the entire business interests here and ample funds have been raised to fight the case.

Visalia.

PIONEER DIES OF APOPLEXY.

RESIDENT OF SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY THIRTY YEARS.

Two Men Who Gave Their Names as Joseph Gore and Frank Clay Perpetrate the Ancient Trick of Counting Both Ends of a Roll of Currency.

VISALIA, March 11.—Hezekiah Mullens, who has been a resident of this city for the past thirty years and who was one of the most widely-known of the older families of Visalia, died at his home on the south side here last evening, after an illness of less than an hour. Yesterday Mr. Mullen was in his usual health. Last night he spent the evening as usual, listening to his younger daughter, Dorothy, read to him. He retired at 9 o'clock, which is his usual hour, saying that he felt badly. His daughter did some small services for him, and leaving the room for a moment, returned to find that he was dead. Death was doubtless due to apoplexy.

Mr. Mullens was a native of New York and came to the Visalia section almost thirty years ago. He has made his home here almost continuously ever since. He was widely known and a highly-respected citizen. He was 65 years of age, and leaves a widow and three children, Dorothy, of this city, Mrs. Annie Williams of Oakdale, and Mrs. H. H. Davis of Porterville.

As there was no physician in attendance, an inquest is in progress by Coroner Locey, although there can be small question as to the facts.

AGED TRICK.

Giving their names as Joseph Gore and Frank Clay, when they were arrested, two suspicious looking characters were placed in jail here yesterday afternoon on a charge of having worked a short-change game on D. V. Lester, the cashier of a Main-street store.

Lester did not discover that he had been made the victim of the old but clever game of counting both ends of a quantity of paper money, until after the men had been gone from his store quite half an hour. Their greed proved their undoing. Lester went out to discover the men on his own hook and found them shortly afterward engaged in an attempt to work the same game on another unwary Main-street merchant.

ZEST ADDED.

Zest was added to the city campaign when Mayor O. R. Orr announced today that he would be a candidate for re-election, and that he would go before the voters without pledge as to his actions in the matter of license. As this is the attitude which is insisted upon by the wets, this declaration is in effect a declaration of sympathy with the cause of high license. With this announcement from Orr the wets now have a full ticket in the field, four of the five candidates for the City Council being the members of the Council for last year. While Orr is personally popular, it is very doubtful if he can be elected on a "wet" ticket.

ARREST SUITCASE SUSPECT.

James Davis, believed to be the man who has recently stolen a large number of suitcases from street cars, was arrested yesterday by Detectives Beaumont and Roberts. Davis was taken into custody as he stepped from a street car on Broadway. When pressed by the detectives, he gave up sufficient information to enable them to recover four of the stolen cases. Davis was released from Folsom last October after having served five years for similar offenses.

DR. ALLIOT HONORED.

Following the resignation of Prof. Jacquard Auclair, who is about to return to France to pursue long-delayed literary work, Dr. Hector Alliot has been appointed local representative of the Alliance Francaise, a society in Paris whose object is the dissemination of knowledge of the French language in foreign lands. Many Los Angeles persons are members of the Alliance Francaise, and for a number of years its lectures and dramatic presentations in French have been largely attended by local society people and our French citizens.

ATTORNEYS HONOR RECH.

Two committees were appointed yesterday by the Los Angeles Bar Association to pay due tribute to the memory of Otto Rech, whose funeral will be held tomorrow at 2 o'clock at the family residence, No. 972 Vermont avenue. The first committee is that in charge of funeral arrangements and consists of William J. Hanlon, Walter Haas, W. P. Jones, Walter Leeds, L. B. Slosson and Oscar Muller. The committee to draw up resolutions is made up of E. A. Meserve, John Mott, Jesse F. Waterman, Paul McCormick and Raymond Stephens.

CAN COMPANY'S GOOD WAGES.

For the benefit of those who wish to know the truth regarding wages of press girls employed in the Los Angeles Can Company's factory, Secretary E. S. Irvin yesterday gave the daily average for eight months, paid to the following named girls, who were reported in a labor-union organ as receiving from $1 to $1.20 a day: Nellie Hayes, $1.59; Belle Fogle, $1.90; Edith McMillan, $2.47; Marguerite Stillwell, $2.25; Nell Karns, $2.76; Effie House, $1.81.

DISCUSSES TRANSPORTATION.

Theodore B. Comstock, engineer and secretary of the Board of Public Utilities, was the principal speaker at the meeting of the City Club yesterday. Comstock discussed the transportation problem in Los Angeles, and argued that now is the time to begin systematic plans for relieving the congestion of traffic in the streets. He believes that there should be some reduction of fares for the longer distances. He advocates working toward a centralization of the interurban and trunk lines with a union station. He said the center of population will undoubtedly move to a point south of Main and Twelfth streets. He believes that interurban cars should be removed from Main, Spring and Broadway as rapidly as possible. With that accomplished, he said, the streets would be able to care for local traffic for some time to come.

A Pacific Coast Classic (?)

The Adventures of James Capen Adams:

Mountaineer and Grizzly Bear Hunter of California

By

THEODORE H. HITTELL

"Written with the simplicity and directness of 'Robinson Crusoe,' and speaks well for the style of San Francisco reporters before 1860. Adams took to the woods and the capture of wild animals. His story is more exciting than most 'dime novels.' His stories of his pet bears, Lady Washington and Ben Franklin, are delightful and the accounts of hunting game of all kinds are very exciting. The book should be a classic on the Pacific Coast; it will charm readers old and young who comes across it anywhere."—New York Sun.

Bungle Victory.

VERNON SHUTS OUT RED SOX.

Local Heavers Hold Eastern Men to One Hit.

Hogan's Men Score One Tally by Aid of Error.

Yerkes Does Best Fielding Stunt of Fast Game.

Vernon, 1; Boston American Squabs, 0.

If Jon Taylor of Boston should be forced to use his present Squab nine in the attempt to grab the American League pennant, he might make a lot of money if he could work up a trade with Hap Hogan for the Vernons. A glance at the details of how the two aggregations played yesterday will show that the Bostons got but one hit and made five errors while the Vernons hit seven swats and had but one bungle.

Of course there will be a lot of talk about "no chance to train," and all that stuff, but you've got to remember that that goes for Vernon, too, for Hogan's team has had the same chance, and no more, to train that the Red Sox have had. About as much rain fell here as at Redondo, and consequently this "no training" business only goes if you want to take a dose of it. (Boston papers please copy.)

Boston lost because of Janvrin's juggle of a ball thrown to third base from the outfield in the second inning. This pass of the throw allowed Patterson of Vernon to score the only run of the game and while the chance was not the easiest in the world the kid should have stopped the ball at least. If he had speared it he probably would have put Patterson out at the base and the teams might have played until dark, for there were no more runs made.

The principal trouble with the Beaners was that they could not see the ball. Not until the ninth inning did they get a hit and then it was a single to right with two out. But two of them reached second base. Yerkes got there in the second on passes to himself and Janvrin and Sheehan arrived in the eighth on his own hit by pitcher and Perry's pass. Both these lucky fellows were caught off the bag by throws fro mthe pitcher and their hopes of scoring went fluey.

A big crowd saw Vernon win a fairly good game but the locals were entitled to it. They hit better and fielded better than the Squabs, and should have won, even though their only run was made on an error.

FAST, SNAPPY GAME.

The contest was a fast and snappy one and served to bring all of the players into action. Each team used three heavers and Hap's bunch was far and away the better one. Schafer walked three men but did not allow a hit in three innings. No hits or passes occured in Castleton's three innings, and but one hit was made off Willett, who finished the game. This bird looked bad for a time in the eighth inning, for he soaked a man with the ball and walked another one, but good fielding kept him out of trouble.

For the Squabs Frank Smith started out to take a chance in the first two innings, which were enough for him. After Carlisle had gone out Burrell tore off a two-bagger to right and later on Frank passed Brashear. Patterson opened the second with a hard double to center and McDonnell, the next up, followed with a single to left center. Patterson dashed to third on this and the ball was shot to third on the bounce to head off Pat.

Janvrin allowed it to get away from him to the fence and Patterson kept on running and scored.

Vernon never had a chance to score after the second. McHale went in to fling in the third and although he was ROAD BULLETINS FOR MOTORISTS.

The following facts as to the conditions of the roads have been gathered since the storm for the information of automobilists. Unless it rains again, these data should be a guide for your Sunday outing:

The roads:

Venice, via Washington street and the Palms. Good road almost to Palms. Fair remainder of distance. Good drive along beach to Playa del Rey.

Santa Monica: Go out Wilshire boulevard to Soldiers' Home. Then down Nevada avenue or Palisades.

Cahuenga Pass: Road poor but passable.

Long Beach: Boulevard in good shape.

Pasadena, Monrovia and Duarte: Fair road. Few mud holes but nothing serious.

Pomona and Riverside: The washed-out bridge at Azusa is reported restored and it will probably be possible to motor to Riverside and Pomona by keeping strictly to the foothill roads. The lower road, by way of El Monte, is impassable. Bridge down.

San Diego and Escondido: All roads out of commission.

Newhall grade: Impossible.

Burbank and San Fernando: San Fernando road in fair shape for touring.

Whittier: Road blocked by washouts.

Sweeping Challenge.

LOZIER'S MOTOR MAIDEN LIKELY WORLD CHAMPION.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

MISS RUTH BEKINS, aspirant for amateur championship honors in the motor racing world, challenges any girl to drive in a match race. Miss Bekins will use her Briarcliff Lozier and the race will be held during the Easter vacation.

S. M. Butler, chairman of the Contest Board of the Automobile Association of America, has given his consent to a race on the Motordrome. This means that the piepan course can be secured for the match and that the police will have no chance to interfere, Walter Hempel, manager of the Motordrome, will take charge of the race and before the challenge is accepted a cash forfeit will be demanded. The defi is sweeping and embraces the entire motor world of women drivers.

Miss Ruth Bekins, who dashed over the Santa Monica course at a seventy-mile-an-hour clip in her Briarcliff Lozier, has issued a sweeping challenge to any girl who desires to race. This motor maid is the likeliest woman driver in the West and is in line for the amateur world championship honors.

Automobile fans, who are watching the motor racing world closely, were given a new sensation on Friday when Miss Bekins showed her class. She had driven two-cycle cars, had shown how she can handle an Amplex, but she had never before driven a Lozier. When she jumped into the seat of the snappy motor car, the automobile racing game was given a revelation.

Friends of Miss Bekins knew she could drive. Not a person on earth knew how well, though. As the Lozier skimmed up Nevada avenue on the practice brush before the sensational entrance of the Santa Monica police, the girl at the wheel of the stock car gave the onlookers something to think about.

With her racing cap jammed down over her ears and with the throttle

enty-mile mark and drove her Lozier faster than any woman has ever driven an automobile before. She proved herself to be the coming world champion.

The Briarcliff Lozier is a four-speed motor, one of the fastest types of stock cars made. Miss Bekins was unfamiliar with the machine but was willing to take a chance. Perhaps it was a mistake for her to drive so fast before the race was called. She might have had an opponent if she had not shown so much class. At any rate, Miss Bekins demonstrated what she can do and for the first time the racing world learned that another woman speed king has bounded into the arena.

The Lozier is one of the fastest cars on earth. Men have driven it into world records and our own driver, Teddy Tetzlaff, has earned a national record with the remarkable car. It remained for Miss Bekins to give the real thrill when she sent the car two miles at a clip almost as fast as the machine that won the Santa Monica road race.

FAIR CO-ED.

Without a tremor of fear this pretty girl swung away from the start, dashed over the smooth highway and sped for two miles, while the spectators stared from her work at the University of Redlands, did not pause for acclamation, but raced. She would have beaten all comers and perhaps would have made a world record.

It is one thing to hold the wheel of a fast racing car and still another to get away from the line without clashing your gears or stalling your motor. Miss Bekins started with the precision of a veteran. Of course her brother was with her, but he did not touch the wheel.

Moving away on the "low" it was less than a fraction of a second before the lever was slipped into a higher speed and before the smoke of the gun would have been wafted away, the Lozier pilot would have dashed over the turnpike in her race for the handsome Times cup.

With her foot on the clutch pedal and her hands firmly grasping the wheel, the Lozier glided away faster and faster on the terrific drive up Nevada avenue. First it was thirty miles an hour. That was fast for a girl. Then the Lozier jumped to forty and a second later the speed indicator showed fifty. Then the black hand trembled and the sixty notch was reached, but Miss Bekins drove on.

DIZZY SPIN.

Flying faster than she had ever driven before, and whirling away at a speed a woman had never attained, Miss Bekins swept up the straightaway and the needle touched the seventy figure. That was enough. Those who saw her knew she would win.

Though she had driven the Lozier less than a week Miss Bekins showed her skill with the gear lever. She went from low speed into intermediate and jumped into the third and fourth with the precision of Barney Oldfield on his most reckless drive. This was the sensation.

As the Lozier swept up the road it did not swerve from its course. Like a petrel skimming the waves of the ocean the Briarcliff hummed to the finish and looked the part of a winner. The odds were five to one ten minutes after Miss Bekins took the helm of her handsome car.

The West has led in many things. We have the best girl tennis champion in the world. Now we have another champion to offer. Miss Bekins is the girl who will beat them all. This is not a prophecy. The Lozier maid showed what she can do. We have not had a chance to tell just how far she would have beaten her opponent Friday, but she was the favorite and was ready to race every minute.

Now that the West has produced a

Smith and Fischer Fight Mile-Run Duel.

Sagebrushers Take the Relay in Exciting Contest.

U.S.C., 73 2-3 points; Pomona College, 57 2-3 points.

U.S.C. track athletes won the intercollegiate championship of Southern California yesterday when they completely upset all dope and overwhelmed the Pomona College runners after the latter had spent four hours riding and walking to reach Bovard Field on account of the washouts.

"Pete" Richardson started the 'varsity surprises in the first event when he took the hammer throw from Barnes by heaving the weight 127 feet 5 inches. From then on it was a Methodist landslide. The Puritans led from the start and annexed eleven first places to their opponents' four.

The Sagebrush relay quartette partially redeemed the lost honors when it took the relay race by a three-foot margin in the last event on the programme. It was a spectacular race. Side by side the two racers, one in cardinal uniform and the other in blue, paced it around lap after lap.

Most of the way U.S.C. lead by a few inches, but seldom were the competing athletes more than two yards apart. Occasionally one of them would spurt forward and gain a few inches, but in most cases it was followed by a sprint by the opponent which brought the speedsters even again.

Wallace for U.S.C. started the last lap scarce a yard behind Gillette, the Pomona sprinter. It was a fight from the touch-off. Around the far side of the course the Sagebrusher lead. The space between them varied scarce an inch and both were running at a 220-yard clip.

The two-mile race was all Pomona. Fisher, Sturgis, Loveland and Warren loafed around the track after first "ditching" the U.S.C. competitor on the fourth lap. They talked to each other and joked as they hiked along, and had things all their own way.

"THE TIMES" ENDURANCE TOUR TO LAKESIDE STARTS IN MAY.

Fifty Automobiles to Be Entry Limit of Scenic Drive Over the Roads of the Southland on Run Conducted Under Auspices of Automobile Association of America. Several Dealers Anxious to Enter Cars.

AN automobile endurance run of 380 miles over the roads of the Southland has been mapped out by The Times. The start is to be the first Friday in May and the finish the following Monday. The tour will be the first of the kind ever held in the West under the sanction of the Automobile Association of America.

Half a hundred machines are expected to start. Walter Hempel will conduct the tour. The motor car dealers of Los Angeles have placed their stamp of approval on the plan and the entry list is almost certain to be filled.

This four days' tour is attractive to all lovers of automobiles. It will be conducted along the lines of the famous Glidden tour. The noon and night controls will be so arranged that cars must be carefully driven to make them on time.

Penalties will be exacted for all mishaps and a technical committee will examine each machine at the end of the tour and declare the winner. It will be the first long tour ever held in the West with the nineteen-eleven motors as entrants.

An automobile endurance run from Los Angeles to Lakeside has been planned by The Times and the date has been chosen. The start is to be at noon Friday, May 5, from in front of The Times office. A limit of fifty cars has been placed on the number of entries. The tour will be known as The Times to Lakeside Endurance Run.

Every dealer in Los Angeles has swung into line for this tour. The roads should be in splendid shape by May and the route that has been chosen is one of the best that could be selected. The run will be conducted under the auspices of the Automobile Association of America and the winner of the tour will be presented with a handsome trophy.

This is the route chosen after careful consideration of the roads of the Southland:

Start at noon Friday, May 5, and drive to Riverside. Spend the night there with cars in control.

Early morning start Saturday, May 6, and drive to summit of Red Mountain grade, where basket lunch will be served. The afternoon drive to Lakeside will bring the cars into the night control.

Sunday, May 7, will be the day of rest at Lakeside. An automobile race meet in which Teddy Tetzlaff and Bert Dingley will meet in the Lozier and the Pope-Hartford has been planned.

On Monday morning, May 8, the homeward run will be started by way of San Diego. The motor cars will make Oceanside for the noon control and Los Angeles for the finish of the tour.

This run should be a severe test of the 1911 machines. It will mean that the cars can be thoroughly tried out over the roads on a tour that will have the final day for a hard finish.

The run is 380 miles through the most beautiful part of Southern California. The cars will go to Lakeside over the inland route and return to Los Angeles by way of the coast route.

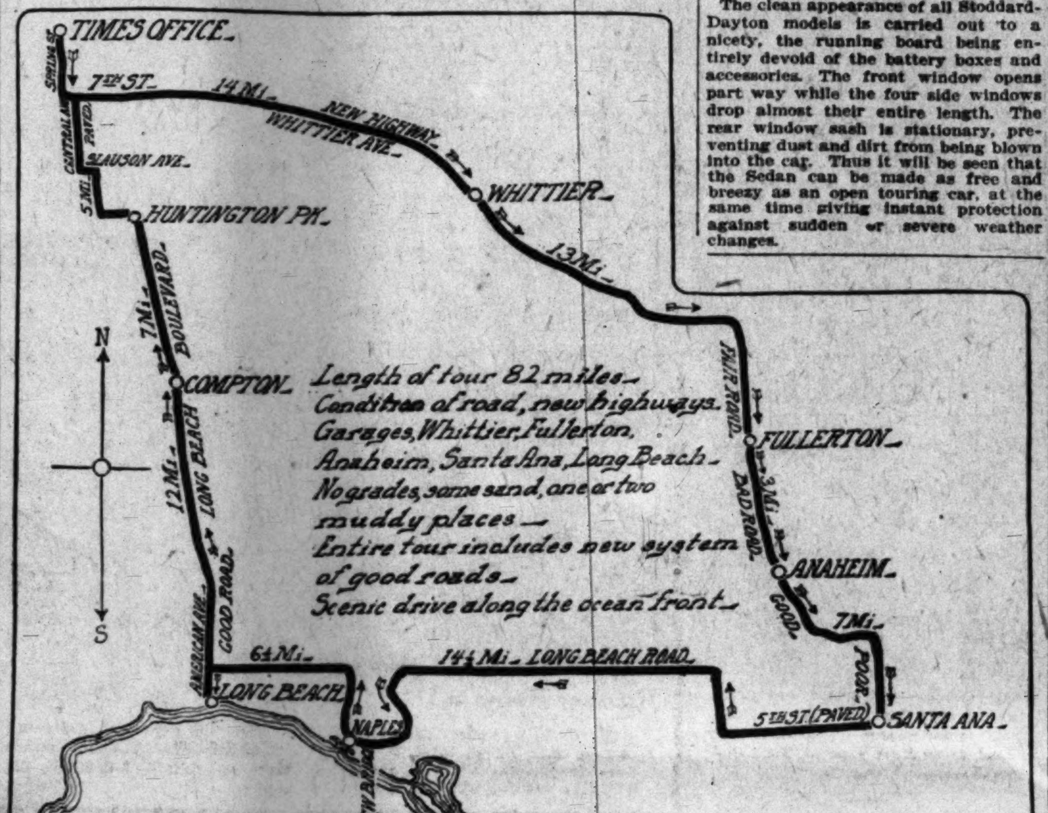
Walter Hempel, manager of the Motordrome, will handle the tour. He has purchased an interest in the Lakeside two-mile speedway and expects to pull off a big match there. He has secured the sanction of the Automobile Association of America for the tour and for the race meet.

There is no man now prominent in the automobile game who understands how to conduct an endurance run better than Hempel. He has had experience in pulling off big track meets and tours of all kinds. He is prepared to make The Times to Lakeside tour one of the most interesting ever planned.

Though the entry list promises to be a hummer the limit of fifty must be placed, as Hempel says it would be hard to handle a larger number of machines.

Several of the dealers in town are anxious to enter three cars. Private owners, however, will be allowed to start and this will chop down the number of machines that can be sent away at noon on May 5.

This tour promises to be a memorable one. It is to be conducted along strict lines. The car finishing with a perfect score or with the highest number of points, will be awarded the first prize, a handsome silver cup.



The Times' Pink Tour No. 4 to Naples and Long Beach.

This is the route which takes the autoists almost all the way on good county highways and is one of the most interesting scenic routes that has been mapped out thus far.

Over New Highways.

"THE TIMES" PINK TOUR TO LONG BEACH AND NAPLES.

THIS is no time for an automobile tour of any length. It must be admitted that the roads are not in shape for a run of 300 or 400 miles. The tours that should be taken are over the good roads where the highways are completed and where there is a chance to make good all the way.

The Times Pink Tour No. 4 takes the motorist to Whittier, but the bridge leading into the Quaker City is dangerous. It is one of the most picturesque and scenic routes that could be chosen, but before you start wait until the weather clears up in earnest.

The start of the tour from The Times office takes the motorist out Seventh street and over the Whittier road to the hill country. This road is good but the route cannot be followed until some repairs have been done. Near Fullerton the road is muddy. It is possible to make it with chains. From Fullerton to Anaheim, three miles, the highway is splendid.

There is mud again after leaving Anaheim and the road into Santa Ana, until you reach Fifth street, is slushy. Then the real drive begins. You can take the route to Naples and find an interesting run to the ocean over the new bridge near Naples, where the roads are in fair shape, though there is plenty of water there now.

From Naples you can drive to Long Beach, but do not try it now. There is a twenty mile drive from Santa Ana to Long Beach over a scenic route. This will be one of the beauty spots of the summer season. Keep this tour in your inside pocket.

From Long Beach back to town the road is splendid. Try this today. It is great, and the roads are fine. Do not be afraid of this run and if necessary you can make the twenty-four miles to the beach and enjoy your lunch, then make the twenty-four miles back again in a short time.

The drive to Compton of twelve miles is over good road. From Compton to town you have a splendid highway and you can enter the town by way of Huntington Park. Come back by way of Central avenue and you will enjoy the tour.

champion who is in line for higher honors, the racing situation has taken on a different attitude. Women have jumped into the game in earnest. There are scores of fair ones in Southern California who are ready to try their hand at the wheel of a fast car.

One of the prominent young society favorites of this city, who drives a Stoddard "Fifty" may be matched with Miss Bekins for a friendly race that should be a hummer. Of course it is not fair to ask the college girl to train again until the first semester is over. When the Easter holidays arrive, then those who have fast cars to drive can talk business. In the meantime the challenge is in order and has been flung out in earnest.

When the challenge is accepted a cash forfeit will be demanded and the race will be held on the Motordrome. This is settled and right here is an interesting feature of the situation. Chairman S. M. Butler of the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association has given his sanction. The race can be held on the boards of the pie-pan.

Edward G. Kuster, the local representative of the Contest Board of the A.A.A. has also swung into line for this race and will be there to watch the outcome of the match. On the boards of the fastest course on earth, there has never been a serious mishap, this woman's rac is to be held.

There is not an obstacle in the way. Police cannot interfere. The highest authority in the racing game has placed its stamp of approval on the match and Miss Bekins will have an opportunity to establish her right to the amateur championship of America and later of the world.

This is to be a society affair. Women will have the best seats. They will have a chance to referee and to judge the big race. It is to be conducted by the fair ones in the way that suits them best and Miss Ruth Bekins will be the star of the performance, which is to be one of the sensations of the Easter holidays.

BIG TIRE COMPANY HERE.

New Concern to Establish Branch and Plan Is to Erect Structure in Near Future.

The Automobile Tire Company, of No. 1625 Broadway, New York City, will open a branch in Los Angeles in the near future. E. C. Griffith, president of the concern, has been here since the third of the month, looking for a location, and has arranged to open a store on the corner of Sixth and Olive streets, in the building at present occupied by the Hupmobile agency.

This concern is one of the largest jobbers in automobile tires in the world and the oldest in the United States. It handles the over-production, lots, and obsolete styles of nearby all the prominent tire manufacturers in this country, besides selling its own brands, the Imperial and the Independent. It has a branch house in New Orleans and will probably erect its own building in Los Angeles within the year. It deals only in new and first-class goods, the secret being extremely low prices. Large job lots are purchased from factories that have over-produced, at prices sometimes below cost, and the tire company is thus enabled to offer standard new tires at from 50 to 75 per cent. of the regular retail price. Harry Demarest, formerly of Pittsfield, Mass., will be the manager of the local branch.

CHEMICAL TRUCK.

The Pueblo (Colo.) City Council has decided to purchase an automobile chemical and hose truck, which is to be added to the equipment of the local fire department. The machine, which costs $5750, is rated at seventy horsepower, and is adapted to carry seven passengers. It is equipped with four ladders, 1000 feet of regulation hose, a quantity of chemical hose, a chemical tank, located under the driver's seat; axes and other apparatus.

ROSEATE FUTURE HIS PREDICTION.

BELIEVES COMING YEAR WILL BE BEST IN AUTO HISTORY.

Vice-President of United States Motor Company after Winding up Tour Through Country Declares Outlook for Industry Biggest He Has Ever Seen.

NEW YORK, March 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "Not only a big year, but the very biggest the automobile industry has ever seen," is the way that Horace De Lisser, vice-president of the United States Motor Company, describes the outlook after accomplishing a swing through the larger cities. He reached home today, from a trip that included every large branch of the company's, and made a careful investigation of conditions throughout the country.

"I have no doubt that the companies handling motor trucks and touring cars will have all the business they can take care of this year and then some," he said. "I found this condition everywhere I went, and more especially on the Pacific Coast, where the conditions are ideal and becoming better as the season advances. There, as elsewhere, the most noticeable feature of the demand is the increased requests for freight and delivery motors.

"The demand for touring cars continues large, but in that end of the business there is a distinct change to be noted. People are no longer buying cars on spec, or because of their name. They are demanding merit. They are buying from companies that they are convinced are firmly backed, that will give service and take care of them as long as their cars last.

"But the change in the motor truck end of the industry is by far the most sensational. Especially is this so in the West, where the business men of such cities as Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Portland and Tacoma, are seriously considering the abandonment of horses and are now about ready to make the change to motor driven trucks, having become convinced of their merits, after actual trials."

MOTORISTS SATISFIED.

The news from Washington that the Federal automobile license bill has been reported favorably b the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce has caused feelings of the liveliest satisfaction among motorists, throughout the country, as shown by favorable public and press comments. Although the bill still has a long way to go—that is to say, to pass the House and the Senate, and then to come to the President for signature—Mr. Terry points out that this is the greatest progress yet made by any such measure. None before this has ever been reported.

CRONIN RELEASED.

Sedan Car.

STODDARD HAS CLASSY LINES.

INSIDE-DRIVEN COUPE MAKES A DECIDED SENSATION.

Stylish Car Has Abundance of Power and Climbs the Hills and Rolls Over the Country in Superb Style—Local Agency Shows the New Beauty which Many Admire.

The Sedan car, a new and exclusive creation of the Dayton Motor Car Company, fills a want long and keenly felt by that class of motorists who preferred to do their own winter driving but could not do so without sacrificing the company of family or friends. The Sedan car answers the purpose exactly, since there is no barrier between the driver and other occupants, and the whole car is comfortable.

Numerous inside driven coupes, with seating room for only one person beside the driver, have been built during recent years and the Stoddard-Dayton line of coach bodies includes a beautiful car of this type, but none resemble the Sedan in design or in convenience it affords. It has ample seating room for four persons and the owner is not separated from his friends.

A door on each side enables the driver to alight with perfect ease, and brake and gear-shifting levers being so placed that they in nowise interfere. The seat beside the driver folds and swings back so that the occupants of the rear seat may enter or alight without the slightest difficulty or ungraceful movement.

The clean appearance of all Stoddard-Dayton models is carried out to a nicety, the running board being entirely devoid of the battery boxes and accessories. The front window opens part way while the four side windows drop almost their entire length. The rear window sash is stationary, preventing dust and dirt from being blown into the car. Thus it will be seen that the Sedan can be made as free and breezy as an open touring car, at the same time giving instant protection against sudden or severe weather changes.

SLASHING CUT IN CAR PRICE.

STUDEBAKER COMPANY LOWERS PRICE OF THEIR "FORTY."

Manager of California Branch of the Concern Makes Formal Announcement which Proves Big Sensation—Lower Price to Become Available at Once Is Report.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

Gasoline row got a jounce yesterday when the announcement of the cut in the price of the Studebaker "Forty" was officially made by the manager. This is the second cut made by the company within the last six months, and brings the "Forty" from $4000 to $2850. U. J. Ollier announced that the cut would be available at once and that purchasers of cars from that moment on would benefit by it.

"Quality, of course," said Ollier, "but it is quantity production that enables the Studebaker Company to make such a reduction in the price of this car. As was done with the E-M-F products, so we decided to do with the regular Studebaker car.

"The 'Forty' has a Garford chassis; its cylinders are cast in pairs and it is equipped with the cone type clutch, leather faced with cork inserts and springs to prevent the clutch from slipping. The car has the Bosch dual system of ignition and is fitted with a self-starting device. In other respects it is thoroughly up-to-date."

NUMBER OF VEHICLES.

A recent census gives the number of motor vehicles of all kinds in the United Kingdom as 218,680, an increase over [illegible]9 of 36,925, distributed as follows: English and Welsh counties, 141,009; English and Welsh boroughs, 52,963; Scotland, 15,969; Ireland, 8739; total, 218,680. In London there are 37,851 motorcars, 12,613 motor cycles, and 2257 heavy vehicles, making a total of 52,721 of all types. Middlesex has the largest county total, 8035 followed by Kent with 5775. Of provincial towns, Birmingham leads with 5527 cars, motor cycles and vehicles, followed by Manchester, 3677; Liverpool, 3447; Glasgow, 2154; Edinburgh, 1830; Dublin, 1257; Belfast, 1096.

latter part of the trip, but the rain was melting it rapidly.

After a short stop for luncheon at the Alpine Tavern, the car was driven up the trail to the summit at Inspiration Point.

Because of some bad washouts the return trip was not attempted the same day, but the car and its occupant was brought down in safety Thursday, and all reached Los Angeles in good shape.

THE CREW.

The car was driven by Paul R. Melchert, who is a direct representative of the White Motor Company of Cleveland, O., and who has driven White gasoline cars in nearly every section of the United States, Mexico and Canada. Melchert is now connected with the McCarty-Parker Auto Company, Los Angeles agents for the White, and is known far and wide as one of the most intrepid drivers of automobiles in the United States. E. P. Irwin accompanied the party.

The trip was proposed and carried out by O. K. Parker, president of the McCarty-Parker Auto Company, as being one which would demonstrate the sturdy qualities of the White cars, over a road and under conditions which had never been undertaken by any automobile in Southern California. The White company at the factory in Cleveland have given their gasoline car the name of "master of all roads," and it would seem that the Mount Lowe trip demonstrated that fact beyond peradventure.

MOTOR AND TRAILER.

Hudson Hauls Piano Truck Over Many Miles of Road on Long Trip.

Trailers for carrying freight over city and country roads will be made and hitched to automobiles if the Hudson Motor Car Company decides to take advantage of an offer made by a music house in Redfield, S. D.

During the past year pianos have been towed all over the territory arround Redfield in a farm wagon which was hitched behind a Hudson roadster. The tandem combination has been driven over 11,000 miles of Dakota roads. For 3000 miles of that distance the trailer was loaded with one or more pianos.

"What we want is an automobile trailer," wrote one of the firm to the Hudson company, recently. "It is too dangerous trying to make time on these country roads with a high-wheeled spring wagon. We want a low trailer that is sure to stay on the road."

E. H. Broadwell of the Hudson Company acknowledges that this is a "new one" on him. He says he has heard of all sorts of uses which they make of automobiles in the farming country, but this is the best yet. It is likely that a special trailer will be manufactured for the Redfield firm.

Emperor William still leads all European rulers in the number of motor cars he owns. When he receives four new cars he has ordered, the imperial garage will contain thirty, all told. His cars are easily distinguished by a peculiar fanfare of his motor horn.

BRUSH CARRIES TONS OF MAIL.

SINGLE-CYLINDER CAR HUSTLES IN SNOW AND SLEET.

Revolutionizes the United States Mail Service in the District Where It Is Hard to Even Drive a Horse and Wagon in the Winter Season, and Machine Makes Good.

The postoffice authorities of Atlantic City discarded the last horses in the service in November, replacing them with Brush runabouts, and Postmaster Bacharach is greatly pleased with the performance of the cars during this winter, said to be one of the most rigorous in years.

Five Brush runabouts do the postoffice collecting at this resort, taking the place of twice that number of horses and cutting the expense in half. Several of them are used in suburban work, collecting mail from the surrounding small towns, but the larger numbers are used for city collections, averaging about 150 stops.

These runabouts are equipped with tops and side curtains and are used every day in the year, the back part of the car, to which has been added an extra step, is used for carrying the mail sacks. The cars proved particularly useful during the mail congestion at Christmas time.

The Brush has shown its value in mail distribution as well as in collection service. Although the rural delivery man's salary is only from $750 to $900 a year, he has taken to this car in a surprising manner. Those who are driving them in this service declare that not only is the automobile economical, but that it covers the route so much quicker that it gives more time for other work.

Fred Ingersoll of Pasadena, one of the pioneer users of the car in this service, says that his Brush has covered more than 65,000 miles.

"I have used more than 2000 gallons of gasoline, and have stopped and started my machine more than 100,000 times," said Ingersoll. "My route is over forty-five miles of good and bad roads, making 205 stops per trip. The automobile has proven its suitability for my work."

Varnish may easily be ruined by improper use of soap in washing. Dissolve a pound of soap in a gallon of water, and use from a half to a full pint of this solution to each pail of wash water. Wet the car, first, with clean water, then wash with the suds and rinse at once with hose or sponge. Never apply raw soap directly to the car body, or put it into the pail used for washing the car.

POPE REMOVES TO NEW HOME.

RUESS CHOOSES FORMER DWELLING OF THE LOZIER.

Now Located at Tenth and Olive and Ready for the Biggest Business of the Season—The Handsome Line Is to Have One of the Swell Showrooms of the City.

The Pope-Hartford will have a new home on the corner of Tenth and Olive streets after March 15. William R. Ruess managed—after much strenuous chasing after this desirable location—to close the lease. This is the building formerly occupied by Nash and Fenimore.

What sort of an opening stunt the Pope-Hartford force will put on is not known, but it is sure to be unique and interesting. Ruess will decorate the building according to his own ideas. His present salesroom is one of the most interesting in the country and the new one will undoubtedly be classy, a suitable place for the Pope-Hartford.

The Ruess Automobile Company has had a successful month, having sold sixteen Pope-Hartford pleasure vehicles and one Pope-Hartford fire wagon. The fire wagon was purchased by the city of San Bernardino, after it had won over all others in every kind of street contest.

Among the purchasers of five-passenger cars was Art Shafer of the New York National Baseball League. Two years ago Shafer was a schoolboy, playing at St. Vincent's, but has since made great progress in his profession. Mrs. Phil Lyon purchased her second Pope-Hartford and Oliver Morosco received his new pony tonneau. Other five-passenger cars were: H. C. Klokke, C. G. Berg, John Cornett and Victor Machris.

Pony tonneaus were delivered to Oliver Morosco, A. G. Hubbard, R. M. Tague, Aeneas McAndrew, O. O. Reynolds and J. E. O'Donnel. A Torpedo was sold to W. S. Madden, a Roadster to Alvin Rice, a touring car to J. D. Houser, and a seven-passenger car to Miss Culberson.

Promoters and supporters of the international automobile race meeting, for purses aggregating $40,000, in Spokane, Wash., next summer, are enthusiastic boosters for the grand circuit of speedways, and they will urge the promoters to include Spokane in the circuit, pledging financial and other support to the plan.

BILL NEVIN'S FAST DRIVE.

Fiat Man Finds Boulevard and Skims Along.

No Limit to Speed and No Motor Cops Near.

Delight of His Life on Van Nuys Boulevard.

Bill Nevin, the Fiat man, is happy. He has found a boulevard where he can drive as fast as he likes. He took the Fiat out Wednesday and tore over the Van Nuys macadam highway at eighty miles an hour. He did not look around once to see if a speed cop was following.

We all like to hold records, but Nevin holds several of which he is not proud. He has been arrested for speeding more times than any other society man in the city. He is a member of the California Club, but there is not a man on the roster who can hold a candle to William when he comes to arrests.

That Van Nuys boulevard, however, made the hit with Nevin. It was hard for him to believe he could drive as fast as he likes, and at first he was afraid to step on the throttle. He had driven less than a mile, however, before the Fiat was barking like a hound in hot pursuit. The car leaped out, almost from under the big athlete and was away at lightning speed.

There are no motorcycles on Van Nuys road. Bill admits that the snort of a motorcycle sets him on pins. He shies when he sees a buzzer approaching. He has that looking back habit down to a science.

Eighty miles an hour, even for Bill Nevin, is some speed. The Fiat was almost wide open when the brick depot was passed. The watchers saw a fast machine whirl away almost like the "Blitzen Benz."

"Say how is that for speed?"

"Gee, I can go faster than that if I like. Just look out for the cops while I turn her loose."

Bill Nevin was not ruminating. He was in dead earnest. He turned her loose, and the superb Fiat bounced away at a rollicking pace that pleased the driver and his friends.

Here is the resolution that Nevin made. He determined after than Van Nuys drive to do his own demonstrating. The work of the fast Fiat was such that he desired to show the car off.

"After this I'll do my own driving," said Nevin. "You can take it from me that the demonstrating done in Fiat cars will be done by your humble servant. Not that I can't trust anybody else, but I like to show my friends just what the car can do. There is nothing that a Fiat cannot perform.

"You bet I like that Van Nuys boulevard. It's a great one and a fine place to speed. I'll spend a whole lot of time out on that road. It looks good to me and it's just the place to show my friends what the Fiat can do without the aid of the motorcycle cops.

"That feeling you get out there is great. I never felt so good in my life as I did while I was driving over the boulevard and later I realized that the speed boys were not after me, no matter how fast I drove.

"This car is there with bells when it comes to showing speed. She is the right kind of a bear when it comes to growl with the motor. I like the Fiat best of all and there is nothing this car cannot do when it is necessary to show off a real stunt."

Bill Nevin's Racing Face as He Finished His Drive on Van Nuys Boulevard.

Below is the Fiat man in car with which he smashed all speed limits on the delightful spin over a macadam highway.

ALCO TRUCK HAULS ORE.

Special Dumping Apparatus on High-Power Commercial Car Makes a Big Hit.

The Calzona Company, represented by A. R. Hueth and Fred Betz, has purchased a high-power Alco truck to use in rushing ore from their mines at Calzona and Steece to the Santa Fe station at Calzona. The automobile has already been a wonderful help in the development of arid lands and mining, and now this latest form of auto utility is going to take its place in that field.

The machine was shipped from Los Angeles this week, and is one of the first ore trucks ever placed in regular service. The body was ordered by Ralph Chandler, local agent for the Alco. It is of sheet steel, riveted together in as substantial a manner as the modern railroad gondola used for ore shipping. Its ore capacity is ten tons.

A special roller-bearing bed has been built on a regular Alco chassis, and the bed is so fitted that one man can easily dump the loaded car and return the bed to its place.

An eight-mile auto road has been graded between the mines and the town of Calzona, and the truck will be run night and day. A recent strike of ore running as high as $1000 a ton makes this speed desirable, and the company expects to break all records for rapid movement of ore from a mine at this distance from a railroad.

There will be automobile shows until very late in the season, one of the farthest along toward outdoors being that of the Wilkes-Barre Automobile Club, which has just decided to run an ex-

Good Idea.

SERVICE ABROAD TO AID TOURISTS.

WILLYS-OVERLAND PRESIDENT MAKES INNOVATION.

English Representatives Will Help American Coronation Guests at Reasonable Rates—Cars, Accessories and Drivers to Be Provided. Overland Dealers to Notify Public of Plan.

This year American tourists in England will be able to make all kinds of motor trips around London, through England, Scotland and Wales, all at reasonable rates. For this they will have to thank John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland Company, whose policy it is not only to supply the public with a high grade car at a moderate price but to be of as much assistance to the motoring public as possible. Pursuant to this policy Willys has made arrangements with his English representatives, the Anglo-American Motor Car Company, London, to provide motor car service to Americans in England at reasonable rates.

It is estimated that not less than 220,000 Americans will go to Europe this year, and a large number will go to England on account of its being Coronation year. To these this service will be pleasant as it provides adequate service of cars and drivers without excessive expense.

A letter containing this information has been received by every Overland dealer in the country, and they are now furnishing their friends and acquaintances who are going abroad this year with cards of introduction. A great number have already signified their intention of taking advantage of this opportunity.

MANY COMING OUR WAY.

Garage Men Visit This City and Note the Steady Increase in the Supply Business.

The garage and supply men of the surrounding territory made their regular weekly visit to Los Angeles this week, regardless of the rain. A few drove in but most of them dodged the muddy roads by the train route. James Roberts and Guy West dropped in on the Western Rubber and Supply Company from Lindsay. They report that it is somewhat damp in their community, but think the sun will surely shine again some day.

J. M. Baird was in from Corona; J. M. Johnston was a Lordsburg visitor, and William Yeager came in from Fullerton to look over the offerings of the local supply houses.

Frank Miller of the Miller Carburetor Company of San Francisco, is enthusiastic over the performance of the Miller equipped Pope-Hartford in the Panama-Pacific road race. The demand for Millers has been so great that the Western Rubber and Supply Company has been unable to supply the instruments. This condition is being remedied and deliveries will be made as promised in the next ten days.

FINANCIAL RETURNS.

Although the Ohio motor law was designed to regulate the use of streets and roads by automobilists, and not as a revenue measure, the financial returns have been more than satisfactory to the State authorities. In 1908, when the law first became effective, the State realized $58,469.10 from the law; in 1909 the receipts were $92,101.26, and to date the revenue for the fiscal year of 1910 amounts to $172,000.

Rambler Man Talks.

GREAT DEVELOPMENT OF MOTOR INDUSTRY IN COMING DECADE.

"The development of motor car sales in the Northwest will be wonderful in the next ten years," says Charles T. Jeffery, head of the Rambler organization.

"More motor cars will be sold during the next few years over that region bounded on the east by Lake Michigan and stretching from the Canadian border on the north to the Missouri River on the south than in any corresponding area in this country," continued Jeffery. "Everywhere the people seem to have the California spirit—they believe in the country and they believe in themselves. This means business and prosperity."

Jeffery made these statements after a trip of investigation through the Northwest, during which plans were made for an even further extension of the Rambler sales and service organization.

"I never encountered such general optimism before," said Jeffery. "Bad business conditions in other sections seem not to effect this section to any great extent, since it is almost entirely dependant on agriculture. Farmers and business men in general seem to favor the Canadian reciprocity idea, in fact I met a number of Canadian business men who were in Minneapolis negotiating for cars to sell across the border. The automobile, although designed by and for the pleasure and utility of men as well as women, is of greatest benefit to the woman and the child. Not many manufacturers seem to realize this fact, but the saving of a woman's time and effort is imperative on account of the importance of her work. The automobile places the town woman close to her friends in city and country, and gives to the country woman the advantages of town.

"Then," said Jeffery, "a woman looks upon the automobile from an individual point of view. She sees things along the road, she is not afraid to stop along the road to pick a flower or give the children a picnic. The automobile takes her away from the drudgery of house or farm, carries you quickly to unfamiliar places, and opens up new sources of pleasure and health otherwise impossible.

"A modern farmer who owns a motor car of quality is a man who has had the social life of his family revolutionized. Their lives combine the opportunities of town life with the pleasures of country life. The tired horses are left to rest while the market, school, church, library and theater are easily reached.

"With the Rambler running errands, going after machinery repairs, the thousand and one little trips that must be made become a pleasure instead of being dreaded, the whole family go and be back early, refreshed and rested by the easy, rapid motion.

Real Dope.

GREAT MOTOR RACE IS OURS.

American-Made Machines Win Big Contests.

Santa Monica Event Marks National Record.

Grand Prize Race to Be Held Again in France.

"Foreign made automobiles have ceased to be an important factor in American road racing contests," said C. A. Emise of the Lozier Motor Car Company recently. Tracing the results of the important contests since the Vanderbilt Cup race in 1908 when an American car came to the front for the first time he showed that nearly every important winner since that time has been an American made car.

Before 1908 foreign cars had continually taken first and second honors in the great race until American manufacturers had become discouraged and the contest was dropped for a few years. Americans had been too busy supplying an ever increasing demand, to compete successfully with the makers in Europe.

These had spent thousands of dollars to take the honors in American races. Finally, however, they had decided that the enormous expenditure entailed did not justify the results.

While they had been winning the races with special built machines the American manufacturer had been experimenting and testing until he had built a car that would stand lots of hard use and which would prove an efficient commercial as well as pleasure car.

With the withdrawal of the French and Italian racing cars about 1907 the American road race first became popular. Since that time road racing has become an important factor in the auto industry and almost without exception the home made cars have won. Recently several of the big foreign manufacturers have again been trying to compete on American soil but poor success has attended his efforts.

The Santa Monica road race in November in which the Lozier car won, going at a rate of nearly seventy-two miles an hour, was a remarkable example of this. Both Fiat and Isotta cars were entered but these had to give place to the American made machine.

The important feature in a large number of the races where American motors defeated the foreign made machines was the fact that stock cars represented the United States makers while the French and Italian manufacturer sent over special made racing machines. Time after time a regular stock car has won in both speed and endurance contests.

Recently the news came from abroad that the French Grand Prize of the old days is to be revived. At one time this was the greatest automobile race in the world. The honor of winning was the greatest that could come to any maker. The large number of high class contests which are being pulled off in this country constantly make it likely however, that Americans will not attempt to compete with the foreigner in Europe.

The factories in this country are having all they can do to supply the American trade and the expense of sending racers to France it is figured will hardly offset the honor of winning when there are several contests in this country which rank fully as high as the Grand Prize.

Welcome Elmer.

FAMOUS BUILDER LIKES OUTLOOK.

AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRY STILL ON SOLID BASIS.

Entire Apperson Output Sold This Year, Although Prices not Reduced—First Shipment of New "Thirty" Here This Week—Single-Cylinder Truck a Sensation.

Elmer Apperson, president manager of the Apperson Automobile Company, of Kokomo, Indiana, is here. He is one of the veterans in the business, having built one of the first gasoline self-propelled vehicles.

This is the "Jack-Rabbit" man's first visit to Southern California but the rain does not dampen his enthusiasm in the least. He says that he proposes to do some touring in this end of the State if he has to wait till next summer.

Apperson is the guest of Leon T. Shettler, the veteran agent of the Apperson line. His brother, Edgar Apperson, has made several trips to the coast and twice carried off the Altadena hill-climbing contest in the "Jack-Rabbit." It was Edgar Apperson who first brought this speedy car to the notice of the California public.

Mr. Apperson is optimistic about the future of the automobile industry, and sees only sunshine ahead.

"Of course," said Apperson, "some firms have financial trouble in any business, but we find the demand for standard cars good and have no trouble in contracting our entire output.

'I think there will be no reduction in the price of motor cars," continued Mr. Apperson. "It costs a given amount to build a good car, and unless the cost of material and labor decreases, lower prices on cars cannot be expected without cheapening the construction of the car.

"This is a grand automobile territory and I hope to soon be able to get out on the roads and see the country. I can understand why so many cars have been sold in this territory when I see the cars being used every day, rain or shine."

During the past week many of Shettler's out-of-town branch agents have come in to meet Apperson. L. G. Thompson came down from Fresno and William Cresswell came up from San Diego. John Swan started from San Francisco but wired from Salinas that he was hung up by a washout ahead. Two hours later he wired that there was a washout behind also.

The first shipment of the fore-door Apperson thirties arrived this week and will be on exhibition. A shipment of the popular fore-door Reos was also received, and Shettler is expecting his first consignment of the new sensational one-cylinder truck in about two weeks. This truck, with a carrying capacity of 1500 pounds, has created a sensation in Eastern commercial circles.

MANY MITCHELL CARS.

Must Hurry, Says Head of Big Company, If You Desire to Secure a New Car.

"The manufacturers will lack about 30,000 cars of having enough to supply the demand this year," says James W. Gilson, general sales-manager for the Mitchell-Lewis Motor Company of Racine, Wis. "During a meeting of the leading manufacturers in New York last August it was estimated that the output this year would be 325,000 motor cars. But the bankers got nervous," says Gilson. "The tail of Halley's comet gave them an awful shock about that time and knocked them so far into their vaults that not even Jimmy Valentine has been able to tickle the combination.

"Because of this attitude the manufacturers will not produce more than half their original estimate. As there is a yearly demand for about 200,000 cars in the United States at present it will be easily seen that those contemplating the purchase of a car will have to get into the game early.

More than 1000 Mitchell cars, or one-eighth of the entire product, will be exported, but we keep in such close touch with the members of "The Mitchell family" that they will not wait till the last minute to buy. We established this "Mitchell Service" when the ancestors of the present head of the firm went into the wagon business in 1834. When a Mitchell car is sold the relation with the buyer is just begun, not ended as is the case with most others, which means that we are operating under the Golden Rule.

AUTO TRIP TO CRATER.

Scenic Tour in Hawaii to Volcano's Mouth—Diamond Tires Hold Equipment Record for Climb.

Among the many scenic automobile tours on the Hawaiian Islands, the trip from Hilo to the crater of the restless volcanic peak, Kilauea, a distance of thirty-one miles, is undoubtedly the most popular. Every day during favorable weather many autos make the trip which is up a gradual slope to an altitude of 4000 feet.

C. E. Wright, manager of the Volcano Stables and Transportation Company which is situated at the foot of the trail, recently caused the Diamond Rubber people some satisfaction when he stated that a large majority of the machines making the trip were equipped with Diamond tires.

It now looks as if a second train will be necessary to transport the cars and crews which will participate in the proposed national racing circuit.

great champion in the "bush" towns as they did in New York or Los Angeles. Barney drove on 183 different tracks in America. I do not believe any other driver ever raced over more than twenty-five different tracks. And Barney Oldfield's records on all those different tracks have never been equaled or beaten except on one of the 183 tracks. And that one track Barney never had a chance to drive on after his time on it was lowered.

During last season Barney drove miles on twenty-seven different tracks faster than any other driver had ever driven a mile on the fastest and best one-mile dirt track in the world.

During the last few years, the intermediate marks and records other than the short distance ones, never worried Barney and he did not seek them. He owned his cars, paid big prices for them and there was no percentage in breaking records when it did not enhance his reputation, nor increase the size of his bankroll.

But those short distance marks certainly hit the ground when he shook the record bush. Back in the early days when Barney got a salary check every week from the manufacturers whose cars he was making famous and when they paid big for records, Barney held for five years every world's circular track record from one to fifty miles. They cost him a lot of physical pain, too. The same sort of pain that caused the other fellows to quit the game after their first hospital siege.

MANY SCARS.

I remember one time in 1903, in Detroit, when Barney was in the hospital with a smashed side and a lot of other cuts and bruises. As the nurse let me look at his worst wound I commented about its leaving a huge scar, he forced a smile and said, "Well, I've made up my mind to get the biggest collection of scars of any fellow in the game before I get through." And he had them, too. Twenty-one times has he been hurt since he started the deadly game. And the scars are plastered over his anatomy like plasters on the grip of a foreign traveler. Each is a tribute to the gameness of the most remarkable champion they ever had in any line.

And yet they are asking "Who will fill Oldfield's shoes?" It is a joke. Age has never withered the daredevil spirit in this fellow. He was better the last day he drove than when he was supposed from a standpoint of nature, to be in his prime. And had it not been for a desire to settle down and take advantage of the huge cash offer for his outfit, he would have been better this year than ever. Barney Oldfield would never have retired under fire or when someone else had his records. It was his ambition to quit when he was the king of speed. He has realized that ambition and he will never try to "come back." I know Barney Oldfield better than any living person knows him. I could tell what he was going through while trying for a record from the expression of his face. I know how many chances he took, hundreds of times, just to make good the promises I made in the advertisements and press stuff. The homestretch might look beautiful to the spectators and they expected a world's record. They knew nothing and cared less about the deep ruts and holes on the turns. Yet, just because he wanted to give the crowd what they paid to see, this fellow would go out and take the chance of his life.

He was before the public as an automobile racer for nine years and he never fooled them once.

Lots of times they stand alongside the bier or grave of a fellow who has been a champion in his day, and tell of how great and big he was. I am telling that the most remarkable athlete of the age has retired in his prime and can go out tomorrow and do as well as he ever did.

I have refrained from using the name of any other driver in this article. It is Barney's expressed wish that I never put the name of any of the drivers in print in comparison with him. They are all a game lot, with real, red blood in their veins and the ones that have given Barney his hardest races are the ones he wishes the best luck. Barney is a generous victor and retires with the best feeling for the drivers, clubs, promoters and associations with whom he came in contact during his career. Here in Los Angeles where the people were so generous to Barney Oldfield, is where he will settle and live. "It's Twenty-Four-Hour Grind.

TETZLAFF AND LOZIER TO RACE DE PALMA AND THE SIMPLEX.

Teddy Tetzlaff in the Lozier and Ralph De Palma in the Simplex are to race Sunday on the Motordrome. Walter Hempel has arranged the 100-mile match in which a new world champion may be discovered. The meet cannot be held today because the subways are full of water. The promise is that the drivers can get out on the pie-pan by Tuesday for practice.

The match promises to be a hummer and will bring together the greatest track driver now before the public and the champion road racer of America. Perhaps a world record will be smashed in the duel of speed carded for the Motordrome.

Some world's records are due to be smashed at the Motordrome when the twenty-four-hour endurance race scheduled for April comes off. Entries have already begun and an unusual number of entrants is anticipated.

The first car entered was the Cadillac "30." Don Lee, the California agent, announced yesterday that he would enter a "30" similar to that which broke the Los Angeles-San Francisco road record. A stock demi-tonneau will be stripped for this grind.

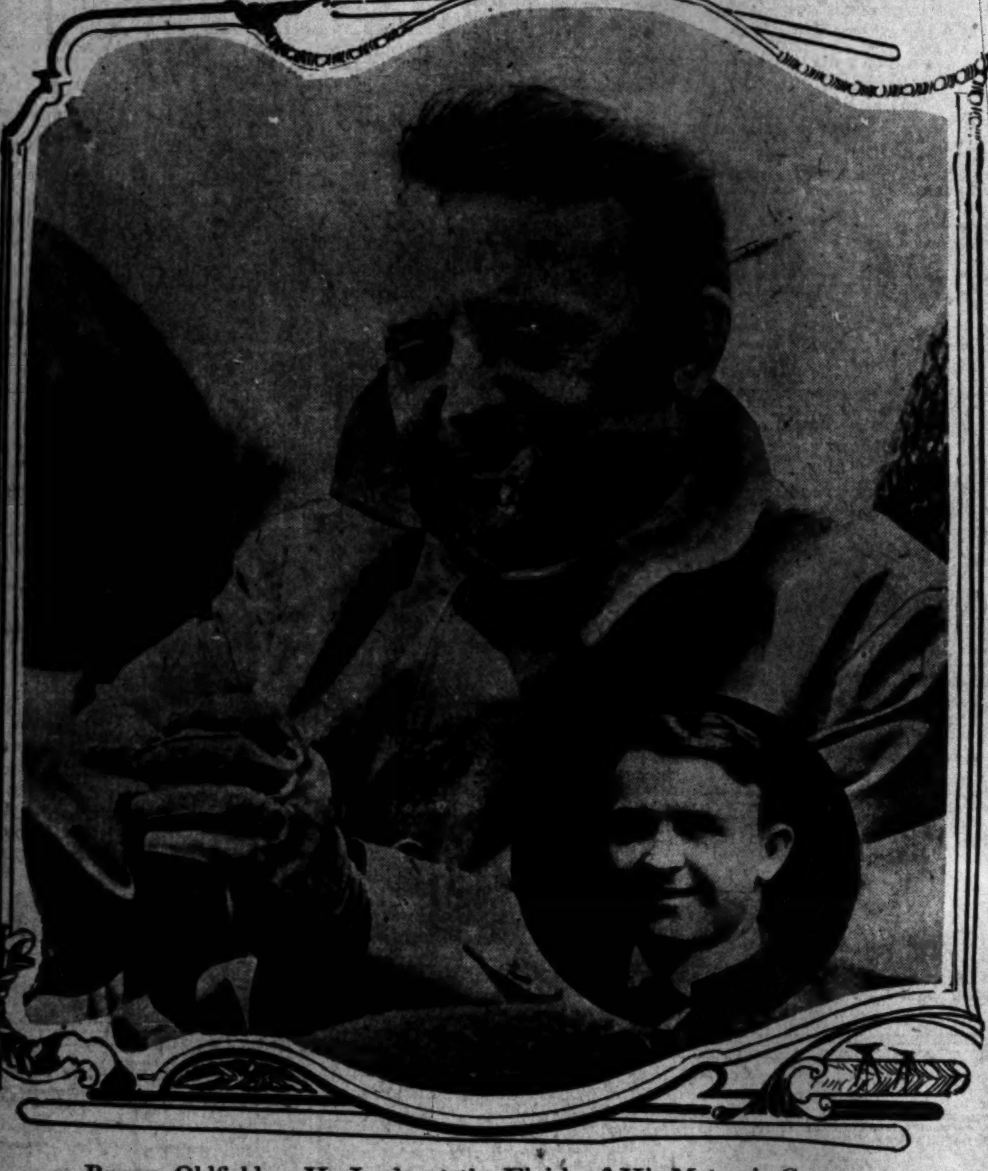
Mr. Lee has for some time desired to enter a race of this sort, and has often stated that he would have a car to enter whenever a twenty-four-hour race was held. The drivers will be George Adair and B. J. Beaudette, the men who drove the car in the record-breaking race to San Francisco and return, now has the Cadillac agency for the entire State of California, and recently established a branch at San Francisco that sold seven cars the first week.

HAULS POTATOES IN PACKARD.

Farmer Makes Trip to Market With Big Load of Produce and Wins.

Hauling a load of potatoes to market fifteen miles away through deep snow drifts, when a team of horses was unable to make the trip, was the recent experience of C. C. Thompson of Philadelphia, who runs a rural express with a three-ton Packard truck.

The farmer who supplied the potatoes was somewhat skeptical of the truck's ability to get through the snow and so dispatched a team of horses with a duplicate load. After sending the two loads of spuds on their way the ranchers finally became nervous and took a train to Philadelphia which was the point of consignment, to see if the produce had reached there. He found the truck load already sold and disposed of and a few hours later received a telephone message that the horses were stuck and could not complete the trip.



Barney Oldfield as He Looks at the Finish of His Meteoric Career.

Below is the speed king making his debut a decade before he smashed so many world records.

WIZARD KULICK HAS FORD DAISY.

GIVES BIG CARS HARD RUN AT NEW ORLEANS.

Pulls Out Three Firsts and a Second, with Burman in Running. Driving on Corners Electrifies Crowd — Twenty-Horse Ford Stands Pace Well and Is There at Finish.

Frank Kulick and his Ford Model "T" were the sensations of the recent big Mardi Gras speed carnival at New Orleans. Kulick and the little 20-horse-power beauty took five firsts and a number of other places, including two seconds.

The Ford pilot on the mile track of the Crescent City Jockey Club defeated all except "Wild Bob" Burman, who drove his great 100-horse-power Buick Special, and Caleb Bragg, in his 90-horse Fiat, the fastest thing on wheels.

The first day's races saw Kulick win three firsts, and he surprised everybody in sight by also pulling out second in the 10-mile handicap, where he was given but a few yards lead on Burman, who started scratch. Kulick's daring on the corners kept the crowd on its feet all the time. The 160-230 and 230-300 classes went to him in a walk-away. He also won the one-hour race, dashing in and out among the big cars and aggravating rival drivers into a frenzy of tantalization.

The best event of the Saturday afternoon card was a five-mile free-for-all in which Kulick and the Ford, Burman in his five-times-bigger Buick, Bragg in his Fiat, and Disbrow and Aitken in the big Nationals were entered. It was a thriller. The two big cars were all that could beat Kulick, and they had to reel off the five miles in 4:40:17, a new record, to do it.

The veteran local pilot gets all the power in his machine, and the lightness of his car enables him to turn the corners as though he were tied to the fence. This was seen in the 10-mile handicap on Saturday, when Kulick's work in beating the 100-horse-power mount of Burman made him look like the bogie of all the entrants.

The light 20-horse-power Ford never had its hood lifted during the meet, excepting at night, to go through a tightening-up process. At the end of the three-day carnival it was in per-hour during the meet, while Burman's Buick and Bragg's Fiat had to be scratched from some of the last races, owing to the bad shaking-up given the big cars on the rough track.

HERE'S YOUR CHANCE.

Adoption of the Automobile for Business Purposes Opens Up New Field for Young Men.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, March 10.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] An entirely new field for young men with an eye out for a job at steady wages and good work, has ben opened up by the introduction of the automobile into the business world. Even the truck driver of today must keep awake to the needs of the times, and since the horse has begun to vanish before the motor truck, his driver finds it necessary for him to get a hustle on and learn something would keep his job and not retire to the back of "has-been row," as the latest arrival.

H. A. Grant of Tarrytown, N. Y., formerly with the Maxwell-Briscoe Motor Company, and an engineer of long standing and experience in automobiles, is so firmly convinced that this is the case, that he has written a book on the subject, using as his illustrations, the experience of the managers of the recent automobile show in the Madison Square Garden, where one entire week was devoted to showing automobile trucks and delivery wagons in use by the big department stores in town.

TRUC KBUCKS DEEP SNOW.

A motor truck that is as efficient in snow or on icy streets as on good roads may be regarded as a perfected vehicle, since winter conditions give delivery systems their severest test. Recognizing this, the builders of Sampson commercial motors have incorporated in their cars three notable features. The double side chains are so enclosed that mud and slush cannot affect them, and much of the torsional strain is taken by these guards. By means of detachable hubs, winter equipment can be put on in fifteen minutes. Lastly, the differential may be so locked as to apply power to both wheels in all tight places instead of letting one slip.

WATER IN GASOLINE.

One of the things that will cause an engine to skip is water in the gasoline. To remedy this, open the petcocks, which are provided for the drainage of water from the gasoline, daily. If, after testing this point thoroughly, the engine still misses, the fault, no doubt, lies in the mixture, and the carburetor needs adjusting, but before doing anything to the carburetor—and unless its mechanism is fully understood it is better to employ a man competent to

Official Announcement

OF

Studebaker Brothers Company of California

The Price of the Studebaker "Forty"

Seven-Passenger Touring Car

Has Been Reduced from $4000

TO

$2850 F. O. B. Factory

Encouraged by the most successful selling campaign ever recorded in the annals of motordom—the period following the sensational reduction of the price of the popular E-M-F Company products, the E-M-F "30" and the FLANDERS "20"—the Studebaker interests have again taken the initiative and with one sweep slashed the price of the—

Studebaker "Forty"
To $2850 F. O. B. Factory

This announcement will drop as a bomb in the ranks of the high-priced motor cars, for it means a cut of $1150 from the price of one of the finest high-grade cars on the market today—a car which up to the present time has sold for $4000, and found its customers among the most distinguished and discriminating.

What we have just done with the STUDEBAKER "40" is simply a case of history repeating itself—of doing with this car what we did with the E-M-F "30," and that was—

To produce a $2000 car in such quantities that we could profitably market it at $1250. That was a little over two years ago. Our plan succeeded wonderfully—it marked an epoch in the building of motor cars which created consternation in the ranks of our competitors.

Then came the advancement of quantity production—the installation of the very latest machinery, the enlargement of our plants and the gradual refinement of the car until a few months ago we were able to again cut the price of this car, which we did, reducing it from $1250—

To $1000 at the factory. Then followed the greatest selling period that we ever experienced in the history of our organization and the results of which have placed all of our competitors so far in the background that by comparison they pale into insignificance.

We are today manufacturing and marketing at $1000 a car which is more stylish in appearance, and built to last longer and give better service than any automobile on the market selling for $2000 or less. There is no disputing of this—even our competitors must admit it.

Now, we propose to do the same thing with the STUDEBAKER "40," which is mounted on the Garford chassis and which in the past has been selling for $4000 and is owned and indorsed by a great number of prominent men.

The car has been reduced in price only—NOT in quality. On the other hand, it has been improved and refined to a degree never before attained in motor-car manufacture, and at its New Price of $2850 (at the factory) offers greater value than has ever before been offered the California motoring public.

The same tactics that are employed in the marketing of the E-M-F products—that is, quantity production, the duplication of parts upon a moment's notice—will be employed in the marketing of the STUDEBAKER "40" at its new price of $2850.

The equipment of the STUDEBAKER "40" includes the Bosch dual system of ignition, the Bosch low-tension magneto and magnetic plugs, the Bosch battery equipment and the popular Bosch self-starting device. The car also carries a full equipment of lamps, a presto-lite tank, horn, robe rail, foot rests, full equipment of tools and tool box. All of which are included in the new price of $2850.

We are in a position to make you an immediate delivery of this car at its new price—$2850. We shall be glad to have you call and inspect the car; in fact, if you wish us to do so, we shall take pleasure in calling for you with one of these cars and bring you home or to any point in the city.

FIFTY YOUTHS READY TO RUN.

Y.M.C.A. Teams of Long Beach and Los Angeles.

Start Is to Be Made Here at Fourth and Spring.

All Contestants Are to Go One Mile Each.

After several weeks' tryouts fifty of the best boy runners in Los Angeles and Long Beach have been selected to take part in the twenty-one-mile relay race which the Y.M.C.A. is to pull off between Los Angeles and the beach on next Saturday.

Twenty-five runners are to represent each city. Each racer will cover approximately one mile and the boys will be distributed along the road at mile intervals previous to the start so that the contest may be pulled off without a hitch.

The Los Angeles team will run from the city to the beach while the Long Beach boys are to race in the opposite direction. With this arrangement the two teams will pass each other somewhere near the center of the course. Those in charge have adopted this system to prevent any overstrain that might result from the keen competition of running side by side.

It was also figured that in case the match should prove a walk-away for one team, this method of having them run in opposite directions would not discourage the losers during the running as the boys will not know the results until after the finish.

Usually such contests are pulled off by starting from telegraph offices where the signal for start can be flashed from one city to the other. The local officers have decided to start the race either from the Y.M.C.A. building or from one of the main thoroughfares and set the watches just previous by long distance telephone.

The course starting at Fourth and Spring streets will run south on Spring to Main and on Main to Washington, then east to Central and down the Long Beach road through Dominguez to Long Beach.

A bronze cup is to be presented to the winning team and medals to each runner. The beach team includes several of the fast high school runners and for this reason is confident of taking the trophies. Roy Dodd, who holds the Southern California interscholastic record of four minutes thirty-seven seconds, in the mile is the star performer of the team.

None of the Los Angeles boys have made better than five minutes twenty seconds in the try-outs, but any one of the twenty-five can run close to this time.

Los Angeles is several feet higher than the beach terminal to the long race but the grade is gradual. A sharp grade will be encountered by the city boys just the other side of Willows and it is thought that this will make up for the handicap which the Long Beach runners will have to encounter.

Secretaries Clyde Doyle of Long Beach and H. D. Cross of the triangle department in the Los Angeles Association have charge of the contest.

FLYING SPARKS OF MOTORDOM.

Owing to the tremendous increase in the demand, the quality of gasoline has fallen off steadily for a year or more. Low-gravity gasoline is as likely to produce carbon deposits as poor oil.

There is a likelihood that the question as to whether Belleville, N. J., should purchase an automobile fire truck, or not, will be put before the voters at the next annual election of fire commissioners, in May.

The Indianapolis (Ind.) Motor Speedway contemplates holding a series of sprint races on the day preceding the big International Sweepstakes, May 29.

New York's Water Department is endeavoring to obtain an appropriation for two motor trucks, to cost $4000 apiece. The trucks will be used for repair work.

When cleaning a motor, it is advisable to do the work in the open air if wood alcohol and gasoline are used. The fumes of these two fluids combine to form a gas known as carbon dioxide, which is deadly in its effects.

A bill providing that automobile inspectors in New Jersey be paid $1200 a year, in place of $3 a day, has been passed by the New Jersey Assembly.

In addition to working for an appropriation by the Legislature for a continuation of good-road work, the Colorado State Automobile Association is endeavoring to secure the 1912 National Good Roads Convention for Denver.

An automobile drive, twenty feet wide and five miles long, will be built this spring on top of a sea wall at Manhattan Beach, near Coney Island, N. Y., by the Manhattan Beach Estates, a corporation owning more than 2000 lots adjoining Coney Island. It is understood that the drive will cost in the neighborhood of $300,000.

The Springfield (Mass.) Fire Commission has ordered two forty-eight horse-power motor combination hose and chemical wagons, with the understanding that they are to be delivered before June 1. The city received an electric hose wagon a few weeks ago.

Almost all good cylinder oils become chilled and thicker below 20 degrees Fahrenheit. Products of California or Texas crude oil will flow freely at zero. Such oils, however, have an asphalt base, and are likely to carbonize and gum.

Blooded Stock.

HORSE SHOW AT PASADENA HAS BIG LIST OF ENTRIES.

PASADENA, March 11.—The first annual horse show of the Pasadena Polo Club which will be given during this week, at Tournament Park, beginning Thursday and continuing Friday and Saturday, is expected to be one of the best exhibitions of horse flesh ever held in Southern California.

There are three or more entries in a total of thirty-seven classes.

One of the classiest exhibits will be that of the thoroughbred gaited saddle horses. In Class No. 49, five-gaited saddle horses, three years old and under, there have been three entries. One of these is "California Rex," the three-year-old colt owned by Dr. Lee C. Deming of Pasadena.

"California Rex" is one of the best bred saddle horses in the United States. He is a grandson of the famous old world's champion winner for nine consecutive years, "Rex McDonald," now owned by Ben Middleton of Mexico, Mo. He is a black stallion bred by Charles Kelly of San Diego, foaled in 1908; is fifteen hands and one inch high and weighs 900 pounds.

"California Rex" bids fair to be one of the champion blue ribbon winners of the world, beginning next year when he will be old enough to be shown under the saddle. He was exhibited last fall at the California State Fair at Sacramento and won the blue ribbon, also received a special recognition from the judges who stated that he was undoubtedly the best two-year-old saddle stallion ever shown on the Pacific Coast.

[illegible] will exhibit his and expects to carry away the blue ribbon. There will also be a number of other famous saddle horses in the big horse show.

There are a number of beautiful horses entered in the various heavy horses classes, as well as fancy drivers and especially in the polo pony classes.

Those who have entered horses in the show are F. W. Leadbetter, D. T. Perkins, Santa Barbara; Butler & Kenah, Garden Grove, Cal.; S. L. Howe, Vancouver, B. C.; Fred H. Bixby, Long Beach; F. J. Showalter, Glendale; A. M. Stuart, M. H. Ward, Arcadia; W. S. Wood, Pomona; E. E. Sherwood, Lamanda Park; South Pasadena Transfer Company, South Pasadena; J. E. Mason, Spokane, Wash.; W. A. Tires That Twice Too

Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires bills in two. Yet they cost motorist—not knowing these much for tires.

We have sold enough Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires to equip over 100,000 cars.

The demand for them last year trebled our tire sales. The demand for them this year is six to one ahead of our clincher tires.

Sixty-four leading motor car makers have contracted for Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires on their 1911 models.

This year these tires cost no extra price. You may as well have them. And you will have them—will insist on them—when you know the facts told in our Tire Book.

For your own satisfaction, ask us to send that book.

No Rim Cutting

Rim Cutting is simply impossible with Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires.

Half a million of the tires already sold have proved that. So have a hundred tests where the tires were run flat—as far as 20 miles.

You end all the worry, all the cost of rim cutting when you adopt this modern type. And that saving alone, on the average, means 25 per cent of one's tire bills.

This feature is controlled by our patents. It gives us the only practi-

From a point around the .300 mark his average slumps to less than .200. That's why Baker states emphatically that he would not play with St. Louis if he were given 10,000 cold plunks for his yearly stipend. All of which is some remarkable.

Globe Trotter.

Zbyszko, without question one of the bulkiest wrestlers in the game today, though failing in his endeavors to win the coveted mat championship from Frank Gotch, holds the plume as the greatest traveling wrestler. "Zby," as he is usually called in the short name language, covered 177,040 miles last year in his various "wrestle all-comers" tours. During his wanderings he met 166 men on the mat and had a clean slate of wins until he got real ambitious and went up against Frank Gotch. The farmer was too much for the Galician, and he of the breakfast food name went into seclusion for a rest period. No one, however, has attempted to question his claim to championship laurels in the wrestling traveler's class.

Double Umpires.

It's about high time for the Pacific Coast Baseball League moguls to slit the purse strings and add another umpire to the league roster. At present there are three umpires in this vast baseball world. This is one less than last season and judging by the relative earnings of the clubs there is no good reason for the same. Not a club in the league closed the last season with a balance on the wrong side of the ledger. Possibly not one club cleaned up a mint, but that is a poor reason for cutting down the staff to three. Every eastern league uses two umpires each game. One watches the bases while the other calls strikes, and the arrangement not only adds tone to the game but assures players and fans a better, faster, and cleaner contest, devoid of all possibility of shady decisions. If eastern leagues wherein the attendance is far smaller than on the Coast can have a double umpire system, why not the Pacific Coast League? Shylock methods will not increase the patronage. The fans should be considered in this latest determination of the league moguls. It is their coin that furnishes the turnstile music, that makes possible the magnates' percentage. Again, no Shylock methods will help the game.

Flanagan is anxious to take several recruits back with him for his team.

Word from the "Mud Baths" says that Capt. Dillon and his Angelic band are in excellent fettle. Dillon is not a bit alarmed at the big league showing of Hogan's crew, and says that he prefers to have his men round into form gradually, rather than all at once.

Cravath, who once upon a time wore an Angel uniform, will play with Minneapolis this season. His picture appeared in a recent publication of a Minneapolis paper, accompanied by a few lines to the effect that Cravath was in excellent shape, and would surely make a killing with the stick this year.

Today's games will be the last that the Red Sox Yannigans will play in Los Angeles this season. They leave tonight for the North, but their places will be taken shortly by the Sox's first team. Hogan claims that he will win two more games today from the Yannigans, and that he will repeat the dose when his team plays the regulars.

Notes of the Game.

Although Janvrin looked rather amateurish at third at times, he made a beautiful catch of Coy's high fly back of the bag in the third inning. It was a peach of an out.

Umpire Finney had a lot of close decisions, particularly at first base, but he stood for all the yells the fans gave him. He makes the mistake of talking back to the players and this stuff will get him nothing. It puts too many good ball players out of business.

McDonnell's pretty sacrifice bunt in front of the plate in the fourth could not have been better, and he would have beaten it out had not Priepke run over and covered first base.

Myers beat out a grounder he hit to Burrell in the sixth, but Finney wouldn't have it that way.

Yerkes tried to get funny with Schafer in the second inning and played too far off second. A quick throw to McDonnell nailed him a block. Sheehan tried the same thing with Willett in the eighth and was nabbed.

Tico looks like he might do although he fanned in his only time to bat. He was told to sacrifice Brown to third and after bunting two fouls could not see the third strike. He made a neat catch in center of Collins' fly in the eighth.

Perry was the goat for Hap Hogan. He walked twice and in the sixth was an easy out at first on a grounder to the pitcher. As he walked back to the bench Hogan yelled: "That's the way I used to hit 'em, Hank." Perry naturally swore for Hap is one of the weakest hitters in the league.

Hen Berry sat in a box toward first base and saw his old cast-off Castleton pitch beautiful ball for three innings. The only man to reach first off him was Nunemaker, who got there on McDonnell's low throw to first.

Yerkes had an off day and juggled two grounders. Still, the grass in the infield is not really "sure" yet and any fielder is liable to fumble.

Coy on first in the fifth tried to get to third on Brashear's hot single to left but had no more chance than a cow for Riggert threw him out a block.

Janvrin made the only double play when with two out in the seventh Burrell hit an easy grounder at him. He stepped on third and shot the ball to first in time to head off Burrell.

Sheehan's anxiety to catch Willett at first in the seventh earned him an error for he threw the ball too high.

Janvrin was the busy kid for he had three outs and three assists but only one of his chances was a hard one. He almost made a hit in the ninth with a liner toward second but Willett speared this and ended the game.

Carlisle, McDonnell and Hogan retired in the middle of the game, being a trifle sore.

Collins seemed to be in about the best shape of any of the Red pitchers although McHale is all that any team needs in the way of a prospect.

What might be called the only fielding feature of the game came in the last of the eighth inning when Yerkes ran in toward the pitcher's box and when just about to fall grabbed Patterson's grounder in time to throw him out at first.

Of the six errors in the game the only one that was really serious was Janvrin's pass of the ball at third in the second inning when Vernon made its only run. A Yerkes fumble followed this but Javrin might have gotten his man put at third.

Two Games Today.

The Vernon and Red Sox are to play two games today. The first one is scheduled for the Vernon grounds at 10:30 o'clock and the second for the Washington park at 2:30 o'clock. The Yannigans are to go north this evening and the Regulars are to come south this week.

Good Play.

LOS ANGELES GOLFERS DEFEAT THE SAN GABRIEL CLUB TEAM.

BY WILLIAM FREDERICKSON.

THE Los Angeles Country Club team of golfers won its home match with the San Gabriel Valley Country Club team yesterday afternoon.

The local team of seven men made a clean sweep of the individual matches taking every one from the visitors. This victory places Los Angeles on an even footing with Annandale Country Club, each team having won three and lost one game.

Fine weather favored the golf players yesterday after a week of almost impossible conditions for play. The course, however, was not in the best shape for the grass had kept on growing while the mowers could not be run and water was still standing in many places. While good scoring was difficult some of the players turned in good cards and one, J. W. Wilson, was but one down on bogey. San Gabriel's men found difficulty with the conditions to which they were unaccustomed and failed to win a single point in the contest.

Following are the results of the individual matches: Norman Macbeth, Los Angeles, beat H. N. H. Woodcock, San Gabriel, 6 up, 5 to play; J. W. Wilson, Los Angeles, beat F. S. Wade, San Gabriel, 4 up, 3 to play; W. R. Millar, Los Angeles, beat R. L. Tatum, San Gabriel, 1 up; N. F. Wilshire, Los Angeles, beat W. M. Marsh, San Gabriel, 6 up, 5 to play; F. H. Edwards, Los Angeles, beat H. A. Cole, San Gabriel, 4 up, 3 to play; L. T. Bradford, Los Angeles, beat F. O. Wood, San Gabriel, 4 up, 2 to play; Walter Cosby, Los Angeles, beat E. Conde Jones, San Gabriel, 2 up.

Next Friday and Saturday afternoons Los Angeles will play Riverside and Redlands teams on the local grounds, and during the week the latter teams will play Annandale also.

CATCHER TURNS BOXER.

FORT SMITH (Ark.) March 11.—Charles Schmidt, Detroit American League catcher, made his debut as a prize fighter last night, gaining the decision over Jimmy McDonald of Denver after ten rounds of hard fighting before the Arkansas Athletic Club. Schmidt had the advantage over McDonald from the start, flooring him four times and forcing him to the ropes repeatedly. Schmidt weighed in at 178 pounds and his opponent at 158.

ATTEL IS MATCHED.

CHICAGO, March 11.—Abe Attell, the featherweight champion, who has been out of the ring for several weeks with a badly wrenched shoulder, was matched yesterday to meet Frankie Burns, the Jersey City bantam-weight, in a ten-round bout. Attell and Burns will battle at the National Sporting Club, N. Y., on March 31. They will meet at 118 pounds ringside.

Gentlemen:-

Replying to yours of the 28th ult in reference to recommendation on the Oakland car. Beg to advise that we purchased five of your cars about a year ago, and all five of these cars are giving splendid satisfaction, so much so that when we were in the market for another car we purchased another Oakland; and if we were in the market for any more cars today, I think the Oakland would be the car we would buy.

One of these cars which we have been using for nearly a year has run about 25,000 miles, and after giving it a thorough overhauling, we find it is in practically as good shape as it was the day we bought it.

Yours truly,

JAPANESE COPY AMERICAN GAME.

Baseball Is Popular With Men of Nippon.

Love for College Sports Leads to Scraps.

Government Often Curbs Obstreperous Ones.

"Baseball, soccer, football a la Americaine, lacrosse, racquets, tennis, in fact there is hardly a game that students of American colleges and English universities practice today, that has not more or less vogue among the college boys of Japan," said A. J. Boardman, yesterday. Mr. Boardman is in a position to know whereof he speaks for he has but just returned from an extended tour through Japan and China, and is with friends in Hollywood.

"The Japs are training a track and field team, with a baseball nine included, for a tour of the States which will probably extend as far east as Chicago and even Philadelphia," he continued.

"For years Japan has been sending her best young men to America and other foreign colleges in order to learn western civilization. These, many of them at least, have brought back with them a knowledge and love for the games of their western Alma Maters and have done much to teach their fellow countrymen to play and care for them. And now the sound of "play ball" is as common as the cry of the fish sellers on the streets of the capital city of the empire.

"Japan has two large universities, Kieo and Waseda. The latter is by more than a thousand students larger than her rival institution. It was founded by Count Okuma, in the seventies, and has a faculty that includes many Yale and Harvard men. The physical director is Prof. Abe, a graduate of the university and a post-graduate of Trinity College at Hartford, Conn.

"Prof. Abe has built up a love for college sports at Waseda, that some years ago gave rise to a fierce rivalry between his college and Kieo, so fierce that the government was forced to step in and order intercollegiate games discontinued entirely. This has led to the growth of the interclass contests and each class and department in the big university is represented by several teams, and the rivalry is even more intense than between classes in our own universities.

DIAMOND GAME POPULAR.

"Baseball, Abe's specialty—he played on the college team in Hartford in several positions—is the most popular and the fans among the students are many. Nor is the interest in the game confined to the college men. Whenever a game of any importance is scheduled, the public flocks out to the college grounds to see, cheer, hiss, and root in the good old American style. As each class in each department has a team, and as there are four separate departments in the university, there are plenty of games during the season, between seventy-five and one hundred being played during the college year.

"The rules of the game as played here are practically identical with those in force on any American diamond, and are changed by the edicts issued by the magnates in the United States. The stick work is good, base running above the average of the States, and team play has been developed to a very high degree of excellence.

"But, if baseball is popular, so it football. In this game the rules are slightly different from those played in America. There has been more or less English influence at work and the consequence is neither the English nor the American college player would be quite at home on the local gridiron. But as the Japanese players play, the game is an exciting one, with plenty for the spectators to lose their heads about and yell themselves hoarse over. Here, as at home, the class rivalry is intense, and not so very long ago resulted in a riot that came very near putting an end to the game at Waseda University. Several of the players were injured when the crowds poured over the bounds into the field and stopped a game that had been too close for the referee to decide satisfactorily. The rioters were severely punished by the faculty, and the government, more paternal than ours at home, officially warned the student body that if such an affair occurred again college sports would be barred for a term of years.

MEET FOREIGN TEAMS.

"While games between the two big universities are forbidden on this ground, the athletically inclined of each institution get more or less exercise meeting foreign teams that are constantly touring this country. Teams from Australia and America are frequent visitors. So are teams from St. Louis College, Honolulu. This last was the first college to send a regular team to Nippon for a series of baseball games. It defeated the Wasedas and Kieos, as well as all the local teams made up to beat it. Two years ago Wisconsin University sent a baseball team to Japan and walloped the Nipponese in a way that was dear to the hearts of all expatriated Americans. The Chicago University sent a team.

"In other games, such as tennis, soccer, lacrosse and racquets, the Japanese give a better account of themselves, or else they have not been called upon to meet players of the class of those baseball sharks who have visited the Island Empire. This was illustrated when, last summer, the Chicago University nine came here and beat Waseda in every one of the series of ten games played on the local diamond. Hardly had the Illinoisans turned their backs when an aggregation from Melbourne arrived and was badly beaten by the same college in a series of five games of football.

"Kieo has done better than its bigger rival in these matches. It its series with Chicago it held the visitors down to an odd tally in almost every game. Indeed, so well did the boys do that the faculty and the alumni have planned out a tour for a college track team this spring. The team will go via Honolulu where the baseball nine will play St. Louis, to the United States. The full schedule of meets has not been completed as yet, but a number of American colleges on the west coast and in the interior have already signified their willingness to meet the Japanese. The team will be under the direction of two coaches, both of whom formerly played in the National League in America."

What Was The Matter With T Automobile Industry

IN an advertisement published two weeks ago we said we were going to disclose some interesting facts about the automobile business—and we are. We are going to call a spade a spade and tell you the truth about some things you may have suspected, possibly known, in part, or learned from sorrowful experience.

We, and we believe you, too, are disgusted with the way Circus Barkers, Stock Promoters and High Salaried of Rhetoric have been "pulling the wool" over the eyes buyers for their own profit and at the purchasers' expe misstatements and downright falsehoods have be the Automobile Industry.

The Regal "30"

1912 MODEL

Price includes Dual ignition system with magneto. Complete gas and oil lamp equipment with generator, jack and tools. Wheel base 107". Tires 32 x 3½". Brakes—4 in number. Internal expanding and external contracting, acting directly on hub drums. Cylinders—4. Bore—4⅛". Stroke—4". Three speed and reserve selective sliding gear transmission. Road Clearance—10".

Back in 1908 when the first popular priced cars made their appearance with the Regal as the Pioneer in this class, many manufacturers said "they can't build them at that price." There were, however, certain men in the industry who were wise enough to foresee that by using proper business methods, doing away with the enormous waste and overhead expense which had theretofore been a characteristic feature of the automobile "game," as it was called, that a Medium Priced Car could be produced if it were made in large quantities according to a careful design. Later events proved that their predictions were right. These men made a car, gave good value to the owners and were successful, financially

There were, however, other men, some with very little experience in the industry, who thought that this was such an easy task that they could do the same thing. They immediately began, therefore, to order material for thousands of cars—erected factories over night—shipped their material in carload lots by express and started into the business also. Such was the enormous demand for cars at that time, that for several months these cars were sold in large quantities, in such large quantities in fact, that in order to keep up with the demand work was done in tents, old buildings and in fact in any way to get out the product. Everybody went wild—there was a great hurrah—Promoters saw what they thought was better than a gold mine—Capital was invested in almost fabulous sums in enterprises whose assets consisted, mostly, of a bunch of blue prints, a trade mark name and a smooth tongued, clever advertisement writer or salesman.

During the whole year of 1908 the public fell for this "Buy tickets for the Big Side Show" talk. The factories apparently made money and the cars were sold. Some of the shrewdest manufacturers, however, at the end of this season saw that trouble was brewing—that something was bound to break, because no industry, however great, could stand such a strain, such a wasteful method of doing business, especially with such lax and unstable business organizations.

As soon as the alleged manufacturers (?) began to realize this, they saw their only salvation lay in adopting more daring methods, they came out with advertisements, boldly proclaiming their superiority, assuring the public of their sincerity and praising to the skies, the wonderful mechanical perfectness and ability which they claimed their cars possessed. Of course they had to do this. They had ordered thousands of parts—they had built enormous factories—had made large contracts with their dealers—made rosy promises to their owners. They had to do something and this seemed to offer the easiest loophole. But, although the "beloved public" may like to be fooled as P. T. Barnum says, yet it is hard to do it twice in the same place and the cars did not move in such overwhelming numbers as they had predicted and expected.

At the beginning of the 1910 season they found themselves in still worse straits—they put a new frame on the picture, re-gilted it and held it up to the public gaze once more—a beautiful (?) creation BUT at a SACRIFICED PRICE. As at the public auction that we see on our main street every day, only a few of the gullible bought—the rest were "cappers" and men paid to do the shouting. The majority of these cars had to be "carried over" another year.

In the meantime the well established manufacturers who had been doing business upon a safe and sane basis were proceeding slowly and carefully. They were obliged, of course, to enter into competition with the other so called "cars," but their real value and their straight forward and honest treatment of their dealers and owners soon enabled them to make still further inroads into the sales of their "fly-by-night" competitors.

Every one knows what has happened—how these companies have been forced into still more desperate straits—how as a last resort they have thrown to the winds any semblance of price maintenance, fair treatment of customers and dealers—how they have attempted to market their product by giving their dealers still larger discounts—how they have given the automobile industry a reputation which it never deserved and never should have had—how they have destroyed the public's confidence and how they have caused the loss of thousands and thousands of dollars not only to themselves but to the industry at large.

A few of these companies have, at last, learned their lesson and are now beginning to put their business upon a safe and honest basis, but unfortunately it will be many years before they can again gain the confidence of those dealers and owners who once purchased their cars. Notwithstanding this fact, however, there are two or three companies who are still pursuing the same old circus methods—still attempting to fool the public in the hopes that they may save some of the thousands of dollars, that they have NOW invested in cars which they had hoped to market Two Years ago.

It is needless for us to call these by name, as their PRICE CUTTING FABRICATIONS, "DIRECT TO CONSUMER FROM FACTORY" OFFERS, "OUTPUTS SOLD IN A DAY" AND AUCTION METHODS are gradually becoming known to every one

Now a word in regard to the Regal policy. The men who compose the Regal Motor Car Company are all men who have had a long and successful experience in the manufacturing business. They have been engaged in the manufacture of products where the margin of profit was so small that it was necessary for them to watch every expenditure and proceed with the utmost caution. This experience was, of course, very valuable to them when they started to manufacture automobiles and as a consequence, they decided that their policy should be one of safe and steady development.

The first year, after carefully studying standing the fact that the demand was

These were distributed in such a way

MOTOR TRUCK CONTESTS.

Endurance Runs and Races May Be Held Under Guidance of Manufacturers' Association.

Contests in which automobile trucks are involved will be governed all over the United States by a uniform set of rules if the plans of the Manufacturers' Contest Committee, which is rapidly securing the membership of all the big manufacturers, are successful.

Howard E. Coffin, designer of the Hudson car, who is president of the association, made the statement recently that sixty of the largest manufacturers have already joined the organization and that nearly all of the remaining producers of trucks have indicated their intention of supporting the M.C.A.

"Motor cars are going to be a tremendous factor in the life of the country from now on," said H. E. Coffin. "This year the truck makers will be holding a great many contests and unless they affiliate with the Manufacturers' Contest Association and compete under uniform and adequate rules they will soon find the commercial car contests in the same chaotic condition which at one time marked the pleasure car competition."

A Rules Committee, composed of several of the leading producers, is to be formed with in a short time. This committee will not only make the rules, but will act as a court of appeals where all difficulties in regard to contests, where members are involved, will be settled.

KUSTER AT THE HELM.

Takes the Place of Roy P. Hillman as Representative of the Contest Board of the A.A.A.

Edward G. Kuster is the new representative of the Contest Board of the Automobile Association of America. He has taken the place of Roy P. Hillman, and if you want to know anything about Kuster call Roy up and inquire. You will get a full indorsement of the young attorney, who has taken the helm in earnest.

Kuster seems to be made of the right kind of stuff. He is in favor of motor racing and already has helped to boost the game. He drives a Stoddard fifty-horse-power car himself and is prepared to help the autoists to the limit of his power. Of course, he obeys the law and expects everybody else to follow suit.

There are problems which Kuster must solve, but he likes the outlaws as well as the elect. He is endeavoring to serve the A.A.A. to the best of his ability. Those who know him predict that Attorney Kuster will make another hit in his new role.

AUTO INDUSTRY.

The remarkable growth of the use of the automobile in Connecticut is shown in the statistics of the automobile industry [illegible] the Nutmeg state, compiled by Arthur Fifoot, State supervisor of automobiles. Since the law requiring the registration of automobiles in Connecticut went into effect, in 1903, the number of cars in that State has increased almost threefold. According to Supervisor Fifoot's report, the automobile owners in Connecticut donated $161,375 to the State fund during the year 1910. In commenting on the growth of automobiling in Connecticut, Supervisor Fifoot says: "In 1903 the first law requiring the registration of motor vehicles was passed in Connecticut, and during the two years from May, 1903, to July, 1905, 3669 motor vehicles were registered. Nineteen hundred and five saw another law in force, and in two years, from July, 1905, to August, 1907, 5388 registrations were issued. The years 1907 and 1909 brought forth changes in the regulations, and the number of motor vehicles increased to 4500 in 1907, 5700 in 1908, 8000 in 1909, and 10,500 in 1910. There were in 1910, 11 manufacturers, 325 dealers and 18 liverymen, with approximately 1200 motor cycles registered. During this year, also, operators' licenses for the running of motor vehicles and motor cycles were issued to about 1000 persons.

MACADAMIZED ROADS.

A bill has been introduced in the Wisconsin Legislature requiring the State to build a public macadamized highway from the Illinois border to Ashland, Wis., on Lake Superior, the northern limits of Wisconsin. Fifty miles of the road shall be built each year, according to the bill, beginning with 1911, the work to begin in the middle of the route and to proceed in each direction at the rate of twenty-five miles each year. The cost is to be paid by the State, and the work shall be supervised by a commission of experts, who shall draw no salary, but receive actual expenses.

CAR WITH RUNNERS.

E. C. Belden, a farmer, of Suffield, Conn., owns an automobile for which he has a number of uses. The recent heavy snowstorms had little effect upon the service given by Mr. Belden's runabout, for he equipped the car with runners, so that it can with ease in twelve inches of snow. He took off the two front wheels, from which the tires had been removed, and bolted on a pair of 30-inch wooden rims, set with steel runners, in their place.

Has Reasons.

BROWN OPPOSED TO LONG ROUTE.

REFUSES TO MEET WOLGAST IN LOS ANGELES.

Tom Jones Tells Why Left-handed Slugger Will Not Battle for Fifteen or Twenty Rounds—Persuasion Fails Utterly to Induce Manager to Consent.

There is little likelihood that Knockout Brown, to whom eastern sports and writers gave a popular decision in his recent fights with Champion Ad Wolgast, will be seen on the Pacific Coast for a long while. And this because he does not like long-distance battles.

Knockout's choice is a battle of anything under ten rounds. He has no love or affection for the fifteen or twenty-round battles, the vogue on the Pacific Coast, to say nothing of unlimited-round fights. He tires perceptibly when the going exceeds the ten-round period, and writers hold that he would blow up if he had to go over the twenty-round route.

When Knockout climbed into the fore of the pugilistic band wagon, after his initial fight with Wolgast, Manager McCarey of the Pacific Athletic Club started on his trail. He had already matched Wolgast and Memsic for March 17, and his hope was to pit Knockout against the winner. He got into communication with Manager Morgan, but he refused to give any definite answer. Then McCarey hit upon another plan; he would endeavor to reach Morgan through Wolgast's manager, Tom Jones.

After Wolgast's last fight with Brown McCarey wired Jones to have A. C. Morgan, Brown's manager, get into communication with him for the purpose of framing up a fifteen-round battle in Los Angeles. Jones immediately carried the word to Morgan, but the latter would not listen to any proposal.

Several times Jones consulted with Morgan and Brown, and endeavored to have them consent to a battle in Los Angeles with the winner of the Memsic-Wolgast go, but they refused. All kinds of inducements were offered by Jones in McCarey's name, but all for naught.

Brown refused to box Wolgast or anyone else over the fifteen or twenty-round route. He offered to come west for a ten-round battle, but when informed that fifteen-round goes were the finales on the local boards, refused to cross the continent.

When interviewed yesterday concerning the situation, Manager Tom Jones said: "Yes, it is true that I endeavored to get Manager Morgan and Knockout Brown to listen to McCarey's offer to fight in Los Angeles, but failed. The eastern boys don't like the long grill. They can cut out a fast pace for six or ten rounds in the East, but after that they are in distress. For a fifteen-round show they would be easy picking for almost any boy on the Coast. It is very difficult for a boy accustomed to the long-drawn-out fight to show aside of those accustomed to the shorter route. It takes the best of them several times up to get accustomed to it. We found it out on our first appearances in the East.

"But there is no reason to feel that Brown can defeat Wolgast. Ad is the champion, and a championship can never be decided in a short battle.

GRADE CROSSINGS.

A bill has been introduced in the New Jersey Legislature for the abolition of grade crossings. The measure provides that the governing body of any municipality may petition the Public Utility Commission of New Jersey, alleging that public safety requires an alteration in certain railway crossings, and that the commission, after investigation and giving a hearing to all parties in interest, shall order and determine what alterations and changes, if any, shall be made. Where the highway existed before the railway was constructed over it at grade, or if the layout of the highway was changed for the benefit of the railroad after the layout of the latter, one-quarter of the total expense is to be paid by the municipality and three-quarters by the railroad company.

ROAD IMPROVEMENT.

Three bills have been introduced in the Tennessee Legislature, which is in session, relating to the improvement of roads in that State. One provides for the creation of a State highway commission; another authorizes the issuance of bonds by the individual counties for road-building purposes, and a third specifies the manner in which convicts may be used in connection with the work. The sentiment in the State is so strong in favor of the passage of the measures that it is almost certain they will go through.

SPEED-BOY JOHNSON.

The Athletics never tried to get the catcher's signals when Walter Johnson was pitching. Johnson's great speed made it too dangerous. A batter expecting a curve ball and stepping to meet it would be lucky to escape alive if one of Johnson's straight fast ones hit him. The Athletics took no chances. They feared no other pitcher.

A Plain Business Talk To Business Men

YOU'RE a Business Man. You employ business principles in your financial transactions. You count the cost of every investment you make. You buy right and you sell right. That's why you're successful.

We're Business Men. We make automobiles. Frankly, we want to sell you one—to present our claim for your attention in a strictly business way. We presume you're in a position to buy a car, so this is—

A Business Talk With a Business Man on an interesting subject.

Right Now You're Considering the Cost—first cost, maintenance cost, and cost of depreciation.

The Car You Want is a car for service in your daily work; a car for pleasure in your hours of leisure; a car your family and your friends can enjoy with you; a fine-looking car that will always bring you home, as well as take you away.

Your Problem is to get the car that fulfills these conditions, and fulfills them at the least expense.

The E-M-F "30" is one of the cars that you have considered. It is this car which we are making the subject of this talk.

The First Cost of the E-M-F "30" is $1000. There isn't any car of its class on the market—and we'll include all the experiments and promises as yet unfulfilled, by competing firms—that can be bought at anything like this figure.

The First Cost Argument is the one that has thrown the world of motordom into an uproar since October, 1910.

Others Can't Meet It. They couldn't meet the E-M-F "30" at $1250. At $1000 they are frantic. In the vain endeavor to obscure the issue they are being forced to the same tactics any man would employ to keep his head above the billows of the sea of failure.

We Don't Blame Them a Bit. We're genuinely sorry for some of them. When their own factories are sending out literature which, when read between the lines, simply begs, "Don't hit us when we're down,"—they're excusable.

The Truth About the E-M-F "30" isn't going to be obscured in the least, though, by the statement of any distracted rival. We're going to review a little of it right now.

The E-M-F "30" at $1000 is the biggest manufacturing achievement of the age. It has been made possible by the gigantic brain of the world's greatest builder of motor cars—Walter E. Flanders.

More Than $7,000,000 Expended under Mr. Flanders' own direction, over a period of more than two years, is the one possible factor to permit production of such a car at such a price.

The Vast Difference in Equipment for manufacturing its car is what distinguishes the E-M-F Company from all others in its class. The E-M-F Company makes its own motors, its own forgings, its own castings, its own carburetors, its own stampings—in short, its own car.

The Enormous Saving which the E-M-F Company makes in the production cost of its car is readily apparent to any business man.

Parts-Makers Are Becoming Millionaires at the expense of the purchasers of the cars put out by factories that are endeavoring to compete with the E-M-F "30."

The Cost of Material has become a much-mooted point since the E-M-F Company's recent announcement of a lowered price. Other manufacturers—to be blunt, assemblers—have rushed into print with the statement that material actually costs them more than it used to.

It Does. There's a good reason. Manufacturers of irons and special steels have been "stung" severely during the past few months by motor-car companies who have been paying their debts in paper and in obsolete models of automobiles.

Questionable Financial Reputation is an expensive asset. Cash rules now where paper once held sway.

The E-M-F Company Reaped the Harvest. Material manufacturers fairly fell over themselves to sell their output to a firm whose standing was unquestioned. They wanted to do business exclusively with a concern backed up by the biggest financial interests in the world.

The Inducements Offered have been a big help toward the reduction in price which the manufacturing system had nearly established.

You Want Economy. The E-M-F "30," as everyone knows, is a poem in strength, lightness and balance that reduces tire replacement expense to a minimum and makes other cars appear insatiable gasoline and oil eaters in comparison.

E-M-F "30" Quality is something we don't believe necessary to elaborate on further. The best evidence we can advance, next to the actual performance of the cars on the road, is the confidence of the factory itself in its output.

The Most Liberal Guarantee in existence—a guarantee embodying a definite promise by Walter E. Flanders himself—is issued with every E-M-F car.

Car and Equipment are warranted for a whole year, aside from the tires, which are guaranteed by the makers. To put out a motor car of anything but the highest quality, and to back it up with a promise like that would ruin any manufacturing concern. That's the reason others don't meet the E-M-F Company guarantee.

E-M-F 30 THIRTY

The new E-M-F "30" Roadster has arrived. For $1250 this car is furnished completely, equipped with top, glass front, speedometer, tire irons and magneto. Two of these cars for delivery on March 13.

Dillon Is Optimistic Over Season's Opening.

Live Gossip from Training Camp of Angels.

BY LOU GUERNSEY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MURRIETA, March 11.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "I think the Coast League Association will experience the most prosperous season in its history," said Dillon this afternoon. "All clubs have strengthened their teams and the race for the grand old rag should be a hummer with the Angels and Oakland teams fighting it out for first honors. "Interest all over the circuit is stronger than ever and the patrons of the various clubs can hardly wait for the season to open. From all that I read and hear I think it will be a great year for baseball on the Coast and that the coming of Donovan and his Red Sox has stimulated an interest in the national pastime."

The boys are calling "Kitten" Klein, the youthful slabster "Cactus" Klein ever since the lanky mounder took a running high dive into a cactus bed on the hill overlooking the hotel proper. Klein and Agnew, the Santa Clara pitcher, were returning this afternoon from a long hike over the wet fields and peat bogs and started a dog trot when they reached the top of the hill. Several hundred yards from the hotel Klein started some monkeydoodle work with the college boxman and they wrestled as they jogged down the slippery trail.

Klein slipped and slid at least twenty feet right into a bevy of pin-pointed cactus needles. He was punctured in a dozen places and fairly yowled for help when he found that he could not extricate himself. Agnew and several other players ran to his assistance and gently removed the pained and bleeding flinger from his prickly bed.

Doc Finley escorted him to his Blue Cross hospital and extracted nearly all of the cactus needles from his hide. Klein was in terrible agony for a while and slept very little last night. Fortunately his pitching arm escaped contact with the poisonous needle points.

The baseball player's lot is often mentioned as a bad one; he is referred to as a chattel bought and sold, and he is sometimes led to imagine, himself, that his whole life is one long grievance. But it is doubtful if in any other situation of master and man, as it must be in business, there is greater consideration shown for the man. There is only one organization in America that takes care of its loyal rank and file when in distress as well as does the great baseball organization, and that is the concern with headquarters at Washington and of which Uncle Sam himself is the owner and field general.

"People sometimes call us slaves," said Fred Abbott the old Cleveland backstop with Dillon at Murrieta, "but I could never see it that way. True, they buy and sell our services but we don't have to play unless we want to. I have always been treated like a prince by every manager and magnate I ever worked for, and seldom have I heard any complaints in big or minor league circles. We're no more slaves than the pale-faced bank clerk who is pulling down a measly $85 a month or any other type of workingman."

"Shamrock Agnew is the Poet Lariat of the camp and he admits it. The curly locked heaver penned the following and handed it to Manager Dillon who handed it to somebody else who presented it to me:

"A stands for Angels, speedy and fast,
They'll cop the rag this year at last.
B stands for Berry, balled as a ball,
He's ridin' the wagon, hurrah, that's all.

When I confronted Agnew with the above versified stuff he denied it with blood in his blue eyes but he finally wilted under my terrific cross-fire examination and confessed.

"Red Wing" Lockart the Sherman Indian pitcher is the Apache kid when it comes to pitching quoits—sometimes called Long Beach horse shoes. Lockart and Crips, the new Lindsay twirler, out-quoited Pitchers Coleman and Concannon in a rattling series.

Lockart has a hawklike eye and seldom misses the spike more than three or four inches. If he has the same control over the horsehide globe he will be a marvel, for he has great speed. Cy Young the greatest of them all, depends principally on his speed and control. He is really a no-curve heaver. That's the reason he's lasted eighteen years or so in the big boys' league.

Desk Sergeant Edwards of the East Side station is a guest at the hotel and is one of the greatest baseball fans in the county. He never misses a game in Los Angeles when he gets a chance to and is an old friend of "Cap' Dillon. The heavyweight Herlock Sholmes keeps tab on the boys training and watches every little movement of the players whether they are batting them out, tossing the medicine ball, or diggin' the sphere out of the sandy loam.

The Angel team is an evenly balanced one. There are several good hitters on the team, half a dozen fast base runners and all of Dillon's pets are good fielders. Dillon says he is going to pay more attention to batting practice this season. He realizes that a team can't win games unless the players clout the ball. Akin should bat .275 and Daley, Howard and Metzger will end the season right around this mark. Abbott should hit .250 or better and Teck is lightning fast between the bases and his classy base running will more than make up for any weakness at the plate. Lockart, the new twirler, is a cracking good slugger and he may be used in the outfield now and then to strengthen the batting branch of the Angels team.

Dillon is a firm believer that kicking is needless when the umpire is competent. He also grants that every mortal makes mistakes and does not bar umpires when he says so. For that reason he instructs his players to keep right on going and believes they will gain more in the end by catering to the umpire than by showing him up to the bleachers and grandstand when he makes a decision that is amiss. Dillon, is fighting all the time and instills the hit-the-line-low method of playing the game into his men, but he seldom calls the "ump" when the indicator man is trying to be on the level and call 'em fair.

Many disagree with Dillon and claim that taking a pot shot at the umpire now and then causes him to have greater respect for the kicker, for no umpire, no matter who he is, wants to be shown up before a crowd of fans.

"Red Wing" Lockart took a five mile "Longboat" over the hills yesterday and came back as fresh as a daisy. Lockart is the star marathoner at Murrieta and none of the other players care to tackle his game.

"Babe" Thorsen's arm hasn't given him a bit of trouble so far this season. Berry is counting on great things from the big heaver this year.

Coleman the Santa Ana twirler, tried out with the Angels three years ago. Jess Orendorff umpired several games behind Coleman this year and told Dillon to cop him as he has all the earmarks of a wonder. Coleman is six feet tall and has an exceptionally pretty delivery. He weighs 180 pounds and flings the smeared sphere up the breeze path the size of French peas.

Daley, Delmas and Akin are gradually taking off "closed season" poundage and Doc Finley says they will weigh in at the baseball limit the day they reach Los Angeles. They take mudders every day and Finlay gives them special attention on the rubbing table.

Several of the boys have small calibre rifles and pass a great share of their spare moments pegging away at targets set up on trees and old barn doors. Grindle is some sharpshooter and Klein and Criger are some Biffalow Bulls with the Winchester.

The cancelled San Bernardino game may be played next Wednesday on the San Bernardino grounds. The Gate City men are anxious to clash with the Angel club and Dillon thinks it would be a good practice game. San Jacinto, Riverside and several other nearby towns have wanted games but the rainy season has put the kibosh on all outside exhibition games with the possible exception of San Bernardino.

RED SOX DATE.

REDLANDS WANTS REGULARS.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

REDLANDS, March 11.—Arrangements are being made to entertain the southern division of the Boston Red Sox in Redlands on March 21. The game played between the northern division of the Red Sox and the Y.M.C.A. teams Monday, was so successful in point of patronage, that a contest was arranged for the veterans. The fans desire to see the real Boston team instead of the recruits and it is expected that one of the largest crowds that ever attended a ball game in an orange belt city will witness this contest.

The Bostonians will be given an automobile ride over Prospect Park, Sunset and Edgemont drives and will be entertained in the finished manner as have all major league teams visiting Redlands. There is another object in arranging this game and that is to impress upon the minds of the Boston management that an inland city should be chosen for the training grounds for the team. Members of the Boston team here Monday declared that Redlands presented better opportunities and a better climate than coast points. It is believed that should the Sox come to the Coast next spring, or for that matter any other major league team, that Redlands will be chosen as the training city.

This Speaker is a personal friend of W. E. Hester, physical director of the Redlands public schools. Purtell is remembered as having played here with the Chicago White Sox a year ago.

SNUFF-TAKERS GROWING CLASS.

The Art of Sneezing Is Still in Vogue as Large Consignments Received Here Indicate.

The fact that Los Angeles is a great city is not to be sneezed at. Yet the sneezing is done, by natives as well as tourists, without a perceptible dimming of the city's lustrous name.

To tell the truth, snuff-taking has not gone out of vogue here. Druggists are reporting the receipt of large consignments of the powdered tobacco, which is said to be manufactured mainly in Philadelphia and one or two other large cities of the East. It is sent in large tins, or in bladders, done up much as putty is, and a fair grade sells for about 75 cents a pound.

There is no caste among takers of snuff. They are mainly persons of mature age, but the old paper-seller from the street-corner demands the titillation of his nasal membrane as insistently as the wealthy banker with the gold snuff-box.

So far as any one can say the snuff is taken in the ordinary way. The people do not rub it on their gums, as do the southern mountaineers. There is one hopeful sign for snuff; it has not as yet been placed on the black-list by crusaders against the chewing-gum habit.

TOO MUCH OIL.

On many cars where the cylinder oil is simply poured into the crank case and fed by splash, the level set in the crank case by the petcocks is so high that the cylinders automatically get too much oil. This causes smoking and carbon deposit. It is best to put in a little less than the amount fixed, and then replenish in small quantities every fifty or one hundred miles, taking care that the oil supply does not get too low.

NO HORSE MARKET.

It looks if there will be no market for American thoroughbreds except at home in the near future. With South America closed, England agitating a tax on the American product and France closing even its steeplechases to foreign horses, the breeding industry in this country will have to find a market here or give up business.

Some one has added to the list of prizes to be given in the Jacksonville automobile races, late this month, a Florida orange grove. A number of jests regarding handing some one a citrus fruit leap naturally to the tongue.

Mitchell

$1625 35 horse power. 115 inch wheel base. 34x4 tires. Top and fore doors included.

One hundred fifty Southern Californians have bought 1911 Mitchells.

Is it wise for you to fail to thoroughly investigate this popular car?

You cannot appreciate the folly of failing to investigate the 1911 Mitchell until you have examined in detail the splendid construcion of this car.

We claim for the Mitchell—

That it is the strongest medium-priced car sold.

That it has given better service in Southern California than any other medium-priced car.

That it will give you more value for every dollar you spend than any other car you can buy.

We have the strongest kind of proof to back up these claims or we would not make them.

Please don't persuade yourself or let somebody else persuade you not to see the Mitchell by reasons based on insufficient knowledge. There is just one way to find out—come yourself and see. We will gladly spend an hour or five hours giving you the facts.

GAUNT RESCUES HIS WOMENFOLK.

Backing a grocery wagon into the raging torrent of the Santa Anita River, yesterday, C. H. Gaunt, general superintendent of the Western Union Telegraph Company, rescued an auto load of women from the flood waters and brought them safely back to Los Angeels.

Supt. Gaunt, who is visiting here, with Hugh McPhee, district commercial superintendent of the company, and their wives and a friend or two, were returning from a drive to Monrovia in an auto. Thinking that the Santa Anita was easily fordable, Gaunt's chauffeur drove the machine into the water, but it sank far deeper than he bargained for and the whole outfit was soon awash in the torrent, barely escaping from being capsized.

The women screamed and clung to the machine, while the men jumped into the flood and waded ashore, with difficulty, the water coming to their armpits. The engine was "killed," and they were unable to pull it out, so they secured a team and the grocery wagon. Wet through and through the party hurried to Los Angeles. The car is still marooned in the flood.

PURITANS BEAT POMONA TEAM

few seconds of joy to the hearts of the Claremont rooting section when he ducked over the low hurdles at a winning clip. He straddled the last obstacle exactly even with Stine, but that tow-headed little speedster forged ahead in the last strides and won. Stine said after the race that his tumble in the meet against Stanford last Saturday when he tripped over a hurdle seemed to haunt him every step of the race, and he almost fell over several of the hurdles.

Coach Stanton protested the 440-yard race, in which Walton and Wallace for U.S.C. took first and second, respectively. He claimed that the 'varsity athletes had "boxed" Sloane as they went around the first curve. As no inspectors saw the foul, the protest was not allowed.

Results:

Mile run: Fisher (P.) won, Smith (U.S.C.) second, Sturgis (P.) third; time, 4m. 32s.

The 100-yard dash: Throop (U.S.C.) won, Gillette (P.) second, Martin (U.S.C.) third; time, 10 1-5s.

The 120 hurdles: Hunter (U.S.C.) won, Olmsted (U.S.C.) second, Lorbeer (P.) third; time, 16 4-5s.

The 440-yard dash: Walton (U.S.C.) won, Wallace (U.S.C.) second, Lorbeer (P.) third; time, 52 4-5s.

The 220-yard dash: Throop (U.S.C.) won, Gillette (P.) second, Martin (U.S.C.) third; time, 22 3-5s.

The 200-yard hurdles: Stine (U.S.C.) won, F. Lorbeer (P.) second, Blair (U.S.C.) third; time, 27s.

The 880-yard run: Hall (U.S.C. won, Billings (P.) second, Rice (P.) third; time, 2m. 3s.

The two-mile run: Sturgis (P.) and Fischer (P.) tied for first, Warren (P.) third; time, 10m. 23s.

Mile relay: Pomona won; time, 3m. 33 1-5s.; team, Sloane, F. Lorbeer, L. Lorbeer, Gillette.

Hammer throw: Richardson (U.S.C.,) won; Barnes (P.,) second; Crinklaw (U.S.C.,) third; distance, 127ft. 5in.

Pole vault: Richardson (U.S.C.,) won; Watkins (U.S.C.,) Clarke (P.,) and Barnes (P.,) tied for second; height, 11ft. 6in.

High jump: Chaffee (U.S.C.,) won; Godbe (U.S.C.,) Clarke (P.) and Seaver (P.,) tied for second; height, 5ft. 7in.

Shot put: Montgomery (U.S.C.,) won; Kingman (P.,) second; Gardner (P.,) third; distance, 38ft. 4¾in.

Discus hurl: Bogart (U.S.C.) won; Carver (P.,) second; Barnes (P.,) third; distance, 103ft. 5½in.

Broad jump: Harris (P.,) won; Gower (U.S.C.,) second; Brooks (P.,) third; distance, 20ft. 5½in.

Stops Aeroplane Flights.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 11.—A report was brought here yesterday by the steamer Mongolia from the Orient that Aviator J. C. Mars was prohibited by the British authorities from making flights at Hongkong. The British government has strict regulations against the use of aeroplanes within sight of fortifications. Mars, who left here in January, gave exhibitions in Honolulu, but it is said he planned to make Hongkong the scene of his most ambitious work of the present tour.

Harris Hanshue will leave this week for Salt Lake City, where he will establish a branch for Leon T. Shettler, who has added Utah to his Apperson and Reo territory.

BIG SHOW OF MOTORCYCLES.

Los Angeles Club to Hold Second Exhibition.

Every Type of Two-Wheeled Craft Is Entered.

Local Organization Record Best in Country.

Motorcycles including every type and variety from the first old "bone shakers" to the smooth running 1911 models will be on exhibition at the Second Annual show of the Los Angeles Motorcycle Club at Nos. 631-33 South Spring street beginning tomorrow.

Every available inch of space in the large new building has been taken and the show promises to be by far the best exhibition ever seen in Los Angeles. A committee composed of Roy Symonds, A. F. Porteous, A. H. McCullough, G. Blaylock, Percy Powers and M. Davidson has been working for days getting ready for a show that is truly representative of the Los Angeles Club which is one of the largest in the country.

Up to the present time this is the only exclusive motorcycle show ever held in the United States. In most instances the motorcycles are exhibited as a side line with autos.

The inside of the show room has been decorated until it is one mass of bunting, flowers and motors, with accessories. No expense has been spared to make the exhibit as attractive as possible. It will be a veritable museum of the motorcycle world.

A number of the oldest machines in existence; machines that were made years ago during the experimental stage of the motoring game, will be included in the display.

The club held its first motor show last year in the club house on San Pedro street. The quarters there were small and the situation out of the way but the success both financially and in other ways was so great that the members determined to make the display this year a record breaker.

Special quarters for reception of out of town members as well as for the ladies' auxiliary have been fitted up at the show. The organization claims the distinction of having developed a large number of the local and national motorcycle champions such as Derkum, Graves, Ward, Balke, Seymour and Kittle.

All of these riders were at one time members of the local club and in some instances it was in the races and stunts pulled off by the organization that the riders got their start in the racing world.

For a number of years the Los Angeles Motorcycle Club had the largest membership of any similar organization in the country. News of the doings of the local riders has always been sought by the leading motorcycle journals of the United States.

There is no other place in the country where motoring can be carried on the year round to as good advantage as here in Southern California and for this reason the organization since it started in 1904 has been in the forefront.

The Hobble Nightie.

This is the legitimate, logical, expected, undeniable, last-born child of the hobble skirt. Those who prefer flowing draperies de nuit may console themselves that tootsies drawn up under the hobble on a cold night will be kept as snug and warm as little catlets under a mamma cat. Muggins Davies is the pretty party within this 1911 model. The cap which she wears doesn't go with the nightie, but will be charged extra. Neither does the candle. In fact, the candle doesn't belong at all, for the hobble nightie is as up-to-the-minute as a Tungsten, but Miss Davies carried it because she believed it "looked pretty."

Great Player.

CAPABLANCA IS STILL LEADING SPANISH CHESS TOURNAMENT.

BY C. F. PIERCE.

CAPABLANCA tightened his hold upon first place in the international chess master's tournament at San Sebastian, Spain, in which he had held the lead from the first through the eighth round without the loss of a single game, by defeating Janowski, the French champion, in a game adjourned by them in the fifth round in a position which was thought favorable to the Parisian. The young champion of all America, however, by a few deep and incisive strokes neutralized the advantage of position and thereafter steadily improved his game until the resignation of his opponent was forced.

This victory placed the young Cuban one and one-half points in the lead, having a total of six and one-half games to his credit for the eight rounds, three being scored as draws counting half a point each.

A. K. Rubenstein, the Russian champion, follows next on the score sheet, with five points, having moved up from seventh to second place by defeating Janowski and Leonhardt in two adjourned games. Frank Marshall, United States champion, and Carl Schlechter, champion of Austria, are tied for third and fourth places with four and one-half points each, and Dr. Tarrasch has only his chance of saving an adjourned game with Teichman to enable him to stand above his four point score.

Capablanca was scheduled to play Schlechter on the ninth round the issue of which will practically determine the Austrian's chances of heading the Cuban, who must lose a point on his bye of the eleventh round. The Cuban plays Maroczy on the tenth round, after which his task will be lighter against Spielman, Rubenstein, Teichman and Vidmar in succession, only the brilliant Russian being considered likely to cause him trouble.

LATEST REPORTS.

Since the last report by rounds Schlechter defeated Durs in the fifth, Leonhardt beating Maroozy, and Vidmar disposed of Bernstein in the same day; the other games were adjourned.

In the sixth round Marshall beat Vidmar, while the games between Burn and Teichman, Tarrasch and Rubenstein, and Niemzowitsch were drawn, and the rest adjourned.

In the seventh Marshall beat Teichman, Capablanca beat Leonhardt, and draws were scored between Spielman and Tarrasch, Rubenstein and Burn, terest in the meeting of Capablanca and Niemzowitsch, the youngest competitors in the tourney, wherein Capablanca won with the black pieces from the Russian. Burn beat Bernstein and Janowski defeated Teichman. Tarrasch drew with Vidmar, and Schlechter with Maroczy.

After the playing of adjourned games, the score stood as follows:

	W.	L.		W.	L.
Capablanca	6½	1½	Burn	3½	4½
Rubenstein	5	3	Bernstein	3	4
Marshall	4½	2½	Niemzowitsch	3	4
Schlechter	4½	2½	Janowski	3	3
Spielman	4½	3½	Duras	2	3
Tarrasch	4	3	Leonhardt	2	3
Vidmar	4	3	Teichman	1½	4½
Meroczy	4	4

MADE-OVER PLAYERS.

"Did you ever stop to think," remarked Manager McGuire of the Naps to a reporter at the training camp at Alexandria, Ga., "that I have a peculiar outfield? Outside of Dave Callahan, every one of the men who will be in our outfield this season started out in some other position. Graney was a pitcher until last year, when he signed him up for the outfield. Joe Jackson was a pitcher, but shifted to the outfield because of his batting. Ted Easterly was a catcher until last August, while Walter Doan is just taking up outfield work regularly for the first time. Joe Birmingham was an infielder in the New York State League, playing first, second and third, or all I know Callahan may have started out in some other position.

"But that is nothing new," said Bob Gilks. "Some of the most famous outfielders in the country started out in other positions. Elmer Flick was a catcher; Mike Tiernan, George Van Haltren, Mike Donlin, Si Seymour, Jimmy Ryan and Jesse Burkett were pitchers, and Willie Keeler was a third baseman. For that matter, half of the men who have acquired more or less fame as ball players worked in one or more positions before settling down in the one in which they became the most at home. Lave Cross was considered a mighty good catcher before he took to playing third. Hughey Jennings played nearly everywhere on the team before he settled down to covering short."

GAME BY JORDAN.

The following game was played by Alfred Jordan (black) against George Meiklejohn (white) in a simultaneous performance of eighteen games at the Chess and Checker Club of Southern California during the visit of the English champion to Los Angeles in February. The comments are by an expert observer:

REPORT FAVORABLY.

The Aldermanic Committee on Finance of the City of New York having reported favorably on the proposition to establish a municipal garage to be maintained by the city, special revenue bonds to the amount of $15,000 will be issued for the start of the project. The new garage is to be located at the Brooklyn end of the old bridge, and as many as possible of the city-owned automobiles will be stored there overnight.

A horse owned by John Haley, of near Mount Cuba, died the other day despite the treatment of a Kennett Square veterinarian, who was called in. The animal was cut open to determine the cause of death and three lizards and a snake were found near the lungs and heart. It is supposed that the lizards were swallowed in a gulp of water, but how the snake entered the animal is a mystery. It pressed against the horse's heart, causing

CRICKET LEAGUE FOR BRITISHERS.

ENGLISH, IRISH, SCOTCH AND WELSH AGGREGATIONS.

Southern California Clubs to Arrange Big Matches for the Season. Santa Monica Supremacy to Be Disputed—San Diego May Come in.

Members of the Los Angeles Cricket Club are formulating plans whereby the number of teams may be increased and practice games started at an early date. A meeting of all cricketers in Southern California is to be held on Monday evening at 8 o'clock in Mammoth Hall.

The object of this meeting is to discuss cricket prospects; to meet Arthur Jewell of Canada, who is starting a Canadian club and who wishes to combine lacrosse and cricket clubs into a British Athletic Association.

Jewell's idea is to form a separate club, but as John Alton, president of the Los Angeles Cricket Club, considers that the present ground is large enough to have lacrosse and cricket games pulled off at the same time, the members of the cricket organizations will try to induce Jewell to combine with them to form one big club.

Some of the members have suggested that four cricket teams be formed similar to those of three years ago; these teams to be uniform in batting and bowling. It has been suggested that the teams be composed as nearly as possible of English, Scotch, Irish and Welsh players; the Scotch team to be captained by A. R. Mitchell or J. F. W. Allen; the English team by T. D. Bamford or H. F. Elliot; the Irish by P. J. Higgins; and the Welsh by W. Wilkes or some other well-known player; such teams to bear the name of their patron saint, or the national emblem. In this manner keenly contested games would follow.

The St. Patrick contingent would hustle if the "Taffys" thought they could tread on the coat-tails of the Irishmen, and the Highlanders would get their claymores out if the followers of St. George mistook them for a dragon. Such rivalry is good for sport and makes the games highly interesting.

By electing such men as captains, men who know the game from A to Z, the club will flourish and cricket will be given such an impetus that outside clubs will have no trouble in arranging matches.

The great drawback to local cricket last year was that Santa Monica hogged all the best players, with the result that Los Angeles was not in it. T. D. Bamford made a splendid captain and never failed to put a team in the field, although he knew that he was in for a trouncing. Twice his team nearly defeated the champions, and, had catches not been dropped at a critical stage of the game, Santa Monica would not have had such a walk-over.

San Diego has a good cricket club and has given the local talent a taste of what it can do. Bamford and his men tried conclusions with them, but were unable to defeat the San Diegans. The tables will be turned this year as Los Angeles has plenty of recruits and with an early start the men will soon be in good form.

C. P. Hurditch will in all probability captain Santa Monica. With Fresno on the cricket map some exciting matches will be pulled off this summer. In the fall an English team is due, when All Southern California will be taxed to its utmost to give a good account of WHAT better car can you want than a Chalmers "30?" What more can you buy with any amount of money? You could buy a seven-passenger car, or you could buy more power.

That is all. If you want a seven-passenger car, all right.

As for more power, you can get it, if you want to pay for it, but you do not need it on any car not carrying more than five.

This car won the 1910 Glidden Trophy in competition with cars twice its price and power.

It has power enough to pull through streams, through swamps and through sands.

It has speed enough to make every control on time; it has as much speed as any one can use.

And in addition to endurance and reliability you cannot buy more beauty, either of line or finish, than you can get in the Chalmers "30." No car, no matter what the price, affords more delight than the Chalmers.

What more do you want, then, in a car than you get in the Chalmers?

FILM BATTERIES WINK AND THINGS DO MOVE.

National Moving Picture Companies, Taking Advantage of Unequaled Local Facilities for Production of the Popular Calico Drama, Bring an Ever-Increasing Volume of Cash and Advertising to City.

LOS ANGELES, as is natural, has drawn the leading moving-picture manufacturers of the world, as with a magnet, to establish permanent studios for the developing of the reels of film which are displayed in the various places of amusement in every quarter of the globe. Few of us realize what a great and prominent industry this has become, or the enormous amount of money expended by the various companies in the fitting up of their studios, their rehearsal theaters, and in the general plants involved.

The famous firm of Pathe Freres of Paris, Berlin, New York and London, has established a branch studio at Edendale, where the "western" pictures it is now exploiting are brought into being. The branch studio is, however, the smallest as yet operating on the Pacific Coast, although the company of players is second to none, and the natural scenes it is daily depicting are well up to the standard maintained by the company.

Operating alongside of them is the Selig Polyscope Company of Chicago, which is sparing no expense in fitting up the permanent studio which makes such a pretentious outward showing from the passing Glendale cars and so far can easily claim first honors in this field of endeavor. The company has built the exterior facing the thoroughfare to represent an old Spanish mission and has carried out the effect with genuine adobe, while in the interior it has sunk an enormous swimming tank which is brought cleverly into play whenever scenes requiring immersions in water have to be made. The studio itself, entirely composed of glass, is the second largest of its kind in the world. Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, it is asserted, has already been expended by this enterprising concern on its plant at Edendale, and one can readily believe such to be the case after inspecting the work done and the varied and expensive properties needed for the manufacture of these realistic motion-picture plays.

TWO THOUSAND FOR COACH.

An old stage coach, at one time the ly of hickory, is one of the company's latest acquisitions, and was secured by Francis Boggs, the general manager and director, for the goodly sum of $2000. It is in excellent preservation notwithstanding its eventful career, and it is well worth a visit, alone, to view this hoary, gaudy and strong relic of the past.

Boggs has assembled a well-balanced company of players, headed by Hobart Bosworth, formerly stage director of the Belasco theater and admittedly one of the most finished actors who has graced our local boards. He assists Boggs in the direction of the motion plays and plays the leading roles on most occasions. Francis Boggs was formerly an actor of no mean ability, a stage director of much experience, so the Selig productions are in safe and capable hands. The majority of the pictures taken by this company are those redolent with the atmosphere of the West, as a large number of horses are in almost daily requisition.

The Selig Company owns the horses it uses; as do all the competing companies, for that matter; and the stables attached to the studio harbor dozens of mettlesome steeds, some of which require more than careful handling. However, the company has in its employ several tried bronco busters, so that the equines find their manters whenever they endeavor to display their ugly little tricks and manners.

ACROSS THE WAY.

Across the road, on the other side of the trolley car track, the New York Motion Picture Company—known to the frequenters of the picture theaters as the Bison Company—has established itself with Fred J. Balshofer at the head, and associated with him is Ad Kessel, Jr., president of the company, president of the Empire Film Exchange and vice-president of the Carlton Motion Picture Laboratories.

Balshofer, although never having been on the stage as an actor, is an admirable director and considered the most expert camera operator in the profession. A deep student, he has availed himself of his manifold opportunities to analyze motography, and is one of the pioneers of the industry in this country. The company of players, which he has organized thespians, who have served capably and honorably before the footlights.

The leading man of this company, J. B. Sherry, will be pleasurably remembered by local theatergoers, who will, no doubt, recall his starring vehicle "A Night With the Poets," which assisted in holding the boards at the Orpheum when he was playing that circuit three years ago.

TO HAVE TWO STUDIOS.

Balshafer is about departing for New York to organize a second company of players, as the Bison Company is preparing to build a second studio here and will keep the two companies in constant operation. One of the companies will still devote itself to Western plays, and the other to comedies and the depicting of the dramatic plays of the hour and of by-gone days. Balshafer has just closed negotiations for the purchase of several blocks of property and says that, when completed, his company's studio and general plant will be the largest on earth.

There is, naturally, great rivalry amongst the different companies, which is a very good thing for Edendale and Los Angeles in general, as they are vieing with each other in their building operations and employing a great number of workmen. Many new stores are springing into being to cater to the growing wants of the people connected with this industry, and Edendale is fast becoming a busy thoroughfare, and is likely to become more so, as several other eastern companies are heading this way with the view of establishing permanent studios in this home of perpetual sunshine.

Several of the eastern concerns have been compelled to suspend their operations on account of the severe weather and lack of necessary light in New York, Chicago and Philadelphia, and naturally are finding it difficult to compete with the companies which who find Los Angeles the best place in the world for their purpose. The glass studio, at Edendale, is the second largest ever built, and the plant of which it is a part, cost a quarter-million dollars. A number of large companies are locating here permanently, and their operations are on an amazingly large scale.

Mirage Turns Real.

DESERT YIELDS HIS FORTUNE.

FORMER MULE DRIVER IS HERE TO SELL GYPSUM.

One of the Passing Characters of the Mojave Desert Comes to Los Angeles to Close Deal for Transfer of His Arizona Property to a New York Concern.

Dropped into the lap of fortune in a manner that may only be explained by destiny and with a bank account sufficiently snug to prevent his return to his old occupation of mule driver, Floyd Brown, one of the few remaining characters of the great Mojave desert, arrived in the city yesterday. He came for the purpose of completing the transaction for the sale of his gypsum deposits near Blythe Station, Ariz., to the American Gypsum Company of New York. The price paid for the holding is said to be $100,000.

Since the early days when Indians were painfully plentiful, and travel was exceedingly dangerous, Brown has been identified with the arid wastes in the southwestern part of Arizona. He was one of the earliest settlers in the continuation of the great Mojave Desert, and has watched it develop with a steady magic impulse. Where were once immense reaches of trackless waste are now railroads and fairly regular roads. Cities and towns have sprung up in procession, until now it is scarcely a day's journey on horseback between.

And during all those years Brown was a teamster. At first he manipulated the bawling rawhide over the slowly-moving bullocks. Later this mode of travel changed to the stage and, until he left for Los Angeles a few days ago to complete the sale of his gypsum, he has alternated between stage driving and mining.

The deposits of gypsum held by Brown near Blythe Station are said by experts to be the purest known to the mineral world. In the worst sections they run 98 per cent. pure, and the remarkable absence of alkali and its by-products and elements makes the substance of far greater value from a commercial standpoint.

The American Gypsum Company, through its local agents, has been investigating Brown's holdings several months. The substance was submitted to a searching analysis in the company's central laboratory in New York, and the report concerning its excellence resulted.

Shortly after this, an option was secured on the property by the company's agents, and several days ago, Brown received word to come to Los Angeles and complete the details attending the sale. Brown, true to type, refused to take anything but a straight out and out payment of cash for his holdings, and that, more than anything else, caused him to come to Los Angeles at this time.

According to business confidants of Brown, the American Gypsum Company, upon the completion of the pur-

BEACH CITIES START FIGHT.

Charge Discrimination in the Trolley Rates.

Crescent Bay People Say Pasadena's Favored.

Going After the Railroad Under New Law.

Acting under a law that became effective less than a month ago, and asserting that there is discrimination in favor of Pasadena, Santa Monica, Ocean Park and Venice are preparing to take steps designed to reduce the fare to the beach cities.

The law provides that all points must be treated alike in the matter of rates and provides misdemeanor punishment for any official who is proven guilty of having violated this mandate.

However, the cities which assert that they have been injured hope to accomplish their purpose by less strenuous proceedings, and will first appeal to the State Railroad Commission to fix the charge for passage. Merchants who allege that their business has been seriously affected by the discrimination, declare that they will file suit for damages against the railroad aggregating $100,000.

Residents of the tri-cities admit that they are jealous of the prosperity of the Crown City and attribute its rapid advancement to the fact that it has been favored in the matter of transportation facilities.

They declare that their own natural increase in population and business has been diverted by the fact that they cannot offer the inducement in the way of cheap travel to and from Los Angeles, which other places can hold out.

Under the act of the Legislature, passed last month, and which became effective immediately, the Railroad Commission was granted plenary powers to deal with transportation matters. The body had heretofore been able only to fix maximum rates without applying them to any particular localities.

As the law now stands, the commission can absolutely fix the rates between any given points and the railroads can only procure relief by a review of the proceedings, if the companies are unjustly dealt with.

The bill also provided that the companies must be impartial in the charges they make. One community must be given a rate which is equal to that granted another, the traffic conditions and distances being taken into consideration.

Further than this, the residents who are damaged by any discrimination are given the right to appeal to the courts to have their damage remedied substantially.

Probably the most stringent feature is the provision that the railroad officials must make an equitable distribution of fares under penalty of being made to submit to criminal prosecution.

PREPARING FIRST CASE.

The beach officials are preparing the first case which will be settled under the new law and the outcome will establish a precedent. It is unlikely that the courts will be called upon to interpret the new statute, as there is likelihood that the railroad and the beach residents will settle their difficulties amicably.

The Santa Monica Chamber of Commerce is leading the fight for lower rates. Its legal adviser is Frank Stewart, Assistant United States Attorney. Santa Monica is represented by City Attorney H. W. Taft, and Venice and Ocean Park are expressing their interest through City Attorney Byron C. Hanna.

Several conferences have been held with the result that a decision has been reached to take immediate action. The commission is scheduled to hold Hints of the Great Fashion Event.

VEILED WINDOWS PIQUE CURIOSITY.

Last Season's Spectacle to Be Outdone When United Show Opens on Thursday Next—Many Out of Town Visitors Will Witness Beautiful Affair in Prospect. Excitement in the Air.

SUPPRESSED excitement fills the air on the boulevard. Shoppers are all agog over the coming Fashion Show. Women are eagerly asking—"What do you suppose this store will do?" "How can that one outrival last season's display?" "Have you seen any of the exhibits?" "Are not the posters chic?" "When will the windows be unveiled?" In fact, curiosity rules the day and there is much speculation as to what can possibly be devised that will surpass the last United Fashion Show display.

One of the big stores which always does something great for occasions has already closed its windows from public gaze and a film of white is all that greets the passing glance; but things are evidently going on behind the scenes. Great things seem to be going on, in fact, for in some places whole panes of glass have been removed. It looks as though the store were to be made over for the great unveiling of Wednesday evening. Although, as everybody knows, women have very little natural curiosity compared with men—there are a good many women "snooping" around those windows. "What do you suppose can be going on in there?" say their very attitudes.

In the stores there is quite as tense an air as outside among the shoppers. Now and then a salesman or possibly a saleswoman who has a sister feeling will call you mysteriously to one side and say, "Would you like to have just a peep at one of the gowns which is to be in our window for the United Fashion Show?" Of course you dislike to own that you have been hanging around with that hope hidden in your thoughts, but you act surprised and prepare to feast your eyes. And it is a feast, too.

The French evening rooms in some of the establishments are practically devoted to housing the wax ladies who are to appear in public next week. They are there holding a sort of dress rehearsal. I can imagine them comparing notes as to which has the most becoming costume and whose colors go best with her hair and eyes. "I wish they had given me that light blue with the cerise, as it would have been much more becoming to me with my complexion," I fancy I hear the brunette remark. "I never did like to wear my hair high, and I think I am a fright in rose color," says another. "If they would only consult us before deciding what we are to don, it would be much better, in my opinion!" exclaims a rosy-lipped beauty. But when the Keeper of the Robes appears, to show the favored customer just a glimpse of the coming Clothes Fair, these lovely waxen ones say never a word and the onlooker knows only that she beholds gowns more beautiful than it has ever before been her good fortune to look upon, and does not even guess the secrets which these stately ladies have just been exchanging.

Battle's Thrill.

SPIRIT HELD BY SWORD'S LURE.

VETERAN MILITANT NEARS HIS LAST BATTLE.

Octogenarian Survivor of Gen. William Walker's Ill-Fated Expedition Awaits in His Monrovia Cottage Home the Final Summons. A Noted Political Leader.

With mind undimmed and spirit undismayed, Capt. James Carson Jamison, octogenarian survivor of Gen. William Walker's ill-fated Nicaraguan expedition, editor and political leader who is calmly awaiting death in Monrovia.

Capt. James C. Jamison,

for half a century, awaits in his Monrovia cottage home the last curtain in life's drama.

"And one man in his time plays many parts."

To few is the master playwright's terse summary so pertinently applicable as to this patriarch from an era concerning which he writes "The cavalier, with his plumes and ribbons, had not departed and the music of the troubadour still tinkled amid the sounds of revelry. Those were days when the ardor for adventure by land and sea was hot in the breasts of men. In the vast region of the West, the stars shone upon a primeval wilderness where there was lure of gold and where hunger and conflict and even death challenged those whose daring and hardihood defied the vicissitudes of fortune and their search for El Dorado."

Thus interpreting the spirit of his age and endowed with strength and vigor far beyond the average, it was natural that young Jamison should be among the first to cross the plains from Missouri to the California gold fields in the spring of '49. He was then 19 years of age, having been born in Pike county, Missouri, the same Pike county whose stalwart sons for a century have enriched the annals of adventure.

For five years the youthful Jason tried to shear California of the "golden fleece," and was still on his quest in Eldorado county when he heard of Walker's battles in Nicaragua. Thralled to a knight-errant spirit, he hastened to join the hard beset band of Americans striving to establish in the turbulent tropics a government worthy of the name. Embarking from San Francisco with 150 other adventurers, he enlisted in Gen. Walker's "American Phalanx" at Granada, Nicaragua, in December, 1855.

On the voyage down the coast the "Soldiers of Fortune" had organized, electing Jamison as lieutenant. On arriving at Granada, he was formally given his commission by Gen. Walker. He was soon promoted to a captaincy and took part in a half dozen desperate engagements in which the Nicaraguan forces were outnumbered ten to one.

He was several times dangerously wounded, but remained with Gen. Walker until the surrender at Juan del Sur, May 1, 1857, to Commander Charles H. Davis, U.S.N.

In vigorous refutation of charges that Walker's men were renegades and marauders and that their leader was merely a modern freebooter, Mr. Jamison says: "Americans as a whole respected the rights of property, the sanctity of domestic relations and the sacredness of life as honorably as would be possible in any civilized country in time of war. Gen. Walker was a disciplinarian in whom stern con-ica, were many who, like Capt. Jamison, afterward won high position in their home land.

Returning to Missouri when discord between North and South was culminating in conflict, Capt. Jamison cast his lot with the Confederacy and in the long struggle rose to high rank.

At the close of the war, still seeking an outlet for a militant spirt, he founded the Plattsville (Ky.) Sentinel and later the Bowling Green (Mo.) Times. Retaining ownership of these papers he acquired the Louisiana Missouri Press. He had long since won recognition as a power in the State and the Louisiana Press was a political factor to be reckoned with. This paper was afterward purchased by the redoubtable Champ Clark.

From 1885 to 1889 Capt. Jamison was Adjutant-General of Missouri in Gov. Marmaduke's administration. Moving to Oklahoma in 1890, he organized the National Guard of Oklahoma and was State Adjutant-General from 1893 to 1897. He came to California last autumn and has since made his home in this city.

Pure Drinking Water.

Full Information as to What It Is, and Where to Get It.

Just One Reliably Pure Drinking Water Obtainable Hereabouts.

You'd like to have pure water to drink—almost everybody would.

But where are you going to get it, and how are you going to distinguish it from impure water? These matters cannot be determined offhand, yet they are worth considering. And once you find a reliably pure water, you've made a discovery of real importance.

The necessity of pure drinking water is not fancied—not at all. It is essential to continued good health, to the well-being of the body. Impure water causes disease — everybody knows that. Epidemics, sometimes affecting a whole town, often follow the use of impure drinking water.

Here in Southern California most of our natural waters are unfit for drinking purposes. In addition to vegetable or bacterial impurities, they carry considerable amounts of mineral matter. Often you can taste these minerals. By putting a few drops of Nitrate of Silver in water you can quickly detect mineral impurities—as the water turns a milky white if they are present.

These minerals become deposited in the arteries, proving a fertile cause of rheumatic and kidney troubles. They are not assimilated, nor readily passed off. The stiff joints that elderly people sometimes complain of are frequently caused by the long use of mineralized drinking water.

Distilled water is the only pure water that is readily available to people living in cities. If properly distilled it has no mineral or vegetable contents whatever. It is just pure H20.

But to be really palatable and enjoyable, distilled water must be carefully aerated. Then it becomes sparkling, and refreshing to the palate. Yet nothing but the purest of air must be put into the water, otherwise its purity will be affected.

In Puritas Distilled Water Southern Californians have an absolutely pure, reliable, wholesome, sparkling drinking water.

Puritas is twice distilled, and thus rendered absolutely pure. It is aerated with pure ozone, secured by passing a current of electricity through filtered air.

Puritas is bottled in glass demijohns that are absolutely clean. Thus it reaches you with all its wholesome purity intact.

If the demijohn is kept carefully corked when not in use, you'll find that Puritas remains pure until the last glassful is consumed. And Puritas "stands up" under test. Its purity is not a theory, but an ever-present fact. Puritas is just pure water—every demijohn, all the time.

Puritas is so inexpensive that every family can well afford to have it. Five gallons cost but 40c delivered within the old city boundary lines. At outside points the cost is a trifle more, owing to the long haul. Regular Puritas customers purchase Coupon Books, thus securing the pure water at a discount.

When you telephone, ask us about these—Home 10053; Sunset, Main, 8191.

Puritas is obtainable through dealers in most towns in Southern California. If you are unable to secure it easily, do not accept any substitute ernment in the colleges, the high schools and even in the homes. We talk about triumphant democracy, at least benevolent Mr. Carnegie does, as though there had ever been such a thing. In this land of the free, we denounce the tyrannies of monarchies and rejoice that here, at least, a free people govern themselves. In what?

Well, even the most despairing pessimist must admit that from time to time we do change bosses. I suppose that might be called one function of self-government. It had another, but I have forgotten what it was when it used to be.

It is humiliating to class ourselves with the Filipinos and the South American republics. But the fact appears to be that the world is not yet ready for self-government.

There was, once upon a time, a people as absolutely free as any people ever can be. The old Jewish nation was a theocracy. And in a little while they got tired of their judges and weary of God and demanded a king. They stood three kings, then five-sixths dynasties they leaked out of the landscape of the nations, and shortly afterwards the two tribes that stood loyal to the House of David were scattered up and down the earth like the leaves of a winter forest.

According to Aesop, one of the most truthfully accurate and painstaking historians that ever recorded faultless chronicles of simple and straightforward fact, the frogs were at one time the freest self-governing nation on land and water combined. They also experimented with kings, finding their effort at self-government a failure. They had two kings. One they held in contempt, the other in deadly fear.

In the fullness of time came the greatest experiment in self-government known to modern time. A week of years our fathers fought for self-existence. And when the United States was brought forth from the womb of war, it didn't know whether it wanted to be a confederacy or a union. It finally decided on union, but it called for a baptism of fire and blood to confirm the decision.

anything — qualified by intelligence, honesty and self-knowledge, to elect its own Senators. "It is much easier to buy a Legislature," remarked that pure and able statesman, Senator Benedict A. Lorimer, "than it is to worry through an election." And the convicts in the penitentiary at Joliet, as they gathered for their evening prayers, sand:

"We shall meet, but we shall miss him; there will be one vacant cell."

Senator Lorimer is the sell.

"God has remembered me at last," said this devout and simple-minded Senator, whose extreme poverty has proved no bar to his political preferment.

It does not yet appear that he has, but it is to be feared that he will. In which case the Senator will find himself in hotter lines than he has been passing through, in a place which is harder to get out of than the United States Senate is to get into. The "open sesames" burn or melt so quickly.

the execution of Charles I, the kings of England have died in peace, though they mostly lived at war. And within forty years past, three Republican Presidents have been assassinated by this "self-governing" people. France grew weary of her emperors; Portugal threw off her king—who was really no more than a jack; the Englishmen are tried of the House of Lords as America seems to be of her Senate, and the Irish naturally want to get rid of everything except the Irish. The Germans flock to the United States by the million to get away from the Kaiser, and then swarm to Milwaukee and St. Louis to get out of the United States. Poles and Huns and Sicilians fly from their homelands because they can find no work, and when they arrive here they go on strike because they find too much.

Our citizens admit that they do not know how to select well-qualified men for municipal offices, by the care they take to make provision for unseating them as soon as possible after elect- though we are the ones who must decide. We say, "Let's wait and see what the Democrats will do." As though we could wait—a couple of hundred years between quadrennial elections. The Democrats themselves have no idea what they will do, nor yet what they think they want to do.

We do not govern ourselves because we do not know what we want. And if we did know, we wouldn't know how to get it.

There isn't one man in a hundred, nor in two or three or four hundred, who knows how to order his own dinner, although he has no one on earth but himself to please or to consult. The average man goes into the cafe, empty as a drum and hungry as a shark, picks up a menu card that will reach from wherever he holds it, down to the floor, scans it with the air of a bon vivant, frowns, throws it down and says:

"Oh, gimme beefsteak and potatoes."

And yet that helpless thing thinks he has the exclusive right to vote doesn't know enough to select a new style.

If he goes to his tailor's alone, and selects a new suit, he gets mad when he goes home with it on, because his wife laughs and runs out of the room. And he thinks he alone knows how to select a new President.

There's no use talking. The world is not qualified for self-government.

"Then," you ask, "who does govern it, if it can't govern itself?"

Well, read the daily papers for about a week, giving careful attention to the crimes, swindles, divorce and political columns, and I'll give you two guesses.

BY-PRODUCT OF THE RAIN.

The principal result of the rain is good crops for California from one end of its golden shores to the other. As a by-product, however, we may mention the increase of good complexions among our pretty girls.

THE WAR AT LONG BEACH.

It pleases us to note that the contest over the location of the new public building in Long Beach has been settled. It was almost as exciting as the Mexican revolution while it lasted. Our congratulations to Long Beach. But what next? Let us not have peace!

WATCH THEM!

Within a very short time the Democrats in Congress will be compelled to go on record as favoring either free-trade or some modified form of protection. If they favor protection on a single item of the new tariff bill, the wisdom of the Republican position will have been vindicated. Watch 'em do it. Keep an eye on the southern members.

NOT FOR JAPAN.

Among the silliest of the silly rumors that have lately had currency is the one which intimates that Japan has been granted a right to maintain a coaling station on the west coast of Mexico. The minute Mexico did anything of that kind she would have trouble on her hands and plenty of it. Japan would only be fooling herself if she imagined she could make such a move right under Uncle Sam's nose.

THE WAR GAME.

There are men in this and other towns consumed with curiosity to know what is the meaning of the mobilization of troops along the Mexican border. As a rule these men are persons to whom it cannot possibly make the slightest difference what the reason is. Yet the world would not be the same without such men. The human race would be a sad conglomeration if every unit in it were blessed or cursed, as the case might be, with common sense.

LOSS TO THE WORKER.

It is a part of the stock argument of Democratic-insurgent tariff revisioners, that even if tariff reduction shall lessen the wages of the worker in the furnaces and the factories, the loss will be made good to him by the reduction in the cost of living. This position is not tenable, for bread and meat, potatoes and vegetables, sugar and milk, butter and eggs, fruit and fowls, fuel and rent would not be lessened in price by tariff reduction. The workman might save 50 cents a year on his expenditures for needles and thread, but newspapers and car fares, tobacco and pew rent, Sunday-school subscriptions and materials for painting the town red would remain at present rates. He might save $50 a year on the prices of articles affected by a tariff, but he would be sure to lose more than $100 a year by the reduction in his own wages.

RECLAMATION BLUNDERS.

The blunders of the Reclamation Service have cost the United States government—the people of the country—millions of dollars, as the Senate committee has pointed out. Dispatches indicate that these blunders are going on and on—that the end is not yet—that the work is marked by inefficiency and extravagance. There have been some fearfully expensive botches at Yuma. Col. Ed F. Browne has pointed out many such errors and delusions in his letters to The Times. But the men who have won the West may yet conquer all these obstacles in the way of redeeming the desert. They are doing great things in this direction in many instances, notably in the Salt River Valley, and they deserve every encouragement. They certainly will get a fair show from The Times, which will continue to present from time to time every phase of progress and blundering, too.

A RECORD OF DISASTER.

The stockholders of the American Tanning Company of Newark, N. J., having contributed $150,000 without any beneficial results in the way of dividends, and being asked to contribute $150,000 more, thereupon called on the president of the company to rise and explain. He did so by reciting a history of misfortunes that were as unique in their character as they were disastrous in their results. He reported that every day some new trouble turned up. First the boilers gave out, then the engines gave out, and then the floors of the tanks and the mills sank, as soon as the whole thing was fixed up. Then it was found that every one of the machines was junk. They had next to tear down the main pipe in the boiler-house to avoid an explosion. Then a blizzard blew the skylights off. Then the skins were frozen and were spoiled by cracking. New skylights were put in and the plant was equipped with steam heat. This melted the snow on the roof and caused the roof to leak. A new roof was put on, and then the floors gave out. Then the supply of hides failed, the men who had learned to make leather by the "secret process" of the president of the company gave the secret away and the company was "done busted." The explanation certainly explained.

The Colorado River is to be tamed by Engineer Ockerson if by anybody. The best authorities confirm the impression that Ockerson is equal to the giant's task before him. Let us all wait and see what he can do with the unruly stream. We share the opinion of Col. Holabird that there is no occasion for alarm.

Why not have the day the California Assembly adjourns sine die set apart as an occasion for thanksgiving? Ring, out, wild bells!

AN OBJECT-LESSON IN NEUTRALITY.

During the Civil War Exeter Hall in London went out of business as a sympathy shop for American slaves. The fatherhood-of-God-and-brotherhood-of-man doctrine had been for years flaunted by John Bull as an umbrella vendor displays a gaudy-colored umbrella in front of his shop as a sign. He always takes it in when it rains.

The statecraft of Great Britain is entirely commercial in its character. Since Waterloo her soldiers have never fired a gun except for the purpose of retaining or extending her trade empire, and as a practice, if not as a rule, she has warred only with weak and obscure nations. With El Mahdi and El Muddy and the Rajah of Hungerbad she could assume high grounds, but as for a contest with France or Germany she begged to be excused.

Yorktown and Lundys Lane had for half a century quieted her appetite for sending her troops across the Atlantic, but Uncle Sam's calamity seemed to be John Bull's opportunity, and the manufacturers and merchants of Great Britain hoped and looked for the triumph of the Confederate States, because they believed that such triumph would result in the establishment of free trade in America south of the Potomac.

Gladstone predicted the destruction of the American Union; Disraeli, for once, agreed with him, and only the refusal of Victoria to allow Palmerston to take advantage of the capture of Mason and Slidell on the deck of the Trent prevented the navy and army of Great Britain from being sent to the aid of the southern Confederacy.

But what could not be done openly might be achieved secretly, and the eyes of British officials were fixed in other directions while 490 Liverpool merchants contributed the money to construct and equip an armed steamer and send her forth to prey upon American commerce. This vessel was originally registered under the name of the 490, but was subsequently rebaptized as the Alabama. With her companion ship, the Shenandoah, she lit the Arctic ocean with the flames of our burning whalers and drove unarmed American clippers from the Atlantic. The Alabama avoided a conflict with any armed vessel flying the Stars and Stripes, but was finally coaxed or forced out of an English port by the commander of the Kearsarge, who, almost within sight of the shore, covered the surface of the British channel with the splintered timbers of the pirate.

The action, or rather non-action of Great Britain, in permitting the Alabama to be outfitted in a British seaport, to be officered with Confederates, and to be manned with British seamen, for the avowed and subsequently-accomplished purpose of preying upon American commerce, was so palpable a violation of the law of nations and so utter a disregard of the obligations of neutrality that Great Britain did not resist the Alabama award and promptly paid $15,000,000 for her offense. Financially she was the gainer by the transaction, for, while the money that was paid compensated the owners of the destroyed ships and their cargoes for their worth in dollars, the value of the carrying trade that was transferred from American to British bottoms and which has never been regained, could not have been a subject of indemnification and would indeed have been incapable of computation.

Some of our public men regretted that England did not refuse to pay the Alabama claims or even to submit them to award, on the ground that such refusal would have been of immense value to our shipping interests, for we could have accepted the precedent that Britain had established. We could have taken advantage of her war with Abyssinia to have fitted out in our ports privateers whose captains, armed with commissions from King Theodore, could have driven British merchantmen from the ocean and we have regained our commerce by the same process through which we lost it.

Apply to existing conditions on the Mexican border the doctrine of the duty of neutrals to prevent any use of their soil by warring foreign powers, for the purpose of recruiting soldiers or furnishing supplies to either combatant, and where would we stand if we failed to perform that duty? If we should fail to adequately guard our frontier, or fail to arrest and bring to trial in our courts all who are engaged on our soil in aiding to supply with arms money or provisions the insurrectos, or in recruiting their armies, we would in the end have to pay for the ravages committed by the bandits, chicken thieves, dynamiters and I-Won't-Workers, who are flocking to the Mexican border. President Taft will save the national treasury from the payment of many millions of dollars by his prompt and efficient action in sending an adequate force to the banks of the Rio Grande.

THE BIBLE AS LITERATURE.

In a period when men were universally intolerant in their religious opinions, when many had suffered despoliation and banishment, some even faced the scaffold itself for conscience sake, it was only natural that the founders of the republic should be careful lest the blight of religious persecution wither the fair promise of their newborn liberties. Church and state were very properly divorced for all time on American soil; sectarian teaching was rigidly barred from the public schools; absolute freedom of thought was guaranteed to every citizen under the Stars and Stripes.

Over 100 years have passed away; the principles of religious freedom are now too firmly rooted in the soil for any sacerdotal oligarchy or doctrinal despotism to ever uproot them. The ancient antagonism of creed and church has merged into a blending of all Christian sects for the common good of humanity. Religious liberty has triumphed. Only one anachronism remains. The reading of the Bible in our public schools is still barred in every State of the Union, with the one exception of Montana. Is this prohibition really necessary in our present state of enlightenment? Are we not a little over-cautious in our conservatism?

Of all books written by Christian educators there is not one so completely non-sectarian as the English Bible. Of all the dramatic and historical literature, studied in every high school in the land, there is not one volume so lofty in theme or so brilliant in the handling. As a well of the purest English undefiled the diction of the King James Bible has never been approached. No poetry has ever excelled the poetry of the Psalms, nor are there any aphorisms so be a closed volume to the students of literature in our public schools?

The mythology of Greece and the folklore of Scandinavia have always formed part of the literary course in all American high schools, yet our nation has not been hellenized or heathenized by such studies. But, apparently, we are still afraid of the Hebraism of the Old Testament and the Christianity of the New. Why should our boys become bigots through the study of the gospels, as the best examples of pure and perfect prose-writing? No high school curriculum would be considered complete unless it included one or two of Shakespeare's dramas. There is condensed in the sharp, concise stories of the scriptures more dramatic energy than Shakespeare developed in his most powerful tragedies. Yet these as examples of composition are lost to the American students, to whom we are entrusting the task of upholding the best traditions of American literature.

In the impressionable growth of the schoolboy mind the teaching of grammar and high-school days takes deeper root than later study does on the intellect of maturer years. All the subsequent polish of trained teachers will never change the mental bent of youth, and this present trend is toward the hard austerity of Greek models or the excessive imagery of the Elizabethans; in any case away from the sweet, direct simplicity of the Bible. We are getting realism and romance in modern literature as a result, but truth has been left to shift for itself.

Montana has allowed the literary study of the Bible in her public schools, while forbidding the slightest sectarian bias being given to the interpretation thereof. A similar course is being agitated for Californian schools by educators and Christian ministers regardless of creed or sect. We may view the Bible as the inspired utterance of God; or as a perfect expression of human genius; or simply as a collection of fables. For educational purposes it doesn't make any difference. Nobody, Christian, agnostic or atheist, will deny the beauty of the scriptural language or its value as a standard for good prose. As one brief example, compare the simple diction and dramatic effect of the story of the Prodigal Son with the finest masterpiece of Maupassant, Poe, Kipling or Hawthorne. The present-day author who could produce so dramatic an effect in such simple language, and with such an absence of epithets, would be hailed as the greatest short-story writer of the twentieth century.

THEIR MAJESTIES.

The attempt to put ex-King Manuel back on the fallen throne of Portugal will probably fail. We trust that the new republic will so conduct itself that the hopes of the royalists will most certainly go a-glimmering. Every time a republic springs from the debris of a kingdom the human race has cause to rejoice. Kings are relics of a past that has a good many foolish ideas and practices charged up to it.

The story of the rise of men and the families of men to the fictitious pinnacle of what is called "royalty" is a curious as well as a pathetic history. Thrones have had their inception in the needs of society which selected leaders for no other purposes than to create representatives for the body of society. These leaders, thus innocently chosen, have managed by one means and another to grasp power, step by step, through the centuries whenever peoples have found themselves in a state of weakness. And the power so grasped has been perpetuated down through families until there sprang into existence the so-called "divine right of kings"—a right that is neither divine nor human, and never was.

When the descendants of these leaders who were originally chosen by the voice of a people had managed to hedge themselves in with their "divinity," they took on a great many airs. They caused it to be believed that they were not made of the common clay of the earth. They discarded the chapeau of commerce and had the smiths hammer out golden crowns stuck with jewels and gems. Likewise they invented scepters. They wore purple and forbade any one else to wear the same color. Then they had the house carpenter build a platform which was called a "throne" on which the King and eke the Queen sat, thus completely buffaloing not only the proletariat but the gentry of the land in the bargain.

"majesties." It is a strong word—that word majesty. We can think of no ruler to whom the appellation could have applied by even the wildest stretch of the imagination. It was never applied to Gen. Washington or to Abraham Lincoln, thank God; and if it could have applied to the heads of any nations that ever existed it could have found an excuse for its application to the stately first President of this republic and to that sad, solemn figure who occupied the White House during the Civil War.

Imagine just mere human worms—and that's about all the best of us are—accepting the title of majesty. A man is not constructed to fit the appellation. He is subject too much to belly ache and to wheels in his head. A storm can be majestic or a mountain peak or an ocean, but not a man.

THE AMERICAN WORKER.

The workers of America are not of such material as crowds the slums and garrets of Europe. They are voting citizens who are a part of the government under which they live. They aspire to higher planes of life than those in which they temporarily dwell. They are laborers who intend some day to become employers of labor. They are intelligent, and it is because of their intelligence that this republic is in existence today. When slavery assaulted the life of the nation a million men came out of the foundries and factories and furnaces and work shops and mines and forests, and from the farms, and marshalled under the Stars and Stripes.

Had it been asked of the Roman soldier why he invaded Gaul, he would have answered that he knew not save that it was the will of Caesar. Had it been asked of the French Zouave why he killed Arabs in Africa, why he crossed the Alps to lay waste the plains of Lombardy, or why he marched away from burning Moscow, he would have made reply that he but obeyed the orders of Bonaparte. Had it been asked of the brave Englishmen who illustrated British prowess at Waterloo why they were fighting in Belgium, they would have referred the inquirer to the English ministry for an explanation.

But in our Civil War there was behind each bayonet a man who thought, and his answer would have been that he had left home, family and occupation to preserve the geographical integrity of the American Union and to secure the freedom of man.

The American workingman—who works—lives in a comfortable cottage. His food is abundant and good. His children are educated. He has a broadcloth coat and his wife has a silk dress for occasions. He is a member of secret and of social organizations. He reads newspapers and books. He contributes occasionally to The Times, or other high-class patriotic journals. He is the result of the Republican policy of protection. He is the highest product of modern civilization. He is an industrious, honest, patriotic, self-respecting American citizen.

Now cross the ocean and behold the life of the Belgian or the Italian worker. He lives in a hovel or in a crowded room in a tenement-house. His food is coarse. His children are uneducated. His wife wears only a cotton or woolen gown. His own attire is coarse. He knows nothing of the literature of the day. He has no part in the government of the country in which he lives. He is the product of free trade.

And yet there are those who cry "Tariff for revenue only" although its adoption would lower the life of the American worker to the standard of the European laborer.

UNCLE WALT.

The Poet Philosopher.

My neighbor sleeps outdoors; he lies out there and snores; and then next day he goes his way, the dreariest of bores. He tells me tiresome tales of how he braved the gales; in peace he slept while torrents swept, and hail came down in pails. The frost was on his nose, and ice was on his toes; he slumbered on until the dawn, serene, though nearly froze. He has a deep disdain for people so insane that they will try to slumber dry, away from snow and rain. This land of ours is free, and men may faddists be; may join the owls and other fowls, and roost up in a tree. Or they may burrow deep where snakes and groundhogs sleep, or hang on hooks in quiet nooks, or 'neath the stable creep. But when their sleep is o'er, and they have ceased to snore, they should be drowned if they go round their helpless friends to bore.

WHEN GREEK MEETS GREEK.

There came a maiden to the West,
  And Sylvia was her name;
Prime ministers and London cops
  For her were easy game.
She was a fighting Suffragette
  Built on the Dreadnought plan,
And with her foot she meant to crush
  That beetle known as man.

There came a maiden from the East,
  And Ida she was called;
To find the real expressive word
  Her pen was never stalled.
She'd rounded up the Standard Oil,
  Her style was fine and large;
And she essayed to take the cause
  Of little man in charge.

And so on California soil
  These two great champions met,
Ida, the anti-suffragist,
  And Sylvia, suffragette;
And little man stood open-mouthed
  To see the battle fought;
The women he was wont to seek
  Were quite a different sort.

They made a monkey of poor man,
  A show for all the town;
As quick as Ida set him up,
  Brave Sylvia knocked him down.
They crammed strange nostrums down his throat,
  Till he was forced to gulp,
And he was twisted, wrenched and banged
  Into a shapeless pulp.

The fury of that fearful fray
  Through all the West was heard;
For Sylvia wouldn't budge and Ida'd
  Have the final word;
And when at last they cried enough,
  Of fighting force bereft.

meet the competition of the stage charmer.

Her aversion to the chorus girl is a natural antagonism, springing from the normal sense of self-protection. The way the song-birds of light opera nab the desirable males is discouraging to any hard-working society man-eater.

But outside this feminine antagonism of matrimonial competition there is another explanation why the chorus girl is looked upon askance. The reproving attitude of the world toward these smiling sirens of the stage is a survival of the superstitious notion of the middle ages that things which endeavor to enchant by their grace and beauty are wiles of the devil.

People, somehow, picture the road to sin as garlanded with impulsive gaiety and dancing maidens. The sinner is always depicted with vine leaves in his hair.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

Plans for a cross-town car line have involved the City Council in the grave problem of choosing between the recommendations of Meyer Lissner and Councilman O'Brien and the demands of the people on Vernon avenue and the large district to the south of Jefferson street.

The Board of Public Works will soon appoint a new inspector according to the provisions of the charter amendments. His salary will be fixed by the Council.

"Jack Clifford," a prize fighter, was released on one year's probation by Judge McCormick, yesterday, after he had pleaded guilty to sending a threatening letter to A. Davis, his former employer, who, he alleged, owed him borrowed money.

In the suit brought by H. B. Duncan against John Gardiner and the San Bernardino Valley Gas Co., Judge Wilbur yesterday found for the plaintiff for $9500, money invested in the bonds of the company.

Thomas J. Shea, the veteran clerk of Department Twelve, tendered his resignation yesterday to County Clerk Lelande, and J. A. Neel was named for the vacancy.

Pietro Carbonne was given ten years in San Quentin yesterday, by Judge McCormik, the limit for manslaughter, of which he was found guilty. John Stasi, a fellow Italian, was his victim.

A man charged with attacking his wife with a pocket knife was held for trial in the Superior Court by Police Judge Williams yesterday.

At the City Hall.

LISSNER MAY LOSE AGAIN.

CROSS-TOWN LINE MOVING TOWARD VERNON.

Council Is in Deep Water, With Recommendation of Boss on One Side and Enthusiastic Citizens on Other—Petitions and Recall Threats Add Zest to Contest.

The cross-town car line contest at the City Hall seems to be approaching a draw. The residents of Vernon avenue made the last move and this week the Councilmen will try to make some move which will let them out without being "jumped."

It's a very bad place for a Councilman to be in just at present. The Vernon avenue people are holding big mass meetings every few nights, extending urgent invitations to the city officials, and piling up the petitions. Meyer Lissner has told them he favors the Jefferson-street route. He is chairman of the Board of Public Utilities Commission and speaks with a voice of authority.

Councilman O'Brien, who lives out in the southern part of the city, has also spoken for a line on Jefferson and Forty-eighth streets. Some of his constituents out that way have said that if he wants a car line on Jefferson street they don't want him in the Council. The improvement associations working for the Vernon-avenue line discouraged one recall petition and now another is said to have started up.

The Vernon- avenue forces show up in great strength at the City Hall whenever the matter is scheduled to come up. Last Thursday they were there and the hearing was postponed until next Thursday. The following statement of reasons for demanding the cross-town line on Vernon avenue has been issued:

"This line will cross eleven trunk lines running north and south, giving access to all parts of the city with transfer facilities.

"It will give practical and easy access to the Manual Arts High School and Exposition Park and will really benefit more people than any other street on which a car line could be built.

"While in favor of a municipal ownership of railroads, we do not wish Vernon avenue to be a municipal cross-town line, as it would not be practical from a universal transfer standpoint.

"This Vernon-avenue line will accommodate a vast and great army of workingmen who desire to get to and from all parts of the city as quickly as possible.

"We want the car line, and want it now, as it is an actual and crying necessity, not only for Vernon avenue people, but also from the city at large."

Someof the disinterested participants in the debate have urged that the building a car line on Vernon avenue will mean the early operation of two cross-town lines, as Jefferson street already has a good beginning. The City Council would like to please every one, but is looking vainly for a way to do it.

NEW JOB WAITING.
INSPECTOR OF WORKS.

The new charter amendments have created a position for which there will be a number of active candidates. There is to be a new Inspector of Public Works, not interfering with the position occupied by William M. Humphreys, but supplementing his work. Mr. Humphreys is a member of the board and also acts as inspector. The new official will occupy virtually the position of a superintendent of streets, and Inspector Humphreys will suggest to the board a list of the duties he will take over.

The appointive power lies with the Board of Public Works. The fixing of a salary is left to the Council, and the amount to be paid will depend somewhat on who gets the appointment. The Board of Public Utilities, of which Meyer Lissner, is chairman, may be consulted in filling this office.

THREAT IN MAIL AFTER THE MILL.

MENACING LETTER PROVES BAD FOR PUGILIST.

Attempt on His Part to Collect Sum Which He Alleged He Had Advanced to Blacksmith for Bet on Result of Fistic Go Leads to a Year's Probation.

Another "hope of the white race" has gone wrong.

John Clifford Trenderth, a brawny blacksmith, who is known in the fistic world as "Jack Clifford," with a number of newspaper victories to his credit, was yesterday given one year's probation by Judge McCormick. The pugilist had pleaded guilty to sending a threatening letter through the mails, in an effort to collect a debt from his old friend and former employer, A. Davis, who is also a village smithy, and smites the anvil under the spreading pepper tree.

Several years ago, "Clifford," had a fight in San Francisco, and, thinking he had a good thing, asked Davis to wager a few ducats on the result of the encounter within the ropes. But Davis was short of money, and "Clifford," being in possession of a bundle of the "kale," loaned Davis money to wager on the mill.

Davis won his bet, but he never repaid the fighter for staking him on that occasion, according to the testimony taken yesterday. "Clifford" became uneasy and wrote Davis a threatening letter, and his arrest followed.

"Clifford" said that he was tired of asking Davis for the money but did not think that his threat to have Davis arrested and placed behind the bars, was anything very bad in a new way to collect old debts.

Russell H. Sturm, who had pleaded guilty to the charge of burglary, withdrew his plea and offered one of not guilty, and his trial was set for April 12.

Walter Lee Morris pleaded guilty to burglary. He will be sentenced Tuesday.

James M. Wood, pleaded guilty to the charge of forgery, and he will be sentenced Monday.

The application for probation, made by C. E. Means, charged with disposing of a worthless check, will be heard Monday.

Pietro Carbonne, the Italian found guilty for killing John Stasi, a section boss on the Pacific Electric, because Stasi had discharged a relative of Carbonne, was sentenced to San Quentin for ten years. This is the limit of the law for the crime of which he was found guilty, manslaughter.

FIVE YEARS PROBATION.
BIGAMIST UNDER SENTENCE.

In Judge Willis's court, yesterday, Philip Gendel, who had pleaded guilty to a charge of bigamy, was given five years probation. It appeared that Gendel is the father of a child by each wife The order of the court was that he shall pay $25 a month into the hands of Capt. Dodds, chief probation officer, for the care of the two children, and that official of the court is to see to it that the money is equally divided between them. The leniency shown by the court was no doubt largely due to the gallant contest made by his first wife in his behalf, who was willing to forgive and forget if he would only be a husband to her and a father to her baby.

George Hoyt, who pleaded guilty to a charge of grand larceny, was released on three years' probation.

APIARISTS WIN.
STANDS OF BEES BURNED.

The contention between A. C. and E. C. Bowers and J. L. Hickson and Roy Pinkham, involving the destruction of an apiary owned by the plaintiffs, as the result of alleged negligence by the defendants, that has been on trial in Judge Finlayson's court a week, closed yesterday with a judgment for the plaintiffs for $1873.50. This is three times the value of the property destroyed as provided by a law of the State.

The plaintiffs sub-leased an acre near San Fernando from the defendants, using the ground for the establishment of an apiary. The testimony showed that they maintained 130 stands of bees there.

Later the defendants set fire to a big bunch of lemon tree branches, on their own property adjoining, but the blaze was allowed to get away and spread over to the apiary, destroying every one of the stands of bees.

The case was strangely contested, some very unusual issues as to responsibility in the circumstances arising, but the court found for the plaintiffs for everything they asked.

WILL BE APPEALED.
SAN BERNARDINO GAS CASE.

The case brought by H. B. Duncan against John Gardiner, involving the sale of certain stock of the San Bernardino Valley Gas Company, has been decided by Judge Wilbur in favor of the plaintiff. It is understood that there will be an appeal.

Gardiner was president of the corporation, that was made a party defendant, and the plaintiff acted as secretary and treasurer at a salary of $5000 a year. In the course of his employment Duncan purchased $9500 worth of the bonds of the company, and in the action he alleged that Gardiner had made false representations in order to induce him to purchase the bonds, but the court found that there had been no fraud on either side.

On the ground that there had been a mutual rescission of the contract to purchase the bonds, the court gave Duncan judgment for the $9500, ordering the company to pay back that amount on the surrender of the bonds.

The San Bernardino Valley Gas Company filed its certificate of incorporation May 4, 1909, having been formed to control the gas business in the San Bernardino Valley. It issued $800,000 worth of stock, about $54,000 for cash, and the rest in exchange for bonds in other corporations, it developed at the hearing.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.
BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

DAMAGE ACTION. The Pacific Electric Railway Company and the L. M. Davenport Company, were made defendants in a damage action brought by Ameen Maloof in the Superior Court yesterday, to recover $25,149. It is alleged in the complaint that on February 1, last, while the Davenport Company was delivering a consignment of freight at the freight house of the railway corporation, through the negligence of the agents of both, a heavy door was allowed to fall upon the plaintiff, striking him upon the head

Imhoff began an action against J. R. O'Neil, in the Superior Court yesterday for an accounting of the uses and profits of $14,000 which the plaintiff alleges he gave the defendant to invest in his behalf in certain stocks and other securities.

AUTOIST HURT. W. B. Percival sued the Los Angeles Railway Corporation yesterday for $51,114.15 damages alleged to have been suffered by a collision between a car of the defendant company and the auto owned and driven by the plaintiff, resulting in injuries to the machine and the plaintiff. The run-in occurred last November, at the intersection of South Park and Fifty-first street.

INCORPORATION. Articles of incorporation were filed yesterday by the Eldorado Land and Water Company, capital stock, $20,000, incorporators, D. C. Crookshank, C. J. Bucknum, J. C. Gapp, C. H. S. Littleton, W. C. Goodne and Samuel Jewell, subscribed, $600.

BOTH PLEADED GUILTY. In Judge Wilbur's court yesterday Conrad and Mary Dietrich, charged with contributing to the delinquency of their minor children, pleaded guilty to the information. They will be sentenced tomorrow.

CAPT. SHEA RESIGNS. Capt. Thomas J. Shea, for some time clerk in Department Twelve under Judge McCormick, has tendered his resignation to County Clerk Lelande, and it has been accepted. His successor will be J. A. Noel, who has had charge of the desk since the illness of Capt. Shea. The latter has been in ill health for several weeks. He desired to be relieved of the position that he had held with so much satisfaction to those having business with the department.

AN AUTO ACCIDENT. In the Superior Court yesterday Helen B. and Charles M. Baker entered an action against D. C. and Anna L. Johnson for $10,500 damages. It is alleged that on February 6, last, Helen B. Baker was struck and knocked down by an auto driven by a 12-year-old son of the defendants, the accident resulting in severe injuries.

CONLEY TO PRESIDE. Superior Judge William M. Conley of Madera, has been secured to sit for an unlimited period in extra session No. 3, just established by the judges of the Superior Court to assist in clearing up the calendar. The service of Judge Conley will begin May 1. Judge Church of Fresno presided in that extra department for a while, but he was compelled to return home.

HAT TROUBLES BIND FOR TRIAL.

ALLEGED WIFE ASSAILANT HAS A HEARING.

Is Charged With Having Struck the Woman With a Pocket Knife and Wounded Her—Patrolman Tells of Having Been Struck a Vicious Blow by Defendant.

Emil Earheart, charged with assault with intent to commit murder, was bound over for trial in the Superior Court yesterday morning by Police Judge Williams. Bail was set at $5000. Earheart had not furnished that amount when the courts closed. Mrs. Earheart, on whom it is charged the assault was committed last Monday, was the principal witness against Earheart.

Patrolman Blue, assigned to a South Spring-street beat, appeared as a witness also, he having arrested Earheart a short time after the alleged attack.

The trouble between the couple arose over Mrs. Earheart's refusal to tell where she got a certain hat. She was employed at the Hotel Rockford and it was in front of that place that her husband met her. She declared that he told her he would kill her and he then struck at her with a pocket knife. She dodged and the knife blade penetrated her shoulder, cutting her severely.

Officer Blue happened on the scene a moment later and when he attempted to place Earheart under arrest, he said the latter struck him a vicious blow in the eye. The patrolman then related what had happened to Earheart and the testimony of the officer was taken as sufficient explanation for Earheart's bruised appearance.

WEEDS EXPENSIVE.
DELAY RESULTS IN FINE.

Weeds proved to be an expensive crop for C. Ganahl, Avenue 62 and Pasadena avenue, when he was found guilty yesterday morning of having allowed that kind of vegetation to grow on some of his property. He was fined $5 by Police Judge Rose. His attorney's fee was also said to be considerably more than that amount.

Ganahl, it was stated by the officers who appeared against him, had been warned that he was not observing the weed ordinance, but no attempt was made to remove the offending things. Officers of two improvement associations appeared in Ganahl's behalf to state that no harm had been done by the weeds because they had not gone to seed, but Judge Rose declared that he was not a botanist and couldn't go into detail. The fine was then imposed.

It was said that the weeds could have been cleared from the land in a short time at an expense of about $1.50.

HELD AGAIN.
BEACH PROVIDES BAIL.

Though he was held on a second charge and his bail raised from $3000 to $6000, A. E. Beach, about 60 years old, charged with statutory offense, furnished the necessary amount yesterday morning and was released from custody.

Beach was held for trial in the Superior Court last Thursday when two young girls appeared as witnesses against him. Another charge involving other witnesses was then made and he was given a second preliminary examination yesterday, which resulted in his being again held for trial.

Beach is said to be well to do.

TRADE DIFFERENCES.
HITCH BETWEEN TAILORS.

As the result of an altercation which arose yesterday between John Jackson and Joseph Davis who conduct rival tailor shops in the building at No. 254 South Broadway, a complaint charging Jackson with battery was filed in the Police Court and Jackson was arrested a few minutes later.

Davis is the complainant. He charges Jackson with striking him on the head with a cuspidor. Davis, after being struck, called a police officer. Davis said that the trouble had arisen over trade differences.

SMOKE SUGGESTS CATHAY.

Members of Federal Grand Jury Indulge in the Leaf Which Has Real Flavor When It Burns.

The Federal grand jury which is now in session at least twice weekly, is distinguished for two things, if for nothing more. One is for the good cigars which the members smoke and the other is the promptness with which the majority of the jurors attend each meeting.

In probably no building in the city are there as many inferior "segars" consumed as in the Federal block. Hundreds of Chinese visit the various offices monthly and with the true conception of courtesy, they leave in their wake a trail of narcotic weeds. To most orientals a cigar is nothing more than a cigar and a 5-cent smoke represents as much pleasure as a costly brand.

Soon after the inauguration of the present jury an unaccustomed aroma began to waft through the halls. It naturally attracted comment and was traced to the locked door of the grand jury room. Legal barriers seal this portal as effectively as if it were made of steel torn from the side of a battleship, so far as the public being able to learn what goes on within.

However, the public investigators were investigated in their turn and the secret of their consumption of fragrant Havanas has just been pried from the sacred chambers.

Gen. E. C. Bellows, by virtue of his office as foreman, directs the finer points of etiquette of the body. When he became impressed with the fact that several jurors found it convenient to appear half an hour late or more, he sought for some means of preventing them from being tardy. The legal adviser of the jury declared that there was no law on the proposition.

At the next gathering, the general suggested that there should be a fine of a box of 25-cent cigars imposed upon each person who appeared after roll call. His idea was adopted by a unanimous vote, as the report has it.

Members have been wonderfully prompt since that day, but there are enough of them detained by late cars, important engagements and other equally useless excuses to keep the jurymen well supplied with the finest "smokes" in the market.

CRIPPLED FOR LIFE.

Youth Caught in Revolving Belt Loses One Arm and Both Legs. Half-Brother Witnesses Accident.

While working on a machine in the shop of Pinney & Boyle Company, sheet metal manufacturers, on Palmetto street yesterday morning, Paul Saddlekau, 18 years old, was caught in an overhand belt. His left arm was ground off close to the shoulder and both legs broken when he was thrown against the ceiling by the rapidly revolving shaft.

The accident happened so quickly that the youth had been twisted about the shaft many times before the machinery was stopped, and was unconscious. He was removed to the Receiving Hospital and later to the Clara Barton Hospital, where his legs were amputated.

Saddlekau lives at No. 1092 Fresno street, Boyle Heights. His parents died a few years ago and he came to Los Angeles to live with his half-brother, John Andrews, who is the foreman in the room where the accident occurred. Andrews witnessed the accident and stopped the machinery. The boy will probably recover.

FILM BATTERIES.

opportunities afforded by our incomparable climate.

The Independent Motion Picture Company of New York has sent two companies to Cuba in quest of sunshine and there are two companies operating in Florida and one in Arizona, but the Biograph Company of New York and the Gammont Company of Paris are heading this way, and have declared their intention of locating permanently, and doubtless the other licensed and independent companies will follow suit.

GOOD FOR THE ACTORS.

The moving picture field is proving itself a veritable Godsend to the theatrical profession, at all times an overcrowded one; and every day actors and actresses of tried worth are ignoring the lure of the footlights and hastening to avail themselves of the life of comparative ease, which the spotlight of the camera affords them.

As the work is all done in the daytime they find it less trying on their constitutions, and it is steady and lucrative, which is more than can be said of legitimate stage work. The salaries, too, compare more than favorably with the uncertain sums to be gleaned from behind the footlights, and their expenses are considerably less. All the costumes and the make-up are provided by the management and the mid-day lunch is furnished daily. No irritating lines have to be memorized, and when the actor is through posing for the day, his work is done and he or she is a free agent until he or she reports for work the following morning. Very comfortable dressing-rooms are provided; much more so, indeed, than will be found in the majority of first-class theaters, and as they make up by daylight, they escape the close and foul atmosphere which their less fortunate brethren experience behind the legitimate stage.

A large number of extra people are naturally employed and are well paid for their services. A uniform rate of $3 a day for the extras engaged has been established by all the companies, and if they are given some small part to portray they are given $5, with an excellent lunch, for all, thrown in.

The life that they enjoy is likewise a healthy one, as most of the work is done in the open air and a good part of it is on horseback or in riding in the numerous automobiles employed and owned by the companies. Long distances, too, are often traveled to secure the scenes necessary to the making of a picture; a play-plot or scenario, as they are called, demanding one day the open sea of beach, when the players will be whirled down by trolley and automobile to Santa Monica, Venice or some other nearby seaside resort; the next day, maybe a mountain fastness will be called for, when the foothills beyond Pasadena will be scoured for a likely piece of scenery and then the next day finds the cowboys, the damsels in love or distress and the hordes of wild Indians cavorting over the prairies and wooded plains of Watts.

Comedies are also enacted, in which the majority of the scenes are laid in interiors, and this is where the inclosed studio and permanent stage are brought into play.

EXPENSIVE PICTURES.

The average patron of the moving-picture theaters little realize the enormous expense involved in the taking of each individual picture, which will run into anywhere from 500 to 1000 feet of film. Many pictures are unavoidably spoiled in the taking and have to be done over again and the reels of film cost more than the public realize. Long train journeys, too, have often to be undertaken to secure a needed piece of natural scenery and the transportation of a large body of players is a serious item of expense. The length to which these companies will go to secure perfection in a picture is almost inconceivable, but the competition and rivalry among them is so fierce that the question of expense is not allowed to stand in the way, $3000 to $4000 being considered not at all out of the way for a sum expended in the taking of a single picture.

There is no doubt that in the near future the leading motion-picture actors will become world known and their names as largely advertised as the stars on the legitimate stage; indeed, Paris is leading in this respect, as the theater goers may have noticed from the announcements on the latest French films. Some of the most famous players from the Comedie Francaise are lending themselves to the camera and compare none too favorably, it must be confessed, with our leading picture players at present enacting their various roles at Edendale.

American pictures are rapidly forging to the front and are eagerly sought for by the picture houses of Europe and Australia.

TREMENDOUS BOOST FOR CITY.

We must therefore begin to realize what a tremendous advertisement this must mean to the city of Los Angeles and to the whole of Southern California, as each picture taken here, is exploited broadcast throughout the civilized world, showing our wooded hills, our winter surf bathing, our wonderful hotels, our flowering parks, our summer-clad citizens, our absence of poverty and our incomparable climate.

To the tourists many points of local interest are pointed out and freely advertised as being worthy of their inspection, but there is none more so than to see these various companies at Edendale assembled every morning about 9 o'clock, with their war paint and grease paint, all ready for the day's proceedings.

There you will see plainly, from the passing electric car, the merry bands of thespians disporting themselves; some exercising the bucking broncos, others practicing with the lariat or the lasso to throw the charging steer, others, mayhap, habilitated as early Romans, with flowing togas and in sandaled feet, and, needless to say, the ladies of the companies will warrant more than a passing glance.

To the numerous throng who take frequent pleasure in the moving-picture theaters the gay scenes enacted daily at Edendale will be much appreciated, and will give them an insight as to the trouble and expense involved to secure the pleasing results which they have so often witnessed.

This city has been advertised as possessing the greatest number of first-class picture theaters of any of its size in the world, which fact is owing largely, no doubt, to the producing companies being here and the great number of players who have each a certain following, who flock to the picture theaters to see their friends as depicted by the camera.

The members of these companies are giving a vast amount of employment, are spending money freely, are advertising Los Angeles to the uttermost parts of the earth, are well ordered and comfortable citizens, and are securing a permanent foothold. Others are on their way, and they will be welcome.

FLEECY GAME HAS DARK LOOK.

ALLEGED BUNCO ARTISTS MUST FACE "VAG" CHARGE.

Their Benevolent Attentions in Showing Stranger About the Town and in Letting Him Win at Cards Excite Suspicion Which Blocks the Game Before He Loses.

It cost three men believed to be "buncos" $1 yesterday to try to fleece E. R. Johnson, a ranchman, out of $1200. The men who gave the names of Louis Morgan, John Ryan and Edwin Dunn, are now in the City Jail, and will face a vagrancy charge, that being the only charge the detectives were able to make because no money was secured by the men.

According to Detective Zeigler, who made the arrest, the three men picked an acquaintance with Johnson in the lobby of one of the well-known hotels. Johnson lives near San Francisco. He was in Los Angeles on business. He professed not to know the city, and his "friends" then volunteered to show him the town.

They changed from one hotel to another several times, claiming that they were not pleased with the accommodations. In each hotel they invited Johnson to their apartments, and played several different games with him. Johnson won constantly, until his winnings amounted to $1200. The "winnings," however, except $1 paid in cash, were on paper, to be settled when the game had been finished. When Johnson was $1200 ahead of the game, the three men declared they had lost enough and wanted to stop. Johnson agreed, and they asked him to estimate his winnings.

When told the amount, they agreed that he was correct in his estimate, and they would pay it as soon as he showed that he had that amount of his own.

Johnson objected to being made to show that he had that amount of money and asked the reason for the demand.

"We want to see that you are not getting away with any more money than we could have gotten if we had won instead of lost," one of the men said.

Johnson, however, had become suspicious by his constant winning, and when he understood the game he said he was quite satisfied with his $1 in cash, and would let the police get the rest.

A telephone communication with police headquarters resulted in the men being placed under arrest.

Ruptured People—
Try This for Relief and Cure

Here is something you can try without having to risk a single cent of your money—

Something which has cured—in the last twenty-three years—thousands of ruptured people—

Something so strengthening to the ruptured parts that you can work right along while being cured—

If you don't find yourself getting better after trying a Cluthe Truss—

If you don't think it's doing you a lot of good—making a new man of you—

Then we don't want a penny.

Try It At Our Risk

This is more than a Truss—more than merely a device to hold your rupture in place.

For your protection we guarantee in writing that a Cluthe Truss will at all times keep your rupture from coming out—when you are working, exercising, taking a bath (this Truss is waterproof)—every minute—every day. If it doesn't, it won't cost you a cent.

You see this Truss—unlike all others—is self-adjusting, self-regulating.

The support it gives automatically increases when there is any sudden movement or strain—as in working—so no strain can force your rupture out.

And in addition, a Cluthe Truss provides the only way ever discovered for overcoming the weakness which is the real cause of rupture.

While relieving the weak ruptured parts of all strain, this Truss is constantly strengthening the ruptured parts—

Does that by automatically massaging them—this soothing, healing massage does for these parts what exercise does for a weak arm—soon restores their lost strength—soon makes them so strong that a Truss is no longer needed.

Cure Begins at Once

This massage is so beneficial that 99 people out of 100 begin to get better and stronger almost the minute a Cluthe Truss is put on—

So beneficial that the Cluthe Truss has cured some of the worst cases on record—

Among them men and women 50 to 70 years old, who had been ruptured from 20 to 50 years.

Cured many of them after everything else, including operation, had failed to do any good whatever.

Our Expense If It Fails

You are making the mistake of your chances—

We'll make a Truss especially for your case and let you try it at our risk—if it fails to prevent protrusion, fails to bring improvement in your condition, we'll be the losers, not you.

Free Book Tells All About It

So that you can judge for yourself, we want to send you a free book we have written—a cloth-bound book of advice. Even physicians who have read it say it's the best book ever written on Rupture.

It sums up all we have learned about rupture in forty years of day-after-day experience—in the successful treatment of over 280,000 cases. It deals with rupture in all its forms and stages—explains the dangers of operations—exposes the worthless trusses and the equally worthless make-shifts masquerading under such names as "appliance," "method," "discovery," "invention," "treatment," "plaster pads," etc.—puts you on guard against throwing money away.

And it tells—absolutely without misrepresentation—all about the Cluthe Truss—how little it costs—how you'll never have to pay out another dollar on account of your rupture after getting a Cluthe Truss—how this Truss is as comfortable as your clothing (no springs, or web, or elastic band or belt around your waist—no leg-straps—nothing to pinch, chafe, squeeze or bind)—how you can try one at our risk, and how we guarantee to fit you perfectly, no matter where you live.

It tells—in their own words—the experience of many former sufferings—gives their names and addresses—perhaps you know some of them.

Book sent in plain, sealed envelope. Write for it today—don't put it off—this book may be the means of adding many years to your life and of restoring you to full strength and usefulness.

LIGHT READING, PUBLIC TASTE.

Six Best Sellers Are Known as Popular Variety.

Realism Is Preferred to More Solid Matter.

List Headed by "The Rosary" Liked Everywhere.

"Not of Her Race"—[Foster.
"The Rosary"—[Barclay.
"A Christmas Mystery"—[Locke.
"The Purchase Price"—[Hough.
"Max"—[Turston.
"Clayhanger"—[Bennet.

These have been the six best sellers in Los Angeles during the month of February, according to a list posted in one of the largest book-stores in the city. The old, standard works, such as Dickens and the Bible, have given them a close run, in some cases; but the largest sales have nevertheless been of the books known as popular and ephemeral.

According to some book-sellers, Myrtle Reed's success, "The Rosary," should head the list in Los Angeles. "The Phantom of the Opera," by Gaston Leroux, has had a notable run. Yet in different stores the sales varied of course, and no account can be taken of cheap paper-backs, which may have outstripped the more substantial bindings.

In the same tabulation that tells what people are reading in Los Angeles, there appears a list from each of twenty-four other American cities, to which are added the books that have sold best in London and Toronto. In London, Locke's "Christmas Mystery" heads the list, with "Max" second, and "The Rosary" third. Fourth place is filled by "The Bluebird," Maeterlinck's equisite play, which won artistic, if not financial, success during its late presentation at the New Theater, in New York.

The presence of this book in the list is notable, for it is the only drama numbered among the best sellers, and appears but twice, the second time at Detroit.

IN OTHER CITIES.

New York gives first place to "The Purchase Price," by Emerson Hough, whose success since the publication of his "Mississippi Bubble" has been phenomenal. "The Rosary" is second, and "The Doctor's Christmas Eve" scores a good third. Intellectual Boston has set its heart on "The Rosary," and New Orleans, Denver, Philadelphia and a number of other cities have shown the same preference.

San Francisco and Cleveland give first place to Eleanor Hallowell Abbot's charming "Molly Make-Believe," which had a great run all over the country as a Christmas gift-book. Chicago likes Katherine Cecil Thurston's "Max" best, but with loyalty to a native son ranks second "The Rose in the Ring," a typical George Barr McCutcheon romance. Robert Service, called the "Canadian Kipling" for his lively verse of the Yukon region, leads in Toronto with his northland tale, "The Trail of '98."

The book most popular by far, when all the lists are considered, is "The Rosary." It appears first thirteen times, is ranked within the first three in twenty-one lists, and is set down in twenty-four of the twenty-seven considered. "Molly Make-Believe" is first only three times, but appears thirteen times in all. "Max" is counted in eleven lists, is first in two, and ranks with the leading trio in three.

Florence Barclay adds to her laurels by having a second book, "The Mistress of Shenstone," placed nine times among the quick sellers, although in no case does it rank first. Stewart Edward White's "Rules of the Game" has seven places, and two firsts. "The Purchase Price" and Mary E. Waller's "Flamsted Quarries" appear six times each, but neither heads a list, excepting in the solitary triumph of Hough's story at New York.

"The Rose in the Ring" and Meredith's Nicholson's "Siege of the Seven Suitors," are next in popularity, with four appearances each. Jack London never leads, although his "Burning Daylight" scores three times. Kipling appears but once, and then in St. Louis, off his native soil, where "Rewards of Fairies" has a place.

NOT IN PARTICULAR.

It does not seem possible, after study of the tabulation, to assert that a particular kind of story is most popular in any certain part of the country. "The Rosary" is liked all over the continent, as well as in London, and "Molly Make-Believe" scored as heavily in San Francisco as in Cleveland.

One thing is sure: although the theater is more popular than ever before in our country, the light novel does not seem to be losing its charm and selling qualities. The American public prefers the stage drama, the vividness of Belasco, the realism of Fitch and Pinero, to the reading drama, meant for the closet perusal of a single person.

The popular novel is still the great book-vehicle for appeal to the individual American reader who does not demand newspapers or magazines, in order to have done with his story at a sitting.

ATTORNEYS AS PARTNERS.

Frank Stewart, First Assistant United States Attorney, and Hartley Shaw, formerly chief deputy district attorney, have formed a partnership for the practice of law and will have offices in a downtown business block. Stewart will retain his position with the government and will only give his time out of office hours to private practice. Shaw left the service of the county February 1, after having been the legal adviser of the Board of Supervisors six years continuously.

DIES IN NEW YORK.

A telegram was received yesterday by W. D. Woolwine, vice-president of the National Bank of California, announcing the death in New York City, of Mrs. Fannie W. Woolwine, his sister-in-law. Mrs. Woolwine, with her daughter, Miss Frances, visited Los Angeles a few years ago and they met the numerous friends of the Woolwines on that occasion. Miss Frances, who is a noted singer, is studying under Lombardi in Florence, Italy, for grand opera, and will finish her course in the coming spring.

LAW APPEALING TO GENTLE SEX.

BLACKSTONE IS DIVERSION FOR WOMAN STUDENTS.

No Longer Doubt That College of Law Is Co-Educational—Dean Asserts Girls Are Better "Pluggers" Than Men Who Glide Over the Dry Spots.

If any one is disinclined to believe that the College of Law, University of Southern California, is not a thorough co-educational institution, a glance at the accompanying pictures would give assurance. There are nearly twenty women students enrolled at the law school, and the number is increasing yearly by leaps and bounds.

Blackstone and his leather-bound commentaries are becoming pleasant diversions for the young woman of Los Angeles. A year ago the feminine enrollment at the law school was six, but this year there has been an influx of freshwomen.

According to Dean Porter, the reason for the increase is varied. Some of the students are members of families whose estates are large and complicated, and a knowledge of law will be of infinite aid to them in safeguarding their interests. Others take to the study through preference, while still others enroll for the novel diversion that it presents.

Of the feminine section of the law school two, Misses Elizabeth Parker and Sarah Patten, are seniors. They stand among the leaders in their class, and from present appearances will graduate with honors in June. This is quite a departure from the original scheme of things, for in the past whatever honors were to be had were gobbled up by the male students.

According to Dean Porter, woman students are better "pluggers" as a rule than men. Law at best is dry in spots, and the embryo lawyers of the masculine gender delight in coasting over these spots. The women, patient and painstaking, will pore deeply into the arid stuff, and attend to the myriad details the study demands.

The marked increase in the feminine enrollment this year has given rise to serious comment as to the future of the profession. At one time a woman barrister was a distinct novelty, akin to a circus freak. Now they are so common that their suffering competitors of the sterner sex condescend to receive them on an equal footing.

A woman attorney, according to Dean Porter, is greatly handicapped in taking up the profession, owing to the little preparation that our school system affords for understanding life from the practical side. So exclusively is a girl raised that she has but fleeting glimpses into the coarser side of life. What she sees of it is through a smoked glass, prepared by social and religious customs. As a result, she has to accustom herself to conditions entirely foreign to the scheme of life that was hers during girlhood, school and college days.

Dean Porter has to some extent razed the barriers to the practical strata of life for his woman students. He has instituted lectures on advanced economics and sociological subjects which all feminine students must attend. There they are given informastudy, but, according to students and faculty, abounds in good results.

The following is the roster of women students at the College of Law: Elizabeth Parker, Sarah Patten, Dora Beeres, Lydia Blanchard, May Darlington Lahey, Gladys Moore, Mary E. Foy, Eleanor E. Mack, Nora Helen Pickering, Dorothy Simpson, Lotta Belle Hibben, Mrs. Maud S. Shattuck and Mrs. Carmel de Hospital.

KIND HEARTS — GOOD DEEDS.

> "How far that little candle throws his beams!
> So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

Ernest W. Herrman of Philadelphia, who is hospital steward on the United States naval tug Patuxent, has been commended by Secretary of the Navy Meyer for his bravery in saving two comrades from being aphyxiated. Boatswain James Quirk and Chief Machinist Gebhardt were overcome by coal gas, and when their lives were despaired of Herrman worked over them for twenty-eight hours without ceasing, and saved their lives. In his letter Secretary Myer said that by "intelligent, energetic, and unremitting treatment," he had been successful in saving both officers.

A gift of $25,000 from Mrs. Everett Cooley Farwell of Chicago, in memory of her husband, to the fund for the erection of the Wright dormitory at Yale, is announced. The fund now exceeds $200,000.

By the will of Mrs. Emily H. Moir of New York various seats of learning and Presbyterian churches are beneficiaries. The value of the estate is expected to reach $1,000,000.

Gifts aggregating $26,000 to the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, have been announced, though the names of the donors are not given the public.

Gen. T. Colman Dupont of Wilmington, Del., has been arranging with his lawyers a deed of gift for a unique philanthrophy. He plans to contribute $1,500,000 for a boulevard across the length of the State of Delaware, from Claymont on the north to Shelbyville on the south. The proposal, when arranged in legal terms, will at once be submitted to the Delaware Legislature for its ratification. According to Gen. Dupont's scheme, the proposed roadway will be 100 feet wide and 100 miles long. It will be given outright to the people of Delaware. The only condition is its ratification by the State Legislature.

Mrs. Henry Schliemann has given her country home with its grounds as a school and home for blind children, most of whom she found begging in the streets of Athens and other parts of Greece. Mrs. Schliemann established the first blind asylum in Greece, after which she founded the first sanatorium for tuberculosis patients in her country. Mrs. Schliemann is a daughter of Mrs. Catherine Lascaridon, who fought for years by lecturing and in her writings to have the Froebel system established in the public schools of Greece. She started a kindergarten in the Piraeus and a seminary for kindergartners in Athens. In this seminary, which is a palatial building in one of the best localities in Athens, young girls from Greece, or any part of the Orient where Greek is spoken, can receive training as a kindergartner.

Miss Eleanor G. D. Cuyler has given $5000 toward the Wright memorial dormitory at Yale University. Miss Cuyler's is the third gift of $5000 to be used for a suite of rooms. Her gift is in memory of her brother, Theodore Cuyler, class of 1882.

Auguste Loutrefil, who was born a peasant and became one of the richest French financiers in Russia, died recently. He had been impressed by the meager endowment of science in France in comparison to the United States, and determined to set an example for his countrymen. His will, which has just been made public, discloses that he bequeathed $700,000 to the Academy of Sciences, $500,000 to the University of Paris and $20,000 to the Pasteur Institute for research work.

"WAN O' THE WOOD."

Helen Eddy Will Enact Title-Role in Florence Willard's Fairy Play Next Month.

Helen Eddy, a dainty young Angeleno of alleged dramatic talent and the possessor of features of the classic order, has been chosen to enact the title role in Florence Willard's pretty fairy play, "Wan o' the Wood," which is to be given at the Hamburger Majestic Theater in about three weeks, as the first of the proposed "Children's Theater" productions, non-profit representations to be made by and for little folks, from time to time, under the auspices of a number of the city's prominent women and the direction of Alfred Allen and Frank C. Egan.

Ollie Walters, who is well-known to most of the theater-goers of the town through her charming professional appearances at the Belasco and Burbank, will play Tioma, the second role of the play, and of practically equal importance.

There are twenty-seven speaking roles in "Wan o' the Wood," which is in four acts.

The hero is Wan, an Indian boy who is stolen in early infancy by the changeling Dan o' Dreams, and is carried to the heart of the forest as a present to the queen of the fairies.

Here he remains, quite happily, until mid-youth, when he is greatly disturbed by the talk of "parents." He has never known that such things existed, but he finds out, and soon he longs for a mother.

The pang is made doubly poignant by his discovery of his little sister Tioma, who has been lost in the wood, and who, when found by the fairies, reveals herself as the sister of the long-lost Wan.

She tells Wan of his mother, and his grief is intense.

Relief comes from an unexpected quarter. By chance Wan sees a baby owl, which has fallen from its lofty nest, and at great personal peril he tenderly replaces it under the mother-bird.

This so pleases the fairy queen that she not only gives him permission to see his mother, but has the mother brought—asleep—to the wood.

Miss Willard has just added a spectacular ballet, "The Caterpillars," as a pictorial number.

These young changelings will crawl in cumbersomely in fuzzy skins, do a ridiculous recitation-performance, and change to bright hued, flying butterflies, gorgeous of tint and luminous of wing.

The Most Modish of all Suit Styles,
are these in Satin and Moire

The Spring has brought forth no more beautiful suit design. Rich with the utmost degree of richness; approved by the world's greatest fashion centers, these models possess an individuality and distinction which sets them far above the ordinary. The styles we show are in the colorings which display to best advantage the luster of the satin and moires; golden brown, dark blue London gray, old rose and black. There are plain tailored styles as well as many models with the elaborately and brilliantly embroidered, wide shawl collars and deep cuffs. The prices: $29.50, $32.50, $37.50 and up to $65.

Our Suits in Mixtures and Serges are concededly the smartest in the city. Nowhere else will you find such a wealth of design from which to make your selection. Nowhere else can you discover so many new and unusual suit fabrics in every shade. Our line of cream serge suits, shown in the white room, where they are free from contact with darker costumes, and our splendid stock of blue serges merit your particular attention. In the mixtures are shown diagonal and wide wale weaves of remarkable beauty which have never before been available in ready-to-wear suits.

The Suits We Show at $25 are justly, we think, the line in which our pride centers. Certain it is that there has never been in this city a stock which contained so many distinctive models made of such distinctive fabrics. We know that we are offering at this price be values than the suits for which oth stores ask and receive $30, $32.50, and, in some instances, as much as $35. There are, undoubtedly, in this $25 stock of ours a great many suits for which we could obtain the higher prices that rule elsewhere. But it is our determination to continue to justify the faith of a woman, and there are many of her kind, who pins her faith to the New York Store stock when she wishes a suit at this figure. It will pay you to see this line at your very earliest convenience.

Beautiful Millinery
thrills its admirers in the Ivory and Gold Salon
The whole world has contributed to our display.

Imported Models
One of the most impressive exhibits of imported hats which has ever been made in the Southwest is to be found on our first floor. The many who are susceptible to millinery "infatuations" find here much to excite their most enthusiastic appreciation.

Tailored Hats
Styles of the utmost conservatism as well as those which possess the maximum of vim, dash and snap. The prices start at $5 and extend as high as $15, and we wish to lay particular emphasis on the fact that at each price you will find bargains a plenty.

New Hat Pins
Unusually beautiful pins, in a variety of design and coloring that will immediately impress you with a sense of their availability for any use. They are priced in a range which includes many styles at each figure from 25c to $2.50.

About Black Hats
The woman who seeks a millinery value in this most staple of all colors need look no further. Our stock is absolutely complete, whether you want a trimmed hat or merely a shape. And our selection of trimmings and ornaments in black is undoubtedly the city's largest.

New Veilings
Late arrivals in the double-chiffon, two-toned, auto veils; lace patterned veils, and novelty veilings. And it is our pride that this line has attained a justified fame as being one of the most valueful and comprehensive which the West can boast.

Spring's Best Trimmings
This trimming department has never better deserved its fame for showing what is most beautiful than this year. Imported and domestic flowers, feathers, ribbons, ornaments and plumes at prices that are revelations in value-giving.

United Fashion Show. It was of a shade a trifle deeper than the Clair de Lune (Alice) and was perfectly tailored and the only trimming consisted of a huge ornament of silk braid for the fastening of the short coat. There was a wide shawl collar and the skirt was plain and narrow, but of perfect cut. Oh, it was chic!

A Coat.

A coat which will appear at the time of the great Fashion Feast is of heavy white cloth and is trimmed with a great sailor collar of black satin edged with tarnished gold lace mixed with tarnished silver. Buttons to correspond ornament the front of the long coat and smaller ones outline the back seams of the scant skirt.

Creamed Oysters.

For an evening supper where something hot is wanted, creamed oysters may be prepared as follows: To one cup of large oysters use two tablespoons water, one tablespoon butter, two tablespoons flour, one cup rich cream, salt and pepper to taste. Drain the oysters dry in a napkin, spread on a plate and season with salt, pepper and a few grains of cayenne or paprika. Melt the butter, stir in the flour, gradually add the cream and the water or milk if preferred. When the sauce is sufficiently thick, roll in it the oysters, then place them in individual dishes in the oven or in one large dish, pour over them the remaining sauce and scatter a few bread crumbs over the top, then bake brown. With this dish serve sandwiches of lettuce with mayonnaise or chopped olive sandwiches. To place brown and white bread in alternation and form a square through which you can cut to form the slices, makes a pretty "company" sandwich.

Suede Shoe Polish.

"Yes, it works," said Jean. "I made my suede pumps look like new by using the suede polish. They were positively shabby and—Voile!" and she displayed them as fresh as if just purchased. "It is easy to apply, too. I really did not believe what I had heard about the stuff; but the half has never been told."

Fashion Notes.

Fancy Hercules and Titan braids are the elect of the season.

It is predicted that stripes will be worn a good deal this spring.

Shaded feather trimmings is the latest Paris sensation in fashions.

The latest skirts do not "bell," but they do not sink in at the ankles.

Sleeves of different lengths and different colors are worn in the same gowns.

The broad ceinture or girdle seems to be appearing again on the very latest frocks.

Dainty undermuslins in the advance spring styles are richer than ever with embroidery.

Wide braids are seen on many of the white serge and mohair tailored and dressy suits.

Women Gardners.

At last gardening is becoming a recognized profession for women. In England and some parts of the East, there is even a prescribed dress for women gardeners. It has always seemed to me an ideal occupation for women, and I have wondered why there were not noted women landscape gardeners. What could be more delightful than such a profession for a woman of taste?

GERMAN FOLKSONGS HERE.

Berlin Professor, With Special Commission From the Emperor, to Speak and Sing Friday Night.

Next Friday at 8 p.m. Prof. Max Friedlander of Berlin University will give a lecture on the German folksong at Turnverein Hall, No. 321 South Main street. He has a fine baritone voice and will illustrate his lecture by singing some of the most typical "Volkslieder." He will be accompanied by one of his students, who will play the original accompaniments of these songs.

Prof. Friedlander has just completed a course of lectures on German music and songs at Harvard University, where he held the position of exchange professor, having been sent by the Emperor to represent the German universities in America. The idea of exchanging German and American professors was suggested by the Kaiser to President Roosevelt several years ago, and has already produced very satisfactory results in bringing the intellectual life of Germany and America more closely together. Last year President Wheeler of the University of California lectured at the University of Berlin on "Education and Democracy in America." His lectures were delivered in German, and were very well received. They have recently been published.

Prof. Friedlander is an authority on the German "Volkslied," and has published several collections, one of them at the request of the German Emperor. It is expected that the people of Los Angeles who are interested in German music and songs will be glad to hear him.

TO DEDICATE FIRST WING.

The new school of Our Lady of Loretto parish will be dedicated this morning at 10 o'clock by Bishop Conaty. The building is a part of what is designed in future to become a very large structure. The first part is merely one of the wings. It contains four class rooms, a small hall and is as modern in every respect as a school building can be. In addition a new twelve-stop, two-manual pipe organ will be dedicated in the church. This is taking the place of a melodeon which has served since the dedication of the church proper about three years ago. Special musical services have been arranged for the solemn high mass which will follow the dedicatory services. Rev. George Donahue is pastor.

The Reformer.

The reformer is a depressing spectacle.

Who really wants the world reformed, anyway?

Not I.

The reformers are the discontents. They are the complainers, the kickers, the empty ones who are unable to get anything out of life the way it is put up.

And they are so deadly logical. They discover that war is unnecessary, that the temples of the heathen are proofs of the illogical processes of the oriental mind, that dueling is absurd—in fine, that nine-tenths of all human transactions are irrational.

Well, suppose they are? Who wants to be rational? All the color and joy of life is irrational. All romance, measured by cold intelligence, is absurd and ridiculous. Chivalry is a superstition. Dueling is preposterous. War is a futile barbarism. Wealth is unfair. The building of the pyramids was silly. The statues of Buddha were unintelligent. The hobble skirt and the picture hat are foolish.

But who cares for the why and wherefore of these very interesting things?

Life is as irrational as it is meaningless. And with all its foibles and weaknesses and superstitions and unreasonableness and poverty and bloodshed and ignorance, it is splendid because it is human.

The reformer is a person whose object is to squeeze all the human juices out of life—to make it a rational and colorless existence.

Suppose our educational system is absurd and inconsequential. The majority of us are contented to blunder along.

And what difference does it make if the superstitious religions of the world are not really going to get us into heaven? An honest straw vote would probably reveal the fact that three-fourths of us prefer hell, anyway.

Reformers mistake blundering and foolishness for disease. But the foolish and blundering man is the normal man.

The reformer, too, is human—not because he is superior, for he is no such thing.

He is human because he is foolish.

That Sense of Duty.

Another depressing variety of the genus homo is the person with the over-developed sense of duty.

These unselfish and charitable individuals can cause more trouble and discomfort and misery than any other known variety of the species.

They always know what is best for everyone else. They know what kind of plays are good for their neighbor. The morals of their fellow man are a great responsibility to them. They spend their days stirring up trouble for other people, prompted by a sense of duty.

If they see a married woman of their acquaintance innocently walking down the street with a man not her husband, they sprint to the nearest telephone to inform the rightful owner of the lady.

If they see a married man dining with a woman, again they scent wrong-doing and clip-clap to the telephone and report.

They are always warning people against other people.

They tell young girls that their sweethearts are not fit for them.

They keep things continually stirred up. They torture the most innocent actions of people into scandals, and then, from a sense of duty, discuss the matter with others.

They ruin reputations. They sow unwarranted doubt and misapprehension wherever they interfere.

They are a despicable and vicious tribe.

The Modern Miracle.

Evidently the most startling and remarkable news story that a theatrical press agent can put over is when he manages to find an actor who is also a home-lover.

Losing million-dollar diamond necklaces, or rescuing a score of drowning orphans from a watery grave, or being kidnaped and held for a managerial ransom—these little items are as nothing in that nation-staggering press story of the actor who loves home life.

It does not come to many press agents—only to the rare few favored by providence—to find this unique and bizarre specimen in the histrionic ranks. And when he is found, the protographers sweat, typewriters bang, and all other press news is ditched in order that this incredible and miraculous story may reach the newspapers without delay.

Triple headings, two-column cuts, and a ream of reading matter set forth in detail the unusual case of this rare bird of the stage.

In his wildest dreams, in his most frantically imaginative moments, the ordinary press agent has never dared hope to find an actor who is also a home-lover.

And when, lo! the miracle takes place, the very foundations of the nation are shaken.

OSTEOPATHS START BRANCH.

Uptown Clinic and Dispensary Is to Be Opened on North Spring Street Tuesday.

The Pacific College of Osteopathy will open an uptown clinic and dispensary, Tuesday. The school itself will remain at its present site near the County Hospital, but the clinic will henceforth be conducted at No. 175 North Spring street. Here the college will have ample facilities to demonstrate both surgery and manipulation in the presence of students. Of course, all treatments under these circumstances are free to patients who present themselves.

The college was established in 1896 and its phenomenal growth has made a city clinic immediately necessary. Of the twelve physicians who will demonstrate at the clinic, five are women. They are all osteopaths. One of them is Dr. Lillian Whiting, a woman who has world fame as a writer.

The man in charge of all surgery is Dr. W. W. Sherer, an allopath and a surgeon who believes in osteopathy for some cases and in medicine for others. Dr. Sherer also believes in women as physicians of every school because he thinks them peculiarly adapted to become experts in nervous diseases.

The departments of the new clinic and those who will be in charge are: Surgery, W. W. Sherer and Grace Shilling; gynecology, Olive Clark; obstetrics, Lillian Whiting; orthopedics, Robert D. Emery; diseases of the chest, A. B. Bliss and J. S. White; genito-urinary diseases, T. C. Robinson and W. J. Hayden; dietetics, Dorothy Birlew; X-ray and electrotherapy, Marion Burns; psychiatry, Louisa Burns.

Nervous diseases, dermatology, hydrotherapy and diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat, also will be treated by members of the school who are specialists in these particular branches.

THE POLITICAL WATCHTOWER.

"A. J. Wallace, Governor."

That's the dope—the latest, direct from Sacramento dope. Our own Andrew Jackson Wallace, of Home Telephone stock and reform proclivities, has listened to the voice of the tempter, and he has fallen. Andy now wants to become Governor of this great and glorious commonwealth if for no other reason than to test the strength of the State. California has been establishing a reputation for being able to stand for almost anything, so why not Governor A. J. Wallace?

This question has been asked over and over again by the little clique of gentlemen who are "reformers" in practical politics, and ready to be about almost anything if it will bring the political bacon home to them and theirs. Inelegant as this statement may be, it nevertheless has the redeeming grace of simon-pure truth. The clan Wallace is out for the Governorship, and every last one of the Los Angeles man's henchmen are in on the game.

And while it may sound at first blush as if only a hasheesh smoker could hear such things, it is equally true that little Meyer Lissner has begun beating the tumtum and singing to himself in an argumentative strain that he can become chairman of the Republican National Committee. The Wallace freebooters chime in the chorus and are eager to make Lissner believe his delirium is based upon fact. And therein is the game.

lettes, that Wallace is to be made Governor before the expiration of Johnson's term of office. To accomplish this result, the services of some of the Anti-Saloon League advocates and Prohibition preachers are diplomatically sought; for be it known of all men that if A. J. Wallace can be landed in the position of Governor of California, the tenderloin of San Francisco will be turned into a parade ground for the Christian Endeavorers; and Spring street from the Federal building to its most respectable finish will be ornamented with naught but lemonade stands, where now the Maier-Eastside-Los Angeles-lager flows. And to increase the merry melodies of such a desirable innovation, wreaths of pretzels and bologna bearing mottoes like "Down and Out," "Gone, But Not Forgotten." "They Have Gone Away and Left Him Sleeping," will be sent to Dan Jarue, Tom Darmody, Frank Goings, Henry Koch, et al. In simpler expression, the Royal Arch will be in mourning.

This is the plan to make Wallace Governor. It is such a simple little scheme, too, requiring but a proper application of flattery for which Gov. Johnson has such a keen and insatiable relish. It is dished out this way in the "reformers" circle in the State capital:

"Gov. Johnson is a fine man, isn't he?"

The proper answer—at least the answer anticipated—is "yep."

"He's too good and great a man to be kept in the Governor's office!" That's the bait.

The natural inquiry is: "Why?"

"Because we need such men in the nation's work."

Catch the drift?

No?

"Men like Gov. Johnson should be in Washington," the insidious schemers continue. "He would be just the man to have on the next Republican national ticket for vice-president of the United States. California is entitled to some recognition, and Johnson is the man for the place." And so on ad inhis career as a "reformer" politician doing politics with Chris Buckley in the northern metropolis, has been unable to make his chief realize that it is nothing less than a game of selfish political buncombe.

"Hiram W. Johnson, Vice-president of the United States."

The possibility is making the Governor's head swim, but he is standing for it. This is where the Wallace bunch get encouragement. Their pretended sincerity tickles Johnson and his sycophants, and it serves the purpose of the Lissnerites and the Wallace job-chasers.

THE WATCHMAN.

POLITICAL DRIFT.

The extra session of Congress will prove pretty expensive to some of its members as it prevents them fulfilling lecture engagemnts. Champ Clark was expecting to make about $10,000 by a season on the platform. During the Christmas recess, it is reliably reported that Clark drew down about $5000 for a short series of lectures. Representative Ollie James (Dem., Ky.;) will have to get along without $5000 which he could earn during the coming summer. Senators Lafollette and Tillman were expecting to make about $5000 each, while Senator Owen will probably be about $1000 out because of the enforced attendance at Washington .

Congressman Charles F. Scott of Kansas characterizes the initiative, refernedum and recall as "revolutionary and subversive of our present system of government, a declaration in effect that representative government is a failure." Had this device been in vogue in the past it "would have made it possible for the tories to have recalled Washington, the copperheads to have recalled Lincoln, and the jingoes to have recalled McKinley." Above all, hesaid, we should hesitate to introduce into our political system a device which would subject to recall a judge whose decision happened not to accord with the passion or the prejudice of the hour.

William J. Bryan has no use for Gov. Harmon, of Ohio, and in the last issue of his paper he declared that if the he does not want the Ohioan to be considered a possibility. For a man who has led his party to defeat, Bryan assumes a good deal.

Charles E. Merriam, who has been nominated by the Republicans of Chicago as their candidate for Mayor, was, when he was elected Alderman from the University ward, a professor of politica lscience at the University of Chicago. The first thing he did after getting into the council was to put some of his theoretical knowledge to practical use, with the result that Chicago found it was being robbed by a set of grafting officials whose operations were fully as extensive as the operations of the notorious Tweed ring in New York.

The Washington Legislature has under consideration a measure that will permit cities of the first, second, third and fourth classes to raise publicity funds by taxation for the purpose of advertising the advantages of the city. A publicity board is to have full charge of the funds and direct expenditures. That there shall be no deficit created in any year, warrants cannot be drawn in excess of the amount provided for by the levy for that year.

Congressman Clark of Florida expresses his belief that his colleague Hobson will prove a second Noah. An important difference is that Noah not only predicted things, but he built his ship. Hobson builds nothing but speeches.

State Treasurer Kenebau of Colorado has started something by declaring the present Live Stock Inspection Board of the State is rotten and the entire system should be repealed. Also, he says there is not an honest board in the State. "Every one of them is crooked and has been caught stealing. This is plain language," he continues, "but it is true, and I defy anyone to have me arrested when I say that the whole system is a system of grafting and stealing." It is. He has furnished a text for action.

ALL OF THE SAME BRAND.

Woman's Suffrage, Socialism and Labor-Unionism Stand Together in Massachusetts.

Woman's suffrage, socialism and trades unionism as organized by the laborites, now stand for the same thing in Massachusetts, according to information received yesterday at the headquarters of the Southern California Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage. The author of the letter is Mrs. Henry M. Whitney, who is vice-president of the opposition to suffrage in the Bay State.

Mrs. Whitney writes the Los Angeles women that when the suffragists presented their cause before the Judiciary Committee of the Legislature at Springfield, they appeared jointly with the socialists and the labor unions. When the suffragists gave a street demonstration one night last week the parade was headed by the reds and the dynamiters.

Suffrage in Massachusetts is in the political game in about as unfortunate a light as it could well present itself, according to Mrs. Whitney, and she believes that it has made victory for the opposition a very easy problem. She thinks that the suffragists in one State of the Union have sacrificed their respect in the eyest of the public by their frank identification with radical movements which could not command respect in Massachusetts, of all places in the world.

ELECT NEW SET OF OFFICERS.

Lindsay Commercial Body Holds Greatest Meeting in the History of the Organization.

LINDSAY, March 10.—Quite the most successful and best-attended meeting in the history of the Lindsay Board of Trade was that held here last night, at which the principal matter of business was the election of officers for the coming term. The following were the officers elected for the coming year:

R. M. Graham, president; C. H. Geldhart, vice-president; A. N. Green, secretary, and the First National Reed, Chester Dowell, C. H. Grassley, C. W. Wright, W. B. Kiggens and E. Gifford.

Toasts were responded to by a large number of the members, and visitors were present from Porterville, Visalia and Exeter. Among the speakers were Mayor Kiggens, G. V. Reed, Dr. Tourtillot, C. H. Grassley, L. H. Gifford of Lindsay, Leslie W. Laumeister, the secretary of the Porterville chamber, bringing the speechmaking to a close with a well-rendered address upon the "Practical Advertising Work of Communities." After the consideration of business of the evening, the members and the visitors discussed a banquet at a local cafe.

POSTMASTER REAPPOINTED.

M. W. Grace, who has been the postmaster here for the past eight years, has just received notification that he has been appointed to the place for an additional term of four years, his new appointment becoming effective on April 1.

INSURANCE AGAINST BANDITS.

Business Conducted by the Bandits Themselves as Gentlemanly Way of Robbing the People.

The bandits of Manchuria and Mongolia have adopted a new way of acquiring at least a portion of the goods of the traveler. These mounted highwaymen in bands not only constantly attack the peaceful native population but even rob travelers in broad daylight.

As a provision against this danger says the Oriental Economic Review, an insurance bureau where one buys a banner, at a cost of about 1-500 of the value of the property to be insured is established there.

This banner carried by a traveller will save him from the bandit's attack; for curiously enough they themselves conduct this insurance business. But it has its limitations.

"We paid our premium at the insurance bureau," say a Japanese traveler, "secured a red banner, and our party then started from Harbin, using several sturdy ponies for ourselves and the carrying of our luggage. After travel be observed for this work: first each girl must be in good scholarship standing; second she must be in good gymnasium standing, as Mrs. Morgan wishes these girls to be representative girls of the school. In athletics, a regular schedule has been planned of interclass games in volley ball, basket ball and baseball, between the ninth and tenth-year girls.

On Arbor Day at Gardena Mr. Palmer, head of the agricultural department, addressed the students on "The Importance of Tree Planting." Mr. Delbert Brunton, principal of the Fullerton High School, also spoke. He contrasted the Gardena and Moneta of today with that of years ago. He referred especially to the breaking up of the Rancho Grande. Principal Lillard discussed the wanton destruction of the birds, reptiles and mammals which live upon the enemies of tree life. The planting of trees was postponed till fairer weather. Each class will plant a tree.

The presidents of the Senior and Junior classes, Rosetta Carrell and Grace Slosson, divided the school by alternate choosing into two competitive groups which will vie with each other in soliciting subscriptions for the Tattler, the school's annual. These two groups organized named themselves, and elected leaders. Mr. Clarence Van Sant is President and Mr. Jay Tucker secretary and treasurer of the "Tormenters." Miss Florence Matson is president and Mr. John Pitman secretary of the "Meteors."

As one of the students put it, "We are not trying so much to beat the other side as to be the better boosters. You see we are all working to increase the circulation of the paper."

The Tattler staff is organized and Miss Valerie Carson, art editor, has named Mr. Rufus Wagner as first assistant in charge of cartoons; otherwise no new names have been added to last week's list.

The boys' baseball team has appeared in new suits. These were given to the team by the business men of Gardena and Moneta. The school colors, purple and gold, are quite prominent on the grey background of the uniforms.

The horticulture class has completed a soil survey of the farm. Hardpan was encountered under the orchard. Blasting and boring were resorted to.

Members of the Faculty of the State Normal gave an entertainment on Thursday for the purpose of raising funds to defray the salary of the Extension Secretary of the Y. W. C. A. resident at the school. Recitations, readings, songs, etc., were given by the talented members of the faculty and a neat sum was raised.

An interesting event of the week at the State Normal was the talk by Miche Kawai a native of Japan who gave a clear picture of educational matters in her native land, contrasting the opportunities there with those of this favored country. The Japanese girl's language was vivid and expressive and her ideas excellent.

LETTERS TO "THE TIMES."

Neutrality.

SOLDIERS' HOME, March 9.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I would call the attention of our Federal officers in Los Angeles to the flagrant breach of our neutrality laws as well as our hospitality and asylum customs by those so-called Mexican patriots (nix) established on Fourth street, Los Angeles, carrying on a revolutionary propaganda against the Mexican government under the protection of American laws. Now it appears to me that the Federal authorities in Los Angeles are derelict in their duties and no doubt they will stretch out their hands for their pay on the first of the month or whenever pay day comes around; but while they allow this unlawful propaganda to be carried on with those cowardly patriots, who are afraid to go to their own country and take any risk that might be necessary in the propaganda of their treason, they find it much safer to remain safe under the protection of the Stars and Stripes, which they and their laborite allies in the Labor Temple would destroy if they could, and replace with the red rag of anarchy. Our Federal officials should be compelled to take action and grab those opera bouffe patriots by the ear and take them to the Mexican border and give them a good send over with a kick, where it would do the most good. They have made enough of trouble for the authorities of Los Angeles in the last three or four years. In the past they claimed the right of asylum, but they cannot advance that claim now, as they have violated all laws of hospitality and asylum. They are like some of our scrubs in the time of the Civil War, after a battle when our soldiers faced the hail of lead and went forward to victory and some to death and others to deathly wounds, this class of cowardly skulks would sit behind a barroom store and fight the battle over and crow.

ALBERT LAWRENCE.

Importance of Mining.

LOS ANGELES, March 10.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Once again I come to plead to you for recognition for a subject of vital importance to the entire West, namely, the mining business. Oil gets everything to which it is entitled, and more too. The mining industry nominally, nothing. Columns of space are given by the journals of this State to petty things which are nothing in comparison to this momentous subject. The common people are satiated with knocks, knocks, knocks. Too much space and time is given to yellow stuff, and the public heart is crying for peace and good will. Let us begin to wake up and remember we are supposed to be Christians. The public will soon get used to do without knocks and scandals. At least without a surfeit of them. The mining business of today is getting down to a more legitimate basis every day. No one is more bitter against wild-catting than the legitimate miner. And wild-catting is getting to be a thing of history only. The public doesn't know this and should be well informed on all sides of the mining business. Who of the public know of the thousands of legitimate mining operations going on in this State today? I might say about one in 5000. Do the people know that this State produces from $36,000,000 to $38,000,000 worth of mineral yearly? Does the public know that about sixty per cent. of the railroad business of this country is created by the mining industry? What does this mean to the business man of this country? Think it over. Can one person in a thousand name five mines that are being operated in California at the present time? Yet there are almost thousands, and many buildings in our city are monuments to the mining industry. If we, residents of this great State of California, are so ignorant in regard to our mines, right in our very midst, how is foreign capital to become conversant with it, and how can foreign capital get in touch with it? Millions upon millions go to South Africa, Australia, South America, the Klondike, Mexico, Colorado, and other places that don't begin to class with our mining territory. And the reason? In simple know what goods we have for sale. They buy every day, but not ours. It is high time that one of our journals started a crusade on these lines, and I know of no paper more fit than The Times to start the yell. Start something. No one will appreciate it more than the legitimate miner and the poor prospector. They will give more than they will get every time, but it will give them a chance to get something, and they are starving to death under the present conditions. If possible to do so please print this letter, as I have great hopes that we may awake from our Rip Van Winkle sleep.

Is Embalming Compulsary?

LOS ANGELES, March 10.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I'm not sick, I'm not crazy; I haven't even made a will. I'm just mad, and I wanto know.

Will you please tell me if there is a California law which makes embalming compulsory?

If I were to die tomorrow and had expressed the wish that I be buried without embalming, the undertaker here tells me that he would have me at the morgue the same day, wishes to the contrary, notwithstanding.

I never cared where or how I was to be buried, but have always had a holy horror of showy funerals, and desert undertakers' fat fees.

Yours very truly,

(MRS.) EMMA M. HART.

Street Car Seats.

LOS ANGELES, March 9.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The best seats are front, in fact, the only good seats on Los Angeles cars. There are no "reserved" seats there for smokers, as claimed by them. Any other passenger who pays fare has equal right there, and better right for he is not offensive to others. But permit to smoke in this location allows the air to be fouled not only in front but the whole car may reek with bar room atmosphere, not of good Havana but of vile stench of pipe, sickening cigarette and stogy, all hours of the day, and all days of the year and no escape. Mr. Tyler says no woman would can compete train accommodations for continued travel with an average twenty minute single street car ride in cities? The necessity for this sort of transportation in cities compels the granting of franchises for it over city streets. Does any smoker claim that smoking on street cars is a necessity? True they want it, but the absolute necessity they will not claim. Whereas the necessity exists for use of street cars by passengers who do not smoke and they are far in majority. To give another small class power, to be obnoxious and nauseating to the majority who must use the street cars is un-American, uncivilized and an intolerable outrage. [illegible] JACKSON.

The Mocking Birds Are Here.

LOS ANGELES, March 11.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I have been here a little over a month, am from the Far East, and have written home about your beautiful city, giving glowing accounts of its progressiveness, the lovely parks, the trees, the flowers, the green, green grass, the beautiful blue sky, the large buildings, and more going up—in fact, everything so far ahead and progressive that eastern cities would do well to emulate. Among other things I said to a friend in a letter:

"And while writing to you a mocking bird is singing on the limb of a tree."

But oh, shades of Danie. Webster, have I made a mistake? A reply comes asking me, "Are you not mistaken about the mocking birds? They are found in the South only."

For the sake of my reputation as a letter writer of the truth, and only the truth, tell me truly, are there any mocking birds here? I have received information, as I thought, of very reliable persons, that there are mocking birds here, right in Los Angeles?

ANNA C. JAMESON,
No. 2205 Maple avenue.

The mocking birds are here, thousands of them, and wherever there are trees which afford a little seclusion you may hear their sweet mocking, sometimes loud songs by day or by night. As you instinctively know a rattle-

Ailments of Men Happily Overcome

SUCCESSFULLY TRIED BY MANY.

Undoubtedly the following prescription will work wonders for that great class of men who, through dissipation of their natural strength, find themselves in their "second childhood" long before the three score and ten allotted to life's pleasures and enjoyments are reached.

It is presumed to be infallible, and highly efficient in quickly restoring in "nervous exhaustion," weak vitality, melancholia and the functions.

First get 50 cents' worth of compound fluid balmwort in a one-ounce package, and three ounces syrup sarsaparilla compound; take home, mix and let stand two hours; then get one ounce compound essence cardiol and one ounce tincture cadomene compound (not cardamom). Mix all in a six or eight-ounce bottle, shake well, and take one teaspoonful after each meal and one when retiring followed by a drink of water.

By mixing it at home no man need be the wiser as to another's shortcomings, and expensive fees are avoided.

Lack of poise and equilibrium in men is a constant source of embarrassment even when the public least suspects it. For the benefit of those who want a restoration to full, bounding health, and all the happiness accompanying it, the above home treatment is given. It contains no opiates or habit-forming drugs whatever. Mix it at home and no one will be the wiser as to your affliction.

Turkish Baths At Home Cure Eczema

Take But A Few Minutes, Cost 2 Cents Each. Itching Stops, Sores Vanish.

Eczema and other skin diseases are caused by the accumulation of impurities in the tissues and blood. Drugs do not eliminate this poison. The most they can do is to ease the pain and itching for the time being.

The Robinson Thermal or Turkish Bath has a remarkable effect on eczema, and all skin troubles. A tremendous amount of poison is extracted from the system through the pores, whenever a Robinson Thermal Bath is taken. Cases have been known where eczema or a bad case of pimples and boils have been almost entirely cured after a twenty-minute bath, taken at home. The terrible itching and burning stops, the blotches heal, and the disease disappears.

Remarkable results occur in nearly every case of rheumatism, lumbago, kidney and blood troubles, dyspepsia, throat and lung trouble, nervous prostration, insomnia and constipation.

Robinson Thermal Baths can now be taken at home at a cost of but a few cents each, and with almost no trouble at all.

The only way to take these thermal baths is by the use of the Robinson Thermal Bath Cabinet. The results are a real Godsend. If you are sick from any cause, it will have an almost miraculous effect upon your system. If you are well, it will keep you so.

The Robinson Thermal Bath Cabinets are a remarkable invention. They are now on exhibition and for sale in Los Angeles at the Broadway Department Store.

Defense.

SAYS CARNEGIE IS A PATRIOT.

Crane Denounced as Howler Against Enterprise.

Making of Armor Plate Was President's Request.

Story of Undertaking Is Told by a Veteran.

John A. Potter of Los Angeles, a member of the Carnegie Veteran Association, has come to the defense of Andrew Carnegie, recently assailed as a humbug by R. T. Crane, the millionaire iron manufacturer of Chicago.

Potter was the first man to make armor plate for Carnegie at the Homestead Steel Works. He answers the charge made by Crane that Carnegie went into this business "to make money and not from patriotic motives," and brands Crane as one of the howlers against successful men and decriers of enterprise. He declares that the Carnegie Company lost heavily when it branched into the manufacture of armor plate.

"It is a shame to hear the irresponsible howlers daily crying down the results of enterprise," said Potter at his home, No. 319 South Westlake avenue, yesterday. "It is becoming second nature with them and is getting to be annoying and dangerous—so much so that our school children are being led to believe that everything is gotten by graft. It will hurt the rising generation; it will take patriotism out of the American people.

"We must discourage these men from making such statements. Criticism is the cheapest thing in the world. It is used used by the cheapest men."

COUNTRY'S CALL, GOD'S CALL.

In a speech before the Republican Club of New York, on January 7, Carnegie said: "The President told me in a cablegram that there were ships on the ways, which could not be finished without the armor and that it was my duty as a patriot to make armor plate for the government. That settled it. Whenever my country calls on me, be it a question of life or of death, it is my glory to respond. We delivered the armor plate. The call of my country is to me the call of God."

In "Valve World," a publication issued by the Crane Company, for distribution among its branch houses, Crane, taking issue with Carnegie on this subject, made this statement: "Carnegie went into the armor plate business to make money, not from patriotic motives, nor in response to any call from God. . . . When he was making armor plate he was in favor of war and was willing to help the government along in its contemptible war with Spain, but since he has gone out of the armor plate business he is in favor of peace."

The Carnegie Company began making armor plate in 1890, under the direction of Potter, who was then superintendent of the plant, and he knows the history of the undertaking from the beginning and the motives that inspired Carnegie to go into it.

"There was a new navy building at that time," said Potter, "and the cruisers Newark, Philadelphia and Baltimore, and the battleships Oregon, Monterey, Iowa and Texas were on the stocks at the various shipyards, waiting for armour plate.

"The Bethlehem steel works had contracted to make armor plate for those ships, as it was being made in France, and they were three years behind in the delivery of the goods. In the meantime, Harrison was elected, and when he took office he found that the boats mentioned were under construction, but their completion held back by the non-delivery of armor plate by the Bethlehem company.

THE PRESIDENTS REQUEST.

"Mr. Carnegie was in Europe. He received a cablegram from the President asking him if he would go into the manufacture of armor plate and help the government out. He immediately decided to do so, in opposition to the advice of some of his business partners. He returned and secured a contract for 6000 tons of armor plate, the government believing they were going to use compound armor plate, as used in all the European navies at that time. Compound armor plate is wrought-iron back and steel face.

"Before returning, Mr. Carnegie ordered machinery in Europe necessary for the making of compound armor, and made arrangements with English manufacturers to guide his practical people in the right channels of manufacture.

"Engineer Berg was sent with me to Europe and while we were on the way over, the naval authorities, members of the steel board of the government, had made tests of compound armor against all-steel-and-nickel aloid plate, the result being that the nickel aloid plate proved a great success. This meant the adoption of nickel steel for armor plate by the government, instead of compound plate, thus rendering the machinery and equipment ordered by Mr. Carnegie practically useless, as the nickel steel is much harder material to produce. This required a greater expenditure of money than was planned.

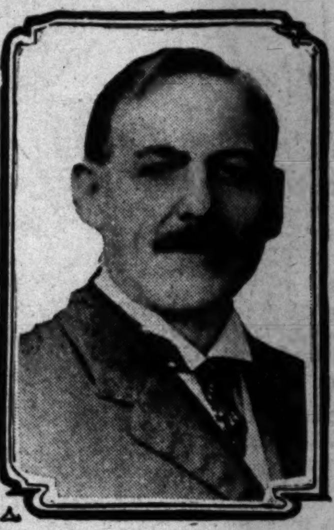
HE WANTS IT RUSHED.

"But Mr. Carnegie didn't falter at this. He showed his patriotism and determination to carry out his agreement with President Harrison and became more anxious to go into the thing right. The results were that the Carnegie company made and delivered nickel steel armor plate to the government before the Bethlehem company. The first month we ran we made 100 tons of armor plate, at which time Mr. Carnegie, Mr. Frick and party were in Los Angeles on a trip through the country. While here they received the report for the first month's operations, and Mr. Carnegie, remembering his promise to the President to deliver 300 tons a month, wired back a stinging message saying that 100 tons was unsatisfactory, that he had promised 300 tons, and wanted it delivered with no excuses. That was the way Mr. Carnegie did business.

"We then got on an extra hustle, which meant a greater cost a ton for armor plate produced at that time, owing to lack of experience and equipment.

"Now, I've heard much about armor plate at ½ cents a pound. Armor plate made in the early part of the undertaking cost the Carnegie company more money than they were receiving for it, and I doubt whether they are making armor plate today for less than 15 cents a pound.

"At that time some of Mr. Carnegie's partners and even myself doubted the wisdom of the company branching into the manufacture of armor plate. The equipment was very expensive and something more than common nerve to press forward in its manufacture.



John Alfred Potter,

member of the Carnegie Veteran Association, who answers the criticism of R. T. Crane that Carnegie is a humbug. He was associated with Carnegie in business twenty years. He is now organizing a company to operate a steel industry on this Coast.

"The undertaking cost the Carnegie company many millions, and held back other and profitable work that they were then doing.

"Under the guidance of Mr. Frick and Mr. Schwab armor plate manufacture has grown into a wonderful national industry. The United States navy would not be at the high standard that it is today had it not been for the patriotism of Mr. Carnegie in going into it, when glory seemed to be the only recompense.

"Mr. Crane said it was all due to the Spanish war, but that is not so. It was on account of the Chilean war scare when the battleships Oregon and Monterey were on the stocks at San Francisco, waiting for their armor plate. I know that our government was worried, and saw a possibility of Chilean warships steaming into San Francisco Bay and taking those ships. The government was so much worried over a possible clash with Chile that Commodore Folger was detailed to the Homestead steel works, and came to my office at 7 o'clock in the morning directly from the train from Washington, and in great secrecy consulted with me as to what emergency plate we could make at once that could be temporarily put on the Monterey and the Oregon. They were even going to plate an old tramp ship called the Ohio. Such was the state of the navy at that time."

PLANS A STEEL PLANT.

Potter has been engaged in metallurgical researches in Los Angeles, and is now forming a company to start a steel industry on this Coast.

"When I came here I noticed how barren the Coast was of manufacturing interests, particularly of iron and steel," said he. "Also, how barren in the way of fuel suitable for the manufacture of iron and steel. White iron ores were known to exist in adjacent counties of the Coast States, and when I became acquainted with crude oil it occurred to me that it could be used as a fuel for the reduction of oxide ores and the manufacture of iron and steel. I couldn't get it out of my mind, and after several years I decided to come and live here and make a study to find a way crude oil and its products could be utilized for the reduction of iron ore. After five years of hard work by myself and large outlays of money furnished by Los Angeles men, I am prepared to say we have positively devised a means whereby wrought iron and steel can be commercially produced direct from the ore locally, and I now look forward to several large steel and iron plants springing up on this Coast. All that we want now is some of that enthusiastic determination that Mr. Carnegie displayed when he went into the manufacture of armor plate for the government.

"We have splendid men here, but the iron business is new to them. It demands nervy and enthusiastic men. It is quite different from raising lemons or enhancing the values of real estate."

Potter is 52 years old, one of the youngest of Carnegie's associates in the founding of the great steel industry at Homestead. As a member of the Carnegie Veteran Association, an organization of the ironmaster's close friends in the formation of the steel industry, he attends a banquet once a year at Carnegie's home in New York, where all the old members meet and discuss old times.

THE SOLDIER IN THE PARK.

Where granite mountains meet the skies
And wide the plain in beauty lies;

Where scent of lemon-bloom and rose
O'er all the land in sweetness flows,—

A city rises, fair and great,
Beside the New World's western gate.

Here, near her heart, the human tide
In ebb and flow is turned aside;

Here, for a space, is traffic stayed
By granite scroll and balustrade;

Here, with the rifle at his breast,
The soldier and the cannon rest.

Above the granite soldier's head
The Dove of Peace, its wings outspread,

Slow hovers to the slouch hat's brim,
And, coyly peering o'er the rim,

With gentle mien and winsome grace,
Scans well the soldier's upturned face;

Then gaily, with a comrade's cheer,
To fancied roll-call, answers: "Here!"

Was it the sunlight, or a smile,
That lit the soldier's face the while?

• • • •

No more for those whose graven names
The granite bears, grim War's acclaims;

No more for those fierce War's harsh notes
In salvos from the cannons' throats.

O! Dove of Peace, go forth, nor rest
Till thou hast scaled the Eagle's nest,

And left with Power thy branch of Peace,
To bud and flower till wars shall cease.

GAY LIFE OF THE CITY.

BY A LOCAL CLUBMAN.

I always predicted that these open and barefaced saloon doors would lead to all sorts of trouble and my prognostication is coming true. Can any lady, passing a saloon door, refrain from peeping in? I have watched them and don't they side-glance?

When a man has told his wife that he is going to be kept very busy at the office and cannot possibly get home for either lunch or dinner, and if that man belongs to a reputable club like the Jonathan, into which peeping eyes cannot readily penetrate, he is unwise, to say the least of it, to spend his pleasantly fleeting hours with one foot on a rail in full view of the passing pedestrians in the street. Even if his own wife did not see him, three of her bosom chums did, and what does his word amount to against the testimony of three bosom chums? His wife calls it the last straw, and is centering her thoughts and hopes on the pleasurable benefits to be derived from substantial alimony.

Her three chums say—the spiteful cats—that the battle will not be one-sided, and that they have been watching and—oh, but what's the use. One touch of gossip makes the whole world chin.

Isn't it funny how women resist being given advice. I have tried it and meant it so kindly, too. I have even been so foolish as to point out to ladies of my acquaintance how they could improve their personal appearance by changing their style of dress, by a different arrangement of their natural and augmented hair, or by modifying the shade of the face powder that they affect, and I have gone to the length of advising them to emulate the dress effect of some other fair lady, whose general get-up has seemed pleasing to my eye. And what in general has been my reward? Thanks? Gratitude for my obviously good intentions? No. A thousand times, no. My advice has invariably been received with an uplifting of the nose, and—sniffs. Disdainful sniffs. No, fellow clubmen, you may express an opinion, but take it from me—always send advice by freight.

A pleasant reconciliation was brought about by mutual friends at a supper at Levy's recently, between two genial gentlemen not indirectly connected with the law. They both agreed to bury the hachet, but from subsequent observations overheard, it is safe to venture that neither of them has forgotten to carefully mark the spot.

One of our young bloods, who is an eligible bachelor and prominent club man, has a grievance. He was booked for a dance a couple of weeks ago and bethought him of investing in a very alluring pair of socks, which had caught his eye whilst passing a store window.

He made his purchase, jumped into his machine and guided it to a certain residence in Chester place to make a formal call on a certain married lady, who shall be nameless. On his way to his destination he extracted the foot wear from its paper wrapping and admired its gentle shade of color and silken texture, then replaced the hose, minus the paper wrapping, into his overcoat pocket. On alighting at the residence, he hung his overcoat in the hall and paid his formal and, no doubt, exceedingly pleasant call. On returning to his own abode he drew the socks again from his pocket and stared at them amazed. They had changed their color to an agonizing light grey and were no longer silk, but of a texture that is commonly known as cotton, and were reminiscent of Main street, rather than of Broadway! He has done a bit of heavy thinking, but the puzzle refuses to be elucidated; nevertheless, the next time he paid a formal visit to the residence in Chester place, he fairly glowered at the butler.

From our club and city life will be sadly missed the ever-genial Thomas A. Graham, for many years freight and passenger agent of the Southern Pacific in this city. However, he has gone, on promotion, to San Francisco, to take up the duties of general freight agent of the company. May his shadow never grow less! Needless to say, he was tendered a God-speed dinner by his numerous friends at the California Club, among whom, besides many others, were Hancock Banning, Frank W. King, John J. Byrne, Harry B. Chase, Fred L. Alles, Percy H. Clark, Louis Vetter and J. W. McKinley. It was a good and befitting dinner and iced water was at a discount.

The manager of the —— Club was trying to impress upon a new English waiter the honor he was having thrust upon him by being alloted to wait upon a visiting gentleman who holds an important official position. This important foreigner, besides occupying this official position from his government, is also the possessor of an abnormally healthy appetite, and thoroughly enjoys his lunch. The manager motioned the waiter to his table and directed his attentions to the important one.

"Do you know who and what that gentleman is you are waiting on?" he queried in a whisper. "No, sir," said the English waiter. "Wot is 'e?" "That," replied the manager, "is Mr. So-and-So; he's the —— of ——" The waiter stared admiringly and respectfully at the important one, who was topping off a whole porterhouse steak with a huge wedge of pie, and the waiter was duly impressed. "Is that 'im?" he answered after a respectful pause, then bent to the manager and confidingly whispered in his ear: "'E reminds me of 'is lordship at 'ome, sir. 'E's a regular 'og."

If you feel your ability as a humorist is not properly appreciated, negotiate to buy something. The salesman will laugh at all of your pleasantries until a sale is made. But when you have disappeared! Oh, ho, ho! Most salesmen have had to swallow countless "chestnuts" with a smile. Such a pitying smile!

Why so many of our charming society buds elect to undergo a training in dramatic art is a sore puzzle, considering the overcrowded condition of the profession, and the small hope of ever winning fame; yet many of them have aspirations and badger their parents until they eventually give in and choose, naturally, the best teachers of the "art."

There is one young lady, however, who is back again in our midst, with admittedly, a little more experience than she formerly had, but still without the benefits to be obviously derived from a completed course of instruction. Her parents studied the columns of the dramatic papers and elected to take her to Chicago, where they placed her in a prominent dramatic school, gave her their parental blessing, and left her to battle wtih the muses.

Private lessons, she was informed by the middle-aged gentleman who directed the school, were always the most beneficial, so private lessons were obviously the best thing to take, and she took them. She took them for a week, and then her parents took her—home. She had written fully of the great progstructor, was the proper portrayal of the emotions, the foremost of which were "Joy" and "Parental Affection." To demonstrate this the instructor went to extraordinary pains. He placed his pupil outside the door of his private study, seated himself in his arm chair, took up a book and waited. His pupil was then instructed to slowly open the door, to enter, to gaze at him a moment, then to give a gasp of joyful surprise, exclaim breathlessly "Father!" and rush toward him. He would arise, evince the obvious and great happiness expected of a long-lost father, open wide his arms and receive his supposed offspring in a befitting and tender manner.

This is what he termed "the first lesson," and had to be thoroughly rehearsed and learned. He kept her earnestly at it for a week, and then her real parents appeared upon the scene. The second lesson, whatever it may have been, was never given or explained, and a, no doubt, prominent stage career has been ruthlessly nipped in the bud. The daughter holds to it that the professor was well meaning and thoroughly knew his business, but these statements are received by her parents with tightened lips.

ST. JOHN'S RIVER IS CUTTING UP.

Noble Old Stream Overflows Its Banks and Dampens the Adjacent Ranches—No Great Damage.

VISALIA, March 10.—As a result of the heavy rains of the past two days the St. Johns went out of its banks near the Cutler place this afternoon, and at a late hour had flooded several hundred acres of lowlands, the chief damage being to hay in stacks. Owing to the depth of water over some of the main traveled roads, the Willow school has been closed until further notice.

According to advices from the river country, there is very little danger of a flood for Visalia. An adequate patrol is being maintained on the levee, and as the barrier has been strengthened at critical points no break is anticipated. Mill Creek has not raised to any appreciable extent.

From the hills there come reports of heavy rains, the water from which has tation for the season had reached 12.46 inches.

SNUBS WETS.

J. A. Allen, a prominent attorney and a man mentioned prominently for the second Superior judge, sent a curt letter to the leaders of the wet campaign today, stating that he not only must refuse to serve on their ticket, but that he has pledged his support to the ticket which has been placed in nomination by the Good Government League

Mayor Orr, who was also touted as one of the leading candidates of the wets, has also indicated his unwillingness to stand as the candidate for the open-town leaders. Thus far the only candidates selected who have expressed a willingness to stand for the open town are H. Askin, L. Dollner, J. F. Jordan and L. Lucier.

TO PROSECUTE.

Civil actions are to be begun tomorrow against all those who are suspected of having registered without legal right so to do, and through the Superior Court all such are to be asked to appear in court and show cause why a permanent order should not be issued by the court, restraining them from voting at the coming general election.

C. G. Lamberson, a leading attorney and a prominent member of the Good Government League, has offered his services in drawing up the complaints and conducting such suits. It is unofficially stated that there are more than 100 registrations by those who have not the right to vote here.

SUNDAY CLOSING.

Postmaster E. S. Lamberson will conduct a referendum vote among the leading business men of this city to ascertain their sentiments with regard to Sunday closing of the local postoffice. This method was used with success recently in Fresno, and by the result here. Mr. Lamberson has promised to abide. It is the plan to send out postcards to 100 or more representative residents, asking them whether or not they will approve of the proposal to leave all mail which arrives here Sunday for distribution Monday morning. Recipients of the cards will be asked

KINGS COUNTY IN HIGH FEATHER OVER RECENT RAINS.

Lemoore School District Authorizes a Fifty-Thousand Dollar Bond Issue, But Finds That the Legal Limit Has Been Exceeded and the Bonds Must be Canceled.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

HANFORD, March 10.—Thirty-six hours of continuous rain, amounting to an inch and a half, has resulted in great benefit to Kings county farming interests and no damage, according to Horticultural Commissioner B. V. Sharp, who today made a careful investigation.

It was feared by some that the washing off of spray applied to trees for scale would result in loss, because it would have to be done all over again, but he says such is not the case, for the wash was applied a sufficient time before the hard rain to have accomplished its purpose. The heavy precipitation is heartily welcomed by the dairymen, for it assures immense alfalfa yields. Although the water in Kings River rose several feet, it was considerably under the danger mark, and reports from the mountains are that the rain has ceased and no fear need be entertained.

Traffic over the Coalinga branch of the Southern Pacific is still tied up, owing to washouts and unsafe bridges. No trains for the oil city have gone farther than Lemoore since Monday.

The so-called "west side" line of the Southern Pacific was closed by soft track and washouts near Firebaugh, and traffic on that road has come here around the main line through Fresno. The Santa Fe has operated its trains through here without interruption, and Eventually he consented to take me in his carriage and make an endeavor to reach the meeting place, Ewo Godown, some distance out on Soochow road.

For a half mile or so of Nanking road the going was easy and unobstructed, but as soon as we turned off into the Chinese streets the crowds became so dense that it was necessary to pull the horses down to a walk. A mile of this took half an hour, at the end of which time it was no longer possible to proceed in the carriage at all. We abandoned the useless vehicle, therefore, about two o'clock, spending the rest of the afternoon jostling and being jostled toward the Ewo Godown, nearer to which than a hundred yards we never attained.

A brief explanation of some of the troubles at the bottom of the plague riots may be in order here; the "pacification" meeting and the mob I will write of in a moment.

The trouble started through the absolutely imperative measures taken by the sanitary department of the International Settlement—in which are included over half a million Chinese—to quarantine a number of plague cases which, contrary to the usual experience with that scourge, appeared with the first spell of cold weather. In the first place the mistake was made of not sending out notices to the already panic-stricken sections where the dread disease had appeared, so that when the Sanitary Department's men came and took away the dead and dying, the rumor that these were to be cut up for foreign medicine found ready credence. The temper of the people was threatening at this stage, but not actively hostile.

Then, from an element among the Chinese themselves, came the impulse which started serious trouble. Kidnaping is one of the most widely-spread and lucrative practices of a large part of the Chinese criminal class, many of which are to be found in both old and new Shanghai. The carrying off to the Isolation Hospital of plague suspects put an idea into the heads of some of these, and immediately they commenced putting it into practice. Well-dressed Chinese would appear at the houses of people residing in or near the plague-stricken districts and, claiming to represent the Sanitary Department, declare this and that child infected and carry it away. The people, for the most part, were too ignorant to ask for credentials and when they did the slippery rascals usually found a way to coerce them into giving up the child.

BESIDE THEMSELVES.

If the Chinese had been threatening in their demeanor at the taking away of their plague-stricken relatives, they were fairly beside themselves when the perfectly well were carried off, for only such, of course, did the wily kidnapers care to get hold of. Their protests became more and more vigorous as the days went by, but it was with its usual irony that fate decreed that the storm should break upon those who had taken the least part in the trouble up to that moment, the European disinfectors and rat-exterminators out upon their first round.

Mobs the world over are not noted for their thoroughness, and to this rule those of China are no exception. With all the time they could have asked for at their disposal, imbued with only the deadliest of intentions and hampered by nothing but a proneness to get in each others' way, hordes of Chinese, numbering many thousands, were not able to more than half kill any of the unlucky fellows that fell into their hands. Several of the latter, when the police and hastily summoned volunteers had finally forced the mobs to scatter, were not expected to survive the trip to the hospital, but within the last week it is reported that the worst injured of them is out of danger.

THE MEETING.

The Ewo godown or warehouse, a spacious building some distance outside the business section of the city, was provided with chairs and a platform for the occasion. Long before the hour appointed for the meeting, crowds of Chinese had assembled along the Suchow Creek frontage, on Chekiang road bridge and in other adjacent thoroughfares. At the special wish of the Chinese gentry who had promised to be present, no armed police were on duty, though a considerable number of European, Sikh and Chinese policemen had been detached from the nearest station to preserve order.

Only well-dressed and respectable appearing Chinese were admitted to the building, these including representatives from all of the trade guilds, all of the editors of the Chinese newspapers and many of the gentry and officials. The jam in front of the building was so great that even the Chief of Police, who arrived a few minutes late, had the greatest difficulty in forcing an entrance.

The meeting was opened with a speech by Mr. Shen-Tun-Ho, an event which I am sorry indeed to have missed. Mr. Shen, who is famous among other things, as having translated "Uncle Tom's Cabin," into his own language and stage-managed the production of it at a Shanghai theater, accompanied the Commercial Commission during its first fortnight in China, and my last recollection of him was at our farewell dinner at Chinkiang, where he held all one end of the table breathless with a plan for bringing the Chinese stage down-to-date by supplanting the classic drama that had held the boards for the last few thousand years by a cycle of French and English "problem" plays, which he had in process of translation. On another occasion, Mr. Shen, whose understanding of English is not quite as "fluent" as his delivery, lost the drift of one of the commissioner's speeches which he had volunteered to translate at the Nanking Provincial Assembly tiffin. A less resourceful man would have called another interpreter to assist him. Not so Shen. He finished up the translation with a speech of his own on military reform which came near winning the unlucky commissioner whose thoughts he was supposed to be expressing, a rebuke from Pekin. An occasion to which Shen-Tun-Ho could not rise, therefore, is a thing quite outside of my conception, and the fact that the role of "head pacificator" proved such makes me doubly sorry that we missed the meeting.

Mr. Shen opened up by saying that the Health Officer would proceed forthwith to explain the Municipal Council's reasons for desiring to continue the plague prevention measures, giving an outline of the methods which it would be necessary to pursue. At first he was greeted with loud applause, especially upon his declaration that he himself would arrange for the construction of a Chinese Isolation those interested. But when he touched upon the plague prevention measures, referring to the summary in Chinese of the Health Officer's ideas which had been given to all of those entering the building, violent protests were raised. Certain of the discontended residents of the infected neighborhoods pressed forward and declaimed in the wildest excitement, the rest of the big audience quickly joining them. By this time continuous rushes on the police guarding the doors had resulted in a number of the mob gaining admission to the godown, and cries of "Strike the Ewo Taipan! (Our friend, Shen-Tun-Ho) Kill the traitor!" were raised. The summaries of the Health Officer's recommendations were torn up, trampled upon or derisively thrown upon the platform.

GETTING OUT.

Outside of the godown a mob of several thousand occupied the entire length of the North Soochow Road, and it was into the outskirts of this central throng that K— and I started boring our way inward at about the time that the meeting began falling into disorder. Every one was trying to force his way toward the iron door of the godown, now fast closed and bolted from within. Some of the Chinese succeeded in clambering up onto the window sills, and, clinging to the iron bars, were able to follow the proceedings on the inside and swell the tumult on the outside by reporting them.

In some cases crowds were gathered around stump orators who were evidently rousing the temper of the mob by haranguing. The Foreign, Sikh and Chinese police seemed to be making an earnest effort to keep clear a circle around the main entrance, but were repeatedly compelled to give way through the sheer weight of the encompassing crowd. If those without the building desired to enter, many of those within appeared equally desirous of getting out, for at intervals the door was thrown open and a regular stampede took place. At these times, before the police could close the doors again, their cordon was broken and swarms of angry coolies forced their way into the building. The audience, so densely packed that to force ones way through it was impossible, were standing on the backs of the chairs and benches, waving their arms, shrieking at the tops of their voices and constantly urging each other to violence, their cries being eagerly taken up by the outside mob.

Some of the coolies began breaking up benches—an ominous action—at this juncture, and when Dr. Davis, the Assistant Health Officer, endeavored to make a speech, matters assumed a rather ugly look. The official was pulled down before he could reach the platform, and only emerged in a badly mauled state after a dozen police had beaten off his assailants. The handful of foreigners and the Chinese gentry bunched together on the back of the platform, with the police drawn up in a cordon for protection—a sort of "Custer's Last Stand" formation, I should judge from the description—and waited for the mob to come on. At this critical stage one of the gentry, whose name I have been unable to learn but who I am sure must have been our good friend, Shen-Tun-Ho, wrote on the blackboard a notice to the effect that the meeting was "postponed," and suggesting another at a later date at the Town Hall, to which all interested in plague preventive work were cordially invited. This marked the turning of the tide, as far as demonstration against those who had called the meeting was concerned. Yelling wildly, with characteristic scatteredness of purpose, the "audience" went charging out into the street, many of them taking smart raps from the batons of the sturdy Sikhs as they came through the door.

LEG-WEARY.

It was about this time that K—— and I lost interest in the meeting and decided to head for a portion of the city where cariages, rickshaws, street cars, or any other mode of vonveyance might be available. We had stood some pretty stiff jostling for a couple of hours, and from the fact that I was decidedly leg-weary myself, I knew that K——, who could hardly have ever walked a mile at a time in his life, must have been just about played out. We had encountered no very pronounced hostility from the crowd, but being buried in a mile or two of unwashed coolies is not a delectable experience, and we were anxious to be through with it.

Unluckily for us, however, the report had spread to the city that all the foreigners who had gone to the meeting were being murdered, and every volunteer company, policeman and fire brigade were being rushed to the scene of the trouble on the double. Quite natuarlly, these did not desire to expose their rears or flanks by allowing the crowds to open up and close after them as they went by; so the only other expedient, that of driving the mobs ahead of them, was adopted. The result, at the several focal points within a quarter of a mile in either direction of the Ewo Godown, was one of the wildest, jamming, jostling, crushing, pushing lots of frightened humanity of which the mind can conceive. I had always heard that China was overcrowded, but never dreamed to what an extent. It was like a college class rush, a commuters' crush, a theater fire stampede all going on at once. Now the street was so full of men that there was room for no more and we were squeezed so tight that it was difficult to breathe; now there were twice as many in the same space and breathing had stopped—no, not quite stopped, for everyone is yelling like a Comache, and yelling takes breath. Still the crowd jams in. Here and there men come creeping up and go swirling about on the shoulders and heads of the others for several yards before they are sucked down into the maelstrom beneath. The rattle of shots a block or so west sets the crush swirling in the opposite direction; the notes of a bugle to the east starts a countercurrent: the real jam is about to commence.

AN AWFUL CRUSH.

For a while there had been a tendency among the pushing coolies to spare K—— somewhat on account of the very evident importance bespoken for him by his clothes, and even I, as a foreigner, seemed to be getting rather less than my share of the crushing. But now all the saving advantages of rank or birth were lost and it was a case of each man for himself. Bare feet and clouted ones went tramping over mine without a glance of apology from their gasping owners; and bare feet and clouted ones crushed under mine without awakening a qualm of commiseration. Elbows and shoulders were wriggling in desperate efforts to lift perspiring bodies up into the air and many a face was scratched and bleeding from blows that were never aimed at it. Here and there barred doors gave way under pressure from the street but the thin trickle of humanity which started finding its way through and out by a back way had no apparent effect in easing the jam.

My own lankiness kept my head up in the fresh air and saved me somewhat in the crush, but poor little K——, five feet-four and fat, got the full benefit of every push and shove that was coming. In the early stages he was inclined to blame me for getting him into the mess; then there was a period when he clung to my arm for support; and then the final stage in which down all the torments of the seven hells on the encompassing coolies.

The drift of the crowd carried us out into the opener road by the canal, and of a sudden there was a lightening of the pressure and an accelerated movement. For a moment I was at a loss to account for the change, and then in the disappearing arms and heads in front, read the reason for it; the crowd was being forced into the canal.

I managed to dislodge a coolie from the lee of a telephone pole and successfully to defend that heaven-sent haven against all comers while the mob moved on to the edge of the stone wall and into the canal. I stretched a helping hand to K—— as he bobbed past in the relentless current, but his own were pinned to his sides and he was unable to grasp it. He went over the bank sandwiched between a screaming lame beggar and a water coolie who still carried the stumps of his bamboo pole.

IN THE MUD.

I knew that there was little water in the canal—properly, Soochow Creek—but in K——'s almost helpless condition I had grave fears of his being trampled under foot by the sturdier unfortunates that had fallen with him and suffocated in the mud. It was with no little relief, therefore, that I caught the feeble hail of a drowned-rat sort of a figure which had climbed the rail of a stranded junk and collapsed upon the deck. There was no outward sign to differentiate it from the dozen others which had taken refuge upon that particular junk, but no coolie was ever as rotund as that. "That you, K——?" I called, and the slimy round figure nodded a weak assent.

The crowd thinned rapidly after that, and the volunteers and the fire brigade, with the threat of the artillery and the liberal use of the fire hose, soon had the situation well in hand. In a quarter of an hour the street was cleared and I managed to get permission from an officer to look up a couple of rickshaws. I was some time in doing this, and before I got back K—, shivering with cold, had tried to walk ashore on a plank laid from the stern of the junk. Of course he fell off, and when I arrived some of the junk people were just lifting him, feet first, up to the bank. He sputtered green water for a minute, tried several times to form words with his numbed lips,—and at last found his voice. Was it to thank the coolies who lifted him out of the canal he strove so hard to speak? Not exactly. He said—well, I can hardly repeat it just as he said it. But he said, in effect, that he hoped that whole mob of crazy coolies which was responsible for his miserable plight would die of the plague; that he didn't care, in fact, if every one of them was cut up for foreign medicine; that he would even do his little part in seeing that they were so cut up; that—here the shivers came on again and K—'s voice trailed off in a quavering staccato. What he intended to say, I think, was that he intended to go out personally and cut them up.

At any rate my mission was accomplished, for a few days later K—'s name was among those of the Chinese who assembled at the "postponed" meeting at the Town Hall to devise means for coping with the plague situation. Fortunately the epidemic of the scourge had abated somewhat, and that meeting was able to agree upon a plan which has since been put into effect with signal success. The Chinese cases are being segregated in special isolation hospitals and looked after by foreign certificated Chinese doctors who are selected by the Health Board of the settlement. The situation is now well in hand, and no further trouble is anticipated this winter. The affair has been a striking object lesson, however, in the uncertainty of the Chinese, and no one likes to think of what might have happened if the epidemic had not of itself taken a turn for the better.

CHINESE REMEDY.

I append a Chinese recipe for a plague remedy which appeared in one of the leading local native papers a few days ago. It is not patented, and any one who desires, therefore, is quite welcome to try its efficacy for himself.

A mixture of: One-half ounce snake's leg skin, (this must mean lizard;) one-tenth ounce bee's skin; one-half ounce clean hair; one-tenth ounce black beans; one-half ounce bitter gourd.

All these ingredients are to be placed in an urn of cold water, the use of which for cooking purposes will dispel all poisons and slay every kind of germ. If ground up and applied to the sore parts of the body it is also efficacious.

PROPOSE SALOON TICKET.

Visalia Liquor Dealers Plan to Have a Ticket in the Municipal Campaign. Names Are Kept Secret.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

VISALIA, March 8.—Politics seethed and boiled yesterday when the saloon men called a meeting of the "anti-dry" forces. After a warlike discussion of the special election which was just held and at which the saloons were given a decided trouncing, they chose an entire ticket, which is to be put in the field in opposition to the anti-saloon candidates, April 10.

This action was taken following a a compromise which was proposed to them by the moderates on both sides, in which it was offered that if the saloon-keepers would abide by the decision of the voters at the special election, the owners of the drinking-shops would be given six months in which to close out their stocks. In view of their determination to put in their own ticket, however, it is the intention now, announced by the Goo-Goos, that if their ticket wins, the saloons will be closed peremptorily.

No names were given out by the saloon-people and the ticket will not be announced until the close of the legal period for filing nominations.

FLAMES HURT WOMAN.

While Mrs. E. B. Pennybaker, resident of Church street, was lighting the fire in her kitchen stove last evening, using kerosene in order to start it quickly, an explosion threw blazing oil over her face and head, setting fire to her hair and burning her seriously.

Mrs. Pennybaker had presence of mind to threw her heavy skirts over her head, extinguishing the blaze, but not until her hair was almost entirely burned from her head, her hands were severely blistered and her eyes scorched.

With the combined shock and burns Mrs. Pennybaker was prostrated and will be confined to her bed several days.

FOUND DEAD IN FIELD.

Having wandered probably from home, while temporarily demented, William Philip May, resident of the vineyard section northwest of Visalia, was found dead in a field near Orosi yesterday morning. It was evident that he had wandered about in the rain and cold until exhausted, when he fell and died from exposure.

Mr. May was 64 years of age, and for the past thirty years had been a resident of this section of California. He was well to do and owned a fine ranch, a large part of which was set out to deciduous fruits and grapes. He leaves a widow and four children.

MELVILLE CLARK'S APOLLO
The Player Piano

Human Touch United States patent No. 795,817 gives to the manufacturers of the Apollo Player-Piano the exclusive right to touch directly DOWN on the keys. It is the only correct way to play a piano. All the triggers and levers in the world cannot make a player-piano correct unless the fundamental principle is correct. Just spend ten minutes having this feature of the Apollo explained. You can easily discriminate between the Apollo and all other player-pianos, from a mechanical or musical standpoint.

Metronome Self-acting Motor The Apollo Player-Piano contains a metronome self-acting motor that we guarantee would run immersed in water. It runs with so little friction that it will run clear through and rewind the longest roll of music without the necessity of pedaling. The Apollo is the only player-piano on the market containing this motor. It is patented by the manufacturers of the Apollo Player-Piano.

Transposing Tracker-Range The Apollo Player-Piano contains a patented transposing device, very simple in construction that enables you to instantly transpose a composition into any desired key or pitch for the purpose of accompanying the voice or any other instrument, such as violin, mandolin, flute. Ask one of your friends who owns one of the old style instruments not containing this feature how much they would give if they had it on their player-piano.

Solo Accent The Apollo is the only player-piano on the market that will accent the theme or melody of a composition correctly. We offer twice the price, cash, that we ask for the Apollo for any other player that will do what the Apollo will do; namely, strike simultaneously any number of keys in the same register or octave, accenting one or more of the notes and subduing the remaining. Is it not reasonable to assume that if any of our competitors had an instrument that would meet these requirements of a musician, they would hasten to accept this challenge?

We are the exclusive agents in this territory for the Apollo. We allow liberally for used pianos and player-pianos taken in exchange, and arrangements can be made for convenient payments.

"San Diego for Me"

These Words Are on the Lips of Thousands Throughout America Today. The "Psychological Moment" Has Arrived in San Diego

This Ad. is written for the man who has a little foresight coupled with good judgment and enough common sense to know a good thing when he sees it—the man of decision and action. A number of leading business, professional men and bankers of San Diego realizing the need of encouraging more intensified farming in the immediate back country so that the local market could be supplied with more home-grown products, instead of having to ship them in from the North as is being done to a large extent now, formed a combination of capital and purchased the celebrated CHASE RANCHO right in the heart of El Cajon Valley, one of the most fertile and productive in all Southern California. You can participate in the profits of this big land deal if you wish. It is being subdivided into 5 and 10 acre tracts and sold on very easy terms and at prices that are below what surrounding property can be purchased at in large acreage.

It is within a few minutes of San Diego. Trains make 7 round trips daily. Boulevard leads direct to the city. Electric line now being built to extend through the subdivision. High school, graded schools, churches, stores, livery stables, garages, hotels, a newspaper, a bank, packing houses, mineral springs all within a few hundreds yards of the property.

First offered to the public February 15th. Nearly one half first subdivision sold in less than 10 days. 25 per cent. of these sales made to old residents of El Cajon Valley. Get wise to the situation TODAY.

The Oil Industry.

MANY CLAIMS ARE AFFECTED.

J. M. Dunn Talks of Oil Land Relief Measure.

Believed First Withdrawal Will Be Set Aside.

K. T. and O. to Drill Over One Hundred Wells.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BAKERSFIELD, March 10.—Approximately 300 claims of 160 acres each or about 48,000 acres in the aggregate are affected by the Smith remedial oil land law according to the estimate of J. M. Dunn, one of the members of the oil men's committee, who has returned to Bakersfield from Washington The estimate is based on data gathered by the committee for use in convincing members of Congress and the Interior Department of the justice of the request that the claim be validated. The data covered a great range of facts concerning 645 claims, all told, but of these only half came under the yard decision.

It is the belief of the committee of which Dunn was a member, that the withdrawal order of September 27, 1909, will be held of no effect by the courts, and that all claims on which "inception of development" took place prior to July 3, 1910, will be validated. This question probably will be for the courts to determine, but the interpretation of the phrase "inception of development" will be up to the Interior Department, and the members of the committee return with the impression that this interpretation will be liberal to the oil men. The impression is supported by conversations with Interior Department officials in which hypothetical questions were asked by the oil men and answered by the authorities. While these conversations will not in any way bind the officials to any policy respecting oil land claims, they indicated the probable frame of mind in which the subject would be approached, and Dunn says that the committee came away very well satisfied with the situation.

It is anticipated that the first effect of the new law will be that oil companies that have made discovery on the claims affected will at once apply for patent, and that the companies that have not reached the oil sand will increase their efforts to do so without delay.

Dunn speaks with great heartiness of the manifest fairness and grasp of the situation displayed by President Taft, with whom the committee had a number of interviews, and by Assistant Secretary Pierce, Oscar Lawlor of the Attorney General's office, and George Otis Smith, director of the geological survey. To the reasonableness of these men and to the efforts of Congressmen Smith, Needham and Mondell and Senators Flint and Smoot the success of the remedial law is due, says Mr. Dunn.

TWO KINDS OF GAS.

The report that the Honolulu Consolidated Oil Company will experiment on a large scale with the manufacture of gasoline from its gas wells in the Buena Vista hills is confirmed on what is believed to be good authority, but Standard officials deny knowledge of any intention on the part of that concern to utilize the product of its Buena Vista wells in a similar way. The Standard, it is said, has made tests of its gas and is convinced that the percentage of gasoline carried is too small to make condensation profitable. The saturation of the gas varies, it is stated, according to the depth at which it is found, its proximity to oil measures and the gravity of the oil from which it comes. Gas from the upper strata in the Buena Vista hills is much dryer than the gas from the lower sands, the former, probably, having passed through a process of filtration after leaving the oil far below.

The fact that the Standard is known to need gasoline to supply its increasing trade and the fact that no steps have been taken to utilize the product of the gassers in this way give support to the denial that gasoline exists in large quantities in the Buena Vista wells. This is balanced on the other hand by the statement of men who say they have thoroughly tested the gas for gasoline, and the only way to reconcile the two conclusions is on the theory that the two qualities of gas exist.

K. T. & O. ACTIVE.

Following the announcement that the Kern Trading & Oil Company—the producing department of the Southern Pacific—had been ordered to increase its activity in the Coalinga field come evidences that a similar policy is to be followed in the Sunset-Midway district. Reports from Maricopa are to the effect that 150 wells are to be drilled at once on the Southern Pacific land in the West Side fields, where drilling materials of all kinds have been ordered in large quantities.

Whether the main object is to supply oil for the railroad's demands or to protect the titles to the land by making mineral discovery is not definitely known, but the manner in which the rigs are distributed will throw some light on this question so soon as they are built. The Southern Pacific is now buying about 7000 barrels of oil per day for its own use, a circumstance which would adequately support the theory that production is the sole object of the K. T. & O.'s activity.

Harry Quinn, the veteran sheep grower, who owns the land on which the Eastern Trading and Oil Company is drilling in section 34, 24-27, says the company has one of the best rigs ever put up in the State, and is prepared to go 5000 feet if a satisfactory result is not obtained before. The company has abundant financial backing, it is stated, and will test the territory "so that nobody ever will need to drill there again if it does not find the oil." The hole was started with a sixteen-inch casing.

PLENTY OF OIL LEFT.

More evidence to the effect that the Lakeview gusher has not injured the territory in its vicinity either by exhausting the oil or by letting in the water is furnished by the Sunset Monarch's well E, 800 feet distant, which has been flowing at a furious rate at different times in the past week from a depth of 2465 feet. Gate valves had been placed on the casing and these were closed when the well was still flowing to prevent the possibility of its getting beyond control.

The Sunset Monarch is drilling three wells in the vicinity of the Lakeview, and the Maricopa Thirty-six is starting work on No. 3 and getting ready to copa Thirty-six is building a rig for No. 2.

The Esperanza Consolidated Oil Company, owning the Essex, on the Sunset flat, the American Midway, the Nevada Midway, the Brunswick, Logan and Oakland in Midway and the Wabash in Coalinga as well as land in Lost Hills and Kettelman Plains, is running fourteen strings of tools under the management of B. T. Dyer. The American Midway, recently purchased by the Esperanza Consolidated, controls the east eighty acres of the northwest quarter of section 32, 32-24.

The annual stockholders' meeting and election of officers of the Independent Oil Producers' Agency will be held in this city on Wednesday, April 12.

A Great Man.

TAFT MADE GOOD, SHOWS BACKBONE

EXTRA SESSION MAY HELP HIM IMMENSELY.

Has Secured the Enactment of Much Legislation of a Constructive Character During His First Two Years as President—Does Not Fear Tariff Legislation.

[Washington Correspondence Brooklyn Eagle.]

WASHINGTON, March 4.—President Taft has reached the high-water mark in his time as Chief Executive and soon will be rounding into the back stretch. His friends are beginning to point to his record. Reviewing the record usually is preliminary to a campaign for renomination. Those who believe that Taft has been a success are not modest when they speak of his achievements. They talk in the superlative, perhaps without much regard for perspective. But they are sincere in their admiration.

Taft's real admirers, who believe that the President has many high qualities of statesmanship, but who feel that he has suffered from a lack of assertiveness, have taken new heart. They are better pleased with him since the issuing of the extra session call than they have been for a long time. They regard it as a timely revelation of the fact that there is nothing the matter with the President's backbone, and they figure that it will help the President immensely with the people, irrespective of whether the extra session does his will or not. They want Taft to be a fighter when a fight needs to be made, and they think he has selected the psychological time.

As a matter of fact, it is only fair to Taft to say that there has been much legislation during his first two years, some of it of a constructive and statesmanlike character. Whether all of it has been popular legislation is the doubtful point. Taft's supporters claim that the people will begin to understand the worth of the President before the 1912 election is due, and that the ballots will tell a different story than they did last fall.

TAFT'S ACHIEVEMENTS.

As to Taft's achievements, the tariff must take first rank, no matter what its merits or demerits. The tariff was revised, which is something that does not occur under every President. The Payne-Aldrich law probably will itself be revised, but such as it is, it is reckoned as a part of the Taft record.

A tariff board was created to undertake the collection of information on which to base scientific tariff revisions. The proposition to establish a permanent tariff board was lost, however.

Taft has negotiated a reciprocity agreement with Canada, which perhaps comes nearer to being a popular act than anything he has done. Its failure at the session just closed is not regarded as a permanent failure.

Taft invoked the power of an injunction writ to prevent the big railroads from making rate increases until the Interstate Commerce Commission could investigate. What the commission did is of very recent history.

Under the Taft administration has been inaugurated a postal savings bank system.

A Court of Commerce has been created, to which may be taken appeals from decisions of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Also a Court of Customs Appeals.

A stocks and bonds commission has been created for the purpose of devising a plan by which future issues of railroad securities may be put under the supervision of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

There has been a shaking up in the Navy Department and a definite step taken toward wiping out the bureau system.

There has been rigid enforcement of the collection of customs duties, and, incidentally, the sugar trust has been forced to make restitution.

A new tariff law concerning the Philippines has been put upon the statute books.

The Taft administration has successfully negotiated a new commercial treaty with Japan, which is calculated to go a long way toward cementing friendly relations with that power.

There have been trust prosecutions involving the Standard Oil Company, the tobacco and beef trusts. Suits have been filed also against the electrical trust.

Under the President a high standard of efficiency in the work of digging the Panama canal has been maintained. The President also strongly urged the fortification of that work, which has just been authorized by Congress.

A corporation excise tax also was embodied in the Payne-Aldrich tariff act.

There has been a more rigid observance of the civil service laws than in recent years.

A law has been passed providing for the publication of campaign expenses in Congressional elections.

These are some of the things that Taft's friends are pointing out, as they glance backward at the first two years of his term. They think that it constitutes a good record, and if the President chooses to go before the people for a re-election in 1912 they say he will have something substantial to stand on.

But particularly have Taft's friends taken courage at his refusal to be jollied or threatened out of ordering an extra session of Congress. They say the President has the bit in his teeth now and will go ahead along his own lines without being swerved by the politicians. Taft's friends declare, in a word, that he is getting closer to the people.

DOES NOT FEAR EXTRA SESSION.

The President has been told that an extra session of Congress at this time will unsettle business conditions and may bring all sorts of evils upon the Republican party. He does not incline to that belief. In fact, the President thinks that the party might be left in a worse state than at present if he did not tr yevery means to ent if he did not try every means to reciprocity.

Nobody knows how long the extra session will last. The reciprocity agreement in itself will occupy very little time. It probably will get a

BASTINADO IS FREELY USED.

"Peaceful" Methods of the Young Turk Party.

Disarming of the Christians in Constantinople.

What Has Become of Apostolof, Bulgar Chief.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 18.—The new era in Turkey is progressing in comparative silence. Europe desired a transformation which should not upset her nerves, and Europe has it. Little leaks out as to the methods by which the Young Turks seek to apply their doctrines to the races under their sway. It was pleasant to think that with the relegation of Abdul Hamid to a villa in Salonica tyranny and misgovernment had disappeared. The deliverersof Turkey had hastened to assure the world—strange as it might seem—that the empire of ill-fame would soon become the model of a free State.

When hitches occurred in the programme of peace and culture harsh criticism on the part of those immediately interested was denounced as harmful and unfair. It was pointed out that indulgence should be extended to well-intentioned reformers tackling the heritage of an infamous autocratic regime. The world gave the regenerators "time to breathe."

They are breathing still. Unfortunately the same cannot be said of a great number of their opponents. The young Turk is thorough, and those who refuse to be happy under his philanthropic domination are persuaded thereto by methods erroneously supposed to be the exclusive attributes of the Old Turk. In confirmation of this a few facts may be adduced concerning the process of disarmament in the Christian provinces of Old Servia and Macedonia.

In the kasa of Salonica the amount of firearms delivered up was so small that measures were taken to enforce compliance with the Irad, or ordinance. At Enidge 364 men were made to stand for forty-eight hours on a road outside the town. Those suspected of incitement to disobey the Irad were made to stand on one leg, and gendarmes with whips passed up and down the ranks preventing any lapse into a more comfortable posture. All this time the men were without food, and after the first twenty hours the legs of many became swollen—veins being distended almost to bursting. Since nothing was revealed of hidden arms by this system of persuasion we can only conclude either that these arms do not exist, or that mistrust of the new government breeds heroism.

On October 1, 1910 after a skirmish between the Turkish regulars and a Bulgar band, two Turkish officers and sixteen soldiers visited the house of Iliya Boditch with the object of capturing Iliya Stoykoff, but as he had prudently fled, they took Boditch instead. On the same principle, of satisfying the higher authorities at whatever cost, the gendarmes of Maritchenoff, failing to secure Timon Preslof, locked up two other innocent men who happened to bear the same name. At Proshoboff a company of soldiers went to arrest Mino Tsvetkof and son. The wives of both men resisted, and after vain appeals, in behalf especially of the younger Tsvetkoff, attempted a rescue by force and were ruthlessly cut down by the soldiers. The prisoners were then dealt with. They were made to kneel in the middle of the road and a volley fired at them. Incredible to relate, the younger Tsvetkoff, though wounded in five places, survived and was able to crawl into the forest where his friends discovered him. They removed him to the hospital of Cratovo but he died some days later. All this, remember, is part of the "peaceful" process of disarmament.

Five children between eight and fifteen years of age were marched on October 15 from Yalodjista to Salonica with a touch of the bastinado when they lagged on the way. The court martial sentenced them to twenty strokes of the bastinado for carrying bread to the proscribed bands in the hills near Yalodjista. Only in one instance has a child been a traitor to his people. A boy of eleven, unable to witness his father writhing under the lash, offered to show the gendarmes where ammunition was concealed. The nest of bombs thus discovered was the sole important "find" of the government.

At Shtip a priest was summoned to reveal the whereabouts of the Bulgar chief, Apostolof, who refused to submit to the new regime. The priest protested his ignorance of Apostolof's movements and got one hundred strokes of the bastinado to revive his memory. These having proved futile he was taken to his home and allowed a day to gather strength. Then he was again subjected to the bastinado and put into a sack and thrown across a horse's back for removal to the hospital. Nothing has ever been heard of him since then. From the village of Tserkolez, near Ipek, a Serb girl of eighteen, Yovanka Obraditch, was abducted by a young Mahommedan Albanian. The villagers chased him, and their mounts soon gained on the party of fugitives. There was but one way for Hassan to retain lawful possession of the girl and he conjured her to embrace Islamism. She refused, whereupon Hassan ordered his men to break both her wrists and abandon her. Thus maimed she was found by the rescuing party lying in the road. She survived but a few hours. The government has not secured the surrender of a single rifle from the villagers of Tserkolez. In the Sandjak of Seres from January 1 to November 2 twenty-three houses were pillaged or attacked, forty-five men arrested, thirty-three punished by the bastinado or by pressing of an iron band on the brow. We use the word punished" advisedly for "torture" has been abolished by the Young Turk regime. Thirty-five unfortunates have been killed in various ways by the gendarmes, and four have been maimed by deliberate breaking of a limb. A common punishment is severance of a hand which is given to the victim in his other hand to take home with him.

The work of transformation, it will be evident from the above, is still in its infancy. How long Europe will allow for its accomplishment is a question which preoccupies the distressed population of Macedonia. Meddlers from outside are banned more strictly than under Abdul Hamid. Madame Vulovitch, a lady from the free kingdom of Servia, who was accustomed to carry clothes and pious literature to the Serb orphans of Tetova, was summarily expelled and forbidden to re-when it is feared that the Christian races may lose the sense of dependence. Not so long since the "rayah" (slave) who failed to precipitate himself to the service of a Turk who chanced to ride through his village got the bastinado at the traveler's pleasure. It was the mayor's privilege to lead the horse up and down, groom him and feed him until the august traveler rode away again.

Old habits are hard to eradicate, and with all due respect for the noble ideals of the young Turk, and admiration of Europe's tolerance of his efforts to realize them, we cannot forget that, however young the Young Turk may be, he is always, and above all else—a Turk. BEN HURST.

AUTHORS AND BUSINESS MEN.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

LONDON, Feb. 26.—It is a popular misconception that only of recent years have authors become systematic and businesslike in their methods of work. We all know that Hall Caine, for instance, to mention one of the most successful of modern popular fiction producers, never misses a chance of attending a great criminal trial in search of types and situations for his novels, and I remember once hearing the great man tell how every day he reads the newspapers as carefully as an editor peruses the rival sheets, in search of dramas in real life which may be turned into fiction. He keeps a carefully indexed scrap book of these clippings and his scrap book library by this time must be a real gold mine of plots.

Then we have the case of H. G. Wells, who drew so directly from real life in his last novel, "The New Machiavelli," and we all know that Sir William Gilbert found many of the characters in his delightful operas in the courts and in society. A few days ago, however, I had the privilege of examining a set of scrap books which belonged to Charles Reade and I was astonished to learn that Reade, of whom one somehow thinks as a careless, improvident sort of person, and who belonged to an age when authors were Bohemians, was the most methodical of men in compiling his literary material. Whole pages are devoted to clippings chiefly relating to police court cases, indexed under such heads as "Suicides," "Kleptomancy," "Insanity," etc. There was one class of clippings which seemed to indicate that Reade went farther even than our modern fiction manufacturers in his search for raw material. Under the heading, "Advertisements for Dramas of Fiction," were pasted dozens of "agony" advertisements which had been printed in the London Times. There is nothing to show whether or not Reade inserted these advertisements himself. They are of the ordinary "agony" type, and may have been quite genuine, but Reade's classification gives one ground at least to wonder if he did not scatter this ground bait himself in the hope of netting a catch of human dramas that might be used in his books.

But the scrap books are not occupied entirely by newspaper clippings. Here and there whole pages are given up to entries in Reade's handwriting, musing on religious subjects, on social problems and occasionally illuminating reflection which throws into relief the queer streak of shrewd business sense in the man's character. Here is one of them:

"Why do not authors make vast fortunes? Because they have to do all the work themselves. How is the Gobelin tapestry made? By workmen who do not even know what they are doing. Combine these two things, would it not be possible to employ the drudges on separate parts of a great work?"

cousin by birth and when this entry was commented on she told a little story showing how Reade had tried the literary factory scheme in a small way.

"That reminds me," she said, "of how my uncle set me to translate a number of French plays and then make a synopsis of the plots as an exercise in construction. When I brought him the synopsis he remarked, "I'll roll that lot into one and then there will be a book."'

An uncommonly interesting "scrap" was a letter from Ellen Terry in whose budding genius Reade took a fatherly interest. Across the top was scrawled in Reade's handwriting, "Miss Ellen Terry, a very marked female character." The letter bears no date, but it must have been written by the great actress in her early youth. Here it is:

"Yes, dear, gladly will I come to you on Sunday. I invite you, indeed! I did invite you to Harpenden, and you didn't come. I did not invite the T. T.'s and they did come. Love to Mrs. Seymour. In haste, your loving Nell."

Mrs. Compton Reade, who is now a widow, is herself a writer and her great ambition is to produce a successful stage version of "The Cloister and the Hearth."

If Hesba Stretton, the famous writer of books for the young, lives much longer, she will have the finest collection of obituary notices possessed by any living person. Twice within two years the newspapers have announced her death and printed columns of appreciation of her personality and her work and each time she has turned up—well, not exactly smiling—but as cheerful as could be expected under the circumstances.

On the occasion of her first "death" two years ago, she had been dangerously ill, but she was well on the way to recovery when the obituary notices appeared. Last week her sister Elizabeth, who lived with her, died and the newspapers jumped to the conclusion that Hesba really was dead this time. What Miss Stretton's exact age is even her friends do not know, for she has the old-fashioned feminine prejudice against telling her age, but she began to write for "Household Words" when Charles Dickens was editor in 1859 and her first notable success, "Jessica's First Prayer," was published in 1867. So it will be seen that Miss Stretton is an old woman and that in the natural course of events the third publication of her obituary notices cannot be long delayed.

Two other famous persons have been killed prematurely by the newspapers this week. One was Charles Lecoq, the composer of "Madame Angot," who all the time was alive in Paris and as sprightly as a man can be at 78. The man who died was a General Lecoq, who lived in Guernsey.

The slaughter of Lecoq originated with the London papers and was telegraphed to Paris, where it was swallowed whole by the Parisian editors, who, not to be outdone by perfidious Albion, drowned poor old Ziem, the famous painter, in oceans of ink. Ziem at the time of his supposed death, was eating oranges in his garden at Nice. G. A. MUNN.

"FAD" STAGE LONG GONE.

"Automobile Indispensable," Declares Walter E. Flanders, President E.M.F. Company—"In Rightful Place."

"With nearly 400,000 automobiles of various kinds in actual daily use, it is absurd to call the machine a fad, or a rich man's toy," declared Walter E. Flanders, president of the E.M.F. Company yesterday.

"The motor car has become a necessity to every industry of im-the improved roads in turn have improved the automobile industry. It has give employment to hundreds of thousands of people. It brings the country nearer to the city and vice versa."

Exaltation.

Alone by the waves, on a starlight night,
No mist on the sea, not a cloud in sight,
My eyes pierced further than earth's desires;
And nature—all nature, the hills, and the woods,
Seemed to question, with murmur of myriad moods,
The waves of the sea and the heavenly fires.

And the infinite legion of golden stars
Replied in a chant of harmonious bars,
While with scintillant crowns they seemed earthward to nod;
And the waves, which no puissance can rule or arrest,
Made answer, while curbing the foam of each crest:
It is God! it is God! it is God!

FEET SO SORE COULDN'T WALK DOWN STAIRS

TIZ CURED HER QUICK.

If you have sore feet, tired feet, sweaty feet, lame feet, tender feet, smelly feet, corns, callouses or bunions, read what happened to Mrs. Crocket of Jeffersonville. TIZ DID IT. Mr. Crocket says: "After the second treatment she walked downstairs one foot at a time. She has not been able to walk downstairs before in past five years, except by stepping down on each step with one foot at a time. This is remarkable. Send five more boxes."

No matter what ails your feet or what under heaven you have used without getting relief, just use TIZ. It's different. It acts right off. It cures sore feet to stay cured. It's the only foot remedy ever made which acts on the principle of drawing out all the poisonous exudations which cause sore feet. Powders and other remedies merely clog up the pores. TIZ cleans them out and keeps them clean. You will feel better the first time it's used. Use it a week and you can forget you ever had sore feet. There is nothing on earth that can compare with it. TIZ is for sale at all druggists, 25c and 50c per box, or direct if you wish, from Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill.

"I am in seek for Spring," I suggest. "Do you believe Hon. Spring will be residing here soonly?"

"That flower-draped criminal Spring," say Hon. Police, "are sneaking around somewhere is dishguise. I have very policeful evidence of this. Mrs. Sweeney has washed her baby for the first time since August last. The Monheimer's champion Tom Cat have had six fights in three days. Widow Tannheuser has been arrested for shop-lifting of a pink feather to trim her Easter hat with. Old Man Harrigan is beginning to sober up. Spring can't never be far off when all these strange symbols happen together."

"Where could this Spring be found, in your estimations?" This from me.

"Hissy!" say Hon. Police with Central Office-voice. "If you will make secretive feetsteps to Chopsky's Butchery Shop, corner next crosswise street, everywheres."

I elope away feeling hope in each knuckle.

I arrive to Chopsky's Butchery Shop wherel observe Hon. Chopsky suspending following signs of Spring in window:

SPRING LAMB—regular price 25c—our price 48c.

SPRING CHICKENS—from famous crop of 1879.

"Has Spring arrived to your business?" I required.

"Spring is eternal," report Hon. Chopsky with German eye-wink while falsifying meat scales with skillful thumbs. "Nothing beautiful ever perishes—not so long as cold storage is so cheap and easy. Spring are time for uplifts. The Soul and the Cost of Living startle upward like pidgeons. Ah! what would Spring be to me unless I seen my dumb animal friends hanging again in that window? Spring brings tender thoughts to butchers. What-say Hon. Hen Longfellow about Spring? He say:

'O Robin Red Breast, gentle thing,
Thou art the first, first bird of Spring.'

But all poetickal Butchers sing this rhythm more sweetly by following words:

'"But Chicken White Breast we'll entice
To beat the Robin off the ice.'"

Hon. Chopsky stand gently whittling beef-steaks with axe.

"You are too Robt. Browning to be a butcher, I snuggested.

"My Soul is like my sausage," he collapse. "Both are full of remarkable things which you would not know was there—unless you visited the factory."

So I depart offward and make following wire telegrams to Hon. Jas. Wilson, Secretary of Hay Culture:

"Spring is here expecting to pounce on America at slightest notice. Too late to avoid everything. Tell farmers to plant onion seeds, fortify Panama Canal and expect April to explode with many tender shoots."

When this was wrote I went to German Lunch and emerged my intelligence in Bock Beer.

Hoping you are the same.
Yours truly,
HASHIMURA TOGO.

The Habit of Expectancy.

There is a tremendous power in the habit of expectancy, the conviction that we shall realize our ambition; that our dreams shall come true, says Orison Swett Marden, in Success Magazine. There is no uplifting habit like that of carrying an expectant, hopeful attitude of expecting that our best yearnings will be matched with realities; that things are going to turn out well and not ill; that we are going to succeed; that no matter what may or may not happen we are going to be happy.

There is nothing else so helpful as the carrying of this optimistic, expectant attitude—the attitude which always looks for and expects the best, the highest, the happiest—and never allowing oneself to get into the pessimistic, discouraged mood.

Believe with all your heart that you will do what you were made to do. Never for an instant harbor a doubt of this. Drive it out of your mind if it seeks entrance. Entertain only the friend thoughts of ideals of the thing

San Joaquin Valley.

SEED ORANGES NOT POPULAR.

GROWERS BUDDING GROVES TO NAVELS RAPIDLY.

Price Prospects Anything But Bright Is Another Factor in Creating Discontent With the Old Type—Porterville Will Have an Audible Exhibit at Los Angeles.

PORTERVILLE, March 7.—Packing of seeds started at the association houses this morning, and by the end of the week, the work will be on full blast. In many respects the seedling orange has become a thing of the past in this section, and in nearly every case the orchards in which this variety of oranges is raised is upon low ground, some distance from the foothills and upon soil of a texture which is ill adapted to the culture of the navel.

An estimate of the crop of this section for this season, places the total at less than 6000 boxes. Last year a number of orchards upon the higher ground were budded over to the navels. Bloods, tangerines and seeds are raised but little here now, since the success of the early navel has become assured.

Price prospects are anything but bright and from present indications not more than $1.25 f.o.b. will be the ruling figure.

F. L. Kennedy and W. L. Crowe, who made such an enviable record in the installation of the Porterville exhibit at the Northern California Citrus Fair, have been selected by the Chamber of Commerce directors to install and maintain the showing, which is to be made in the Los Angeles Land and Products Exposition.

As every commercially salable box of fruit was picked, packed and marketed months ago, the fact that the fruit available for the showing will be only that left upon the trees for home consumption, will militate greatly against the showing being made all that the committee would hope. This is particularly the case when it is borne in mind that the local fruit must be put into competition with the very best of that from the South.

One feature is to be given a prominent position in the display, and this will be two boxes of Washington navels which were picked October 19th, and which have kept in perfect condition until the present day, with no other care than to be left upon the open floor of the packing house.

For the main exhibit, the huge telephone will be used, built of oranges, in which will be concealed a phonograph, from which five minute lectures, descriptive of the Porterville country will be given.

RECLAIM MINE.

After having been abandoned for more than ten years, and after several thousands of dollars were spent in opening up bodies of ore, the "Millionaire" copper mine in the Frazier Valley district is again to be worked, and this time with every prospect of success. The reopening of this mine reads like a chapter out of a novel. All those who were originally in this mine have gone from this district and the very existence of the property was almost forgotten. F. A. Blackmun, a young geologist, prospecting in Frazier, came across the old workings and interested in all sorts of ores, picked a few samples. He was surprised to find that the ore bodies contain copper of a high value. At the time the mine was abandoned the ore was one which was so refractory as to make its handling unprofitable. Improved methods of smelting have lately been devised, which will make the mine valuable. Blackmun and some young associates have secured control of the property for a song and the old workings will be scenes of activity.

OIL DEVELOPMENT.

Reports having come from the Ducor district that the log of the oil-exploration wells are showing very encouraging signs, the former Giant Development Company, to which belongs the on their wells upon property in the same township as that where the first rig of the Reeds is at work.

Eleven years ago, the company started their last well, after several years of exploration in all parts of this valley. After going to a depth of 1600 feet, the panicy times, and a poor crop period in this section—in the days of the grain fields—put an end to their work.

An examination of the old bore shows that considerable of the work can be saved, although the old casing is gone from the well in nearly all of its depth.

It is the purpose of the company to go to 3000 feet, in the hope that the lower levels will bear out the promise indicated by the log of the well when it was found necessary to suspend operations.

SETTLER'S TRAVELS.

At the headquarters of the Tulare County Citrus Fruit Exchange there was received a letter yesterday, which indicates the extent to which this exchange has become known throughout the States. A letter was posted in a little town in Illinois, upon the letter there being written merely "Tulare County Citrus Fruit Exchange." Written in pencil, in another handwriting, showing that some employee of the postoffice department had supplied it, was written the word, "California."

From the postmarks on the letter it was shown that the missive traveled to Los Angeles, as a logical center of orange industries, where the missing "Porterville" was supplied, in still another, clerical hand.

Curiously enough, however, when the letter was received here it was a request for premiums, which are being given for certain brands of the exchange oranges, but as these are only supplied through the Chicago office, the wrappers and the letters and cash were returned to the writer. She—of course it was a woman—will probably be more careful of her addresses next time.

SKELETON FOUND.

E. H. Dale, a prominent rancher of the Poplar district, reported to Deputy Coroner J. C. McCabe, yesterday, the discovery of a skeleton by one of his employees, while engaged in digging at the bottom of an old irrigation ditch.

With the report of this discovery, all sorts of old tales of mysterious disappearances on the Poplar district were revived, until the bones were brought to this city, in a bad state of decomposition, when examination by local physicians established the fact, beyond dispute that the skeleton is that of an old Indian.

Mr. Dale reported that the bones were in a heap, indicating that the body was interred in an upright position, which was the custom of the old diggers, confirming the classification as that of an Indian.

Local fruit growers are up in arms against a clause in the new game law, which states that rabbits shall be protected from hunters except from July to February, and in the open season the bag limit is to be fifteen animals.

As there is no animal, which is more destructive to young orange trees than these same rabbits, the Protective League is preparing to make a strong protest to the Assemblymen. This is evidently another case in which the law was enacted by one whose knowledge of the subject was extremely elemental. It is estimated that the damage due to rabbits and the measures taken for their extermination cost the district thousands of dollars each year.

Sex and Color Sense.

Interesting experiments have been carried on by Dr. Warburg in the schools of Cologne, Germany, on the subject of distinguishing between different colors. He found that the power of telling one color or shade from another was much more strongly developed in girls than in boys. He also found that the more intelligent the pupils were the better color sense they had.—[Pittsburgh Dispatch.

POISON EXCITES NEIGHBORHOOD.

Valuable Dogs and Cats Are Given Strychnine.

Residents Fear Burglars Plan to Rob Homes.

Terrier, Worth Five Hundred Dollars, a Victim.

The residents in the neighborhood of West Twenty-fourth and West Twenty-second street are considerably worked up over the death of several valuable dogs and cats during the past week, which they believe have been poisoned by some one who plans to burglarize the homes in that neighborhood.

The dogs poisoned were valued at several hundred dollars and were kept close at home and not allowed to roam about. As they have not been a nuisance in the neighborhood, it is not believed that any one has poisoned them for spite.

The last dogs to die were two fox terriers, valued at $100 each, belonging to Walter Fricker, No. 2421 West Twenty-second street. He moved into the house Friday at 4 o'clock and his pets were poisoned thirty minutes later. Mrs. Fricker called Dr. Austin B. Byles from Shaw's Dog Hospital, who said they had been given a large dose of strychnine.

The most valuable dog to fall a victim to the pisoner, belonged to J. R. Smith, No. 2155 Second avenue. It was a Boston bull terrier, a son of Champion Bay Side, and Mrs. Smith had refused an offer of $500 for it. It died from strychnine poisoning last Monday.

On Tuesday, a valuable Angora cat, owned by Dr. W. A. Kerley, No. 2367 West Twenty-third street, was poisoned, and on Wednesday a water spaniel, belonging to H. A. Gould, No. 2518 West Twenty-first street, and a fox terrier valued at $100, belonging to Mrs. John F. Coe, No. 2427 West Twenty-second street, were poisoned. On Friday, the Fricker terriers, and an Angora cat, belonging to rMs. Klauber, No. 2280 West Twenty-fourth street, where the last to died from the effects of strychnine.

About six weeks ago, Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Coe had a quarrel over their dogs. Mrs. Smith's bull terrier went across the street to Mrs. Coe's yard and got into a fight with the Coe fox terrier. Wallace Coe, Mrs. Coe's 8-year-old son, was severely bitten on the hand by the Smith dog, while trying to stop the fight. He has lost the use of the bitten finger.

"We have no idea who has been poisoning the dogs out here," said Mrs. Smith. "We blame no one in particular. We had a difference with Mrs. Coe, who told us we would have to keep our dog at home, but her dog also was poisoned. At the time our dog died he had not been outside of the back yard for a week. The poison was thrown over the back fence to him."

Mrs. Coe does not blame any of her neighbors for the poisoning of the dogs.

"Several weeks ago in San Francisco all of the dogs in a certain neighborhood were poisoned, immediately following which the homes in that neighborhood were broken into," said Mrs. Coe. "The whole neighborhood out here is considerably excited over the poisoning, and it is believed that the dogs are being gotten out of the way by burglars, who will later make an attempt to rob the homes. My little boy was bitten about six weeks ago, but that matter was forgotten at the time the dogs around here began to die."

The residents say they will ask the police to give them additional protection in the neighborhood.

TRIP OF A LADY-KILLER.

Man Just Out of Federal Prison for Having Impersonated Army Officer Must Face Check Charges.

Charles Mason, a "lady-killer," was placed in the County Jail yesterday while en route from the Federal prison in Leavenworth to Ventura.

Mason has just finished an eighteen-month term for having impersonated a United States officer and must now stand trial in the northern county for having floated worthless checks.

The prisoner is understood to have played havoc with feminine hearts in his palmy days. He wore a Federal uniform with a swagger which was never equaled by a bona fide officer. It was the sesame which opened to him admittance to the households of the fair.

His game played out and he was punished. It is alleged that he passed the checks in order to provide funds to keep up appearances while sporting his bright uniform. The instruments called for sums ranging from $65 to $200.

F. B. Hubbard, an extensive lumberman and banker of Centralia, Wash., accompanied by Mrs. Hubbard, is a winter guest at the Adams Apartments.

ica are fourteen, fifteen and sixteen miles, respectively, from this city. The round trip fare is 50 cents. Pasadena is eleven miles from this city, and has a 25-cent round trip fare.

The complainants contend that the rates should be proportioned on a mileage basis, now that the Pacific Electric and the Los Angeles Pacific, which serve the various towns drawn into the controversy, have been absorbed by the same interests—the Southern Pacific.

SUBJECT NOT CONSIDERED.

"The proposition has not been given consideration," said Paul Shoup, vice-president of the Pacific Electric, the parent company controlling the Los Angeles Pacific and the other interurban lines controlled by the Southern Pacific, yesterday. "The subject of reduced fares between Los Angeles and Santa Monica has not been taken up with this company by the people of Santa Monica, and we have nothing to say now."

GOOD FISH STORY.

Ten Dollars Lost In A Pool In Sweden Found in a Fish With Five Other Coins for Interest.

Peter Swanson has returned from a trip to his old home in Sweden, bringing a remarkable fish story, with accompanying proofs, says a Vancouver dispatch to the Portland Oregonian.

Swanson was fishing one day in a small lake near his home and had spent several hours in a fruitless endeavor to land a fish, but the fish would not bite. About 3 o'clock in the afternoon he changed trolling spoons, but in doing so dropped a $10 United States gold piece into the water. He fished a while longer without result.

The following day, in company with a friend, he went fishing again, and succeeded in landing a pickerel twenty-eight inches long, besides several smaller fish. On his return to the village the women asked to clean the fish, but Swanson, who had lived in America twenty years, demonstrated and said: "In the United States the men clean the fish."

"O, will you?" asked the chorus.

"Certainly," and he proceeded to cut open the big pickerel, with thirty persons watching. To his surprise, when he cut into the fish he found several coins, which he placed on the table. Among them were a $10 gold piece, of American coinage, and 28 cents in Swedish money. There were five coins in all, the gold piece, a coin corresponding to a United States quarter dollar and three coins similar to the United States penny.

"Well, that does beat all—here I caught the fish, got my money back and the interest on it. In less than a day I made 28 cents interest on $10," said Mr. Swanson, when he recovered from his astonishment. The interest was at the rate of 1122 per cent a year—clearly usury.

Swanson is a farmer and contractor at Vancouver.

America's First Great Missionary Exposition.

"The World in Boston," April 24 to May 20 1911, will be America's First Great Missionary Exposition; an exposition on a mammoth scale and all devoted to missions. No exposition ever held in America will present so many unique and attractive features as are planned for "The World in Boston." The whole of the great Mechanics building will be utilized, including all the halls, the great gallery, the basements, etc. Something is being planned for every nook and corner of the building. Missions, home and foreign, will be presented on such a scale as the hundreds of thousands who attend have never imagined or thought possible.

Missions will be set forth in ways never before seen in this country. You have been in Chinatown, perhaps, and have wondered what a street in a real Chinese town looks like. You will see one in the exposition, with its joss house, its apothecary shop, its Chinese houses, its opium den, not over-looking the ever-present pagoda, and of course, real live men and women and children. You have heard of an East Indian "bazaar"—what is a "bazaar?" Come to the exposition and you will see one in full operation, with all the things that make this such an important institution in the East.

And so it will go. All the strange life of the Orient, as well as life among the immigrants, Indians and negroes of our own country, will be spread out before you in a realistic way. You will have a chance to see how missionary work is carried on.

The banquet hall at Mechanics building is to be devoted to a continuous moving picture exhibit. We hope to have films from Japan, China, India (including Burma,) Africa, the Philippines, Cuba and Porto Rico, and from all the Home Mission fields; possibly also from Persia, Arabia, Turkey and other Mohammedan lands.

Ten thousand stewards from the various churches are in training and will explain the exhibits to visitors. Besides these, 4000 or 5000 vocalists are needed for the huge volunteer choir. The Finance Committee have been meeting at least once a fortnight for the past eighteen months and have succeeded in raising a guarantee fund of $60,000. The total expenditure on the exposition, including the pageant, is likely to reach $100,000 at least.

and various kinds of plaster at Blythe Station. The plant will be the only one of its kind in that section of Arizona, and be the means of providing employment for several hundred men. The Santa Fe will construct a branch from the main line to the deposits, a distance of eighteen miles.

It is said that Brown discovered his gypsum deposits in the most peculiar fashion. On one of his stage journeys two years ago, he was forced to camp out, owing to the swollen condition of a mountain stream. In the night one of his horses strayed away, and shortly after daybreak, after following it several miles, he found the animal in a gulch.

The horse had injured its leg, and was unable to rise. Brown sat down on a stone some distance away, wondering what he would do, when of a sudden, looking toward the top of the opposite gulch wall he saw the gypsum. He marked the place, and later when time was more auspicious, located the claims, which are bringing him a fortune.

THE RAILWAY WORLD.

Leading railroads have put out a report on ratios of maintenance, traffic and transportation expenses to the total operating revenue, which shows that whereas a few years ago fuel was reckoned as the largest expense in railroading, with the exception of labor, repairs and renewals of freight cars now hold that position, and are next to the entire cost of labor.

In the past ten years the ratio of maintenance of way and structures to the total operating expenses has decreased 11.6 per cent., while that of traffic and transportation has about remained stationary, the ratio of maintenance has increased 11.77 per cent. and is equal to more than 45 per cent. of the expenses of traffic and transportation. This is attributed to the fact that air brakes, steel couplers, steel frames, steel cars and truck frames are much superior to those used in 1900, and it requires more to keep them in repair. There has also been a big increase in the strains of service on equipment.

On the Pennsylvania the increase was higher than the average. The ratio of equipment maintenance to the operating revenue increased 21.04 within the ten years; that of maintenance of way and structures decreased 14.55 per cent., and of traffic and transportation, 1.08 per cent. The costs of maintenance during the year ended June 30, 1910, were near double the expenses of any railroad in the country, the cost of maintenance of equipment being $30,454,073, of maintenance of way and structures, $19,849,260, and of traffic and transportation, $55,846,075.

The Pennsylvania railroad has in the city of Philadelphia fifty-six separate and distinct freight stations, claimed to be the largest number of freight stations maintained by any road in any city. The area of the city being 128 square miles, there is an average of one station to about two and a half miles. The company has just made a new wall map showing the locations of the stations and of the lines by which they are connected to the main lines of the road; and also giving information about scales, electric cranes and other facilities.

The Lehigh railroad has bought a thirty-horse-power automobile for the company's agriculturist, so that he may visit the farms in the company's automobile as promptly as possible. The number of farmers seeking his aid has increased greatly since the system was started last year.

At that time a two-seated automobile of the runabout type was put into service, but this proved inadequate. The new machine is a five-passenger touring car. Besides serving the agriculturist from day to day, it will be used to transport experts to and from the "farming institutes" which are to be held in large number in the future.

The expert's activities have been confined principally to New York State heretofore, but he is planning to extend his visits into the Lehigh Valley territory in Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

"With the multiplying of railways, consolidation of small lines into large systems, extending to all points of the compass; with classifying and systematizing, it has produced one of the most prominent industrial adjuncts of the government," says J. D. M. Hamilton, claims attorney of the Santa Fe railway.

"The people of the country are demanding good service and in order to attain such service it must be paid for and this must come from the patrons of railways. The day has gone for slow trains, poor track, inadequate curities shall be deprived of fair interest or eventually wiped out, and if by enactment of any laws the railways of this country shall be made the scapegoat of such unwarranted and unjust legislation, I fear the service that the public receives today will not be as it is, and the cry will go forth for the return of the present-day transportation facilities."

Since July 1, 1906, the Harriman system in the Northwest, including the Southern Pacific lines in Oregon and all the roads now a part of the Oregon and Washington, has expended $50,000,000 for betterments and improvements, as well as additions, besides fixed charges, operating expenses, etc., which aggregate a like amount, making a total of $100,000,000.

Of this amount $16,000,000 was spent in Oregon on new construction, $10,000,000 for the same purpose in Washington and Idaho, and $8,000,000 in betterments distributed over the entire system. These three items do not include work on the Oregon and Washington between Portland and Puget Sound, which was given a valuation of $15,000,000 when the merger was completed. Additional expenditures not included in the foregoing amounts make a total in excess of $50,000,000.

At least $35,000,000 has been spent in a manner that will result in lasting attle, on which it is estimated $5,000,000 was expended, and was paid out for labor, supplies, machinery and permanent improvements.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad has adopted a plan for recording the age of every new crosstie on the system. This will enable the company to determine, with mathematical accuracy, the relative efficiency of the different woods and the value of the creosote preservation treatment.

It is done in this way: First, the dating nails are manufactured, with the proper numerals on the heads, indicating the year. For example, "11" meaning the year 1911. Then one of these nails is driven into each new tie as it is laid on the track. Thus in the future the maintenance of way experts will be able, upon the replacement of a tie, to know just how long it has lasted.

The Lehigh Valley is having its crossties, switch and bridge timber treated at the creosoting plant near Bound Brook. The steadily rising price of lumber compels the railroads to use wood that has undergone "treatment" to prevent decay. It is expected that the injection of creosote oil into the pores of the wood will double its life.

Prospective Bureaus.

RAILROAD AND HOTEL TICKETS CAN BE BOUGHT SAME WAY.

A MOVEMENT is on foot among the hotels of California to establish bureaus in Los Angeles and in San Francisco where it will be possible for travelers to purchase tickets for their rooms in the hotels in the same manner as they reserve berths or staterooms on passenger trains or steamships.

The idea is brought from Europe, where it is in vogue in several chains of hotels, notably those of the Ritz-Carlton Company.

In Paris, Berlin, Vienna, London and other cities the traveler can purchase his railroad ticket and his hotel ticket at the same time, and thus obviates the troublesome work of making reservations by telegraph or running the chance of being left out in the cold without accommodations.

Since the consolidation of the St. Francis, Palace, Fairmont, Del Monte and Paso Robles Hotels in the North the idea has been growing until now it is believed that within a month a ing accommodations through personal representatives on the ground, who would make the reservation, but of course did not accept payment for it, leaving the matter entirely open as far as the guest or the hotel was concerned. By this system often the hotels, overrun with persons desiring accommodations, would cast aside the reservation made by their repre relatives and the guest would arrive and find himself not a guest, with no room waiting for him. He, on the other hand, would often find that his plans must be altered, and would neglect to notify the hotel, leaving the management with a vacant apartment on its hands, and consequent loss.

By the system of selling tickets for rooms either for one day or for a long time all chance of a mistake is done away with, and both the hotel and the guest find themselves more secure.

The first thing that the hotel men of Los Angeles have noticed as a result of the consolidation in the North is that the rates for the three large

Don't Stay Fat; $1.00 Box Free

I Want to Prove to You Before Your Own Eyes and At My Expense That I Can Reduce You to Normal Weight Safely, Without Starvation Diet or Tiresome Exercises.

It Doesn't Matter What You Have Tried, Send for This Free $1.00 Box of My Safe Fat Reducer Today.

Don't Cry Because You Are Fat. I Will Write Mr. Kellogg Today.

Free, positively free, a $1.00 box of Kellogg's Safe Fat Reducer, to every sufferer from fat, just to prove that it actually reduces you to normal, does it safely, and builds up your health at the same time. I want to send you without any expense on your part this $1 package of what I am free to call a really wonderful fat reducer.

My treatment is prepared scientifically. It does not stop or hinder digestion; on the contrary, it promotes proper digestion and assimilation of food, which 99 fat people in a hundred haven't got, and that is why they are fat.

Loses 156 Pounds.

Mrs. Rosa Steesy, of Elk Point, South Dakota, writes: I have lost 156 pounds, and am still losing slowly. When I commenced your treatment I weighed 368 pounds; now I weigh 212 pounds. Your Reducer is all right, and did just as you said it would. I can hardly believe that I am the same woman. My daughter is greatly reduced in weight and I don't think she will need any more of your Obesity Reducer. We now are both cured. You may refer anyone to me.

101½ Pounds Gone!

The remarkable case of Miss Artie Adams of Shelby, Ohio, is illustrated in her own words:

"When I look back to the time before I took your wonderful obesity cure I do not see how I stood it. My weight is now 163½ pounds, and I have lost just 101½ pounds. I can hardly believe that there has been such a difference in my feelings and appearance. But oh! how thankful I am that I found a cure for my awful burden of fat, in Kellogg's Safe Fat Reducer. I can hardly realize that I weigh now only 163½ pounds. You can use my letter as a testimonial if you wish."

Leaves No Wrinkles.

You should have no fear, after being reduced by Kellogg's Safe Fat Reducer, that your loss of weight will result in wrinkles, as is usually the case with so many treatments used for flesh reduction.

If you are too fat don't fail to fill out free coupon below and mail today.

$1.00 Free Package Coupon.

This coupon is good for a $1.00 package of Kellogg's Safe Fat Reducer and a book of photographs and testimonials. Solace and Sentiment.

SHE'S FEMALE J. J. ROUSSEAU.

FANNIE WARD CONFESSES SOCIAL INDISCRETIONS.

How She Humiliated Her Husband by Her First Breaks in English Society—Also How She Won the Sable Coat of the Russian Empress. Quarter Million in Diamonds.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

Fannie Ward, like Rousseau, is full of confessions.

With this exception: Jean Jacques put his in a book, while Miss Ward tells hers to newspapermen. The result is the same in the end. They scatter just as well either way.

Fannie Ward is the American-English celebrity, who is the feature of the current Orpheum bill.

Miss Ward is an English aristocrat, a beauty famed in two or three continents, a woman of great wealth, and at the same time wise, practical, and a good fellow. All of which sounds impossible, but it isn't, because she's a woman, and therefore the impossible is not only possible, but probable.

Miss Ward is the widow of "Diamond Joe" Lewis, a famous London diamond merchant. Joe Lewis's friends used to call him a prince of commerce, while his enemies dubbed him a pawnbroker. So there you are.

Miss Ward was on the stage when she married Mr. Lewis, who endowed her with a town house in Barclay Square—is that right?—and a country place, and diamonds worth just $250,000, which she carries around careless-like every day. She had five years of society. And then she went back to the stage. But she kept the town house and the estate and the priceless ice.

"In the first place," said Miss Ward last Thursday afternoon, pinking her finger-nails in the midst of an array of clothes that might back a coronation outfit into the jay class, "I actually lost all these diamonds right here in Los Angeles.

"Heart failure? Well, I guess! Also apoplexy, lumbago, neurasthenia, melancholy and then some. And the awful thing was that I couldn't tell a soul about it, for who would believe me? 'Fannie Ward lost her diamonds? Well, that's too good!' So I had to stifle my sobs and cinch up my corset to keep my heart from jumping right out of my gown, while I hunted, and hunted, and hunted, and hunted—and hunted. And at last I found them. The maid had just misplaced the box, that's all."

I laid the tip of my finger—just to see how it felt—very gingerly against the marvelous $15,000 coat of Russian sable, made for the Czarina and captured by Fannie Ward.

"That," said Miss Ward carelessly, "came my way when I caught Joe at his favorite dissipation.

"It was in Monte Carlo.

"'Do you ever gamble?' I asked Joe, anxiously.

"'Why, my dear, you shock me. How could you ask such a question?' Joe was fairly saint-like.

"But some evil genius prompted me to walk through the Casino that evening. I hadn't gone far when I saw Joe. There he sat, money as high as his head on either side, and played like a fiend.

I walked right up to him.

"'I-I-I'm playing for a friend!' he exclaimed, turning a kind of liver-pill yellow.

"'Well,' I said, 'I'm the friend. Come through!' And he came. He had to.

"Joe had an awful time teaching me to be a lady a 'la English aristocracy. I'll never forget the first day we had a hunt at our country house. We had eighteen servants preparing to serve the hunt breakfast, but the stove fell down and the chef burned his hands, and—well, anyway, we all turned in and got some sort of grub for the lords and ladies. Then I went outside and saw all those red coats flashing in the morning sunshine, and it was so beautiful! The hounds dashed up, and in a very ecstacy I yelled: 'Look at the dogs! Look at the dogs!'

"That nearly killed Joe.

"'Hounds, m'dear—hounds!'

"I said it over a great many times that day to make sure I had it, but the following week I hurt Joe's feelings more than ever. We went to see a very noble woman, and she had a four-footed animal about three inches long in her lap. Remembering my break at the hunt-breakfast I turned to Joe and said in my very best drawl: 'Oh, Joe, see that lovely little hound!' Joe nearly fainted.

"Did I love my husband?

"Well, when we were married he promised to make me love him. And he didn't. That's the only thing I hold against him.

"Mamma said I never ought to have married, anyway. She was so sore she wouldn't come to the wedding."

One From Worley.

Dean Worley, manager of the Los Angeles Theater, narrates the pleasurable tale of an outlying grocer, who, agreeing to keep some "lithos" in his windows, was given a pass to the show.

He was on hand for the opening of the first performance, and stayed until the moving pictures faded out on the second and last.

Worley met him, coming out.

"You must have liked the entertainment," said Worley, suppressing a smile as the grocer emerged.

"I dunno," said the merchant; "I was a little bit disappointed and I guess maybe you'd better take them pictures out o' my place."

"Why—" Worley was stumped.

"You see," continued the plaintiff, "the first act was great, but I set through the hull o' the second, and I'll be darned if it wasn't exactly like it!"

—o—

Another One.

Worley also tells about a very old lady, who visited the theater for the first time in her life last week. Having spent some sixty years on a farm in Kansas, she was quite unprepared for all the intricacies of modern drama.

She was brought to the Los Angeles Theater quite late one afternoon. Her daughter accompanied her. The motion pictures were the only thing left.

"How did you like it, mamma?" asked the daughter, as they were passing out a few moments later.

"It looked real pretty," replied the old lady, "but the actors must have had powerful bad colds. I couldn't hear one word they said!"

—o—

The Mumbo.

Idle curiosity had a setback in John Blackwood's office the other day.

Wandering into the penetential cell occupied by the great manager, I espied a small box of rather curious appearance and heavy wrapping, holding a conspicuous position on the official desk.

After ten minutes of indirect prowling, which was resultless, I put the question direct.

"There's a Mumbo in it," said Mr. Blackwood.

"A what?"

"A Mumbo."

"What in the world is a Mumbo?"

"An equatorial animal that lives exclusively on snakes."

I looked around, somewhat anxiously, for the Mumbo's meals.

"Oh, you needn't be alarmed," said Mr. Blackwood, reassuringly; "this Mumbo doesn't feed on material snakes. He lives on dipsomaniac reptilia. I secured him for a friend who is troubled with pink menageries."

"How in the world," I scoffed, "can a creature live on food that doesn't exist?"

"Neither does the Mumbo," was the dry response.

I asked no more questions.

—o—

"Tillie's Nightmare."

A veritable carnival of mirth is scheduled for the Majestic Theater, beginning Sunday evening next, when Lew Fields presents Marie Dressler in her latest triumph, "Tillie's Nightmare." The play is described as a "mixture of mirth and melody," and Marie Dressler is said to have the greatest character that she has ever played. She comes direct from 389 performances at the Lew Fields Herald Square Theater, New York, with a record unsurpassed by any musical comedy Broadway has seen in many years.

"Tillie's Nightmare" was written expressly for Miss Dressler, by Edgar Smith, with music by A. Baldwin Sloane, and both author and composer are said to have done their work well. It is in two acts and eight scenes. Miss Dressler appears in the character of Tillie Blobbs, a boarding-house drudge in Skineatales, a small town in New York State. The boarding-house is run by her mother, and at the opening of the play, Tillie is discovered serving the boarders with their evening meal. The party around the table includes a broken-down bookkeeper, who thinks he has invented an airship; a team of cheap vaudeville actors, a country lover, a brassy drummer, and a "stick-up" sister, who lets Tillie do all the work of the family. Tillie's lover has promised to take her to the theater—her first night out in two years—but at the last moment she finds she must stay home and help her mother make pickles. Tired out, she falls asleep, and her nightmare forms the story of the play. The surprises afforded by the unfolding of the plot form most attractive features, Tillie's experiences taking her to New York and Paris. All of Tillie's friends appear under the most amazing conditions, and these is a constant whirlwind of funny situations and merry lines.

Mr. Fields has spared no money in assembling the production of "Tillie's Nightmare," and he has surrounded his star with a first-class cast. The list of names includes the Misses Phyllis Gordon, Angie Norton, Lottie Uart, Ethel Fairbanks, Nellie De Grasse, dancing girls, and the Messrs. Horace Newman, Charles H. Bowers, George and John Gorman, Harry Laughlin and Sim Pulen.

"Natoma."

"Natoma," the Redding-Herbert grand opera, with scenes laid at Santa Barbara during the days of the early mission fathers, was produced at the Metropolitan Operahouse last week, by the most distinguished cast the world could offer.

Mary Garden played the title part, the great little Irishman, John MacCormack, was the tenoric lover, and beautiful Lillian Grenville, the Chicago operatic star, was the "second woman."

The critics are in absolute accord on Herbert's music. They say that it is rich, melodious, inspirational and reflects mastery of technique and unbounded fertility of invention.

And they are just as unanimous in damning poor Mr. Redding's libretto.

Says Musical America: "The libretto of Joseph Redding should go down into operatic history as one of the most futile, fatuous, halting, impotent, inane and puerile ever written. Its dramatic development is totally wanting in sense and logic, its situations have been worn threadbare by convention, its characters are sawdust—stuffed marionettes——and its verbiage, cheap colloquialisms or jingling balderdash."

But apart from that it is probably all right.

Portugal has been so neglected by authors generally that, in spite of its great history, it is almost a virgin field. One of the few books which portray rural life in Portugal is that just published by the Baker & Taylor Company, "A Paradise in Portugal," by "Mark Sale."

Fannie Ward,

famous little English actress, who is just now the Orpheum's stellar feature. Miss Ward has played leading parts in a number of dramas of contemporary interest, and is also notable as a famous beauty. As the youthful widow of one of the world's most celebrated diamond kings she inherited a splendid fortune and a regal collection of jewels. She is famous for these and for her magnificent wardrobe, but her ire rises quickly when she is dubbed a "clothes-horse." She prefers to attain fame by her histrionic powers alone.

The Week.

DESERTERS AT THE BELASCO.

"BACHELOR'S BABY," WITH WILSON, AT THE MASON.

Gertrude Elliott Comes to the Majestic in "The Dawn of a Tomorrow"—"Warrens of Virginia" at the Burbank—Various Vaudeville Programmes.

"The Deserters," which is being played with success in the East by Helen Ware this season, will have its first western production at the Belasco Theater tomorrow night, with Mr. Stone and all the Belasco players in the lengthy cast.

"The Deserters" is described as a military play in an incident and four acts. The incident and the first act are located at an army post in Kansas, while the second and third acts happen in San Francisco. The last act carries the characters back to the army post.

"The Deserters" has to do with the efforts of Madge Summers, a young woman detective from the War Department, who is sent out from Washington to discover the whereabouts of Lieut. Craig, who has disappeared from with a brother officer, during which the latter is killed, and although Craig is innocent of the murder, an attempt is made to fasten the crime upon him. The young woman detective not only finds the missing lieutenant, but in true feminine fashion she proceeds to fall very much in love with him, and becoming convinced of Craig's innocence she successfully clears his name, and the final curtain falls upon a very happy and devoted pair of lovers.

Nothing that Miss Rambeau has done since coming to the Belasco Theater has held out such splendid possibilities as does the character of Madge Summers, especially as regards the second act of the play, which is located in a music hall on the Barbary Coast, San Francisco. In this stirring scene Miss Rambeau will be called upon to impersonate a music hall variety artist and sing a number of songs, and she will have a chance to make a very effective use of her delightful Irish accent.

Mr. Stone will be seen in the role of Lieut. Craig, and while the part is in a way subordinated to that of Madge Summers, still it will enable Mr. Stone to display some exceedingly strong and virile acting of the sort for which he is so well liked. Mr. Harrison, Miss Farrington, Mr. Giblyn, Mr. Yerance, Mr. Applebee, Mr. Vivian, Mr. Bernard, Mr. Hull, Miss Lewis, Miss Sullivan and the other popular members of the Belasco company will all be concerned in the production of "The Deserters."

Following "The Deserters" the Belasco Company will give what is promised by the management to be an exceptionally elaborate scenic production of "Under Two Flags," with Miss Rambeau as Cigarette and Mr. Stone as Bertie Cecil.

In all the big successes the stage has seen in recent years, it will be invariably found that laughter and tears have been judiciously blended by the author. No comedy without its touch of pathos has ever been long lived. There must be a little tug at the heart strings now and again. It is this very desirable quality that Francis Wilson is said to have woven into his own successful comedy-farce, "The Bachelor's Baby," which he presented nearly all of last season at the Criterion Theater, New York City, to the record audiences that popular playhouse has ever held. Here and there throughout the three acts into which Mr. Wilson has divided his comedy, especially in the scenes with the child, he is said to have introduced little pathetic touches—notes of humanity; minor chords which only accentuate the major ones. Laughter there is in "The Bachelor's Baby," in almost every line, and it is said to be of the cleanest and most wholesome kind. Throughout the country, the theatergoers have come to look upon this popular comedian, who was last seen locally in the Charles Marlowe farce, "When Knights Were Bold," as a laugh producer par excellence who as yet has never disappointed an audience, there always being the full quota of fun in everything that he does. In many ways Francis Wilson is inimitable. His peculiar mannerisms, his soft eyes and his mellow voice make a triumvirate it would be extremely difficult to counterfeit. In writing "The Bachelor's Baby" Mr. Wilson is said to have provided himself with the best fitting role he has ever had and not an opportunity offers but he is said to take the greatest advantage of it. The hero of "The Bachelor's Baby" is Thomas Beach, a child-hating bachelor whose home is on Gramercy Park, New York City. As the curtain goes up he is returning from a week-end hunting trip and is immediately told that by the will of his brother, who has been lost at sea, he has been constituted the guardian of his little niece, his brother's daughter. Now Beach, above all other things, detests children. He has been singularly unfortunate at their hands and finds no reason to even tolerate them. So when he learns that one is to be forced upon him he raises all of the objections possible. Incidentally, Beach is in love with a delightful young woman whose sole objection to him is his peculiar views regarding the little ones. Beach has gone so far as to refuse to meet his niece but, by a little trickery, is brought face to face with the child. The little one promptly goes to work to win her uncle and it isn't long before the child hater has executed an absolute right-about-face, for the child has eaten her way into his affections to that extent that when it is proposed to take her from him, he is willing to fight to keep her. The ending is, of course, a happy one. Beach does keep the child and he also wins the hand of his sweetheart. The supporting company Charles Frohman has given Mr. Wilson is said to be a very representative one and exceptionally well balanced. It is practically the same organization which supported Mr. Wilson during his long run at the Criterion Theater last year, and includes Baby Davis, Edna Bruns, Clarence Handyside, Mrs. Ogden Child, others. "The Bachelor's Baby" is played in a single setting, but it is stated that the production is particularly elaborate and artistic, with handsome real old Colonial mahogany and expensive bric-a-brac and brasses, a typical Frohman production complete, even in the smallest detail. Charles Frohman will present Francis Wilson in "The Bachelor's Baby" at the Mason operahouse tomorrow night for a week's engagement.

Miss Gertrude Elliott, in Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's somewhat unusual play, "The Dawn of a Tomorrow," will be seen at Hamburger's Majestic theater for the week beginning tomorrow night. This attraction has been one of the few emphatic hits of the unusually barren eastern season. Miss Elliott comes naturally by her histrionic abilities. She is the younger sister of Maxine Elliott and the wife of that clever English actor, Forbes Robertson. Her earlier stage training was acquired in this country, but it was in England that she first attained recognition as a player of far more than ordinary powers. It would be difficult to imagine anyone better suited to the difficult role of the London street waif, Glad, than is Miss Elliott. She seems to live the part, so thoroughly has she conceived and entered into every fiber of the character. Her dark, gypsy beauty fills the visual ideal of it, her gaiety is spontaneous and her grief is natural. Strongest of all, however, is the manner in which Miss Elliott makes plain the ever-abiding faith of the young girl that things will eventually come right and good will prevail. Mrs. Burnett has written an exceedingly clever play from her novel of the same name, but Miss Elliott's conception is quite as inspired and intensely realistic. It is a flash of dramatic fire which thrills and enchains the audience. Miss Elliott's voice is vibrant with sympathy and feeling, while her enunciation is a positive and absolute delight to the ear. Liebler & Company have given their star a company of artists whose fine work enhances the value of the entire performance. There are more than twenty speaking parts, all admirably filled. In the company are Fuller Mellish, A. Scott Gatty, Sydney Booth, Suzanne Perry, Angela Ogden, Anna Waite, Julia Blanc, Carrie Merrilees and Maude Nissell. The scenic effects are most elaborate, the illusion of the London fog being effective to the ultimate degree.

"The Warrens of Virginia," a spectacular drama of the concluding scenes of the Civil War, in the neighborhood of Appomattox, will be the Burbank offering for the week beginning with the matinee today. The author is William C. de Mille, who in collaboration with David Belasco, has turned out a dozen big successes, the wizard of stagecraft having given this play a production which ran for an entire season in New York City.

The main plot of the play deals with the capture of a suppy train belonging to the Confederate Army, the loss of which so weakened the latter that the army of the North soon brought the war to a speedy ending. Lieut. Burton, a young officer in the Union Army, is invited to pass the evening at the home of a Southern general, a friend of his father. A bogus dispatch is given to him by his superiors, and by means of a fake spy word is got to the Confederate generals that Burton has this document, detailing the movements of the Union troops. The unwitting bait, Burton, is captured, the dispatch read, and the movement of the supply train changed accordingly, so that it falls into the Union ambush prepared by Grant's generals. There is a pretty love story interwoven with this story of the conflict of the North against the South, the never old story of the complications which ensue through the personal element being injected into the struggle over a great principle

The cast of characters is an exceptionally long one, and will include every member of the Burbank company. An especially beautiful scenic production is being built under the direction of David M. Hartford.

What the press agent claims is "a perfect variety show" will open for one week at the Los Angeles Theater with the usual matinee on Monday. The new bill contains eight acts.

The two feature acts are Dan Sherman and Mabel DeForest and their company, presenting their laughing hit, "A Jay Circus," and Miss Hope Booth and her company, presenting "The Little Blonde Lady," a dramatic sketch.

"A Jay Circus" is a fun-making vehicle that has traveled the vaudeville circuits for several seasons and has succeeded admirably in making many laugh. It is a travesty with its scene laid in a circus tent during a regular performance. All of the joys and delights of a big tent show are offered by this company and there is a succession of comedy situations.

Hope Booth in "The Little Blonde Lady" is a vaudeville favorite and the dramatic offering has scored a substantial success. "The Little Blonde Lady" has its scenes laid in the editorial rooms of "The Blade," and the story has to do with a newspaper critic and a musical comedy star. The story is gripping in its interest from start to finish.

Nelson, the "jestive juggler," with the bounding hats, is a performer of remarkable skill with a vein of humor of the silent kind that makes a combination exceptionally entertaining and amusing.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Keane, assisted by William Elliott, will be seen in "What Money Couldn't Buy," a delightful bit of high comedy that may find its way into the catalogue of vaudeville comedy classics. The business of the "Mimic Four," who will also be seen on the new bill, is purely for fun-making, and in their conglomeration of singing, dancing, patter talk and character work, should prove popular.

Clara Rogers in a number of 'cello solos will furnish a musical portion of the bill, while the Cycling Brunettes will furnish the sensational part of the new programme. Exclusive of these acts will be the new comedy motion pictures.

"The Campus" will this afternoon open for the eleventh week at the Grand Operahouse, easily clearing the long run record previously established by "The Dollar Mark," and making a brand new record for Pacific Coast stock company runs, which will not be easy to beat.

This afternoon the one hundred and third consecutive performance of the play will be given, and taking the heavy advance sale of seats and the attendance to this—the tenth week—as a criterion, the audience attending the eleventh week of the piece will be of large proportions. A notable gathering witnessed the one-hundredth performance last Friday night, and now the term "record-smashing success" can be safely applied.

With the eleventh week Francis White has replaced Myrtle Dingwall, who, owing to ill-health, was forced to retire from the cast for a few days. Miss White is a clever young woman of ability, a splendid voice, and a personality that is winning, and she has scored an individual success in the role of Kate Sheldon. Outside of these two changes the cast for the eleventh week remains the same.

The success of "The Campus" is a genuine triumph for good, clean, wholesome musical comedy, and it is all the more notable for the fact that it can reasonably be called a real California play, being the product of a California boy, with its scenes laid in this State, receiving its initial production in Los Angeles by Ferris Hartman.

All of the eighteen catchy musical numbers are still receiving encores at every performance, the fun runs higher than ever, and the whole play is running merrily along at a mile-a-minute pace.

In these days of modern vaudeville, when it is taken as a matter of course that the vaudevillian who wishes to keep up to date and so secure the best of engagements, must of necessity expend considerable sums in material, both in the way of a proper vehicle to exploit his talents and to properly present it before the public, it is a matter of comment that the popular-priced vaudeville house can afford to follow suit by engaging one or more headline acts on the same bill that it is known costs big money for salary.

An instance is the engagement of the Rennee Family at Pantages next week. These artists have topped the bill at the leading vaudeville theaters of Europe and in this country. They present about the most elaborate act of its sort in vaudeville. It is a spectacular comic opera number, albeit in tabloid form, yet attention has been paid to correct detail. The artists make five complete quick character changes of costume and there are five changes of wardrobes. Each act is sung in native language, making five languages heard during the course of the operettas; they first appear as Italian street singers, from the comic opera, "The Veteran and His Daughter;" the second change is as French peasants from the comic opera "Mamzelle Ango," by J. Offenbach winegrowers 1800;) the third change is as German peasants from the comic opera "Vienna Birds," by Ziehrer; the fourth change is as Hungarian gypsies from the comic opera "Gypsy Count," by Richard Strauss, introducing the dance 'Ciardas;" the last change is the "U. S. Battlefield," with the music, "Always, the Same Old Colors." The first scene shows the Piazza Reale, Venice, Italy; the second, the vineyards, Bonlogne, France; the third scene is the Nussdorph Road, Austria; the fourth scene Karpatock, Hungary, and the last scene shows a realistic military battle scene. The Pantages orchestra will be enlarged for this engagement and the Rennee Family will also bring along their own corps of electricians.

With two such actors as Fannie Ward and Frank Tinney on its bill, one would naturally expect the Orpheum to rest on its laurels for the coming week. But nothing of that sort happens; on the contrary, the week beginning Monday will have another aggregation of talent fitting to cope with that of the week just ending. Miss Ward will remain, as will Mr. Tinney, but four new acts come to add their strength to the bill.

Milo Beldon, Hazel Chapple and their company, in a whirlwind farce, entitled "What's the Matter with Father?" will be found to have a vehicle for laughter which has few su-

Alvarado street. Miss Eileen Canfield, younger sister of the bride-elect, will assist as maid of honor, and Theodore Caldwallader will be best man.

Thursday, Mrs. Le Roy M. Edwards of Kingsley drive was hostess at a large theater party at the Belasco, complimentary to Miss Canfield. Later the guests enjoyed tea at Hotel Alexandria, where a handsome centerpiece of violets and hyacinths was used.

Another affair at which Miss Canfield was the honoree was the Mason box party given by Mrs. A. C. Parsons last week. Jonquils adorned the table at the Alexandria, where refreshments were served.

Interesting News.

Probably the most interesting bit of news to stir the calm of the social sea is the engagement announcement of Miss Anna Marie Klassen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Michael Klassen, to Louis Cleveland Joslin of Trenton, N. J. A number of Miss Klassen's close friends were bidden to a tea party yesterday afternoon at Hotel Alexandria, where, hidden amid a profusion of dainty pink rosebuds, were the announcement cards. Places were marked with corsage bouquets of the same blossoms. The wedding will occur in the spring in San Francisco, where the bride's parents will make their future home.

Miss Hazel Wilson of No. 1143 West Thirty-seventh drive will be the first hostess to compliment Miss Klassen, who will be kept busy until her departure for the North. Miss Wilson's party will be in the nature of a tea, and the most fetching of plans are being completed in honor of the affair, which will take place in a fortnight.

—o—

Miss Allen Chooses Date.

The bachelors are soon to lose another member. Miss Leola Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Allen of Gramercy Place, has chosen April 26 as the date for her wedding to Arthur Bumiller, one of the most popular members of the Bachelors' Club and to whom special honors are due for the success of the ball. The service will take place at 11 o'clock in Immanuel Presbyterian Church. A trip will be enjoyed before Mr. and Mrs. Bumiller will be at home to friends in this city.

—o—

More Good News.

Another wedding which society will approve is that of Miss Lou Winder and Lewis H. Allen, which will take place Wednesday evening, March 29, at the home of the bride-elect's parents, Judge and Mrs. Thomas L. Winder of No. 3201 West Adams street. Invitations were sent out Friday to relatives and intimate friends only. The attendants will be Mrs. William H. Joyce of Pasadena, who will assist as matron, and Dr. Herbert Allen of San Francisco, who will stand with his brother.

—o—

Miss Dickinson, Popular.

Another bride-to-be, who is enjoying a round of pleasant entertainment, is Miss Helen Dickinson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. D. K. Dickinson, who is engaged to Jay Boothe. A bridge-whist party and kitchen shower was the delight of Thursday. The hostess was Mrs. Clarence Douglas Bricker, of No. 214 Rampart street. The young people, who composed the party, were: Miss Florence Bowden, Miss Florence Brown, Miss Marie Bobrick, Miss Marie Stockard, Miss Mary Richardson, Miss Mamie Packard, Miss Mamie Maier, Miss Clarise Stevens, Miss Barbara Burkhalter, Miss Olive Erdt, Miss Margaret Erickson, Miss Olive Trask, Miss Katherine Banning, Miss Madeline King, Miss Virginia Nourse, Miss Maude Howell, Miss May Rhoades, Miss Lois Salisbury, Miss Nora Dickinson, Miss Katherine Smith, Miss Ada Seeley, Miss Florence Wachter, Miss Helen Brant and Miss Nita German.

Thursday evening, Miss Florence Brown complimented Miss Dickinson and Mr. Boothe with a theater party at the Belasco, followed by supper at Hotel Alexandria. The party included members of the bridal party.

Miss Dickinson and Mr. Boothe are entertaining with a house party at Terminal Island, which will conclude the series of enjoyable affairs. Mrs. Starr Warson, sister of Miss Dickinson, is chaperoning the guests, who include: Miss Nora Dickinson, Miss Florence Brown, Miss Edna Bradford, Miss Fanny Todd Carpenter, Miss Olive Trask, Louis Granger, Dr. John Curran, Earl Boothe, Sterling Boothe, John Phelps, George Caeger and Frand von Tesmar.

Informal Luncheon.

Mrs. Anna J. Hobbs of No. 104 North St. Louis street, gave an informal luncheon Thursday in honor of Mrs. Mary H. Lummis and her daughter, Miss Kybi Lummis, of Des Moines; also for Mrs. Josephine B. Read of Huntington Beach.

—o—

Theater Party and Tea.

The Misses Lucy and Katherine Clark, of No. 9 St. James Park, charmingly entertained yesterday afternoon with an informal theater party at the Mason and tea at Hotel Alexandria. The complimented guests were: Miss Elizabeth Wood, who returned recently from an eastern trip, and Miss Clara Fargo, who is the house guest of her grandmother, Mrs. George Wilson King, of St. James Park. Miss Fargo is here with her mother from New York.

—o—

Pleasant Party.

Mrs. Minnie Alger, of West Twenty-seventh street, was hostess at a recent box party given at the Burbank. The guests were: Mrs. Lewis Stanton, Mrs. J. W. Harris, Miss Lela Milligan, Mrs. Downer and Mrs. Mamie Alger. Tea followed at the Alexandria, where, in honor of the occasion, the table glowed with violets and jonquils.

—o—

Mrs. Stimson, Hostess.

Mrs. Willard Stimson of Hotel Alexandria entertained with a tea party of sixteen covers complimentary to Miss Achsah Stimson and Miss Katherine Kittinger of Seattle. The latter are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra T. Stimson, No. 825 West Adams street.

—o—

Coming Affair.

Capt. and Mrs. H. H. Hemb will preside Tuesday evening at a theater party at the Belasco in honor of Ira D. Hunt of Columbus, O., National Commander of the Union Veterans' Legion, and Mrs. Hunt, who are visiting in Los Angeles. The performance was also enjoyed by Mrs. Mary Dunning, Mrs. Rena Whitfield, Mrs. Nancy Dean, Mrs. Mary Alf and Mrs. Mary Coffman. Supper was served at Christopher's.

—o—

Mrs. Henderson, Hostess.

A pretty luncheon in Hollywood Friday was given by Mrs. William Francis Herndon, of No. 138 Whitley avenue, in honor of Mrs. George Judd, who is enjoying the winter in this city.

—o—

Mrs. Rogers, Hostess.

Mrs. Edward D. Rogers entertained at her apartments Wednesday with a "500" party and luncheon. Red carnations, pink shaded candelabra and tiny pink gypsy kettles filled with bon bons and supported on tripods, completed the arrangement. Prizes fell to Mrs. Walter V. Dysert, Mrs. Edward De Moland and Mrs. F. H. Kingman. Others enjoying the afternoon were Mrs. W. W. Powell, Mrs. G. E. Dalton, Mrs. J. H. Angaard and Miss Kate Hall.

—o—

Noon Wedding.

At noon last Thursday, in the presence of immediate relatives and friends occurred the wedding of Miss Alice M. Conn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Conn of Newark, O., and Dr. William M. Foster. Dr. Hugh K. Walker performed the service in the Immanuel Presbyterian Church. The bride was attired in her traveling suit of blue cloth and blue hat. The wedding marches were in charge of Miss King. Dr. and Mrs. Foster will reside, upon their return from a wedding trip, at No. 1834 West Forty-seventh street where they will receive after April 15.

—o—

Another Engagement.

Mrs. Robert Fiske Love of No. 2624 Budlong avenue announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Mabel Virginia, to William H. Burnham, Jr., of this city. The wedding will be solemnized in May.

—o—

Thursday Luncheon.

Mrs. Ella Bamborough entertained with a luncheon Thursday in a downtown cafe. Mrs. Bamborough was assisted by her attractive daughter, Miss Hazel, whose engagement was announced to Ray V. Terry. The table was decked with jonquils, and yellow favors marked places for Mrs. Adeltha Carter, Mrs. Kate Brown, Mrs. C. M. Bamborough, Miss Vreda Ellmore, Miss Jessie Henthorn, Miss Mabel Latter, Miss Ida Wenrich, Miss Addie Lawson, Miss Ada Street, Miss Madeline Crabbe, Miss Maude Tettlebach, Miss Ruth Tettlebach, Miss Maude Fowler, Miss Blanche Fowler, Miss Alma Herberger, Miss Ethel Reaves and Miss Ethel Platt.

—o—

Mrs. Wilson, Hostess.

Mrs. Phillip D. Wilson will preside this afternoon at an informal tea party for Rear Admiral and Mrs. Hutch I. Cone. The guests will be entertained at the Phillip Wilson residence at No. 1944 South Union avenue.

—o—

For Bride-Elect.

Miss Helen Bushnell entertained at her home, No. 1[illegible]3 West Twenty-fourth street yesterday with a card matinee, as a courtesy to Miss Wynette Bailey, who is betrothed to Ralph Ware. Pink roses and enchantress carnations beautified the rooms; scores were kept on hand-painted cards. Invitations were accepted by Mrs. E. O. Edgerton, Mrs. Roland Paul, Mrs. Earl Eldridge Whitney, Mrs. Percy Merithew, Mrs. Grace Franks, Mrs. Walter Cordin, Mrs. Joseph Carlisle Wilson, Mrs. William Hays Stearns, Mrs. Raymond Hill, Mrs. Clarence Variel, Miss Edith Bailey, Miss Mary Currier, Miss Sue Van Wageman, Miss Meta Smith, Miss Hortense Jones, Miss Marguerite Seymour, Miss Helen McCutchan, Miss Eula Smith, Miss Hazel Childress, Miss Alice Atwell, Miss May Fisher, Mrs. Harold Fisher, Miss May Flint and Miss Helen Bettis.

At the Country Club.

Mrs. Percy A. Lane of No. 1231 East Forest avenue, entertained with a bridge luncheon Monday at the Los Angeles Country Club, in honor of Mrs. B. F. Burton of Madison, Wis., Mrs. E. B. Smith and Mrs. George E. Lichty of Waterloo, Iowa, and Mrs. Charles P. Bratnober of Minneapolis. Red carnations enlivened the table, and corsage bouquets marked places. Prizes were awarded to Mrs. Thayer, Mrs. A. C. Bratnober and Miss Florence Lichty.

—o—

To Receive.

Mr. and Mrs. Forest Stanton, who were recently married in the South, have returned to Los Angeles and are domiciled with the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. Q. Stanton of Whittier and Linwood. Mrs. Stanton and her daughter-in-law will be at home to friends informally the third and fourth Fridays of the month.

—o—

Visitor Honored.

Miss May Thomas, who is visiting here from Honolulu, was the honored guest at a theater party at the Belasco given by Miss Lois Wilson. A dainty repast was served following the performance at Hotel Alexandria, where the prettiest of decorations and place cards had been arranged by Herr Reichl. There were covers for Miss Eunice Dorland, Mrs. Cecil Rosenthal, Mrs. R. H. McLean, Mrs. Le Roy Prewett, Mrs. McClung, Mrs. P. O. Dorland, Mrs. Budd, Miss Edith Kelso, Miss Viola Henck, Miss Alice Kelso, Miss Cora Boettcher and Miss Helena Anthes. guests with a dancing party Wednesday evening. The home was beautiful with acacia blossoms and jonquils, which were used in graceful profusion throughout the home. A pretty arrangement in the conservatory consisted of doves suspended among the roses and hyacinths; the pergola was lighted with hundreds of tiny lights. Mrs. Cline was assisted in receiving Miss Dickinson and Mr. Booth who stood beneath a miniature bride and groom, suspended from a canopy of greenery, by Miss Josephine Ihmsen, Miss Ella Gardner, Miss Virginia Nourse and Mrs. Harmon David Ryus. Mrs. Cline's parties are always delightful and characterized by originality. Mrs. Wallace Cahill Ayer of New York sang a group of bridal songs in honor of Miss Dickinson.

—o—

Returning Home.

Mrs. John Burg and Mrs. Mabel Johnston Gurriuez who have been guests in this city three months, left yesterday for their home in Ann Arbor, Mich.

—o—

Bride-elect Feted.

Miss Florence Green, whose wedding will take place next week, has been much feted during the last week. Yesterday Miss Edith Myers gave an after-dinner coffee spoon shower in her honor, at her home on West Thirty-fifth street. Those enjoying the function were Misses Gladys Green, Florence Parmalee, Alice Preston, Nita German, Lucille Zanders, Gladys Bridges, Dorothy Bosche, Buelah Wright, Gertrude Comstock, Inez Johnson, Lois Cook, Ruth Locke, Margery Freeman, Olive Berryman, Katherine Adkinson, Frances Vermilyea and Mrs. T. L. Green and Mrs. Edgar Wall.

Friday afternoon the active members and alumni of Alpha Rho Sorority entertained at their new sorority house, Thirty-fifth and Figueroa street, with a miscellaneous shower for Miss Green. The sorority colors, green and gold, were used in decorating. Hostesses for the afternoon were the Misses Florence Parmalee, Katherine Adkinson, Alice Preston, Nita German, Ruth Locke, Gladys Bridges, Inez Johnston, Evelyn Bowers, Lucille Zanders, Edith Myers, Frances Vermilyea, Gladys La Fetra, Katherine Taggert, Leona Gooch, Greta Hazzard and Ruth Butler.

Mrs. Fred Elijah or Cedar Rapids, who is a guest at Hotel Virginia, Long Beach, entertained recently at the hotel with a luncheon in honor of Miss Green. A large basket filled with violets ornamented the center of the table and corsage bouquets of the same flower were given as favors, which were tied with violet tulle. Covers were laid for the guest of honor, Miss Gertrude Comstock, Miss Shipman and Miss Patterson of Long Beach, Miss Beber and Miss Charlene Beber of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Miss Gladys Green.

—o—

House Guest.

Mrs. George Wright of San Francisco is the house guest of her aunt, Mrs. J. E. Seymour of West Adams street.

—o—

Birthday Anniversary.

Complimentary to the Friday afternoon Luncheon and "500" Club, also in honor of her birthday anniversary, Mrs. Al Stein entertained with a luncheon at her home, No. 639 Verbena drive, Friday afternoon. All the appointments were in pink and white. A large birthday cake ornamented the center of the table, on which was twelve candles. From the candles extended pink ribbons to each place to which were attached cards on which were sun-bonnet babies. Following luncheon, tables were arranged for "500" and prizes were captured by Mrs. Stephenson and the hostess. Members present were Mrs. A. Washington, Mrs. Andrew Swanfeldt, Mrs. Al Stein, Mrs. W. L. Reynolds, Mrs. Harry Donnell, Mrs. Dallas Jones, Mrs. Sidney Holman, Mrs. A. Stephenson, Mrs. Fred Myer, Mrs. Fred Germain and Mrs. Jack Rose.

—o—

East Orange Guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Rochester Drake of East Orange, N. J., are guests of Mrs. John F. Hanson, No. 2627 Ellendale place.

—o—

Returned Home.

Mrs. Lutz Von Frege, who has been abroad the last six months, has returned, and for the present is located at the Briggs apartments on Hope street.

—o—

Dinner Party.

In honor of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Callender and Mrs. M. L. Bates and the Misses Della and Emma Bates, all of this city, who will leave on the 20th inst. for a six months' trip abroad, Mrs. Z. L. Parmalee entertained with a delightful dinner party at her home in South Pasadena, Friday evening. Yellow daffodils ornamented the center of the table, as well as the place cards, and covers were also laid for Mr. and Mrs. John N. Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Coles, Mrs. Allie Coles, and the Misses Clara and Florence Parmalee.

—o—

Nevada Guests Return.

Mrs. Benjamin Armstrong and her daughter, Miss Nellie, are leaving today for their home in Deith, Nev., after six weeks spent in Southern California.

—o—

Revelers Club.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Herrington of Hollywood entertained members of the Revelers Club last evening, their home having been decorated with marguerites and ferns. Handsome prizes were awarded to Mrs. F. Webb, Mrs. Z. Thurston, T. Fitzgerald and F. Webb.

—o—

Returns to Home.

Mrs. Adolph Schult, who has spent the last six weeks in Denver, where she was the guest of her father, has returned.

—o—

Mrs. Simpson Complimented.

Mrs. William Simpson of Sycamore, Ill., who is a house guest of her niece, Mrs. Robert Hardy, at Hotel New Maryton, was the complimented guest at a matinee party given yesterday at the Belasco, by Mrs. Nellie Meigs, followed by a pleasant hour at the Pig'n Whistle.

—o—

Coming Event.

Mrs. Frank McArthur, No. 144 Commonwealth avenue, will entertain with a bridge luncheon at her home next Friday afternoon.

—o—

Card Matinee.

Mrs. P. B. Speers, assisted by her daughter, Mrs. James Woodson, entertained the Los Angeles Monday Afternoon Bridge Club at her home in Oneonta. The long, graceful sprays of the yellow acacia were used to ornament the rooms where the card tables were arranged and, following the games, a buffet luncheon was served. Invited guests present were Mrs. James Anguish of Morrison, Ill., Mrs. O. B. Manchester, Miss Emma Taylor, and Miss Evans of Oneonta, and Miss Mildred Neiswender of this city.

—o—

Mrs. Ayer Honored.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Perry of No. 15 Chester Place were host and hostess

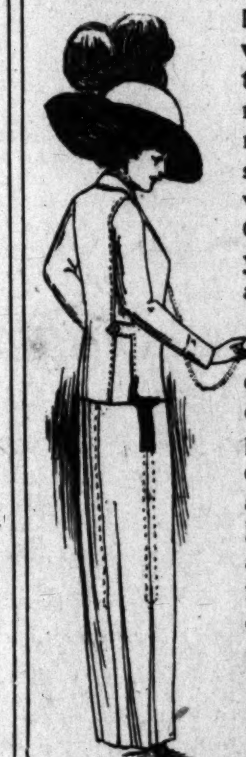
RELIABLE GOODS AT POPULAR PRICES

New Tailored Suits . . . $30

Important Monday Special



Here is Suit News to please all womankind. Not alone to please the purse, but to please in newness, in style, in workmanship, material and color. In short, to satisfy every whim. Such suits we are going to sell tomorrow. One glance at them will satisfy you that we have not exaggerated their merits.

They were made to our order by one of New York's most exclusive tailors, made from four or five models that have won popularity throughout the Eastern fashion centers, so, the styles are authentic beyond question. If your tailor could duplicate any one of them to your measure for twice the price you might consider yourself fortunate.

SERGES in fine French twills or the new wide wale; navy, black or cream.

FANCY SUITINGS in the popular light grays, tans and other fashion-favored spring shades. Fifty in the lot. Special Monday $30.00.

—Second Floor—

Beautiful Foulards 75c

You should not judge these new silks by the price quoted above, it doesn't do them justice—they are really worth much more.

The styles and colors are all new and popular and the designs are small, neat and tasteful—medallions, dots and pretty little figures. Blues in all the fashionable shades and browns and black and white are much favored.
Full 23 inches wide 75c

Longcloth Night Gowns

Specially Priced Monday

$1.25 and $1.50 styles 95c

$1.75 Gowns $1.25

Gowns so nicely made, and of such splendid materials, were never buyable at these prices before. It's a sample lot, but they don't show it in the least, they are as fresh and crisp looking as they were the day they left the factory. Lace or embroidery trimmed.

Paris Decrees Coral

The wearing of precious corals is supremely fashionable this season—because of the decree of Paris that the soft, beautiful coral shades should predominate in spring and summer apparel.

The Brock & Feagans store has anticipated this coral popularity—and is showing today the most important gathering of precious corals shown by any store in America.

There is probably no other gem that calls for so much technical knowledge and care in the selection as the coral—and it is, therefore, advisable and important that to secure gems of perfect quality and natural color, you rely on such a house as Brock & Feagans, where public confidence is safeguarded by the absolute exclusion of all questionable merchandise.

The Brock & Feagans department of stationery shows the newest and most distinctive ideas in correspondence papers and in every society stationery requirement.

Touring Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Adler, Herbert C. Adler and Miss Marion A. Adler will leave April 10 on an extended tour of Europe. They will visit Paris, Berlin, Munich, Rome, Naples and be present at the coronation of King George V, June 22. Dr. and Mrs. James Pomeroy and Mr. and Mrs. Mason will sail on the same steamer.

—o—

Pasadena Horse Show.

All is progressing merrily for the much-anticipated horse show to be given Thursday, Friday and Saturday at Tournament Park, Pasadena, by the Polo Club, and nothing seems to be lacking for its success. The entries are more than satisfactory. Many prominent ladies are to ride and drive, which will give charm and interest to the programme.

The boxes, many of which have been reserved before the actual seat sale, Monday morning, seem to be going like hot cakes. Among those who have already made reservations are: Howard Huntington, John B. Miller, Fred Elmer Wilcox, Mrs. Frederick Fairbanks, Mrs. M. S. Severence, Mrs. W. B. Meechon, Col. W. J. Hogan, Mrs. Frank G. Hogan, Mrs. Warren Barnhart, Frank Van Camp, Courtland Van Camp, Mrs. F. O. Wood, P. H. Smith, John H. Hobbs, C. C. Perkins, R. R. Blacker and A. C. Martin. —o—

Luncheon at Lankershim.

Mrs. Ada M. Dalton was the complimented guest at a luncheon given at the Lankershim Wednesday. Pink and white sweet peas with ferns were arranged in a large basket in the center of the table. The place cards were hand-painted, ornamented with the same flower, with the names of the guests in gold letters. Covers were laid for fourteen.

—o—

Thirty-fifth Anniversary.

An enjoyable affair of the current week was the reception and whist party given by Mr. and Mrs. James D. Brown, No. 143 West Forty-third street, Thursday evening at South Gate Temple, Thirty-third and Main streets, in honor of their thirty-fifth wedding anniversary. White and green were the colors used throughout in decorating for the affair, smilax, pepper boughs, daisies and callas entering into the artistic scheme. Four large wedding bells were also used. Assisting in the receiving line were Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. McArthur and Mrs. K. L. Kinney. Others assisting were Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Collins, Mrs. Edward Binz, Mrs. L. C. McKnight, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Clark and Mrs. L. Wilcoxon. Vocal selections were rendered by Mrs. Theodore B. Payne and Mrs. M. Bacon. Following the games elaborate refreshments were served, and to a wedding march played by Mrs. Charles Rodner, who also presided at the punch bowl, a large wedding cake was brought in. About one hundred guests were present. Score cards, which were heart-shaped, and were used as favors, contained the pictures of Mr. and Mrs. Brown, taken in 1876 on one side, and in 1911 on the other.

To San Francisco.

Mrs. Fred Fay of Gramercy place leaves today for San Francisco, where she will visit her daughter, Mrs. Ira Campbell.

—o—

Grand Rapids Guests.

Complimentary to Mrs. L. McGrath and Mrs. I. Coons of Grand Rapids, Mich., who are spending the winter in this city, Mrs. Edward Robinson entertained with a violet luncheon and musicale at her home, corner of Harvard boulevard and Washington street, Wednesday. A large cut glass bowl filled with violets ornamented the center of the table, and daylight was excluded from the dining-room. Covers were laid for six.

—o—

To Visit Panama.

Mrs. C. S. Masters and Miss Delia Masters of Pasadena leave this morning for San Francisco, from which city they will sail to Panama, and then visit the southern republics. They will be absent several months.

Try This Home-Made Cough Remedy

Costs Little, But Does the Work Quickly, or Money Refunded.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You will find that this simple remedy takes hold of a cough more quickly than anything else you ever used. Usually ends a deep seated cough inside of 24 hours. Splendid, too, for whooping cough, chest pains, bronchitis and other throat troubles. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

This recipe makes more and better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly and tastes pleasantly.

Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guiaicol and all the natural pine elements which are so healing to the membranes. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This plan of making cough syrup with Pinex and Sugar Syrup (or strained honey) has proven so popular throughout the United States and Canada that it is often imitated. But the old, successful formula has never been equaled.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

—o—

Have Returned.

Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Norcross of San Francisco, the latter formerly Miss Irene Mocker, who was the house guest last year of Miss Louise Hauser of this city, have been spending their honeymoon in Los Angeles. In the course of their visit Miss Anne Bentley of No. 635 Hobart boulevard, entertained with a tea party in compliment to the attractive young bride. Mr. and Mrs. Norcross, who were domiciled at Hotel Alexandria, have left for their home in San Francisco.

—o—

Whist Club Honored.

Mrs. S. D. Parker of No. 1740 Hobart boulevard, entertained yesterday with a luncheon in compliment to members of the Magnolia Whist Club and a few guests. It was the first meeting of the year, and the home was beautifully decorated. Prizes were awarded to Mrs. Parker, Miss Ada Dryden and Mrs Will A. Jenkins. The party was enjoyed by Mmes. Dryden, C. F. Jones, C. B. McCollum, M. E. Spinks, Carl F. Shader, M. M. Symmes, W. C. Thornton, H. K. Van Horn, F. M. Van Horn, J. M. Norton, L. L. Vogel, S. C. DeLano and G. W. Maxon. On Thursday evening the ladies entertained their husbands at their annual evening party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Thornton. Prizes were awarded to Mrs. M. E. Spinks, Mrs. M. M. Symmes, Mrs. Carl F. Shader, Mr. Shader, C. B. McCollum, and L. Frye.

—o—

Pleasant Affair.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Blaine of No. 1407 Crenshaw boulevard was the scene recently of a merry affair when friends of their son, Guy, were bidden to the home. Music and cards were enjoyed by the guests who included Miss Marie Baker, Miss Atala Browning, Miss Dorothy French, Miss Grace Pease, Miss Florence Kieth, Miss Irene Bruce, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Kieth, Ralph Heywood, Frank Baker, Ralph Cochran, Clyde Pembrook and Arthur Vaughn.

—o—

Sorority Affair.

Members of the Entre Nous sorority of the University of Southern California entertained with a chafing dish spread at the home of Mrs. McNabb of West Twenty-sixth street, Miss Florence Seeley, Miss Pauline Lund, Miss Atwood, Miss Spencer, Miss Helen Charles and Miss Frances Smith were present as special guests. Later in the week members and friends enjoyed a dinner at Hotel Lankershim.

—o—

Club Affair.

Mrs. M. S. Kornblum of Wilshire boulevard had as guests members of the Paloma Club whom she entertained with a luncheon and "500." Prizes were won by Mrs. C. C. Cohn, Mrs. Eugene E. Cohn and Mrs. J. A. Murphy.

OUT-OF-TOWN SOCIETY

Pasadena.

NOTEWORTHY among the social functions of last week were the two large bridge parties given by Mrs. Phillip Lester Auten and daughter, Miss Cora Auten, of North Madison avenue at the Valley Hunt Club Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons. At the first function, which was given in honor of Mrs. George Hixon and sister, Miss Sue Kelleher, who are guests at Hotel Green, twenty-two tables were arranged in the reception hall and drawing-room. The rooms were attractively decorated with asparagus ferns and daffodils and the dining-room, where refreshments were served, was beautified by masses of pink carnations. Mmes. Robert Neustadt and John Visscher Eliot presided over the tea cups and the prizes were won by Mrs. Charles C. Perkins, Misses Florence Grosse, Abbie McHenry, and Miss Just at Hotel Maryland. At Wednesday's function twenty tables were provided for bridge, Mmes. Frances Swan and William Franklin Knight presiding in the dining-room and the prizes were won by Mmes. Helen Belford, Frank Gilcrist, Ernest Kennedy, George Guyer and Miss Irene Grosse. Upon each occasion several friends besides those engaged in the game were invited in for tea, making 200 society maids and matrons entertained in this charming manner.

Miss Gladys Gardner of East Colorado street was the hostess Thursday at a bridge luncheon given at the Valley Hunt Club for the purpose of formally announcing the engagement of her friend, Miss Mabel Virginia Love, daughter of Mrs. Robert Fiske Love of Budlong avenue, Los Angeles, and William H. Burnham, Jr., also of Los Angeles. Until recently Miss Love has been a resident of Pasadena. Covers were laid for intimate friends of the bride-elect, including Mmes. Edward Frye, Ralph F. Burnham, Walter M. Murphy, Allan Stelle, Remmington Olmstead, Clarence Austin, Misses Genevieve Stehman, Beulah Stannard, Cora Auten Margery Boit, Ethel Hinds, Cordelia Stimson, Margery and Louise Derby of Los Angeles.

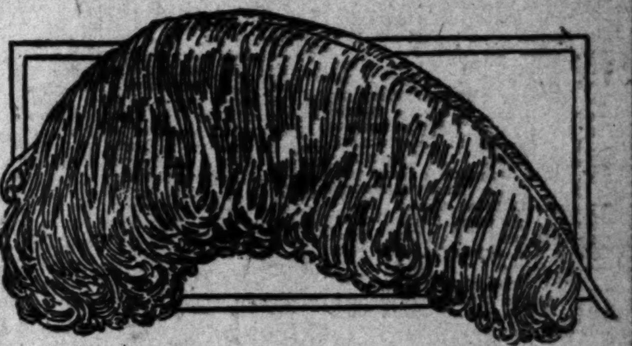
...5,000 Worth of African Ostrich Plumes to Go for $10,000



We Import Direct. That's Why We Can Sell at Prices That Mean Savings of Really One-third

An event that women will hail with the liveliest enthusiasm, for plumes were never more popular than they will be during the coming season, and richer plumes than these were never offered at such savings! All are carefully selected male bird feathers, which insures their superior gloss and durability. You will note also that they are extra wide and have magnificently heavy heads. Just the sort of plumes to give character and distinction to any hat on which they are used. Economical, too, for a handsome hat will require no other trimming, and they can be used over and over again. A really good plume is an excellent investment, and these cannot be surpassed. On Second Floor.

This Will Quickly Make A Rough Pimply Skin Smooth and Velvety

How You Can Make a Pint of Fine Face Cream at Very Little Cost.

Beauty experts say rough, pimply skins quickly yield to massaging with cerol, becoming clear and velvety, and as this costs little and is easily prepared, it should find a place on every woman's dresser.

To make, get 2 ounces of cerol from the druggist and dissolve in a scant pint of boiling water, stirring until smooth. When massaged in the skin it removes all impurities, preventing and dispelling wrinkles and giving the complexion an exquisite bloom and refinement impossible with artificial aids. Men frequently use cerol cream after shaving, as it soothes smarting, itching skins.

The Sheffield Store of Los Angeles

Sheffield Plate of Rare Beauty and Great Usefulness

¶ The Meat Dish illustrated above is a reproduction of the famous Sheffield "Well and Tree" design—a replica of which we are offering in this most popular table service ware, Sheffield plate.

¶ There is a growing use of this splendid plate in table service, which, in real artistic beauty rivals the finest china. In point of serviceableness it is far superior—its life is long, no breakages probable, and, coming in these rare old designs has the added charm of antiquity.

¶ We are "the Sheffield store of Los Angeles." Widest choice is afforded here—the line is too long to enumerate all the items, but in the much-used table dishes—trays, baking dishes, vegetable dishes, meat dishes, etc., we offer an extremely complete line and suggest their substitutions and use by the thrifty housewife as solving a table service problem. The Meat Plate as illustrated; size 20 in. Price $26.00.

Eat What You Will, Food Makes Not Fat

It is a mistaken theory that food makes fat. It is not the food you eat but the way it is digested that makes fat. Your system produces digestive juices that turn good food into poor flesh and fat. Stop those juices from being made by your body and you stop making fat. The famous Marmola prescription which has created so much comment in our cities has been prepared in tablet form for the convenience of those who do not desire to take the liquid prescription. These little tablets when they reach the stomach stop the juices from working the wrong way. They renew those fluids and at once your food gives your body just what it wants and only what it needs. This is the secret of Marmola tablets. They will reduce the fat that is now on your person at the rate of from 12 to 15 ounces a day and they will not cause you the least inconvenience or worry. You may eat early or late, you may sit still or run about, it will not make any difference. Just put a tablet in your purse or your pocket when you go out to a dinner. After each meal take one of the Marmola tablets and rest assured that the meal will not harm you or make you grow more stout. There will be no large wrinkles after your fat has fled. Your skin will be smooth and regular. These little tablets are sold at every drug store, or if your modesty will not permit you to ask for them at your druggists you may receive a package from the makers, The Marmola Company, 235 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich. The price per large case of the Marmola tablets is 75 cents.

Bernardino Orchestra, and Mrs. D. L. Gowell, lady commander of the San Bernardino lodge, gave readings. Late in the afternoon the quilt drawing took place. The violet quilt made by the Maccabee ladies was won by A. B. Paddock. About 150 guests were entertained.

Mmes. R. L. McCrea, Homer Lash, Harry MacRae and J. D. McGregor were the hostesses at a dainty luncheon and handkerchief shower at the home of Mrs. McCrea, Monday afternoon, complimentary to Mrs. Zell Dunlap Jones. The dining-room was beautiful in its white and green decoration. The mirror centerpiece of the beautifully-appointed table was of white sweet peas fringed with lacey green. Water-color place cards, each picturing a bride, marked places for Mrs. Harry Allison and Miss Marguerite Mogean of San Bernardino, Mrs. Walter McIntosh of Redlands, Mrs. Laird of Minneapolis, Mmes. A. L. Morgan, F. D. Lockwood, S. L. Loden, E. R. Downs, F. P. Dunlap, Will Dunlap, George Wood, Fred Jonas, Arthur Wright, R. W. Montgomery, the honoree, and hostesses.

The prettiest of home weddings was solemnized Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Dunlap, when their daughter, Mrs. Zell Dunlap Jones, became the bride of John O. Jones of Racine, Wis. Rev. G. F. Mathes of the First Congregational Church performed the ceremony, using the beautiful and impressive ring service. The bride, who was unattended, wore a beautiful lingerie dress of white. The simple but artistic decorations were in yellow and white. Great clusters of acacia bloom were used in the ceremony room and yellow marguerites, yellow satin ribbon, yellow candles and shades, in the dining-room, where the wedding luncheon was served, immediately after the ceremony. Only members of the two interested families were present. The bride and groom left late in the afternoon for a short stay in Los Angeles and will return to Rialto about the middle of the month, when they will leave for Racine, Wis., their future home.

Out-of-town guests at the nuptials were the groom's sister, Mrs. A. F. Donald of Stockton, John Dunlap of Whittier, Mr. and Mrs. Walter McIntosh of Redlands, and Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Allison of San Bernardino.

Mrs. Fred Kingman entertained at her home on Orange avenue Wednesday afternoon, having as guests the members of the Woman's Club. The subject for the afternoon was "Magazine Day." A delightful afternoon was spent by the twenty ladies present.

Whittier.

THE home of Mrs. S. C. Shanker was the scene of a pretty wedding, Wednesday evening, when her youngest daughter, Miss Mabel Shanker, became the bride of Max Goheen of this city. The color scheme of the decorations was pink and green, the arch under which the ceremony was performed, being of smilax studded with pink sweet peas. The bride was charming in a beautiful gown of white crepe de chine. Mrs. Jessie Crane of Azusa was the bridesmaid and Will Duggar of Los Angeles, brother of the bride, acted as best man. Miss Irene Barnes of Azusa played Mendelssohn's wedding march as the bridal party entered the room and took their places. The impressive ring ceremony was performed by the Reverend Thomas Armstrong, formerly pastor of the Friends Church. An informal reception followed the ceremony and an elaborate collation was served. The bride, who has made her home in Whittier for the past twenty years is a girl of much personal charm and has a host of friends in Whittier. Since the engagement she has been the honoree at many delightful social affairs. The groom is a son of Mrs. C. Goheen of Punxsutawney, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Goheen left immediately for a two weeks wedding trip after which they will make their home in Whittier. More than one hundred guests were present. Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Will Duggar of Los Angeles, Mrs. Jesse Crane of Azusa, and Misses Nell Hudson and Irene Barnes of Azusa.

Mayor and Mrs Dan Reid entertained Sunday with a delightful little luncheon at the Greenleaf Hotel in honor of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Andrus of Bolivar, N. Y. In Full Swing Monday--Second Lot of 5000 Yard Purchase of Mostly $1.00 to $2.00 Silks at 69c

Perhaps the most important Silk Sale that the month of March has been able to bring forth in this store, and altogether perhaps one of the most remarkable silk sales that the city has seen. The quantity to begin with reaching around the 5000 yard mark and the values to begin with representing $1 to $2 silks, and some even higher. Think of such beautiful quantities of fine silks at such an insignificant price. And Monday the second lot comes forward, the reserves are brought forward to fill in the gaps, that you may buy.

—$2 Pongees, 36 inches wide.
—$2 Cotele. —$1.50 Crepe Pongee.
—$1.50 Marquisette, 27-inch, satin striped, in the Persian patterns.

—$1.25 Crepe de Chene 24-inch.
—$1.50 Brocaded Crepo de Chene, 24-inch.
—Diagonal Pongees.
—Brocaded Cotele.

—Fancy Taffetas.—Pompadour Messalines.
—And such a world of pretty silks at such startling values, that buying will be nothing short of remarkable.

With Easter slightly over a month away, this silk event is indeed timely. Once more the Broadway scores.

New Initial Box Stationery 40c

A new shipment of high class initial paper that is to make new friends for our popular stationery department.

Each box contains 24 sheets of fine linen paper, each sheet is hand-stamped in gold in the latest style lettering.

—Also 24 envelopes to match. Box complete 40c. Rear aisles 2 and 3.

16 Button Silk Gloves . . . 50c

Every pair of these have the double tipped fingers. Made with two clasps at wrist. Black and tan only. Not a great quantity, therefore we say while they last, pair 50c.

2-CLASP SILK GLOVES 39c—Have double tipped fingers. Choice of black, tan, white, pink and gray.

Pure Thread Silk Stockings 75c

Just received a shipment of these beautiful silk stockings, pure thread with the lisle sole, heel, toe and top.

Not ordinary 75c silk stockings. We are making a feature of them at the price. The lisle is used where the wear comes. Black and tan. Exceptional.

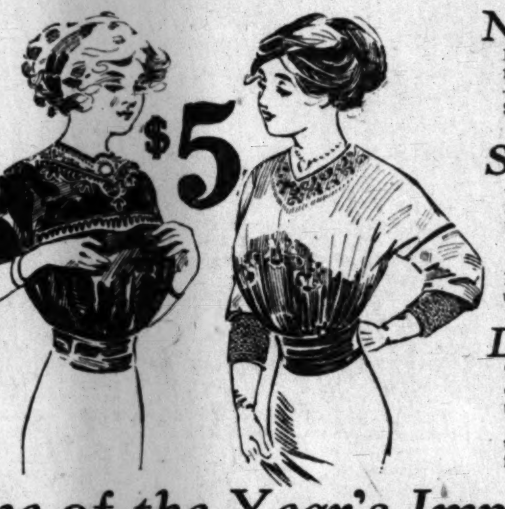
KAYSER'S 75c VESTS 50c—Silk lisles, low neck, sleeveless with hand crochet yoke. The name "Kayser" means quality.

WOMEN'S VESTS 25c—A jobber's surplus that we originally valued at 35c to 50c. This lot marked for special selling at 25c. Lisle vests with lace yoke, front and back and silk taped—also plain vests. This is a bargain in advance of the season.

More Silk Dresses to Capture the Hearts of Women Who Appreciate Values--Features at $12.50 and $15.00

Again we emphasize the fact that women cannot afford to make silk dresses when such charming models are available at such inexpensive prices.

Indeed, the values are far out of proportion to the charming styles and the splendid materials



New Models $12.50

Dresses of foulards, messaline and taffeta. Carefully made, perfect fitting.

—Five distinctively different designs at $12.50.

Silk Dresses $15.00

—Oh! the charm of them. Foulards, Plain and fancy silk messalines, Shantungs and taffetas.

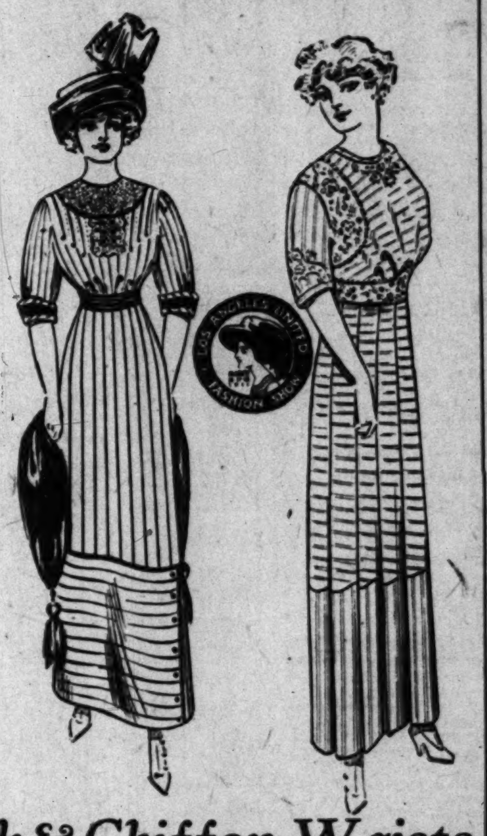
—¾ or kimono or the long sleeves. Black and all the prevailing colors. Unusual values at $15.

Linen Dresses $7.50

They're embroidered all over with eyelet embroidery. Have wide band of self material at hem and shoulders.

—Of course the Dutch neck style with the kimono sleeve. Clever models at an inexpensive price, $7.50.



One of the Year's Important Sales--Silk & Chiffon Waists

Just at the right moment when an Eastern manufacturer needed more business our waist representative made him a proposition whereby he was to manufacture a quantity of waists that would enable us to startle the city in a $5 sale.

CHARMING WAISTS OF SILK AND CHIFFON OVER SILK, EMBROIDERED SILK CREPE, CHIFFON AND MESSALINE COMBINATIONS, RICH TAFFETAS WITH RENAISSANCE YOKES, EMBROIDERED NETS OVER SILK.

As for colors, you'll find the rich shades of green, rose, reseda, wine, tan, browns, pink, light blue, the new and fashionable King's blue, navy—and the much desired black and white checks, as well as Helen pink. Long and short sleeve effects, straight or kimono sleeve. High collar or round yoke. Also square yoke models.

Heavy Sterling Silver Flatware

If you are interested in high-grade, exclusively-designed silver flatware, we know you will be concerned with this new shipment, for it has received the approval of everyone in the store who has seen it.

Such articles as lemonade spoon and straw combination, cream ladles, bonbon spoon, cold meat forks, sardine forks, mustard spoons, sugar shells, pickle forks, tomato server, etc., all in a charming apple blossom pattern.

Whether for your own home or as a wedding or birthday gift, a selection from this showing is sure to be satisfactory. Any of these pieces at $1.

Children's New Spring Apparel

This department is devoted exclusively to the display and sale of children's dresses, hats and other articles of apparel. It is wonderfully interesting to view the new spring styles, which have just been brought forth from our Receiving Room. For Monday mothers are invited to especially see the following lines:

CHILDREN'S GINGHAM DRESSES $1.75—Large and small plaids. Full pleated skirts. Waists trimmed with buttons and white piping. Sizes 6 to 14 years.

CHILDREN'S BLACK BLOOMERS 25c—In sizes 2 to 12 years. Elastic tape at knee.

CHILDREN'S ROMPERS 25c—Sizes 2 to 6 years. Turn over collar—pockets.

We Carry the Best Corsets

You will clearly understand why the Broadway Corset Department is perhaps the best stocked on the Coast when we tell you that we exclusively represent Lyra and American Lady corsets and are headquarters for Nemo, Royal Worcester and Bon Ton makes.

The new spring models in these lines are a revelation of fashion interest. From the graceful, slender models to those for stout women our lines are complete.

American Lady Corsets $1 to $5.

Lyra Corsets $5 to $8.50.

Fancy Net at 25c Yard—45 inches and 48 inches wide—some of it as much as two-thirds under regular price. A fine, full line of patterns.

—"There is such a difference in stores," exclaimed a customer the other day.

—And it is the Difference of Bullock's that is making Inauguration Month so unlike other Anniversary months—

—The beauty of the store itself.

—The spirit of the business that is being expressed through the decorations, through

The Thousands of Dollars' worth of Delightful New Spring Merchandise with which every floor is crowded.

—Through unusual perfection of service—The spirit of the business itself is responsible for the confidence in this organization and its activities that is in turn responsible for the wonderful sales records of the past week.

—And Inauguration Month, through its activities is to ground Bullock's still more firmly in the confidence of the public—Monday starts another great Friend Winning week.

—Navy Blue Wool Back Satin—42 In., $2.00. A rich, rippling wonder weave. The newest beauty stuff of the year—Not $5, $6 and $7, as wool satins are generally sold—but $2.00 yard.

—Navy Blue Bordered Foulards in exclusive patterns, $13.75 to $18.75. Dots, Persian, Cathedral borders—Irresistible as can be—Magnificent for summer gowns and costumes.

Navy Blue Foulards, 85c to $1.25—From both Cheney Bros. and Valentine & Bentley, they come. Showerproof and Shedwater Foulards in daintiest dot and figured effects we have seen, 85c to $1.25.

—Is it any wonder Loom men are hard put to it, that many stores are frantic, that some stores are so unfortunate as to have scarcely any Blues at all—

—Fashion's whispers cannot be heard everywhere—she doesn't shout her selections from the house tops.

—But the breath of a lisp is sufficient for Bullock's. The duty of this store is to be on the alert where Fashion is concerned—and weeks ago when the very first hint was floating around that

The Beauty of Navy Blue Will Get Its Greatest Recognition this Spring

—our representatives got busy at once and now shelves are loaded with navy blue, in ever so many kinds of silks and Dress stuffs. Thousands of yards of exquisite weaves, for thousands of yards of which more than one store would be willing to pay a handsome premium. Probably the most complete and attractive display in the whole West, and though the market would justify the marking prices up, the values at Bullock's are even more tempting than many stores would quote, if conditions were the reverse of what they are.

—Navy Blue Marquisette $1.25—That is 27 in. wide—with new green line patterns—to make charming costumes over silk.

—Navy Blue Messaline 85c Yd.—Soft and rich in draping qualities—with tiny pencil stripes, one of spring's most favored effects; unusual at 85c yard.

—A 36-in. Plain Messaline at $1.00 yard, in navy blue.

—Navy Blue Brocade Messaline—$1.00—27 in. wide—a beautiful effect to delight the hearts of many, more than any other silk.

—Navy Blue Silk Poplin—$1.00.

—Navy Blue Marquisette, 42 In., $1.50.

—Navy Crepe de Chine, 24 In., $1.00

—Navy Velvet, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75.

—And Corduroy at $1.25 Yd.

—Glorious Foulard Poplin $1.65—The handsomest of all spring silks. Royal in its beauty for the new, soft, clinging suits, 42 in.

—Plain Poplin, $1.50. 42-in. wide.

—Navy Blue Serges, 85c, 42-in.; $1, 45 in.; $1.50, $1.75 and $2.25, 54-in. wide. A rich, fine twilled serge, superb qualities at every price.

—Wool Taffetas in Navy Blue $1.00, that are 43 in. wide. With the velvet worth of silk—finer weave than —Navy Panamas 50 In. at $1.25—Most desirable of all dress goods.

—Tussah Royal—44 In. at $2.00—A brocaded woolen for rich dresses.

—Epingle Cloth at $1.75—50 in. wide.

—Mohairs in Shadow and Pencil Stripes, $1.00.

—The shelves are weighted with navy—yet there are thousands of yards of other silks and Dress Goods—the newest of the new—Here to make Inauguration Month the greatest period of merchandising the store has known. Monday, another big sale day.

Oh! the Beauty of the New Cottons The Wonder of Inauguration Values

—Train after train has brought case after case of the prettiest cotton stuffs that ever came to the store—and out of every case has popped values that have made the eyes of the most expectant open wide with surprise.

—Our buyer went East with a twinkle in his eye, the sparkle of determination. He has certainly sent back wash weaves of a character and unusualness, that have aroused the wonder of everyone—

—Monday more of those staple white Lawns, Mulls and Batiste at half price —To start another week of remarkable selling.

THE THEATERS.

periors. Of course, it is farce—not to be taken at all seriously, except as a means of hilarity, but as both the leading players are experts, it ought to make a gale of laughter from start to finish. Mr. Beldon was stage manager for Wagenhals & Kemper, and is an expert actor; Miss Chapple played here as a child with Sol Smith Russell, and has varied between such plays as "Vivian's Papas" and "Paid in Full," showing her great versatility.

Redford and Winchester, clever and very eccentric jugglers, return after a successful engagement at the Palace, London, where they shared honors with Maud Allan as topliners. They have combined skill and comedy in their work, and are recognized not only as experts in juggling, but as funny men.

Mignonette Kokin, another favorite who has not appeared here in a long time, returns with a fresh series of impersonations and types, acquired on her trips through the foreign halls. Miss Kokin is vivacious, Frenchy to an extreme, and her depictions of the stage favorites are looked upon as standard.

Galetti and his Simian Circus are sure of a welcome, especially from the youngsters.

Four vaudeville acts and three first run pictures will be the programme at the Hyman for next week. It's difficult to say just which the feature act is but it is quite possible that the act that will cause the most comment is that of Mlle. Camille and her troupe of highly trained dogs, in a miniature circus, as well-trained animals are always interesting and especially so when it comes to "man's best friend, the dog." Mlle. Camille is one who has been able to bring a troupe of dogs to the high plane of efficiency that these represent. One of the dogs wears a diamond dress and the rest of them are costumed in a brilliant manner.

Burling and Urban are "some" dancers. They have a routine of the most difficult steps and they execute them with an ease born of many hours hard practice. Their costumes are up to the second.

Adon, a protean actor with a sketch, "Money Mad" has an offering of merit. Adon plays seven distinct characters ranging frrom comedy to melodramatic roles. He carries his audience with him all the way through.

A feature in Arthur S. Lloyd, Coster singer and character comedian, will be liked. Lloyd is one of the younger members of the famous English family of Lloyds of which Alice is a bright star. Lloyd has many of the family characteristics. He is a versatile comedian, a good singer and has the magnetic quality.

The first run pictures are enjoyable at this house. The selection for next week is particularly good.

The Lillian May Lancaster Woman's Orchestra, directed by Miss Bessie Hardy, does not fail with its programme of timely music.

BUSONI ALSO A PEN-PLAYER.

HIS "NEW ESTHETIC OF MUSIC" BRILLIANT WORK.

Varied Talents of the Man Who Is Reigning King of the Keyboard. Poetic Thoughts Found in His New Volume—Declared Greatest of Liszt Interpreters.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

That Ferruccio Busoni is the foremost pianist of the present day I have long been prepared to admit; more, I heralded the fact to those who did not even know the name, for Busoni has not toured west of the Mississippi River and, with a pianist, in these hurrying days, hearing is about the only believing.

But that Busoni had successfully invaded the field of art letters, I did not know until the mail placed the Schirmer edition of Busoni's "A New Esthetic of Music" on my desk last week.

The literary power and expressiveness of this remarkable man are amazing. He writes like one who does nothing but wield a pen, and that a trenchant one; whereas the average great man of melody, stripped of his virtuosity, can only eat much and grin pleasantly.

"Architecture, sculpture, poetry and painting," says Busoni, "are old and mature arts; their conceptions are established and their objects assured; they have found the way through uncounted centuries and, like the planets, describe their regular orbits.

"Music, compared with them, is a child that has learned to walk but must still be led. It is a virgin art, without experience in life and suffering.

"It is all unconscious as yet of what garb is becoming, of its own advantages, its unawakened capacities. And again, it is a child-marvel that is already able to dispense much of beauty, that has already brought joy to many, and whose gifts are commonly held to have attained full maturity."

Or this one: "The spirit of an art-work, the measure of emotion, of humanity that is in it—these three remain unchanged in value through unchanging years; the form which these assumed, the manner of their expression, and the flavor of the epoch which gave them birth, are transient, and age rapidly."

Again: "All arts, resources and forms ever aim at one end, namely, the imitation of nature and the interpretation of human feelings."

This: "Music as an art, our so-called occidental music, is hardly 400 years old; its state is one of development, perhaps the very first stage of a development beyond present conception, and we—we talk of 'classics' and 'hallowed traditions!' And we have talked of them for a long time.

"We have formulated rules, stated principles, laid down laws; we apply laws made for maturity to a child that knows nothing of responsibility!

"Young as it is, this child, we already recognize that it possesses one radiant attribute which signalizes it far beyond all its elder sisters. And the lawgivers will not see this marvelous attribute, lest their laws should be thrown to the winds. This child—it floats on air! It touches not the earth with its feet. It knows no law of gravitation. It is well-nigh incorporeal. Its material is transparent. It is sonorous air. It is almost nature herself. It is—free!"

And so, for fifty delightful pages, Busoni continues. The little work launches presently into a bold discussion of the relation of the old masters to the masters of the present day, and freely goes over many technical points in playing and study. I commend it unreservedly to all students.

—o—

Busoni's Programmes.

Busoni as an interpreter is declared peerless.

A Colussus in technique, he brings mechanical dexterity. The Liszt compositions are said to have had no such interpreter since the death of the wizard Abbe who wrote them. Chopin is declared to evidence the introspective poesy of Busoni, and the ultra-moderns his keen grasp and progressiveness.

More than half his first programme is of Liszt compositons. It includes—this is Tuesday evening, Simpson Auditorium, if you please—the Bach-Busoni organ prelude and fugue in D minor, the Chopin ballades Op. 23 and 47, and of Liszt the "Mazeppa," "Ricordanza," "Campanella," the Legend of St. Francis of Assai, the Legend of St. Francis of Paula, and the "Don Juan" fantasie.

On Friday evening, upon the same platform, he will play his own transcription of the Bach "Chaconne," the Chopin No. 2 sonata, Schumann's variations, Op. 1 and "Toccata," Op. 7, the Liszt Thirteenth Rhapsody and Caprice waltz, and the Liszt arrangement of Schubert's "Erlking" and Hungarian March.

—o—

Whistling Concert.

A very enjoyable and quite unique concert was given last Friday evening at Blanchard Hall under the auspices of the California School of Artistic Whistling. Whistling of various sorts, interspersed with a few violin and vocal selections, formed the evening's entertainment. There was a whistling chorus, and other participants were Dr. Sarah Howe Morris, Master Raymond Delmar, Miss Jessie Stafford, Mrs. F. P. Rossiter, Harold Stewart, Frederick Hodge and Perley Glenn Godard, from the Egan school.

Recital Postponed.

The joint recital planned by Roland Paul, tenor, and Mrs. Edith Haines-Kuester, for Cumnock Hall last Thursday evening, was necessarily postponed on account of the highly inclement weather. Accordingly, the skies permitting, the recital will be given this Thursday evening, in the same place.

—o—

Pease Recital.

Sibley G. Pease, organist, assisted by Frank M. Geiger, basso, will be heard in recital at the Westlake Methodist Episcopal Church on Tuesday evening.

Composers included in the programme are Spence, Guilmant, Lemare, Schubert, Mozart, Beethoven, Dvorak and Gounod, with Mr. Pease's own offertoire in D flat.

—o—

Notes.

Mischa Elman will be heard here in concert soon.

This will be gratifying news to lovers of violin music, for, with Kreisler, Elman stands at the fore of the world's bow interpreters of master-melody.

Ellen Beach Yaw gave an extraordinarily successful concert in Beaumont a little more than a week ago. The programme was not long, but it afforded the prima-donna many opportunities for the display of her versatile talent.

A sharer of honors was Lester Donahue, whose piano playing literally captured the audience, which seemed greatly surprised at the young man's power, technique and breadth of intellectual conception.

Members of the women's clubs and other patrons of music and the arts, are planning a testimonial for Mrs. George A. Dobinson, to be given at the Auditorium early in May. For many years, Mrs. Dobinson has been not only a staunch upholder of the arts, but an intelligent and consistent developer of them as well—a legitimate constructor of the things she most admired.

Mme. Nielsen-Rounseville, for years recognized in Chicago as an exemplary exponent of modern piano technique and interpretation, has come to Los Angeles to make her home, and is located at No. 1624 South Burlington avenue.

Roy H. Hastings will give his regular organ recital in Immanuel Presbyterian Church this evening at 7 o'clock. The programme will be from the works of Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Gounod, Lemaigre and von Suppe.

Julius V. Seyler, concert pianist of this city, and Mrs. Arthur E. Childs of Riverside, gave a piano-violin recital for the Tuesday Musical Club at Riverside last Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Lilliam Ballagh gave a special programme before the Long Beach Musical Study Club last Thursday afternoon, taking as her subject music and music-life in Italy.

At the one-hundred-ninety-seventh students' recital of the Von Stein Academy, given Saturday afternoon, March 4, programme and participants included: Blanche Perry, Sonatina, Op. 55 No. 3 (Huhlau;) Irene Gustafson, violin solo, Freischutez (Spalding;) Teresa Elwess, The Mill (Jensen;) Ethel Thomas, mazurka (von Wilm;) Stella Smoot, 3rd Mvt. Sonatina Op. 55 No. 3 (Kuhlau;) Selma Siegelman and Dorothea Vogel, duet, Bridal Song (Jensen;) Anna Hayes, Sonatina in C (Kuhlau;) Mildred Bradford, waltz, (Gurlitt;) Ralph Montee, Cradle Song (Schumann;) Kenneth Montee, Sonatina in C (Lichner;) Eleanor Gress, 1st Movement Sonatina Op. 55 No. 3 (Kuhlau;) Pauline Hollingsworth, Sonata in G Maj. A Spring Song in a Cafe.

As gray, on the table, lay his hand
As the root of a tree in a barren land,
Or a rope that lowers the dead.

As gray as a gravestone was his head,
And as gray his beard as dusty grain;
But his eyes were as gray as the rain—

As gray as the rain that warms the snow,
The bridegroom who brings, to the grass below,
A breath of the wedding day.

O his eyes were the gray of a rain in May
That shall waken and mate a dead May queen,
Shall marry and quicken a queen of the May
When all the graves are green!

With a slight stretch of imagination it is easy to picture the House of Commons made up of the scions of famous families with a sprinkling of outsiders who don't count, wield no influence, hold no office and are included simply to fill in the empty benches. This oligarchy of "fatehrs' sons" as it now stands includes such shining examples as Winston Churchill, Home Secretary in the present government, and a son of Lord Randolph Churchill; Austin Chamberlain, a leader of the opposition and son of Joseph Chamberlain, the ailing backbone of the Conservative party; Neil Primrose, son of Lord Roseberry; Lord Hugh Cecil, son of the late Marquis of Salisbury; and ever so many sons of wealthy peers of recent creations whose way to the front has been paved with gold from the money bags of their ambitious papas. Then until recently there was Herbert Gladstone, son of the "Grand Old Man," and now a peer and Gov.-General of South Africa.

In one respect the House of Commons has gone the upper chamber one better. For whereas the House of Lords includes but a single son of a deceased peer, the lower chamber in many instances boasts two and in one case recently it had three members of the same family. This association of brothers in the House of Commons lends the air of a family affair to the proceedings and frequently results in happenings of an alleged humorous turn which serve to enliven the usual dull conduct of public business there.

One of the most interesting of these family doubles is that which embraces "Bobby" Harcourt and his half-brother, Lewis Vernon Harcourt, more commonly known as "Lulu," Colonial Secretary, and a member of the present cabinet. The first named, although he has a varied career, he has but lately become a member of Parliament and can be dismissed in a few words. He is of interest to Americans because he is the son of the late Sir William Vernon Harcourt by his second wife, a daughter of Motley, the historian, one time United States minister in London. Bobby was educated at Eton and Cambridge and managed to take honors. Subsequently he became a clerk in the diplomatic establishment of the foreign office. After six years of that, however, he deserted diplomacy for journalism and became parliamentary correspondent and dramatic critic of the now defunct London

Walter Long, M. P.

A notable example of heredity in the British House of Commons. There has been a Walter Long in every Parliament since Cromwell's time.

paper Bobby turned to politics and fought three elections before finally landing on the green benches as representative for Montrose Burghs. The powers-that-be, intent on their constant job of making the House of Commons a closed corporation, immediately looked around for a soft berth for the son of late Sir William and presented him with the post of parliamentary secretary to the Home Secretary.

AN ANALYSIS OF "LULU."

"Lulu" Harcourt, however, cannot be dismissed in a paragraph. He demands analysis. There is nothing obvious about him. Few know him well and intimately and there is scarcely another man in public life in England today concerning whom there is such a diversity of opinions and estimates. One well informed ob-

Parliament whose future could not be limited or predicted and that no office was beyond him.

Yet "Lulu" is a man who for twenty years was content to efface himself and play the insignificant role of private secretary to his father. For the best part of his life he answered unimportant letters, delved in blue books and sat in silence under the strangers' gallery in the House of Commons, watching the daily round of parliamentary happenings but taking no part in them.

In 1898, Lulu did the best stroke of business in his life. He married an American woman possessed of energy and ambition enough for the whole family. She was Mary Burns, a niece of J. Pierpont Morgan, and an heiress in her own right. First of all this estimable woman tidied up the estates of the Harcourts, which had become sadly out-at-the elbows through lack of money. She made Nuneham Park, near Oxford, one of the show places of England and the favorite country house and envy of the late King Edward. Then she turned her attention to her husband. Suddenly "Lulu" woke up, was elected to Parliament, advanced to the center of the stage with unprecendented rapidity, and finally was appointed Commissioner of Works and invited to become a member of the Campbell-Bannerman cabinet. He developed ability quite unsuspected by even his most intimate friends.

Before he became a member of the government he had never spoken a word in Parliament, yet from the beginning of his official career he was a success. The work that has been entrusted to his care has been done with a skill that won warm praise from political friend and foe alike.

But the influence of his American wife has not been limited to the rejuvenation of his mental equipment. When she married him, "Lulu" was a careless dresser. Today he is a prince of dandies. There may be two opinions on his place in the political world; there is but one opinion on his place in the sartorial world. As a dresser he dominates the House of Commons, while in the House of Lords there is only one man who can dispute his claim to the first place as an arbiter of fashions among the lawmakers of England, namely the Lord Chamberlain, Earl Spencer, better known as "Bobby" Spencer, the height of whose collar exceeds that of "Lulu's" by an eighth of an inch. To such elevations can the accident of a long neck raise a man in these days of fashion's rule. It would indeed be a calamity if "Lulu" missed the premiership by that insignificant fraction of an inch.

BLUE BLOOD.

The Harcourts represent the power of blue blood. The Britisher "dearly loves a lord." How much more so the Harcourts who have the strain of the Plantagenets in their veins. But the Britisher also loves the almighty dollar. It is a big mistake to suppose that Americans have a corner on the worship of the golden calf. Thus side by side with the Harcourts in the House of Commons we find the Samuel brothers, whose presence there is an example of the power of the barrel. Their uncle, the late Lord Swaythling formerly Sir Samuel Montagu, long was of the "filthy lucre" was too heavy. He was the founder and head of the great private banking firm of Samuel Montagu and Company and both his Parliamentary nephews, Herbert and Stuart Samuel, are also members of the same firm.

Of the Samuel brothers the least interesting, from a Parliamentary point of view, is Stuart. He seldom speaks and his attendances at sessions of the House are limited to important occasions. He is a much more active member of the banking house than is his younger brother, Herbert, and his duties in the "city" prevent him following politics closely.

Herbert Louis Samuel, Postmaster-General, takes his public career seriously; some would say too seriously. Although he had been in the House of Commons only three years when the Campbell-Bannerman ministry was formed, such were the services rendered to the Liberal party by Lord Swaythling that Herbert Samuel could not be ignored. He was appointed assistant to Herbert Gladstone, then Home Secretary, a role for which he was more fitted than any other that can be imagined. As a matter of fact he proved a valuable help to the impractical son of W. E. Gladstone for he possesses the qualities of mind which his chief so signally lacked. He is intensely serious minded, so much so that he might have served for the original of Jim Dumps. He has an overwhelming supply of common sense, is practical severance and singleness of aim. He has been described as a walking encyclopedia. His speeches, lacking in brilliancy, are a mass of figures and established facts and he soon succeeded in winning the respect if not the heart of the House of Commons.

A PAIR.

A notable pair of brothers-in-law in the House of Commons, whose success is due to the double influence of wealth and political relationship consists of Mr. Asquith, the Prime Minister, and H. J. Tennant, head of a great alkali industry he inherited from his father, the late Sir Charles Tennant. Mr. Asquith married the famous Miss Margot Tennant, who as a child was a pet of William E. Gladstone and who is the original of E. F. Benson's "Dodo." H. J. Tennant is distinguished for his capacity for hard work as a collector and collator of dry out-of-the-way facts. He has served with industry if not with distinction on a number of parliamentary investigation committees and he is best known for his work as chairman of the Committee on Dangerous Trades.

On the Tory side of the last House of Commons there were two pairs of brothers who literally and figuratively illustrate the power of the "barrel" for beyond being good fellows who are universally popular they have nothing but their wealth to recommend them, and in both cases that wealth was derived from catering to the ever present thirst of their countrymen. They are the Hon. Rupert and Walter Guinness and Sir John and Arthur Dewar. The Guinnesses are the sons of Viscount Iveagh, the head of the famous Dublin brewing firm and the Dewars belong to the family which is equally famous for its Scotch whisky. In the present Parliament only Sir John Dewar and Walter Guinness remain.

A couple of years ago there were three brothers sitting on the Liberal benches. The triumvirate was broken by the elevation of the eldest, Sir John Wynford Philipps to a peerage. The two younger members of the family, Col. Ivor Philipps and Owen Cosby Philipps still sit side by side in the House. These brothers owe their political importance to their territorial connections in Wales, their family having been large landholders there before the conquest of Wales by the English.

THE FAMILY PULL.

A notable instance of family influence on the Tory side is furnished by Lord Claud Hamilton and the Marquis of Hamilton, brother and son of the Duke of Abercorn, who are among the most industrious members of the Irish unionist group. Lord Claud is a man of great ability, but the Marquis never distinguished himself. It is said, however, that there has never been a House of Commons since the union of the Irish and English Parliaments without at least one Hamilton on its benches. A generation ago they were known as "the hungry Hamiltons" from their success in attaining well-paid public office and to this day they are spoken of in society as "the handsome Ham-leaders and a great landholder in Wiltshire, boasts that there has been a Walter Long in Parliament ever since Cromwell's time.

JOHN SCOTT.

"Keep Up With the Band."

Any sort o' weather, you must travel through the land,
When you hear the music you must keep up with the band.

Rise and be ready,
Willin' heart and hand,
Feller has to hustle
If he keeps up with the band!

Call it "world of trouble," but better understand,
Trouble may be double if you follow
not the band!

Rise up—be ready,
Willin' heart and hand;
Feller has to hustle
If he keeps up with the band!

What the Poet Brought.

He came and went that day so quietly
I scarce knew he had come ere he was gone.
But, turning, saw that he had left upon
My heath a casket with a golden key;
And in the box that he had brought to me
I found a crimson sunset and a dawn,
A cloud, a rainbow and a grassy lawn,
A cloth of moonbeams and a honey bee,
A rose, a ribbon and a lock of hair,
A woman's picture and a signet ring,
A silver stream within a woodland wild,
A dewdrop on a lily frail and fair,

STORIES OF FAMOUS POEMS.

"THE BIVOUAC OF THE DEAD."

COL. THEODORE O'HARA.

The muffled drum's sad roll has beat
The soldier's last tattoo;
No more on life's parade shall meet
That brave and fallen few.
On Fame's eternal camping ground
Their silent tents are spread,
And glory guards with solemn round,
The bivouac of the dead.

No rumor of the foe's advance
Now swells upon the wind;
No troubled thought at midnight haunts
Of loved ones left behind;
No vision of the morrow's strife
The warrior's dream alarms;
No braying horn or screaming fife,
At dawn shall call to arms.

Their shivered swords are red with rust,
Their plumed heads are bowed;
Their haughty banner, trailed in dust,
Is now their martial shroud.
And plenteous funeral tears have washed
The red stains from each brow,
And the proud forms, by battle gashed,
Are free from anguish now.

The neighing troop, the flashing blade,
The bugle's stirring blast,
The charge, the dreaded cannonade,
The din and shout are past;
Nor war's wild note, nor glory's peal
Shall thrill with fierce delight;
Those breasts that never more may feel
The rapture of the fight.

Like the fierce northern hurricane
That sweeps his great plateau,
Flushed with the triumph yet to gain,
Came down the serried foe,
Who heard the thunder of the fray
Break o'er the field beneath,
Knew well the watchword of that day
Was "victory or death."

Long has the doubtful conflict raged
O'er all that stricken plain,
For never fiercer fight had waged
The vengeful blood of Spain;
And still the storm of battle blew,
Still swelled the glory tide;
Not long, our stout old chieftain knew,
Such odds his strength could bide.

'Twas in that hour his stern command
Called to a martyr's grave;
The flower of his beloved land,
The nation's flag to save.
By rivers of their father's gore
His first-born laurels grew,
And well he deemed the sons would pour
Their lives for glory, too.

Full many a norther's breath had swept O'er Angostura's plain—
And long the pitying sky has wept
Above the mouldering slain.
The raven's scream, or eagle's fight,
Or Shepherd's pensive lay;
Alone awakes each sullen height
That frowned o'er that dread fray.

Sons of the dark and bloody ground,
Ye must not slumber there,
Where stranger steps and tongues resound
Along the heedless air;
Your own proud land's heroic soil
Shall be your fitter grave;
She claims from war his richest spoil—
The ashes of her brave.

So 'neath their parent turf they rest,
Far from the gory field,
Borne to a Spartan mother's breast,
On many a bloody shield;
The sunshine of their native sky
Smiles sadly on them here,
And kindred eyes and hearts watch by
The heroes' sepulchre.

Rest on, embalmed and sainted dead,
Dear as the blood ye gave;
No impious footsteps here shall tread
The herbage of your grave;
Nor shall your glory be forgot
While fame her record keeps,
Or honor points the hallowed spot
Where valor proudly sleeps.

Yon marble minstrel's voiceless stone
In deathless song shall tell,
When many a vanished age hath flown,
The story how ye fell;
Nor wreck, nor change, nor winter's blight
Nor time's remorseless doom,
Shall dim one ray of glory's light
That gilds your deathless tomb.

"The Bivouac of the Dead" is one of the most beautiful of all poetic tributes to the fallen hero. It tells, in the most simple, yet in the most exultant way, of the appreciation and the glory of those who for their country rest in the "deathless tomb." There is no poem in the English language more often quoted upon the recurring celebration in honor of the nation's dead and the simplicity and beauty of its lines, as well as the sentiment they represent, are destined to be everlasting.

This beautiful tribute to the soldier dead was written by Col. Theodore O'Hara, the poet, journalist and soldier. No one was more thoroughly fitted for the writing of such lines, for O'Hara spoke from experience, the experience that comes with the appreciation of the just deserts to those who have offered up their lives for their country, for he himself had lived the life of a soldier, and knew full well all that must be sacrificed and endured before rest is finally secured on "fame's eternal camping ground."

O'Hara served through the Mexican War as a captain in the regular army. Being breveted major on the field for gallantry, he took part, in 1851, in Lopez's first expedition to liberate Cuba. At this time he held a colonel's commission, and was severely wounded at Cardenas. O'Hara also participated in Walker's filibustering expedition to Central America, and was one of the soldiers of fortune of that episode.

He subsequently edited, with marked ability, several Southern newspapers, among which were the Mobile Register and the Louisville Times. During the War of the Rebellion O'Hara served in the Confederate army, and when the war was brought to a close he held the commission of chief of staff to Gen. John C. Breckenridge.

His celebrated poem printed above was written and read by O'Hara in 1847, on the occasion of the reinterment of his comrades-in-arms, the soldiers of Kentucky, who had fallen in the Mexican War, principally at Buena Vista, and whose remains were brought home by the State of Kentucky and buried with high military honors in a lot set apart for them in the Frankfort cemetery.

O'Hara died in Alabama several years after the Civil War was closed, and the Legislature of Kentucky caused his remains to be brought home to Frankfort and reinterred in the State Cemetery beneath the shadow of an imposing shaft erected by the State to the memory of the heroes whose valor was so grandly sung in "The Bivouac of the eDad."

appreciated in the North, the fact in every section of the country, that the national government has disposed, at intervals along the driveways and paths at the Arlington National Cemetery, near Washington, metal tablets inscribed with some of the most beautiful and soul-stirring extracts from this much-admired poem.

Lines from this poem are also found frequently inscribed upon the tombstones of eminent soldiers in the South, and it is on the table of the "Roll of Honor—The Dead in National Cemeteries," a work published by the government. It was originally called "Kentucky's Dead."

Theodore O'Hara was the son of an Irish exile, and was born in Danville, Ky., in 1820. He was educated at St. Joseph's Academy, at Bardsboro, where he taught Greek to the younger classes while finishing his senior course. He read law, and was appointed a clerk in the Treasury Department at Washington, in which service he was employed at the time of the breaking out of the Mexican war.

June 6, 1867. He wrote several other poems, the best known of which is "The Old Pioneer." The best among his poems, following "The Bivouac of the Dead," is the one containing these lines:

"'Tis the old, old story, one man will read,
His lesson of life in the sky;
And the other blind to the present need,
Will see with the spirit's eye.
You may grind their souls in the self-same mill,
You may blind them heart and brow
But the poet will follow the rainbow still,
And his brother follow the plough."

O'Hara was fond of adventure, of a daring disposition and full of restless energy; richly endowed with gifts of mind and heart. He was even genial and generous in disposition and as a conversationalist was unusually happy and brilliant, having been the charm of many a social gathering and the life and soul of countless campfire circles in the war.

He was rather above the medium well-proportioned figure, and erect, military bearing. O'Hara's tomb, which is situated amid the graves of those by whose side he fought in battle, and whose valor he commemorated in verse, is worthy of notice. His name is inscribed beneath a sculptured sword and scabbard encircled by a wreath of oak and laurel. At a little distance rises the great memorial shaft surmounted by marble cannons and flags, and above these by the winged figure of victory. Among the graves of those who once listened to the cannon's thunder stand the blackened and silenced guns that brought death and destruction at Buena Vista and Chapultepec. At the foot of O'Hara's tomb the full force and beauty of his lines may be felt.

¶ New Spring goods are arriving in immense quantities — carload after carload. We find, after most careful readjusting of our stock and economizing of space, that additional room must be secured immediately to accommodate hundreds of the new pieces, and to allow us to show styles of similarity together in complete suites.

¶ Therefore, all discontinued patterns and odd pieces that we cannot at present match up will be disposed of during the coming week at about actual wholesale cost to us. In disposing of these samples upon this basis, we shall sacrifice profits upon these particular pieces entirely, and in some cases even will be willing to accept a loss, to attain our object quickly.

COOPERESQUE.

TWO ON THE TRAIL. By Hulbert Footner. Doubleday, Page & Co., New York. (Price $1.20.)

THE novels of care-free and bloody adventure seem to be coming in again. The weighty problem novel with its psychological analyses, its soul struggles, and its social enigmas, is on the wane.

I have dragged out a lugubrious existence of late years with fiction on profound and depressing themes. I have carefully considered the query as to whether a young man in politics has a right to marry. My soul has been tormented by the struggles of heroes betwixt hussies and tatting virgins. I have looked on at the toilets of men's souls when they were deciding whether or not it was right for minister-artists to paint nude women. In my reading I have been shot through with the pangs of conscience of the young girl who in a thoughtless moment permitted a dashing Lothario to kiss her madly. I have sat patiently through thousands of pages relating to the woman who, though once fallen, has reformed and married; and who later, when her husband has discovered her past, excoriates him because he complains of her ante-marital indiscretions.

It is a relief to come across a book like Hulbert Footner's "Two on the Trail," a book chock full of thrilling adventures and wholesome romance. "Two on the Trail" is a grown-up G. A. Henty book, as heroic and as incredible, as swashbuckling and as exciting as any of those boyhood classics.

The hero belongs to that tribe of fascinating young devils—the newspaper reporters. And the heroine is as brave and as beautiful as any young man could desire. They meet in a restaurant in Prince George; hit a fifteen-hundred-mile wilderness trail with a bishop, (who nearly always manages to leave the young people to their own resources;) and have the time of their lives, fighting terrible villains, overcoming assassins, and experiencing other adventures too numerous to mention.

In fine, it is a corking yarn, full of the eager and romantic spirit of youth, and not unskillfully told. If you do not agree with me that it is a corking tale, I shall be compelled to admit that you are wrong.

THE VOW. By Paul Trent. F. A. Stokes, New York. (Price $1.25.)

WE cannot linger with the novels. They come too fast. There is time only for a summary roll-call:

"The Gift of the Grass" is the autobiography of "Hall," a famous race horse—a prince of pacers. In spite of the unreality of the book, it is entertaining.

In "The Golden Web" we find an entertaining story of mystery, hinging on the struggle for the title deed of a rich gold mine.

From the mines to the sea. "The Magnet" describes vigorously the nautical romance of a sailor-poet and a mysterious and beautiful lady.

While at sea, let us go North and read the brutal and unpleasant story of the stampede of gold-seekers to the Klondike. Robert W. Service is following close in the footstesp of Rex Beach and London in "The Trail of '98," and his book is worth reading.

The eternal triangle is encountered in "The Pendulum." This time it is a devilish count who hits the amatory trail after a New York doctor's pretty wife.

More marital gloom darkens the pages of "When Half Gods Go." This time it is the siren, who has a meteoric but brilliant affair with the husband of a noble wife, who is assisted in her endeavors to hold her husband by his brother.

Carolyn Wells's scintillant and light-footed tale of mystery, "The Gold Bag," comes next. Two detectives go on a hot chase in a sinister murder case.

More mystery and more detectives are found in "The Capture of Paul Beck." A lady sleuth gives variety to this tale.

Preposterous and sentimental is "The Vow." It tells how a felonious magnate of finance, in an emotional moment, vows to live according to the teachings of Christ if his wife is spared to him. The book tells how he stood by his bargain.

LITERARY GOSSIP.

Thomas Dixon is in Texas, where he is starring in his own play, "The Sins of the Fathers."

Marshall P. Wilder has recovered from his recent serious illness, and is now again hard at work making folks laugh. His two books, "Smiling 'Round the World" and "The Sunny Side of the Street," continue to enjoy wide popularity.

Justus Miles Forman has arranged his summer plans. As usual, he will go to England early, and during the London season will be the guest of friends there. He will be there, of course, during the coronation.

Elinor Glyn sailed this week for England. While she was here she left in the hands of her publishers part of the manuscript of her novel for next autumn, and arranged for a series of articles in one of the magazines on the proper bringing up of young girls. These articles will shortly begin their serial appearance, and will run through the remainder of the year.

Thomas A. Edison, who recently celebrated his sixty-fourth birthday by spending three-fourths of the day at hard work, surprises even his intimate friends by his endurance of mental labor, says F. L. Dyer and T. C. Martin, authors of his recently published biography, "Edison: His Life and Inventions." In a conversation in 1909 he remarked, as if it were nothing out of the way, that up to seven years previously his average of daily working hours was nineteen and one-half, but that since then he figured it at eighteen. It was suggested that the secret of it might be that he did not live in the past, but was always looking forward to a greater future. He replied: "Yes, that's it. I don't live with the past; I am living for today and tomorrow. I am interested in every department of science, arts and manufacture. I read all the time on astronomy, chemistry, biology, physics, music, metaphysics, mechanics, and other branches—political economy, electricity, and in fact all things that are making for progress in the world."

Louise Closser Hale, whose new novel of stage domestic life, "The Married Miss Worth," has just been published, is dodging the questions of her fellow players who have read the novel. "They won't believe," she said, "that all the incidents in 'The Married Miss Worth' didn't actually happen to me. Hilda Worth, you know, is fascinated by a younger man than her husband until she becomes sensible again, and now they're all looking for some young person in my life. They won't credit me with any imagination at all, but think that all these things have actually happened to me, and I have to make appointments with my dressmaker, oh, most clandestinely."

H. G. Wells, in one of his earliest stories, written long before the present craze for feats of aviation was even a possibility, anticipated the terrible cost at which the conquest of the air would be won. Although Mr. Wells did not go the length of M. Henri Lavedan, who has recently protested against the craze in "L'Illustration," predicting that it will lead to aerial circuses and race tracks, he said, in "The Argonauts of the Air," one of the tales in his book called "Thirty Strange Stories," published in 1898: "The flying-machine that will start off some fine day, driven by neat little levers, with a nice open deck, like a liner, is the easy dreaming of the literary man. In lives and in treasure, the cost of the conquest of the empire of the air may even exceed all that has been spent in man's great conquest of the sea. Certainly it will be costlier than the greatest war that ever devastated the earth."

BOOK NOTES.

Messrs. D. Appleton & Company announce "The Grain of Dust," the new novel by the late David Graham Phillips, for publication early in April.

Robert Hichens's new novel, "The Dweller on the Threshold," a strange story of the occult, is published this week.

Moffat, Yard & Co. announce the immediate publication of a new enlarged and elaborate edition of William Winter's "Gray Days and Gold." All of this work is new in form; much of it is entirely so, being now first collected.

The Putnams will soon publish "Criminal Man According to the Classification of Cesare Lombroso," summarized by his daughter, Gina Lombroso Ferrero, the wife of the eminent historian, Guglielmo Ferrero.

Mrs. John Martin, author of "Is Mankind Advancing?" is strongly opposed to women's suffrage, and was one of the deputation which lately visited Albany to oppose the granting of votes to women.

Dr. Alvah H. Doty states that his purpose in writing his forthcoming book, "The Prevention of Infectious Diseases," was to present the latest practical knowledge of the subject, and to deal with facts rather than with theories. The work is based upon Dr. Doty's personal experience and investigations.

John Warren Achorn's "Nature's Help to Health," will appear in middle March. This book is an outgrowth of the author's smaller and earlier essay on "Nature's Help to Happiness." It is addressed chiefly to middle-aged people.

The following books from the spring list of Houghton Mifflin Company are to be published in Great Britain by Constable & Company, Ltd.: "Cathedrals of Spain," by John A. Gade; "My First Summer in the Sierra," by John Muir; "China's Story," by William E. Griffis; "The Soul of the Indian," by Charles A. Eastman; "Wells Brothers," by Andy Adams; "Public Ownership of Telephones on the Continent of Europe," by Arthur N. Holcombe; and "Industrial Accidents and Their Compensation," by Gilbert L. Campbell.

"813" is the extraordinary title of a new mystery story by Maurice LeBlanc, creator of the already famous Arsene Lupin. It refers to a mysterious blue label bearing the figures "813," and the story recounts the most terrific duel of Lupin's career. The book is published this week.

THE DAY'S LITERATURE.

Boys, Books and Plays.

An examination of facts will show that for several reasons the effect of a play, good or bad, upon a boy's mind is more penetrating, more comprehensive, and more lasting, than the effect of a book, writes Frederick Winsor in the Atlantic. This is because the book appeals only to the boy's imagination. What he reads can only be made real to him by mental pictures, which will vary in intensity with the ability of the author and with the vividness of the imagery supplied by the boy's own mind. His only means of keeping in his memory what he sees on the printed page is the power of his vision, physical and mental. The play, on the other hand, appeals to the ear, as well as to the eye, and it leaves nothing to the imagination. What the boy sees is a fragment of real life, when the people involved are not creatures of his fancy but real living, breathing men and women. What they say, for better or worse, is printed on his memory, not in the dead symbols of letters, conventionalized representations of sounds, but in words and actions instinct with vital, moving force. Eye and ear and the actor's art combine to sear the experience into his soul till it is almost as if he himself had lived it. To understand what is put before him and to make it real, the boy's imagination is not once called into play, but this does not mean that his imagination is necessarily idle. Suppose that the play is filled with vulgar innuendo, and with speeches bordering on the indecent. Do you suppose that the boy doesn't perceive these things, and that they do not excite him, and that his imagination doesn't work over-time to paraphrase Kipling—

> Johnny ain't a bloomin' fool,
> You bet that Johnny sees;

or to use Johnny's own language, "There's very little that gets by him."

Pervasive Quality of English.

Not many years ago Japan made to itself what must have seemed to the patriotic mind an astonishing proposition. In view of the terrible difficulties of the Japanese alphabet, it was suggested that the national language should be abandoned in favor of English. To a writer in The Economist (London) this is one of the signs that English is making headway rapidly as a world language. The same writer tells a story, whether true or not, which conveys a "philosophical truth," about a candidate for Parliament, gentleman, it is said, being a Magyar, and not able to speak Slovak, began to addess a meeting of Slovak villagers in his native tongue, which not one of them could understand. At last some one suggested to the speaker that he should try English, and the candidate adopted the hint with satisfactory results, for quite a number of his audience had been to the United States and had there acquired some rudiments of our dialect. In Italy, Greece, Spain, Scandinavia, and many other parts of the Old World, continues the writer, this extraordinary process of emigration to North America and reemigration home has carried a smattering of broken English into the most remote villages, and the English tourist who has left the beaten track is often startled to find himself addressed in his native tongue. English is undoubtedly "the first commercial language of the world," we read, and "whether Spanish or German come next may be disputed."

Elizabeth Stuart Phelps.

A slender but very refined and individual talent, one critic justly remarks, went out of American letters with the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward. It was talent that at times rose to the heights of genius, and that at times was capable of sinking into actual banality; but it was always vibrant, idealistic and intensely sincere. Mrs. Ward unconsciously revealed herself in her writings. She also revealed the spirit of her environment and of her epoch. Her "Gates Ajar," the book that made her famous, was at once the cry of her own soul and a response to the nation's spiritual need.

Andover, Mass., was the soil in which this fragile flower grew. From childhood upward, Elizabeth, or "Lily" Phelps, as she was called, was surrounded by grave and tender influences. Her father, Prof. Phelps, expounded religious doctrine in the Andover Theological Seminary. He stood for all that was conservative and austere. Another of the strong influences in her girlhood was Harriet Beecher Stowe, and it may have been from her she acquired the reformer's ardor and the desire to make her writing humanitarian as well as artistic. Elizabeth was only 17 when her first deep attachment was formed. The object of her affection, a handsome and spirited boy of 19, a son of Dr. Thompson of Hartford, enlisted in the Civil War and was killed. The shock proved nearly fatal to Elizabeth. For several years her friends feared a decline; but "the vigorous intellect asserted itself," says Ella Gilbert Ives, "and the pent-up feelings found outlet in the book that took the world by storm."—[Current Literature.

Increasing the Workman's Value.

Because of the fact that scientific direction of labor is an increase in the production of the worker as a unit and of the organization as a whole, its principles have at times been opposed by various bodies of workmen, who, through a misconception of their real purpose and with the knowledge of the universally recognized defects of the ordinary piecework system, have branded scientific management offhand as merely another effort to "speed up" the workmen, says A. W. Sham, in the American Review of Reviews. In reality the new management aims primarily not to increase the strain on the worker by forcing him into redoubled effort, but to apply his effort to greater advantage. It places at his disposal methods and machinery that have proven, by actual test, to be the most economical of his time and strength. It furnishes him with instructors (known as "functional foremen,") who are more experienced in certain phases of his task than he himself, through whose supervision he is enabled to use these methods and machinery to best advantage. By a system of records, it determines the workmen's special capacities that permits him to be set at the work he is most proficient. And by means of a bonus system it provides for the adequate remuneration of the worker not on the basis of effort expended, but upon the more modern basis of effort practically applied and expressed in units of production. As a consequence, the workman's value to himself and to the organization is increased as rapidly and as highly as his capabilities permit.

The World Hobo.

The ranks of the world hobo are recruited from the aristocracies of the Old World and his type is made a necessity in the economy of a privileged class by the fact that the law of entail gives to but one man of a generation the means for the preservation of family dignity and social distinction in his own country, says Arthur E. Partridge in the New Age. No ordinary stock can breed wayfarers who will brave land and sea, jungle and ice floe and, amid privation that would wrack the soul of a hero, keep intact the law of caste, tradition and national honor. Raleigh, Drake and Frobisher are forebears of such men, and from their order came Columbus to battle the sea to America and Paul Jones to nail his battle flag to the mast.

The British government knows well the economic value of this adult truant, who will not prosper save in the school of experience. This is why younger sons find places created for them in line regiments that go to foreign stations, in the Indian civil service and in the geographical surveys of the red splotches on the map. The English journals, they are more than newspapers, make use of the younger sons to send them the first gleanings from some forgotten or unknown section of the globe. The parson's son, the captain and the major's son, and the younger son of the financially-depressed noble are provided with billets, provided they are willing to fare away from the home land.

When Nature Was Timekeeper.

In the British Museum is a large stone composed of carbonate of lime, which would serve perfectly as a day laborer's calendar, inasmuch as it would indicate to him every Sunday and holiday of the year, though not the day of the month. Moreover, the stone is an actual time record of the work done for a long period in an English coal-mine.

The "Sunday Stone," as it is called, was removed from a colliery drain. When the miners were at work the water running through the drain left a deposit colored black by the coal-dust, but when no work was being done the water ran down clear and left a white deposit. These deposits in the course of time built up the stone. Each day of work left a black streak, immediately followed by a white streak made during the night. Wide white streaks indicate the holidays and Sundays.—[Harper's Weekly.

End of Mirth.

Oh, my beloved, frail and fair,
Who wert not born for care,
Why should I seek with thee to share,
Alone, apart,
This burthened heart,
And give the world the jest?

Why should I deem your hand could 'suage
This full heart's stricken rage,
Or turn again ambition's page,
That fast and deep
In loving keep,
Its secret be unguessed?

Unless the dawn's completed power
In sunset's dying hour,
Or wisdom's slowest seed in flower,
Alike avows
That God allows
That sorrow still is best?

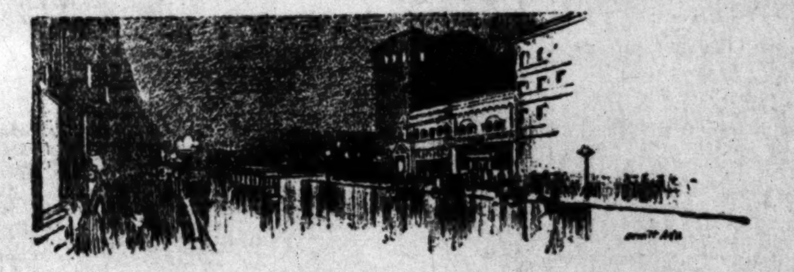
On Sale Everywhere



Never before in the history of Los Angeles has a more remarkable collection of pure blue white diamonds been assembled under one roof than the rare gems now being exhibited by this house. Our experts have shown extraordinary skill and technique in their selections. Every stone is a splendid study in diamond purity, true color and tense brilliance. Notwithstanding the ultra-excellence of quality, we've set comparatively low prices upon these gems. In fact they are overwhelmingly the strongest diamond values in the city. Come in and see them tomorrow.

ART AND ARTISTS.

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

The Desert Painter.

(To Warren T. Rollins.)

The desert spreads before his feet;
The tawny cliffs usurp the sky;
The torrid sun's relentless heat,
Consuming quivers far and nigh.

Appalling solitude and glare
Cloaking in desolation grim;
In saffron haze the burning air
Distorts the vague horizon's rim.

Gigantic rocks and canyons vast;
An Indian motionless, alone,
Reclining in the shadow cast
By some bald sacrificial stone.

These in the frenzy of his art
He paints with swift, unerring brush,
And comes so near to nature's heart
He limns the desert's tragic hush.

—[William H. Howells.

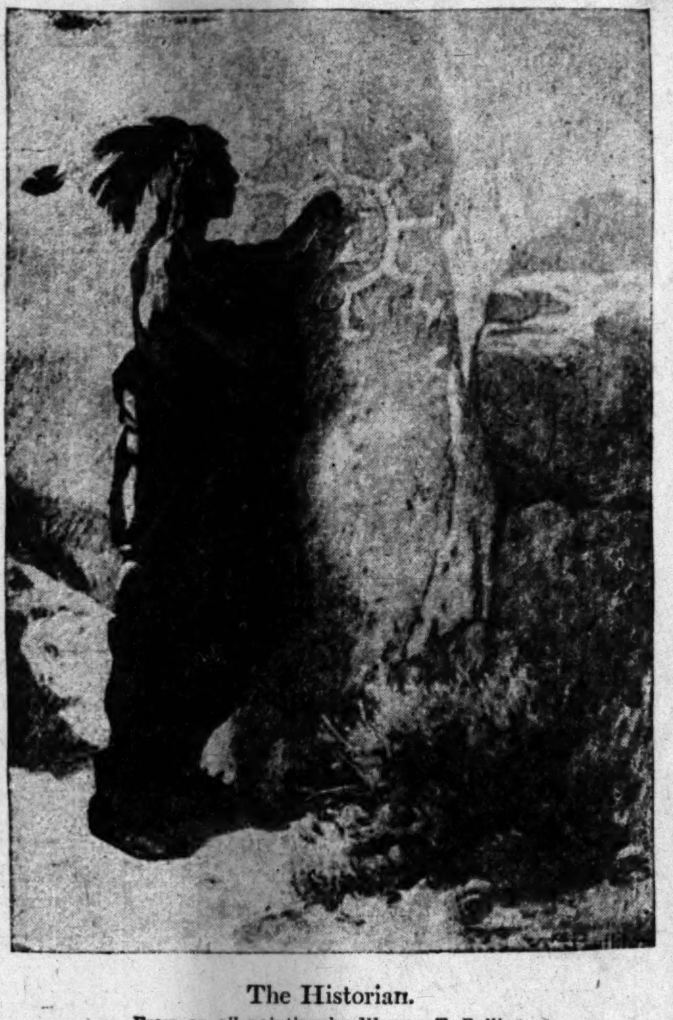
Rollins and the Desert.

One of the most interesting of the spring exhibitions is that of the desert and Indian pictures of Warren E. Rollins, which opened at the Steckel gallery on Spring-street, last Friday, to continue for two weeks.

Mr. Rollins, who was formerly an instructor of drawing and painting in the San Francisco School of Art, has had a studio in Santa Fe and in Los Angeles for some years, dividing his time between the two cities. He goes to the desert to paint the Indian and his environment, and comes to Los Angeles to sell his pictures, remaining here over the winter. He is here now, but will return to New Mexico and Arizona in May, to be gone for a year. This year will be devoted to a complete pictorial exposition of the life of the Indian, from pre-historic days to the present.

The artist has already won an enviable reputation for the fidelity he shows in his work among the red men, for his intelligent and sympathetic interpretation of their daily life, and for his appreciation of the deeper and more poetic aspects of their nature. Some of their peculiar religious customs he has depicted with rare insight, seeing and rendering more than can be reported by mere form and color. His best and most important work, he thinks, will be done in the coming year.

Thirty-three canvases will be shown in the present exhibition. They will be characteristic in subject and treatment, giving us that desert in its various phases of sunlight and mist, moonlight and mystery, and the Indian at toil and at play.



The Historian.
From an oil painting by Warren T. Rollins.

In "The Historian" he may be said to be both playing and working. The tall, red-blanketed Indian in the picture is no decrepit savant bending over musty tomes. He is young and lithe and full of life. Instead of a pen he holds a graving tool, and he stands erect before a solid wall of sandstone, on which he is chiselling some romantic legend of his race—for he is a poet even more than he is a recorder of facts. The lines of his figure are severely simple and long, nobly sculpturesque in effect.

"The Land of His Fathers" is almost epic in expression and sentiment. A young brave is seated on a lonely mesa overlooking a long stretch of desert sands. He is lost in silent contemplation. He sits without restraint, touches of red and green in his costume giving color to a scene which without them would be almost somber in effect. A delicate haze rests over the landscape.

A solitary Indian, small and insignificant in the overpowering immensity of the landscape, stands on a red butte in the foreground of "The Cloud in the East." He has been invoking the gods for rain, and his prayers have been answered. Tremendous clouds, lurid in the light of the declining sun, are travelling from the horizon to the zenith. The picture has been conceived in a big way, and has been painted with remarkable freedom and breadth. Its music is of the organ-tone—the paeon of the triumph of faith.

In "Reflections" a young Indian girl is seen lost in dreams as she bends over a stream in which her empty olla rests. Behind her a large moon is rising above low hills. The mists of twilight float over the scene, giving it sweet mystery. We know that the girl's thoughts are the long, long thoughts of romantic youth. "The Song of the Shepherd," a smaller canvas in an effective color scheme of red and yellow, pictures a seated Indian playing on a clumsy flute—but evoking, I was informed by the artist, the most entrancing strains, for the solitary shepherd is a master musician.

"The Cave Man" was painted in one of the pre-historic ruins, the model bringing his own water jars with him to give versimilitude to the scene. The seated man is almost nude, except for a breech-clout of red. He faces a smoking fire, his back to the spectator. The picture is low toned, and beautiful in its rendition of warm grays.

"Before the White Man Came" shows us two Indians, one seated and one standing, overlooking the stupendous wonders of the Grand Canyon toward sunset. A white mist is rising from the unfathomed depths below them. The walls of the canyon are glorified by delicate touches of gray and rose-pink. In this picture Mr. Rollins may be said to have truly "caught the canyon"—a remarkably difficult feat for any painter, and one not often achieved by any.

There are air and sunlight in "Burning Sands," and in the numerous studies of pueblos that the artist has brought with him from New Mexico—"Street Scene in Laguna," "Old Wall at Taos," "Laguna" (reminding us of a scene in Algeria,) "Outskirts of Santa Fe," "Pueblo Laguna," in the study of the mission at San Gabriel, and in the small bit from the beach at Santa Monica which shows us a flower-clad shack against a background of breaking waves.

The gallery will be open every day, morning and afternoon, excepting Sundays.

Pictures by an Impressionist.

When you consider that Detlef Sammann is no longer what may be called a very young painter (though assuredly he is not old, and never will be, with his temperament,) and that up to a year or two ago he painted in the orthodox way, you must admit that his success in the difficult field of impressionism, as exemplified in the exhibition he is now holding in the Blanchard gallery, is very wonderful. At least, it seems so to me, and I think you will agree after a careful study of his recent pictures.

Correct analysis is never at any time an easy task, and when a man breaks up a ray of color into its component parts, matches them in dull paint, and then places this paint on canvas in such a way as to produce living grays, he may be termed a wonder worker. Mr. Sammann has done this very thing in the twenty or thirty new canvases he has to show, convincing us that the true impressionist is at least as intellectually vigorous as he is artistically "impressionable."

Perhaps the most important of the pictures in the present exhibition is the cycle of studies, beginning with early morning and ending with night-time, which the painter made last summer on Catalina Island near Avalon. In all of marked success. "Morning" shows us the well-known coast of the enchanted isle just as the sun has come up behind the gray wall of rock. Light mists float over the hills in the foreground. The gray ramparts of cloud are flushed with pink so evanescent as hardly to be seen. We feel the fresh spirit of the new-born day. "Forenoon" shows us Lovers' Cove from that high garden, where red geraniums grow in serried ranks vividly alert and alive. Below lies the sea, pure ultramarine and emerald green, still slightly shrouded in the veil of mist the sun has not yet been able to tear asunder and scatter to the four winds. The pale hillside holds shadows of amethyst in its hollows.

In "Noon" an intenser note has been struck. Slim eucalyptus trees are etched against a pale-blue sky. You see the sparkle and play of color in the leaves, you feel their lift and movement in the breeze. I think the loveliest of the Catalina pictures is "Afternoon," in which cool shadows lie along the shore and on a sea as limpid as colored crystals. The sunlight falls, pale and golden, in the cut beyond which rests the white cottage of the Bannings. The purple mountains of "Evening" are turning to rose at their summits. The foreground shows a play of dull greens and reds in the shadow that rests softly upon it. The hush of twilight is in the air.

An English subject of much beauty and charm is "Hazy Morning in Spring," with slender trees ranged in a ring, as if in a dance, round a taller tree, and with golden daffodils in the grass. There is enchantment in the mist that wraps the trees as in a fairy garment. Vivid sunlight lies across the path in "Oak Knoll Canyon," and the foreshortening in the limbs of the sycamores is adroitly managed. "Running Water" is a brilliantly executed study of the Arroyo Seco in sunlight. The water, a lovely light blue in color, moves rapidly forward. Note the simplicity with which the rocks are painted, the richness of their color. "In the Arroyo Seco," is another excellent study of this beauty spot of Southern California, its declivities as seen near Pasadena.

"Eucalyptus," a simple study of trees on a hillside, not at all pictorial to the casual observer, shows conclusively that it is the treatment and not the theme that makes the picture, for Mr. Sammann has made it both beautiful and interesting. Simple, too, is "Evening," haystacks in sunlight against a background grove of dark slim trees.

Though a very small canvas, "Evening Shadows" is one of the gems of the collection. Studied closely, indeed, it looks like a trayful of crushed opals, emeralds, amethysts, rubies and turquoises, placed upright against the wall. Note how brilliant the sunlight is, as it lies on the oaks. Then see how the artist got this sunlight—by a careful juxtaposition of grays made so as to bring out the yellows and reds. Almost equally good is the small "Landscape," with a yellow foreground of broken soil and a cool blue sky, and with mountains showing through a gap made by clumps of oaks to the right and left. Still another is "Oaks," showing two trees, in yellow light, placed side by side.

Some water colors by Mr. Sammann are exhibited, and an excellent copy of Paul Veronese's "Marriage in Cana." All lovers of art, and all those who are interested in what may be termed "new thought" in art, should go to see this exhibition.

ART NOTES.

An exhibition of landscape pictures from the brush of Ernest Browning Smith will be given at the Blanchard gallery, beginning March 20, and continuing for two weeks. Twenty or twenty-five canvases will be shown, studies of Catalina Island and Los Angeles.

M. de Haaff, who has photographed many of the paintings used for reproduction in these columns, has just established a complete color photopragh engraving plant. M. de Haaff has been experimenting for some time in this direction, and it is his intention to issue portfolios of color reproductions from paintings by artists of Southern California.

Martin J. Jackson, who formerly did much theatrical costume designing, has just been commissioned to design the costumes for "The Girl of the Golden West," soon to be produced in London.

Margaret C. Taylor, a portrait painter from Chicago, recently arrived in Los Angeles from San Diego and has just established a studio here.

Joseph Greenbaum's "Les Bretonnes" is still on view in the gallery of the Friday Morning Club. It is to be hoped the club will decide to buy the picture, which is one of this artist's best.

The exhibition of pictures held by the Wachtels in their studio on West Avenue 43, will close next Saturday.

The exhibitions of Detlef Sammann and Benjamin Chambers Brown, the one held in the Blanchard gallery, the other in the Kanst, both close on March 18.

GOSSIP OF THE FOREIGN STAGE.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

LONDON, Feb. 18.—J. E. Vedrenne, of Vedrenne and Barker fame, has at last brought his arrangements fairly to a point and hopes to resume London management somewhere about the middle of April. He has selected as partner Dennis Eadie, who within the past few years has made quite a reputation for himself as a character actor. Eadie first came into prominence as a member of Lena Ashwell's company when she opened the Kingsway. Later he was swept into the all-absorbing net of Charles Frohman, who made good use of him during his repertory season. Like every other ambitious young actor Eadie has for some time nursed a fierce desire to have a West End theater of his own, so that when Vedrenne approached him with the suggestion that they should start together he found Eadie only too ready to listen to him. I have said that Vedrenne has brought his arrangements to a point, but from what I hear elsewhere that point falls just a little short of completion. The truth is, Vedrenne and Eadie have contrived to raise a certain amount of money, but not quite enough. Whether they will obtain the desired balance or whether, in default of that, they will risk the venture on their present limited capital remains to be seen.

They have, in any case, obtained an option upon the Royalty Theater and I fancy there is very slight doubt but that when Easter arrives it will find them installed there. The Royalty, which possesses a record of full fifty years, is a cosy little house, but, unfortunately for itself, it stands just outside the area of theaterdom. Arthur Bourchier had a lease of it for some time and although he certainly did not make a fortune there, contrived at any rate to rub along fairly comfortably. Latterly, however, luck seems to have deserted it. However, there is no valid reason why its drooping fortunes should not be revived by Vedrenne and Eadie. The former tells me that he has quite a good stock of plays and that he certainly has no idea of running the place on "freak" principles. "Our object," he declared, "will be not to educate but to amuse, and above all we want to make money for ourselves." Their first production is a new play by Jerome K. Jerome dealing, according to Vedrenne, "with one of the most interesting topics of the day." Their leading lady is to be Lena Ashwell who is just back from New York after her luckless experience in "Judith Zaraine." I fancy she has no great wish to cross the Atlantic again for a long time to come.

Frederick Whelen, in conjunction with Granyille Barker and Bernard Shaw, was also in treaty for the Royalty and is bitterly disappointed that Vedrenne should have contrived to get ahead of him. He has now turned his attention to the Kingsway which I think Lena Ashwell will be only too pleased to let him have on reasonable terms. Like Vedrenne he, too, declares that he has no desire to run a theater on philanthropical conditions: "It's yoru money I want" he is prepared to tell the public. But for that he is prepared to give ample return in the shape of a stimulating evening's entertainment. He also has a fair number of pieces on hand, including all those hitherto produced by Shaw and Barker. In his portfolio, however, he has at least two entirely new plays, one by John Galsworthy and the other by Mrs. Leonard Merrick, of which I hear extremely favorable accounts. The authoress is the wife of Leonard Merrick who wrote "The Imposter" in collaboration with Michael Morton, a piece produced by Charles Frohman in New York a few weeks ago with lamentable results. I am told by one who knows that it barely played to $25 a night

"Count Hannibal" at the Garrick has only another week to run, the piece having suffered recently from a serious attack of sudden collapse. In its place Oscar Asche puts up next Saturday "The Merry Wives of Windsor" in which he will himself play Falstaff while his wife, Lily Brayton, appears as Mistress Ford. This is the first time in London they have been seen in these characters. The revival is not to be for any great length of time; it is intended merely as a stop-gap while a new piece is being rehearsed. This is to be a play by Edward Knoblauch, author of "The Faun" with which William Faversham and Julie Opp have, I understand, made a substantial hit in New York. Oscar Asche's piece is, it seems to have an elaborate Oriental setting, necessitating certain striking scenic effects which call for careful preparation. I rather imagine that before very long "Count Hannibal" will Popinjay," Fred Terry's latest production at the New Theater, or "All That Matters" at the Haymarket will enjoy a protracted run. The second, Herbert Trench is trying to boom for all it is worth. To do so he has adopted the device of writing a letter to the papers complimenting the editors upon the acumen of their dramatic critics and boldly stating that the public is rushing pell-mell to book seats as fast as their legs can carry them.

As a matter of fact theatrical business all round might be better. I hear, for instance, that Arthur Collins' Drury Lane pantomime has fallen distinctly short of the measure of success hoped for it. So much so is this the case that it has been decided to revive "The Sins of Society" in about five weeks from now. On the other hand, it is perfectly amazing how "Henry VIII" continues to attract big houses, especially at the matinees where even now you can hardly get a place for love or money. The evening performances are, of course, less crowded; still, very good business is being done. Meanwhile, rehearsals of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" are in full swing. The announcement of this revival has caused so much enthusiasm that Tree is beginning to be a litle sorry he has relinquished the part of "Bottom" to Arthur Bourchier. Still, he consoles himself with the reflection that a triumph awaits him with "Macbeth." For the part of Oberon in "The Dream" he has secured Evelyn D'Alroy, who has recently shown in "The Chocolate Soldier" that she can sing as charmingly as she can act. For Titania, Tree is negotiating with Miss Maggie Teyte, a soprano singer who has distinguished herself considerably as a member of the Thomas Beecham Opera Company. He promises some wonderfully beautiful scenic effects. Among them is a storm which is to be realistically portrayed by means of the cinematograph. Just as it reaches its height Oberon will appear and with a wave of his magic wand reduce the elements to tranquility.

Fred Whitney is back again in London. He has come to stay, until at any rate he has produced "Baron Trenck" at the Strand Theater which he hopes to do as Easter. Two days ago he rushed off to Vienna just to have a chat with Felix Albini, the composer of that piece, whom he wants to write several new numbers to be introduced into the English version. He expects to be back in town again early next week. Whitney tells me that he has secured two operas, both of which have made enormous hits in America. I refer to "Mademoiselle Modiste" and to "The Spring Maid," the second of which, I understand, is drawing big houses at the Liberty Theater in New York. He has also acquired half-a-dozen one-act operettas which he proposes to do at a series of matinees at the Strand.—Evidently he is determined to make good his position in London among the managers who count.

Margaret Mayo seems to have won all hearts at the Criterion by her pleasant manner and by the skill she at all rehearsals of "Baby Mine" which we are to see for the first time next Wednesday evening. Evidently she knows her business thoroughly and has a familiar and intimate knowledge of everything connected with the stage. All the work has been left to her and to Weedon Grossmith by William Greet, whose time has been sufficiently occupied by the arbitration case in which he and Lewis Waller are playing leading parts. This is pursuing a slow and tedious course, and some time must still elapse before Waller will know whether his claim for damages against Greet for not taking him back to the Lyric theater is to be allowed or not. Meanwhile, Waller makes a new start at the Globe on Tuesday with "Bardelys the Magnifi-turned down, as, in his judgment, cent," one of the pieces which Greet lacking the qualities requisite to make a West End success. It will be a curious commentary upon this view should it, after all, prove a big moneymaker at the Globe.

Gerald du Maurier's second venture in management is hardly likely to prove as prosperous as his first. After the truth and sincerity of "Nobody's Daughter," the new play "Mr. Jarvis" seems sadly conventional and commonplace. It is the work of two young actors, Leon M. Lion and Malcolm Cherry, and smells grievously of the footlights. It does not contain one novel idea or original situation; it is in the broadest sense of the word machine-made. In a previous letter I gave some idea of the story and there is no need to go over the ground. Nor is Du Maurier too well suited in the title-part. Again and again his performance recalled that given by him in "Peter Pan;" in trying to imitate the young Pretender he only succeeded in recalling Captain Hook. The play was received with respectful attention, but I fear it is destined to be shortlived.

Shame.

I was ashamed, I dared not lift my eyes,
I could not bear to look upon the skies.
What I had done, sure, everybody knew,
From everywhere hands pointed where I stood,
And scornful eyes were piercing through and through
The moody armor of my hardihood.

I heard their voices, too—each word an asp
That buzzed and stung me sudden as a flame;
And all the world was jolting on my name,
And now and then I heard a wicked rasp
Of laughter, jarring me to deeper shame.

And then I looked, and there was no one nigh,
No eyes that stabbed like swords or glinted sly;
No laughter creaking on the silent air;
And then I found that I was all alone
Facing my soul, and next I was aware

Fencing is slowly gaining in popularity with society women, and Lady Constance Stewart Richardson is already an expert user of the foils.

Among the men, Lord Howard de Walden, who has been described by Henry James in "The Velvet Glove," is the most proficient fencer. Star social parts don't suit this nobleman, for he is going to cruise about the west coast of Scotland during the coronation month.

The names of Alfred G. Vanderbilt and Walter Winans are inextricably associated in the Englishman's mind with coaching and horses, while Pierpont Morgan's name is a synonym for swift deals in priceless books and works of art.

In the gentle art of gardening the Earl of Heath is a practical exponent, and as chairman of the Public Gardens Association, lends powerful encouragement to the habit of beautifying windows along dingy thoroughfares with boxes of flowers and growing plants.

As Courtenay Percy Vernon, the present Lord Lyvedon, made a name for himself as a market gardener by inventing a new brand of tomato, called C. V. For several years before inheriting the title he was down on his luck, and once saw service as a waiter in the Bowery, when he struck up an acquaintance with a man known as Husky Sam, who has since had reason to be glad he ever met that nobleman.

SMART SET WOMEN.

The tendency towards the interchange of visits between prominent people on both sides of the Atlantic is growing. Lady Sarah Wilson left England three weeks ago on a visit to Mrs. William Leeds, the many-dollared American widow for whom so many impoverished men of title have sighed. Mrs. Leeds has already taken George Keppel's house in Grosvenor square for the London season at a rental of $1500.

The Princess Hatzfeld, after her visit to her stepmother, Mrs. Huntington, will cross over from New York to find a house in time for the coronation high jinks. The Duke and Duchess of Manchester, Mrs. Cornwallis West and Mrs. Elinor Glyn are also conspicuous in the list of birds of passage who have elected to enjoy Old Glory's hospitality for a while.

Meanwhile those of us who remain in old London town find plenty to do, especially the lookers-on who watch the Smart Set woman more and more indulging in the perilous habit of after-marriage flirting. She has rarely the character to be a "whole-hogger" in left-handed romance, but when "affairs" do happen along, they are both erratic and erotic.

To hear such a woman raving about her son's penniless but romantic tutor, "whose eyes have the rare clarity of the blue sky" is enough to make a teetotaler call for a long and strong drink. "Bleating lambs," an American friend calls them, which would be a correct enough designation if the women were harmless.

The worst of it is that stories of the "smart" woman's follies get to the knowledge of the young girls, though I'm thankful to say that those I know have enough sense to clear such lumber from their minds as soon as heard.

More to their purpose is the news that one of the features of the receptions at court this year is the revival of the old-fashioned and more graceful courtesy. All through the late King's reign the half-curtsey, which Americans did not practice, was allowed. Dancing masters and mistresses are now teaching their pupils, old and young, the forgotten accomplishment.

The first of the ante-Easter season parties was held last night at Lady Brassey's Park lane house. Next Thursday the first dinner of the year of the Excelsior Club takes place at the Ritz, this being an exclusive gathering of such well-known men as William Gillett, Lord Dufferin, Lord Ilchester and Lord Esme Gordon-Lennox.

Tomorrow the society slander cases, De Forest against Milner and De Forest against Lady Gerard, will be a star attraction in Justice Phillimore's court, and the echoes of family jars in high life will then be resounding throughout the length and breadth of the land.

GERALDINE DE LONGVILLE.

FLANEUR'S FLIGHTS AMONG THE NOTABLES.

Lady Decies, who was Miss Vivien Gould of New York, will be only one of quite a considerable number of peeresses who, though the daughters of a republic, will join in the coronation of a sovereign. The Duchess of Marlborough is returning to England. She is the only daughter of William H. Vanderbilt of New York, and was only 18 when she married the Duke. Among the jewels presented to her on that occasion were what are known as the famous Vanderbilt pearls, a wonderful necklace, once the property of Empress Catherine II of Russia. The Duchess is an extremely tall and graceful woman, with a swan-like neck, on which the pearls and other jewels show with great effect. It will be remembered that she was one of the four tall and stately ladies whom Queen Alexandra selected to hold the canopy over her head at her coronation. The other three were the Duchesses of Sutherland, Portland and Westminster, and a more beautiful quartette could hardly be imagined, worthy in every way to surround such a beautiful Queen. The Duke of Marlborough acted as lord high steward at King Edward's coronation.

The Duchess is a very charming, cultivated woman. She rather startled the world a few years back when she wrote a series of papers for the North American Review on the position of women. Some of the opinions she expressed were not a little advanced, and gave token that the Duchess has deeply considered modern problems. She has two handsome little boys, to whom she is devoted. The elder, the Marquis of Blandford, now is 14 years of age.

Perhaps it is hereditary among the Dukes of Manchester to marry Americans, for the present Duchess, who before her marriage was Miss Helen Zimmerman of Cincinnati, is the second daughter of the United States to hold this title. The late Duke also chose an American for his wife. The Duke and Duchess spend a great deal of their time at their lovely Irish seat in County Armagh, Tanderagee Castle. They also are the possessors of Kylemore Castle, in Connemara. This is a stately mansion, unique in the beauty of its situation near the Pass of Kylemore, and the fine range of mountains, the Twelve Pins. The Manchester town house is in Grosvenor Square. They have four children, two sons and two daughters. The eldest son, Viscount Mandeville, who is just 10 years of age, is one of Queen Alexandra's godsons, and bears her name in masculine form—Alexander.

The Countess of Ancaster, who has only succeeded to the title this year, also is of American parentage. She was Miss Eloise Breese, the daughter of a well-known New York magnate. She was married in 1905 to Lord Willoughby de Eresby, who has now become Lord Ancaster. Although the late Lord Ancaster successfully established his claim at the last coronation, to be joint hereditary lord great chamberlain, his son will not play the same part at the coming ceremony. The Court of Claims decided that the Marquis of Cholmondeley, Earl Carrington and the Earl of Ancaster had such equal rights to the honor that the representative of these three families must hold office in rotation.

The duties which were fulfilled by Lord Ancaster last time at King George's coronation will be performed by Earl Carrington. Lady Ancaster takes a keen interest in politics. Her husband, until his ascent to the upper houes, was Conservative representative of the Horncastle division of Lincolnshire, and she is a member of the Woman's Tariff Reform Association. Interest in politics, however, in no way has weakened her interest in the peculiarly feminine subject of dress; her gowns are not only charming but original. She is an admirable horsewoman and a keen rider to hounds.

Another charming peeress who has gone to England "from America" is the Marchioness of Dufferin and Ava. She is an enthusiastic musician, and only recently came forward on the professional platform, giving several soongs at Mme. Donalda's vocal recital. Lady Dufferin has three little girls, who inherit their mother's musical tastes.

The Countess of Granard, who recently has been one of the royal guests at Windsor for the week-end, also is from America. She was Miss Beatrice Ogden Mills of New York, and married Lord Granard two years ago. He is the master of the horses, and has the reputation of being the best judge of horses in the world. He has a large estate in Ireland, and he and the Countess likely are to do a great deal of entertaining during the forthcoming season at their London residence, to which they have given the name of Forbes house. It was formerly the property of Lord Penrhyn, when it was known as Mortimer house.

Irish peers have a special attraction to the United States. It was to this country that Lord Donoughmore looked for his bride. Lady Donoughmore was one of the three daughters of Michel Grace of New York, all three so charming and graceful that they were named by their friends the "Three Graces." Lady Donoughmore is very fond of golf and other outdoor sports, and is a good rider. She has three children, two boys and a girl.

But the list of American peeresses contains many more distinguished names. The Countess of Craven is a daughter of Mr. Bradley-Martin of New York; Lady Leith of Fyvie is from St. Louis; the Duchess of Roxburghe was a daughter of the late Ogden Goelet, and among the American ladies who may look to see their husbands in the House of Lords in the future, should that institution survive, are numbered Lady Maidstone, sister of Anthony Drexel, Jr., and Lady Acheson, daughter of Ridgeley Carter, United States Minister to Bucharest.

FLANEUR.

WOMAN'S WORK, WOMAN'S CLUBS.

BY ROSE L. ELLERBE.

The number of clubs, societies and organizations, for both men and women, in the city of Los Angeles is bewildering—and somewhat appalling. Apparently everybody who has an idea, or an association, feels that it cannot be properly appreciated until an organization is perfected to exploit it. We have clubs for every conceivable purpose and object, ethical, cultural, social, civic, business or otherwise. We meet morning, noon and night; we have luncheon clubs and dinner clubs. Why hasn't some strenuous party formed a breakfast club to Fletcherize apples on the dewy grass? Even our school children and our Sunday-schools are bulwarked with societies and clubs till a child can't study a lesson or give away a flower without the backing of some kind of an organization. And as for the most of us, a quiet evening with a friend or a book, or the thinking out of a problem by one's self, for one's own satisfaction, is a thing of the hazy past.

Organization, the uniting of interests and efforts for a common purpose, is the keynote of our age; yet the basis of any and of all organization must be the individual. And when a multiplicity of organization throttles the development of the individual unit, the foundation of society begins to get shaky. It may be that we, in Los Angeles, are in danger of undermining, rather than upbuilding, by our exceeding activity in organizing ourselves.

Color Photography.

Stanley McGinnis of Denver showed the ladies of the Friday Morning Club real color photography, reproduced in stereoscopic pictures. Photographs of California scenes and of the Grand Canyon revealed the colors of nature itself—the wonderful atmospheric effects, the shadows and the hazes of our mountains and valleys being shown in their exact tones. Trees, flowers, as the Matilija poppy, California's magnificent floral queen, and glowing nasturtiums; copies of paintings, even the delicate shadings and veinings of a piece of onyx, were shown in their actual colorings.

The secret of Mr. McGinnis's success, attained after long study and experiment, lies in his process of treating the color plates, which has increased its translucence and enabled a reproduction on the screen. The plate may be used in any camera, although a new camera has recently been designed, which the artist believes will revolutionize the art of color photography. As yet, no process of printing from the color plate has been perfected. But $1,000,000 has been offered for the successful process and it is only a question of time when this secret shall be uncovered and color reproduction will become a commercial fact.

The possibilities of a photography which will reproduce nature in all its beauty of coloring can scarcely be realized, as yet; but the women who gazed at the beautiful pictures shown by Mr. McGinnis were enthusiastic in their wonder and admiration.

Mrs. Morris Albee made a plea for a permanent art fund which would enable the club to establish a gallery by purchasing works of art, and thus encourage the growing art spirit of our city.

Westlake Sunshine Society.

The newly-organized branch of the Los Angeles Sunshine Society, known as Westlake branch, held a business session Tuesday afternoon. There was a good attendance, and much enthusiasm was awakened when the needs of a family, consisting of a grandmother of 78 and a girl baby of 2½ years, were disclosed. Clothing, bedding and money were at once promised, and these helpless ones were adopted as the first charge of the new organization. A letter was read from the president-general of the Sunshiners, Mrs. Cynthia Westover Alden, in which she welcomed the new branch to the ranks. Mrs. C. O. Hawley is president of Westlake branch; Mrs. E. B. Crowder, Mrs. R. S. Field and Mrs. A. J. Saunier, vice-presidents; Mrs. John Puliar, recording secretary; Mrs. Paul Ridley, corresponding secretary; Mrs. N. C. Campbell, assistant corresponding secretary; Mrs. Charles McGonegal, treasurer; Mrs. Max Roth, auditor, and Mrs. E. B. Wheeler, parliamentiarian. The society is planning for an elaborate card party to raise funds for its treasury.

Wednesday Morning Club.

Wednesday morning the ladies of this club passed a most interesting hour in the consideration of Act IV of "Henry IV," under the leadership of Mrs. H. E. Brett. A character sketch of Prince Henry was presented by Mrs. F. D. Welcome; Mrs. D. F. Lyttle gave a study of the character of the Earl of Northumberland; Mrs. J. Ivor-Thomas read a paper on Glendower; Mrs. E. B. Pinson dealt with Act III, and Mrs F. A. Christy with the Wives of Henry IV.

An old-fashioned chicken-pie dinner was served and was such an attraction that several men appeared at the tables. The president, Mrs. W. C. Mushet, acted as toastmistress, and responses were made by Rev. E. L. Howe, Mr. H Ivor-Thomas, Mrs. Janes Beattie, president of Highland Park Ebell; Dr Lottie Davidson, Mrs. H. E. Brett and Mrs. R. O. Bachelder. Hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. W. B. Kelley, Mrs. H. H. Curtis, Mrs. J. E. Brown, Mrs. John Kuhns, Mrs. S. T. Pierce, Mrs. J. W. Lylle, Miss Galetia Mushet, Mrs. Charles Waddy, Mrs. O. A. Smith, Mrs. Mary Pech, Mrs. Charles Keyes, Mrs. W. R. Bailey and Mrs. A. J. Ives. In the afternoon, Mrs. Jane Beattie dealt with current events, speaking of Canadian reciprocity and the situation in Mexico.

Mills College Alumnae.

Mills College Alumni Association entertained with a box party at a downtown theater last Monday evening. Those present were Mrs. Waller Taylor, Miss Mary B. Henderson, Mrs. E. H. Noe, Mrs. T. B. McCabe, Miss Myrtie McCabe, Mrs. Mabel Osborne, Mrs. C. H. [illegible]

Mrs. W. H. Peterson, Mrs. George H. Clark, Miss Gavinia Roehrig, Miss Bertha Tombs, Miss Dean Smith, Mrs. M. Kirtland, Mrs. A. W. Rhodes, Mrs. J. T. Walden, Mrs. Milton K. Young, Mrs. Mark Montgomery. At a recent business meeting of the association, held at the home of Mrs. T. B. McCabe, it was voted to invite Dr. Luella Clay Carson, president of Mills College, to visit Los Angeles as the guest of the association in the latter part of April.

Los Angeles Central W.C.T.U.

Central Union will hold its annual election at an all-day meeting in Temperance Temple on Friday, March 17.

Drama Study Club.

A group of women who are earnest students meet every Monday morning at the home of Miss Abbie Morgan, Highland Park, for an hour of discussion upon current topics and for an hour's study of the drama of today. Miss Morgan, who is a student of literature and a teacher of many year's experience and of wide reputation, has led them in their study of modern dramatists during the winter. On Monday, they take up the study of "The Great Divide," a western play which will, perhaps, remain William Vaughn Moody's most important contribution to American literature.

A New Circle.

A parent-teacher association was organized last Wednesday at the intermediate school on Custer street. Mr. Reed, principal of the intermediate school, opened the meeting with an address on the aims of the organization. Mrs. H. C. Terrell was chosen as temporary chairman and Mrs. C. M. Praeger as temporary secretary. A committee was appointed to draw up a constitution and by-laws, and authority to call the next meeting. Twenty of the parents of the intermediate pupils have already become members. The district is a large one and this association is expected to be a valuable auxiliary.

Illinois Social Club.

St. Patrick's Day will be celebrated by the Illinois Social Club on Thursday evening, March 16, at 430 South Hill street. A good Irish programme will be provided by local talent; a "blarney stone" will add to the fun; dancing and cards will follow the grand march. Each succeeding affair given by this enterprising club is better than the preceding, and all attending are promised a good time. Mrs. E. M. Burt is president of this club; Mrs. W. F. Spreen, vice-president; Mrs. N. S. Gray, secretary, and Mrs. Luther Runnels, treasurer. All loyal Illinoisans will receive a hearty welcome to its meetings.

Cliff Dwellers.

This club will hold its next meeting at the residence of Mrs. A. O. D. Miller, No. 1407 Harvard boulevard, next Tuesday afternoon. Miss Crissey of Rampart boulevard will sing several numbers; Charles F. Lummis is expected to give one of his characteristic talks, and a paper on San Luis Rey Mission will be read by Mrs. A. J. Eaton.

Highland Park Ebell.

Highland Park Ebell members will listen to stories told artistically by Miss Frances F. Foote, on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. H. H. Haas will give several vocal solos and Mrs. Hilda Kazinska will render a whistling solo.

Philathea Concert.

The concert which was to have been given by the Philathea Club of the Orchard-avenue Baptist Church, last Monday night at the Ebell Clubhouse, was postponed on account of the weather, till Monday night, March 13. A very interesting programme has been prepared, under the direction of Miss Jessie Weimar. A quartette of young ladies and a woman's chorus will assist. The song cycle, "Hawthorne and Lavender," by Fanny Snow Knowlton, is a poetic number which is most attractive. The Bridal Chorus from "Mikado," in costume, will be presented by Miss Honor Graham, Mrs. Mary Point Reed and Mrs. W. A. Dutton. Readings will be given by Miss Edna Green and Miss Georgia Morton, and Miss Nellie Smith will act as accompanist.

Rosecrans Club.

Rosecrans Club held an interesting session Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. G. B. Dexter, No. 2408 Juliette street. Current events were discussed, Addie E. Johnston leading; Mrs. Florence Grattrix read a paper, "King William and Queen Anne's War;" Marguerite Goodwin, a promising young musician, who is a club favorite, sang a group of old English songs. This club, which has grown from a membership of five to fifty within a year, is working hard for a clubhouse in the northwest section of the city.

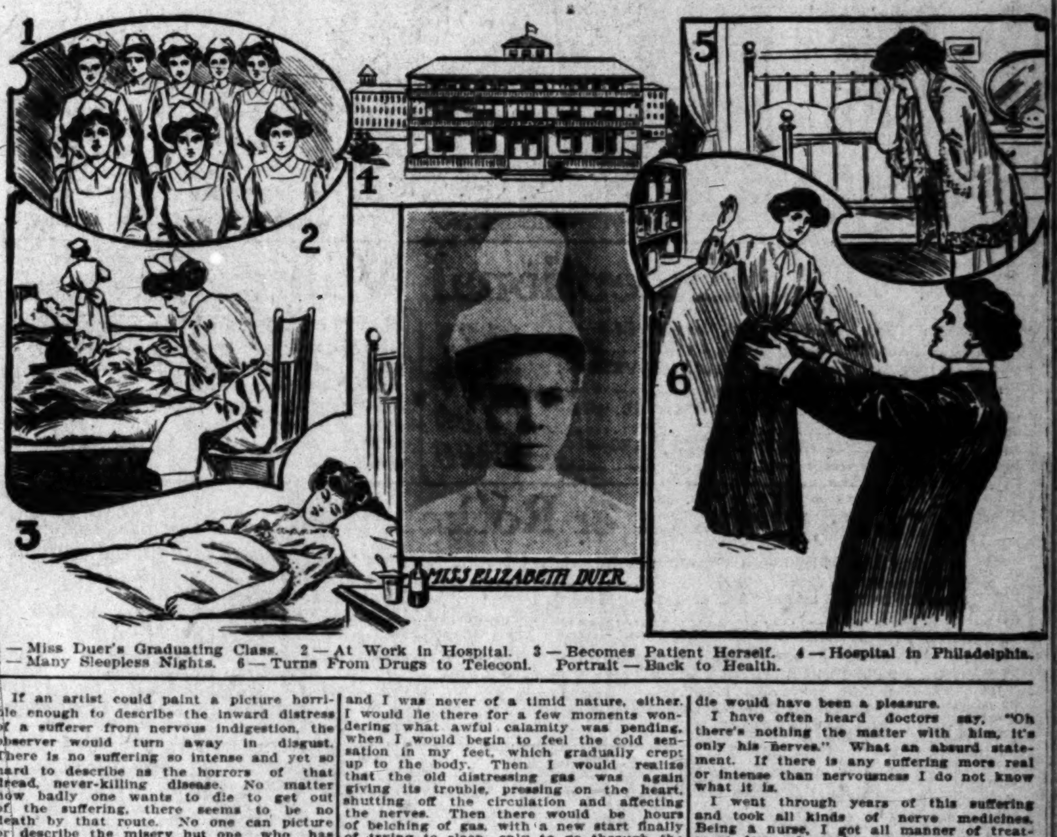
The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Mrs. Dack, No. 208 East Thirtieth street. The "Art of Printing and Bookbinding" will be considered, with a paper on the "First Printing Press," by Mrs. Webb; "The First Newspaper," by Mrs. Hough, and the reading of a poem, "The Modern Printing Press," written by Eliza A. Otis.

They Go Journeying.

On Friday afternoon the members of the Los Angeles Travel Club paid a fascinating visit to the homes of three of Shakespeare's heroines, Juliet, Portia and Desdemona. Under the guidance of Mrs. Harold A. Gilman they traversed the towns where these fair maidens of old are supposed to have dwelt. Then Mrs. Ida Cox read a paper on "The Taming of the Shrew," and followed it by a clever reading and impersonation from the play. The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Mrs. Gilman, No. [illegible]

From the Terrors of Suffering to The Mental Heaven of Health

The Conversion of a Los Angeles Nurse From Medicine to Drugless Method Meant That to Her.



1—Miss Duer's Graduating Class. 2—At Work in Hospital. 3—Becomes Patient Herself. 4—Hospital in Philadelphia. 5—Many Sleepless Nights. 6—Turns From Drugs to Teleconi. Portrait—Back to Health.

If an artist could paint a picture horrible enough to describe the inward distress of a sufferer from nervous indigestion, the observer would turn away in disgust. There is no suffering so intense and yet so hard to describe as the horrors of that dread, never-killing disease. No matter how badly one wants to die to get out of the suffering, there seems to be no death by that route. No one can picture or describe the misery but one who has been through it all. The unreal days and never-ending nights all vie with each other to make it a never-ceasing nightmare.

As I am now well and look back over those years of internal war which racked my nerves, I wonder how I stood it. There was night after night that I walked the floor hour after hour with every minute one of suffering and fear. A person who has never had nervous indigestion cannot have any conception of what it means. There is no pain; in fact, pain would be a relief, for it would give the sufferer a realization of the fact that there was still life in the body. Oftentimes when I would lie down and try to sleep I would no more than get into a doze until I would find myself out in the middle of the floor with a most terrible fear, as if something had happened or was going to happen, and before I could content myself to lie down again I would have to turn on the light, and I was never of a timid nature, either. I would lie there for a few moments wondering what awful calamity was pending, when I would begin to feel the cold sensation in my feet, which gradually crept up to the body. Then I would realize that the old distressing gas was again giving its trouble, pressing on the heart, shutting off the circulation and affecting the nerves. Then there would be hours of belching of gas, with a new start finally of trying to sleep, only to go through the same experience.

If I ate a full meal or simply drank a glass of water, it was all the same. I never for a moment felt natural. Every thing seemed weird and unreal. There were times when the brain and the body seemed to be divided.

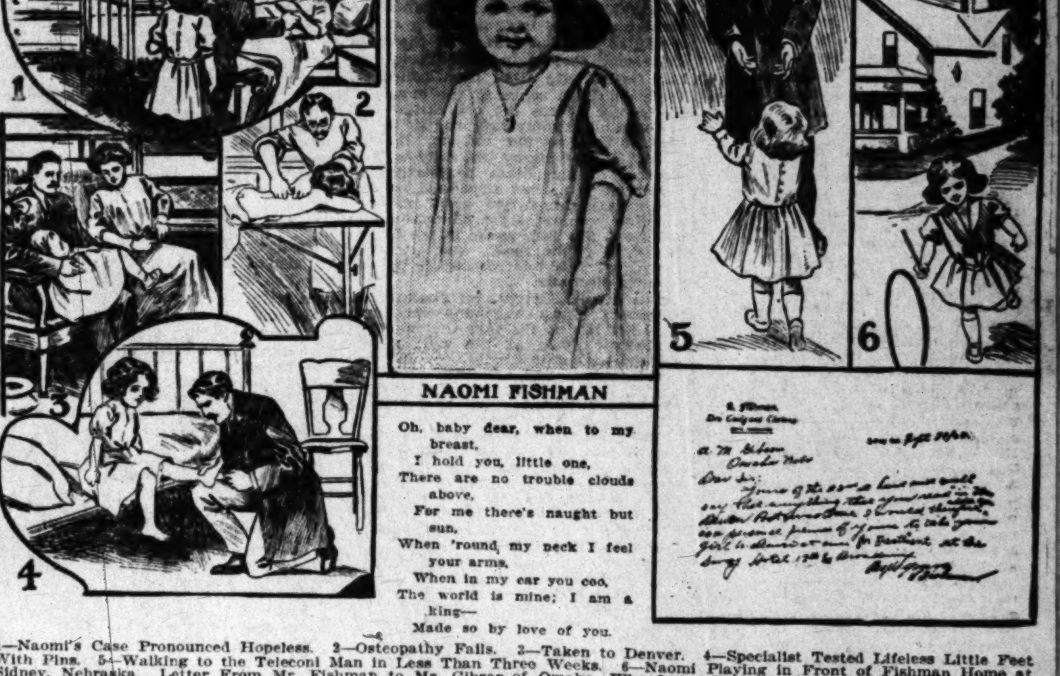
It would seem when I would get up to walk that the limbs were not under control of the brain and it was as though I was walking in the air. When I went down town and mingled with the crowd, everything seemed big, weird and fanciful. It was as though I was not a part of what was going on around me and the people seemed to be creatures of fancy, nothing real, all delusion. Watching this procession would cause me to grow dizzy and faint until I would have to lean against something for support.

Naturally, of course, the torpid condition of my liver would leave me morbid and despondent. To have laid down to die would have been a pleasure.

I have often heard doctors say, "Oh there's nothing the matter with him, it's only his nerves." What an absurd statement. If there is any suffering more real or intense than nervousness I do not know what it is.

I went through years of this suffering and took all kinds of nerve medicines. Being a nurse, I got all manner of treatment free. I staid ethical because, being a graduated nurse, and having nursed for eight years, my education was ethical. But ethics could not make me sleep; ethics could not even take care of a glass of water when it was taken into my stomach, and while my mind remained ethical the gas on my stomach and the nervousness were very unethical but none the less real.

Is it any wonder that I am a convert to the Teleconi drugless method? Is it any wonder that I am trying to get all of my friends interested? For now I can lie down on my bed and sleep like a child. I can sit down and partake of a big meal knowing that my stomach is the master. I can go down town and mingle with the crowds and look into the shop windows and feel that I am a part of the throng. Every day is now a day of gladness and every night a night of pleasure. It is a beautiful thing to be well, and to my dying day my gratitude shall be poured out to Teleconi.



NAOMI FISHMAN

Oh, baby dear, when to my breast,
I hold you, little one,
There are no trouble clouds above,
For me there's naught but sun,
When 'round my neck I feel your arms,
When in my ear you coo,
The world is mine; I am a king—
Made so by love of you.

1—Naomi's Case Pronounced Hopeless. 2—Osteopathy Fails. 3—Taken to Denver. 4—Specialist Tested Lifeless Little Feet With Pins. 5—Walking to the Teleconi Man in Less Than Three Weeks. 6—Naomi Playing in Front of Fishman Home at Sidney, Nebraska. Letter From Mr. Fishman to Mr. Gibson of Omaha, Who Later Had His Little Daughter Ruth Cured of the Same Affliction.

The Story of Naomi Fishman as Told by the Denver Post

From the Very First Teleconi Treatment Her Improvement Was Marvelous

Following is the original telegraph story which appeared in The Post on July 16, 1909, telling of little Naomi's illness and her remarkable cure, which is now complete, but at that time was only partially realized. Since that time Teleconi, which is being introduced under the direction of a licensed physician at the Hotel Rosslyn, in Los Angeles, has added many similar cures to its long list of successes.

Sidney, Neb., July 16.—S. Fishman, the leading merchant of Sidney, has just returned home from Denver with his little daughter, Naomi, and the whole town is talking of the child. Such an astounding case has never been known here.

Naomi, one of the prettiest children in Sidney, was paralysed from the waist down. Her legs were utterly dead so far she would smile, unconscious of pain, and unable to flinch if it had hurt.

Local physicians could do nothing with the case, and even osteopaths were given a trial and could produce no effect.

NOTHING CAN BE DONE, WAS THE VERDICT OF SPECIALIST.

Half frantic, Mr. and Mrs. Fishman took their child to Denver to consult one of the leading specialists in the West. His verdict was stern, relentless, final:

"Absolutely nothing can be done for this child."

The parents were desperate. They have money and were willing it should flow like water to save their little one from a life of helplessness, perhaps a lingering death. But they were told money and skill could not avail.

As a last resort, before accepting the verdict of the specialist and returning home to resign their baby to a lingering death, they sought a consultation at the Savoy Hotel. They had heard stories of others who had been helped after all other means had failed, and were not willing to abandon the quest for health until the last hope was gone.

That was just a trifle more than three weeks ago. Now Mr. and Mrs. Fishman stand; even take a few steps. She is only 21 months old, and had been walking so short a time that she has forgotten how to walk and must learn it all over again.

The joy of the parents is almost beyond belief and they are never tired of telling their friends and showing them how well little Naomi is doing. And everybody in Sidney knows the Fishman family, knows the beautiful little girl, and knows the awful grief of the father and mother when they were told that their baby would never walk again.

STUCK PINS IN HER FEET AND SHE FELT NO PAIN.

"Naomi had no sense of feeling in her legs or any part below her waist," said Mrs. Fishman. "We tested that thoroughly by sticking pins in her feet. Now, after only three weeks of treatment, she moves her legs freely, stands on her feet and has taken a few steps.

The cure is virtually complete, and a return of confidence will have her running about in a short time.

There is not a happier family in Sidney—or in the world—today than the Fishmans, and the house is full of visitors all the time, calling to congratulate the parents and to see for themselves that the beautiful little girl whom they saw so helpless a month ago, and whom they knew had been doomed to a life of helplessness, is growing strong and well.

Teleconi Journal will be mailed free to all parties who send in their address. The Teleconi patients will gladly answer all mail inquiries relative to their own cases when a postage stamp and addressed envelope is inclosed with letter.

Teleconi Man office is at Hotel Rosslyn, Parlor Suite. Callers will look for boy in lobby with a Teleconi cap PERSONAL: Gossip of World's Interesting People.

HEREABOUTS.

"Press agents and advance men are not made, they just happen," soliloquized John F. Harley, in advance of Gertrude Elliott, who arrived in Los Angeles on Friday after having traveled nearly a week from San Francisco. This is the twenty-fifth time Harley has been here and since he isn't such a very old man at present he admitted possibilities of coming another twenty-five times, and at the end of the half-century, of staying here. "I'd hate to have to travel as I did this time from San Francisco," said Harley "starting at 8 o'clock on Monday and arriving here at 10 o'clock on the following Friday after continuous travel is not at all as interesting as it may sound. Washouts in front of us, washouts in back of us and washouts wherever the train happened to be going seemed to be our hoodoo. It was the longest trip I have ever made to get so short a distance." Harley was formerly in the reportorial end of the newspaper business. He just drifted into that and stayed long enough to become one of the ablest men in New York, recognized as one of the star men of the New York Herald. Some theatrical manager showed him what perfect bliss the press agent of a show troupe on the road lived in, and Harley swallowed the bait. As a result he has been beating his shows from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from Canada to Mexico, and has even had a London season thrown in. During all this time on the road, quarter of a century, Harley has been in advance of practically every star of consequence that has landed on the Pacific side of the Rocky Mountains. There is continual change in the business, new methods and new manners and so this life of continual travel is not half as bad as it might be, philosophized Harley.

Volney T. Hoggatt is in town. For hundreds of mining men, men about town and some others, this means that one of the characters of the West, who came originally from the South, is shadowing the horizon with his all-pervading atmosphere of cheer. Hoggatt struck it rich in Nevada in the early days of Goldfield. He came into a great amount of money, and then he came into Los Angeles. He lived mostly at the Alexandria, sometimes going to San Francisco, to Coronado, or other places, for a change. He was missed as soon as he left and when he disappeared for an extended period there was mourning in the hearts of many good friends. For Hoggatt is a human laugh-generator. He stands almost seven feet in his shoes and has a smile as wide as his face. The long line of southern ancestors has inbred in him a spirit of unresisting cordiality, and despite multitudinous faults of minor kind, everyone is able to forget for a smile from Hoggatt.

The past ninety days has seen the invention of a bottle that is expected to revolutionize the milk business, at least the manner in which it is dispensed, according to S. P. Weston, an official of the Washington Sanitary Bottle Company of Seattle, who is staying at the Van Nuys. The new container is a waxed bottle which will hold fluid for an indefinite period before leakage is possible. "This invention was not entirely new in the ninety days' time, but the machinery for making the bottle so it could be used commercially was only discovered in that time," said Weston. "Under the making it feasible for use in every dairy. It is clean, sanitary and in time will do away with the glass containers which are anything but health promoters."

ACTIVE WOMEN.

Mrs. C. Miligan Fox, of Ireland, has made a study of Irish folk-song and is trying to found a branch of the Irish Folk-song Society in New York. She has for a long time been collecting these old Irish songs in the homes of the people where the old father and mother and friendly neighbor sit in the light of the peat fire and sing them.

Mrs. Mary Bellamy, the only woman member of the State Legislature of Wyoming, has been appointed on the Credentials Committee and on the standing committee for education and libraries. She first spoke in the Legislature on public roads, and later delivered a longer address on the bill for primary elections.

Miss Jessie Shieves, an operator in Richmond (Ind.) telephone exchange, owes her life to the fact that she left a receiver down at the switchboard while she went to kindle the office fire with coal oil. The resultant explosion was heard by a man who was using a telephone a block away. He arrived in time to save her life.

Mrs. Cornelia Templeton Jewett has been put in full charge of the publicity bureau of the National Council of Woman Voters. Mrs. Emma Smith de Voe was elected delegate to represent the National Council at the coming meeting of the International Woman Suffrage Alliance in Stockholm.

Girls in colleges have taken to writing plays as well as men within the last year. Miss Florence A. Lincoln won the John Craig prize for the "End of the Bridge," to be staged shortly, and Miss Sydney Thomson and Miss Gabrielle Elliott have written a play at Wellesley, for which the Dramatic Association gave a prize, that will be produced this month.

Miss Beatrice H. Gross, president of the Science Club of Normal College, New York, is at the head of the movement to establish a scholarship fund which will give the science students an opportunity for study at the Marine Biological Laboratory at Woods Hole, Mass. The fund is to be a memorial to Miss Elsie Seringhaus, late instructor at Normal College and student at Woods Hole.

OVER THE SEA.

When Queen Mary is seated on her throne in Westminster Abbey at the coming coronation in London, Queen Alexandra will also have a throne upon which she will be seated. This is very unusual, but it is said that the people could not bear that their beloved Queen should not have as honored a place as the present Queen. Queen Mary will sit on the right of the King and his mother on the left.

For rescuing ninety-three persons from the yacht Atmah, including Baron Edmond de Rothschild and Baroness Rothschild, Capt. Daniel Williams and the crew of the tramp steamer Silver Wings were rewarded with diamond jewelry valued at more than $50,000 and a purse of $3000 in gold.

The Earl of Percy, aide-de-camp to Earl Grey, Governor-General of Canada, member of a noted English family, and for years a member of the British Parliament, recently walked the railroad ties from Montreal to Ottawa on a wager made in Montreal. He covered the 111½ miles in three days, at the rate of thirty-seven miles way track. The Earl was lightly attired, scorning to wear an overcoat. To add to his difficulties a complication occurred at Plantagenet, one of the places where warm clothing and fresh boots had been left for him. The men in whose charge the articles had been placed declined to believe that the rough-looking person who applied for the new clothing was a real earl and refused to give up the articles of apparel. Undaunted, the nobleman shrugged his shoulders and once more hit the ties. According to the terms of the wager, the Earl was to arrive at Ottawa in time for the Paardeburg dinner at Rideau Hall, and when the diners sat down he was there. He said he thoroughly enjoyed the experience despite the almost arctic temperature and the cutting wind.

CRANKS.

Prof. Fred L. Charles of the University of Illinois is a crank on the question of cats. He is touring Illinois with the Farmers' Trolley Institute, and at each address he makes he condemns cats and would substitute some other than the feline method for disposing of rats and mice. He prefers coons as pets to cats.

J. W. Euck of Akron, Pa., attends three different Sunday-schools every Sunday in the year. Last year he attended 156 times. As the schools of the three churches are held at different hours he is enabled to attend them all.

After he had received a request to resign, signed by two-thirds of the members of his company, Capt. George B. McClellan Phillips of Company C, First Regiment, N.G.P., of Philadelphia, lined up his men in the armory and discharged all but three of them. His action is absolutely unprecedented in National Guard history.

George E. Allen of Sanford, Me., has kept a diary for thirty-six years, thus beating the record of Charles J. Gregory of Glencove by four years. Mr. Allen began his thirty-seventh this year.

Daniel L. Bowman of Litiz, Pa., has attended the Sunday-school of the United Evangelical Church for thirty-four years without missing a session.

SEPARATED—UNITED.

Among the strange reunions noted lately is that of Charles T. Markham, president of the Illinois Central Railroad, and John T. Markham, a bricklayer and plasterer at Hopkinsville, Ky., who have recently discovered each other after a separation caused by the Civil War, nearly fifty years ago. John served in the Confederate army, and when he later tried to find his mother and her family was unable to do so because of their removal to a new locality, and from that time till his memory was jogged by noticing the similarity between the name of the new railroad president and his lost brother he never heard from the family. By a long-distance telephone conversation with his brother, Charles, he settled the question of identity, and measures were inaugurated for a reunion.

After disappearing twenty-two years ago and believed dead by his family, John Reed, aged 72, was reunited recently to his wife and three children in Daingerfield, Tex. He has returned to find seventeen grandchildren. Reed's children accidentally got a clew that the father was living in Arkansas. They invited him to return and he did so.

After a separation of forty years, two brothers, George Carpenter, a wealthy tea plantation owner of Assam, Indo-broker, of Little Falls, N. J., were reunited in New York recently.

ACTIVE OLD PEOPLE.

Joseph Tuffree of Marshalltown, Iowa, is one of the most unique characters of that State. He has recently celebrated the 101st anniversary of his birth, and is still in the real estate business visiting his downtown office every day, and attending to all kinds of business matters. For exercise he believes in the bucksaw, and says that if more young men of today sawed more wood and used less tobacco they would stand a better chance of living as long as he has. His oldest son is 72 years of age.

Mrs. Anna Speed of Heighington, near Lincoln, England, who has just celebrated her 101st birthday anniversary, travels by train to Lincoln market every week, where she disposes of a basket of eggs.

Capt. Hiram Smith of Brooklyn, who is 70 years old, bowled in a friendly match recently what is believed to be the second highest single string and three-string total at bottle pins ever rolled in that city. His total for the three consecutive strings was 724, the single strings being 224, 211 and 289.

Polly Ann Weed of Evansville, Ind., aged 70, and wealthy, has just married her ninth husband, Harrison Strodes, aged 69 years. She was married when a young woman to James Weed, and with each recurring death or divorce has retaken his name. The first marriage took place fifty-two years ago. Weed died, as did the three following husbands, two by suicide. Four others she divorced.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

For having threatened to prefer charges against his commanding officer, Second Lieut. Bruce Campbell, Second Infantry, stationed at Fort Assiniboine, Mont., has been fined $300 by a court-martial and sentenced to be confined within the limits of his post for six months. The charge against Lieut. Campbell was that he went to the quarters of Lieut.-Col. James A. Maney and said, in effect, that if a certain other officer of the regiment was brought before a court-martial, he would prefer charges against Maney and Lieut. Bowman. Lieut.-Col. Maney, it is said, warned Campbell that he was injuring the cause of his friend, but Campbell repeated his threat. Maney then brought charges against Campbell. Campbell pleaded not guilty, but the court-martial found him guilty.

Lieut.-Col. Joseph T. Clarke, Medical Corps, has been assigned to temporary duty at the Department of the Columbia headquarters, at Vancouver, relieving Col. Rudolph G. Ebert, who has been transferred to San Francisco. Lieut.-Col. Clarke has assumed his new duties. Col. Ebert left for California last night.

Senator Gallinger is to be given a banquet by the citizens of the city of Washington on the 28th inst., when he will have reached the age of 74 years. The event is a testimonial of his faithful work as a member of the Committee on the District of Columbia for twenty years. A committee of 100 business men of Washington have the banquet in charge.

Joseph H. Choate, formerly Ambassador to the Court of St. James, is one of the eminent Americans who do not believe in the maxim "Procrastination is the thief of time." Frequently when Mr. Choate is absent from town his mail accumulates at his office. It is seldom forwarded to him. On his return the letters piled up before him are opened, while Mr. Choate, a capacious waste basket between his knees, reads the letters as they are handed to him. Some of them are weeks old. Some of them he destroys with the comment, "Time has answered that," and so on through the great mass of mail. Mr. Choate constantly repeats this phrase, "Time has answered that." Only the most important letters receive an answer from Mr. Choate.

Charles Martin Hall was a student at Oberlin College in 1885, and aluminum at that time was $12 a pound. The young student believed the metal could be produced more cheaply, and take the place of copper, tin and zinc. His study and practical experiments occupied five months and ended in victory. He secured a patent on his process and established a factory. The first output sold at $2 a pound; now it is put on the market at 22 cents. Mr. Martin has his largest works at Niagara Falls, where he was the first to utilize the electricity offered from the big power houses. A few days ago the American Electrochemical Society gave Mr. Martin its medal for his work in developing aluminum.

Col. George B. McClellan, formerly Mayor of New York, is to pass most of the next eight months in Italy. There he is to write a number of lectures on political economy and political science which he is to deliver next winter at Princeton University, of which he is an alumnus and Stafford Little lecturer. By that time also it is expected the chair of a professorship will be ready for Col. McClellan. Already most of the funds necessary for the endowment of such a professorship have been provided.

Mystery of Hypnotism.

The statement by certain scientists that the power of the hypnotist does not extend to the control of the moral judgment of the "subject" is contradicted in the following anecdote by Dr. George F. Laidlaw in the Metropolitan Magazine: "A more striking proof of the absolute irresponsibility of the mesmerized subject occured at a demonstration I gave before the New York Medical-Legal Society. Though this was long ago, I never think of it without a sense of fear for what might have happened, and thankfulness for the fortunate issue. Having placed one subject in a sound sleep on a chair, I told another subject that this sleeping man was his enemy and had injured him, at the same time giving him a pasteboard dagger. I think that those who saw the subsequent events did not soon forget the stealthy, cat-like manner with which the second subject stole behind his sleeping victim and stabbed him in the back. Then, to my surprise, he grasped the victim by the throat and threw him to the floor apparently trying to choke him to death. This movement was so sudden, unexpected and violent that it was a few moments before I succeeded in making the second man release his hold. I was careful to put the victim back comfortably in his chair before waking him up. He knew nothing of what had happened and seemed none the worse for his adventure."

Advice on Stony Soil.

One of those fond parents who persist in giving advice to their growing sons, lectured his boy the other night on the sin of extravagance, says the Philadelphia Times.

"My boy, you must save your pennies and, you know, the dollars will take care of themselves. Everything in life is made up of the little things. You remember the old verse, 'Little drops of water?' "

"Yes, yes, father, I know. I re-last white chip," said the son, emphaticlly, "that if some one had to stop to count and accumulate the little drops of water there wouldn't be any great big ocean."

France Decorates Dogs.

In France the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals decorates dogs that have distinguished themselves by deeds of bravery with a collar, tastefully signed "Collar of Honor."

Among the animals decorated in this way one of the most celebrated is Bacchus, a large bulldog, whose specialty is to stop runaway horses by jumping up and seizing them by the GREATEST ENGINEERING FEAT IN PROGRESS OF MONSTER ENTERPRISE.

Second Longest Water Tunnel in United States, and How it Was Pushed Through by Los Angeles Aqueduct Army.

THE ELIZABETH TUNNEL is the excavation through the crest of the Coast Range by which the Los Angeles aqueduct will pour the waters of the Owens River down through the San Fernando Valley on to the coastal plain.

The tunnel is 26,360 feet long, making it the second longest water tunnel in the United States. The Gunnison on the United States government reclamation project which provides for the irrigation of the Uncompahgre Valley with water from the Gunnison River stands first with a length of 30,000 feet and was opened about a year ago.

The south portal of the Elizabeth tunnel lies about sixty-seven miles north and west of Los Angeles. The north portal lies two miles south of the town of Fairmont in the Antelope Valley.

The scheme of the aqueduct provides for the storage of water in a reservoir called the Fairmont at the north mouth of the tunnel and nestled in the foothills of the northern slope of the Coast Range. This reservoir, which is built as a regulating basin, will empty into the tunnel by means of hydraulic gates.

SAN FERNANDO RESERVOIRS.

On the south side of the mountain range, the tunnel opens into Bear Canyon, which is an arm of the San Francisquito Canyon, along the rim of which the water will be carried in conduit, tunnel and flumes to be dropped at three different points a total distance of 1500 feet, for the development of power before coming to rest in the San Fernando reservoirs about forty-seven miles from the mouth of the Elizabeth tunnel.

The survey of the tunnel was made in 1906-07 by Assistant Engineer C. H. Richards and party and the final location was only established after exhaustive preliminary studies. By placing the tunnel at its present location a long detour of more than twenty miles around by Acton and the building of two long tunnels was avoided.

When concreted up the tunnel will be nine feet six inches wide by ten feet ten inches high and is designed to carry 1000 second feet of water. The grade is one foot in every 1000 feet so that the inlet is 26.36 feet higher than the outlet. The elevation of the tunnel above sealevel is approximately 2950 feet. The crest of the range at this point is about 4200 feet. One of the features of the project is that the tunnel lies directly under Hughes Lake, a small sheet of water which lies cradled in the Elizabeth Lake Valley, 250 feet above the roof of the tunnel.

The Elizabeth tunnel is the greatest single feature of the aqueduct project and its "opening up" marks an epoch in the history of the enterprise.

THE TIME RECORD.

In 1906 a Consulting Board of Engineers, composed of John R. Freeman, Frederic P. Stearns and James D. Schuyler, in their report on the feasibility of the project, gave it as their opinion that five years would be as little time as could be prudently reckoned for the completion of the tunnel. To accomplish the task within this time, because they looked upon the Elizabeth tunnel as the keynote to the construction of the aqueduct, they suggested that a shaft be sunk in the Elizabeth Lake Valley at about the middle point of the tunnel and two additional headings be started from words was that it would require 1680 working days with an average daily rate of sixteen feet, and their estimate of cost was $75.33 per foot.

The tunnel has been excavated in 1239 days, counting from the time that the first spadeful of earth was thrown on the south portal, October 5, 1907. None of the concreting has been done, the rapidity with which the excavation has been done justifying holding this off until the tunnel was bored so that concrete men should not be in the way of the miners, and vice versa. It is estimated that this will require from eight to ten months. The excavation has been done at a cost of about $50 per foot. The concrete can be placed, according to the chief engineer, at from $9 to $10 per foot, making a total of $15.33 per foot under the estimate, or a total saving of $411,800. The total cost of the tunnel at $60 per foot would be $1,611,600. The excavation has been accomplished approximately a year ahead of the time in which it was believed the work could be done.

Two causes are responsible for this —first and foremost, the efficiency of the men. The total average speed, instead of sixteen feet as estimated, has been twenty-one feet per day. For the first seven months the rate of progress was very slow indeed, for the reason that, as soon as the bond election of June, 1907, assured the financial success of the project, it was then necessary to order equipment from the East and, until this arrived and was erected, the inadequate machinery at hand made speed impossible.

THE MEN IN CHARGE.

personal supervision of two tunnel superintendents—W. C. Aston, at the south portal, and John Gray, at the north portal. It is to these two men that unstinted praise is due for the rapid progress that has been made.

Aston is a mining engineer and a graduate of the Ohio State University. For thirteen years he was engaged in mining in the San Juan country, Colorado, where he gained prominence in the mining world by his engineering ability in driving the Joker tunnel, which drains seven miles lying in the vicinity of Ouray and Silverton. He came to the aqueduct to accept the superintendency of the south portal in the early part of 1908.

John Gray, superintendent at the north portal, is a native of Pennsylvania and for years mined in Arizona. He has been with the aqueduct practically since the first construction work was done on the enterprise and has the honor of having opened up both the north and south portals of the Elizabeth tunnel.

Gray is a man of wonderful pluck and courage that knows of no defeat, and carries with these attributes a thorough knowledge of mining, which has come to him through years of experience. Like Aston, he has never asked a man to go where he feared to trust himself because of danger. A few weeks ago when a pocket of water was struck in the north portal he remained with his men for two days and two nights, having his meals sent into him and catching moments of sleep as best he could while standing.

The bonus system—a plan by which the men were paid for additional effort—resulted in this, that the men were better paid and the city was better rewarded. Wages to miners with the bonus included often ran as high as $150 per month, while the fact that the Elizabeth tunnel has been opened up at this time makes possible the use of Owens River water nearly a year sooner than it was promised, with large returns from both the sales of water and power.

BEST MACHINERY.

Added to these two causes there must be taken into consideration the fact that the most improved machinery known to the engineering world was placed at the disposal of the men. They worked with Leyner drills driven by compressed air. All the muck was carried out of the tunnel by electric trains. Power lines were run up from the Edison company's wires at Castiac and electrical energy was used at almost every point where power and lighting were required.

Effort was made to protect the men from danger in every way and no expense was spared. While, as in all great engineering projects where large quantities of high explosives are used and the work is of an extra hazardous nature, the boring of the tunnel has taken its toll of life

BUILDERS FOOL WEATHER MAN.

House Planning Goes Ahead in Spite of Rain.

Carpenters Don Life Preservers, Peg Away.

Spring Tourists Will Witness Great Activity.

The present activities of the builders of homes in this city are shattering all traditions about rainy weather dullness in construction circles. February witnessed an expenditure of close to $1,000,000 in new houses and March promises to be fully as noteworthy in this regard. This spring's tourists will see an unprecedented animation in all the residence districts.

Architects generally report that clients are going ahead with house plans just as though the weather conditions were ideal for the men who wield the hammer and saw. "It takes more than a little rain," they say, "to halt building in Los Angeles."

Among the residence projects now on the boards of the local pen and square men the following have recently been made public:

Architect F. M. Tyler is preparing plans for a two-story, ten-room frame residence to be erected at Fifth street and Kenmore avenue, for E. J. McConnell. The house will be of rustic exterior. Work has just been commenced upon a two-story, eleven-room house on St. Andrew's Place near Sixth street, designed by the same architect for S. W. Belden.

A. S. Heineman is preparing plans for a two-story, ten-room patio bungalow, to be built at Oak Knoll for W. B. Ross; a seven-room bungalow to be built at Tropico for B. W. Richardson, and a seven-room bungalow to be built in Wilton Place for Miss J. Augusta Senter. Contracts have been awarded for a seven-room bungalow in the Wilshire district for W. S. Heineman and for a nine-room residence to be erected at Vine and Rose streets for Dr. F. A. Seymour, both of which structures were designed by Mr. Heineman.

The Architectural Designing Company has finished plans for a Japanese bungalow to be built by Mrs. Gus Hanson at Santa Ana; a seven-room bungalow to be built by E. I. Higgins on West Forty-third street and a seven-room house to be erected by W. Bushard in East Los Angeles.

T. R. Griffith has completed plans and the contract has been awarded for a large residence and garage to be built by Mrs. L. T. Beggs at No. 523 Westmoreland avenue.

Dennis & Farwell have prepared revised plans for a three-story and basement, thirteen-room hollow tile residence to be built at the head of La Brea avenue, Hollywood, for A. Atkinson. The structure will cost between $15,000 and $20,000.

Jakob Smith has prepared plans and will build a two-story and attic, eleven-room residence on Shatto place for R. H. Murphy. The exterior of the house will be of brick and plaster and its cost close to $17,500.

E. C. Kent is taking bids for a two-story attic and basement reinforced concrete residence to be constructed

POOLS EXIST IN OIL FIELDS.

This Is True in California as Other States.

Where Oil Is Indicated the Prospector Is Found.

Tracing the Districts From North to South.

The history of oil development in California has not been different from that in other States of the Union, according to well-known authorities. The existence of pools is indicated in all the proven areas. These extend for certain distances when the oil-bearing strata become extinct, only to reappear many miles away.

The Sunset, Midway and McKittrick fields, while apparently almost grouped together, are separated by many miles and efforts to locate the connecting oil sands have been in vain. From Coalinga down through the Devil's Den to the southeastern limits of the Sunset field, a distance of 120 miles, indications at one time pointed to almost continuous oil-bearing strata, but later developments have knocked the theory in the head. Strenuous efforts are now being made to discover oil in the Antelope Valley (Devil's Den,) Elk Hills and Lost Hills, and in the latter has been attended with some success, but there are indications that a large portion of this territory will have to be passed up as worthless.

Some fifty miles northwest of Coalinga, in San Benito county, it is claimed there is a good oil field awaiting development, for oil has been found in sufficient quantities to justify work, although lack of transportation facilities has prevented extensive work.

Down the coast line the Arroyo Grande, in San Luis Obispo county, shows evidence of developing into a future good field, and further south, in Santa Barbara county, Casmalia, Los Alamos and Cat Canyon (the Santa Maria field,) will furnish great quantities of oil for many years to come.

Ten miles further south is the Summerland field, where the derricks rear their heads up out of the sea. The production here is only about 6000 barrels a month, and no new work is being done, as it is not considered worth while. Next in line is the Ventura fields taking in a half dozen pools, known as the Santa Paula district. The output of this field is slowly increasing and more new work is being done.

In Los Angeles county the first field is Newhall, one of the oldest pools in the State. New work is constantly going on in this field, and the production holds up remarkably well. From Newhall down the San Fernando Valley there is another break of thirty miles, where the Los Angeles City and Sherman (Salt Lake) fields are encountered. It is believed that these fields have reached the limit of their productiveness, although the decline amounts to almost nothing.

Promise of future increase is noted in the Whittier district, and through the Puente hills into Fullerton, Orange county, various pools are encountered. These fields have not been fully developed as yet, but they are productive and among the most stable in the entire State.

While practically every portion of the State where there are any oil indications have been prospected, the old proven fields have not been exhausted by any means, and most of them are capable of a much bigger production than at present. This will come with an extension of the market for oil.

LOST HILLS DISTRICT.

ENGINEER POLLAK TALKS.

A. J. Pollak, who is known up and down the State as a petroleum engineer, holds a constitutional prejudice against misstatements regarding any phase of the oil industry. When he sees that a certain well has a certain production, and it is not stipulated whether the latter is daily or monthly, and the exact location is not given, he writhes in mental agony.

Mr. Pollak, who will shortly go to the Tampico district of Mexico to examine oil lands for a San Francisco syndicate, is thoroughly familiar with all the California fields. Especially is this true of the Lost Hills where he has spent much time. In speaking of the Lost Hills to The Times Pollak said:

"Concerning the destiny of the field, I believe that the structural and geologic conditions are as good in the Lost Hills as in any other oil district in California, favoring the accumulation of petroleum. Furthermore, if the wells now producing in this field obtain their product from the Vaqueros sandstone, they will prove up an enormous area, by reason of which the Lost Hills will become a field which, in my opinion, will surpass any other California field as an investment proposition.

"If, however, this oil is not obtained from the Vaqueros sandstone, but from an upper horizon, which remains to be determined by the drill, the yield of the wells would not be as great, or their life as prolonged."

GUARANTY PIPE LINE.

The Guaranty Pipe Line Company has given out specifications for the necessary pumping machinery, boilers and pipe for the first fifty-five miles of its line, and a number of firms are preparing to put in bids on the contract Several banking concerns of Pittsburgh are taking large quantities of the pipeline bonds, and are trying to secure the bulk of the orders for concerns in which they are interested.

Herr Schnabel of Vienna has completed his investigation of the Midway district, but was unable to reach Coalinga on account of the washout. His report to his European associates on the conditions in the field is gratifying to the Guaranty management.

The well of the Guaranty's California King property is down 1200 feet. It is to be put in charge of an expert driller who understands the handling of conditions peculiar to that section.

RAY'S CONCENTRATOR.

WILL BE READY SOON.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) March 10.—March 15 is to see the starting of the first unit of the Ray Consolidated Copper Company's concentrator at Hayden. General Manager D. C. Jackling has just returned from a hurried visit to the mine and tells that machinery delays rate of 1000 tons a day and about 30,000 tons will be in the bins by the time the plant starts. About 1500 men are employed by the company, one-third of them at Hayden.

Up-to-date equipment has been ordered by the Magma Copper Company, which lately made a phenomenal strike of copper silver ore on the 650 level of the famous old Silver Queen property at Superior. The machinery embraces boilers, hoisting engines, a large air compressor and machine drills. The necessary buildings for offices and for accommodations for employees are now being erected. The strike on the Magma has caused the location of much good-looking ground in the same vicinity and renewed interest is being taken in the district in which old timers have always felt the greatest confidence.

One hundred tons of ore a day are now being run through the twenty-stamp mill of the Vulture Company in northwestern Maricopa county. The company's new main shaft is now 260 feet deep and is being pushed to greater depth. The pay roll has 120 names. The new owners are working the property outside of the lines of its old development, which was abandoned when the mine seemingly played out after a yield of millions of dollars in gold.

In Riverside county, California, a short distance from Calzona, Bradley and Morgan have exposed an eight-foot vein of ore averaging $80 a ton in the face of an open cut. One foot of the ore chute assays 50 per cent. copper and at another point on the same vein, the ore averages 28 per cent. copper, with gold value of $20 a ton.

M. L. REQUA'S OIL ADDRESS.

HE TELLS OF ITS FUTURE.

Recently M. L. Requa of San Francisco delivered an address before the mining association of the University of California on the oil industry of the State. After going into details regarding the past growth of production, Mr. Requa said:

"It is not possible that this increase can continue in any such ratio over any long period. The near-by markets are now amply supplied, and to increase consumption, beyond the natural yearly growth due to increased population, we must seek more distant markets with, incidentally, greatly added capital required to supply transportation facilities. There is reason to believe that California can find a market for 80,000,000 barrels annually within two years and 100,000,000 barrels within five years. Beyond this, it is at present hard to say, but, personally, I believe 100,000,000 barrels may be the ultimate high-water mark, and it is quite possible in the event of natural gas being piped throughout the State, that the annual consumption will be somewhat less.

"In view of the large investment required in pipe lines, ships, tank cars and distributing stations, and the vital bearing the industry has on the prosperity of the State, it is interesting to theorize upon the probable productive life in years of the oil lands of the State.

"W. W. Orcutt, geologist of the Union Oil Company, has estimated that from actually known sources the State can output 75,000,000 barrels per annum for a period of fifty years. This totals 3,750,000,000 barrels, and Orcutt has pointed out that this estimate is confined to territory regarding which there is little doubt; in fact, it comprises largely the proved areas of the State from which production is already being derived."

Is Getting Into Shape.

The North American Petroleum Company is doing assessment work and developing water for drilling purposes. Its camp is located on the largest dome in the Barstow field, and is far enough away from the syncline to be free from all danger of water. The first well is to be drilled in the apex of the dome, where gas pressure must be greatest, and cheap fuel will be assured as soon as the pay sand is tapped. The adjoining Kramer Consolidated has successfully cemented off the water at 2400 feet. It is working day shift only, and the first time the bailer comes up in the morning it is three-fourths full of paraffine oil that Salathe's analysis shows to be better than forty degrees Baume.

Inspecting Midway Properties.

J. E. Levi and a party of Atlanta Oil Company directors will leave for the Midway field today to inspect several properties there. The company intends to increase the number of its holdings, and it is possible that it may obtain considerable acreage in the Midway as the result of the trip. Torrents of rain in the Sulphur Mountain district have prevented spudding in its well there. Had the weather remained fair the well would have been several hundred feet deep by this time.

Well in See Canyon.

The Venice and Kern Realty and Oil Company is making steady progress in developing its San Luis Obispo property, and expects to strike the main pay sand within 300 feet of its present drilling at a little more than 2900 feet. The well is located in See Canyon, where the formation is the same as in the Santa Maria field. The seepages, however, ooze a lighter oil than is found in the latter district. The bailer is bringing up more and more oil of fairly light quality.

Mystery of the Sea.

Marine mammals, warm blooded, air breathing, giving birth to living young, the seals and whales, the latter never leaving the ocean, have no apparent resource of fresh water, which is absolutely necessary to them, except by absorption, osmosis through their skin and blubber. This skin and blubber, the latter the inner skin, extraordinarily thick elastic, and soft, doubtless imbibe the fresh water from the salt ocean, excluding the salt, much helped by the pressure of the great depths of their sounding.

Had they an extra stomach into which they conveyed sea water by the action of a special secretion precipitating the salt, leaving the water fresh, that would be another way. It is improbable.

In descending and ascending those ocean depths they must swim obliquely down, to make it easy for them, as their bodies with the air in the lungs necessary to life in their soundings are lighter than the water. The whale also has considerable arterial blood in reserve, however, by a great development of his arteries. Thus it seems as if the skin and blubber of the whale select, as animal membrances do in their instances, the water from the ocean brime, by the law of osmosis.

These animals must have this fresh water in great abundance according to their size, or the functions of digestion and excretion would be as impossible as in ourselves. And, again, the flesh and substance of these swimmers has no more saltness than that of land animals.

In a somewhat extensive examination of encyclopedias and books of natural history no reference has been found to this apparent absence of water drinking and noningestion of water by the sea monsters. The proper absorption of pure water by seals is more difficult of explanation, owing to their thick fur and the oily exudation upon the surface of the skin.

Is seems to have been generally or usually overlooked by naturalists and writers on animal life. I have seen it on record that sailors cast away in open boats without water swim a while

EL MONTE, THE LAND OF FREE WATER.

BY HARRY F. BOWLING.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA has many beauty spots, all of them unique; for fruit, flowers and recreation there is on the face of the globe but one Hollywood, one Pasadena, one Santa Monica, one San Gabriel Canyon; so for milk, butter, vegetables, apples and nuts, El Monte stands alone. When Dame Nature established her huge household in the sunny Southland, she arranged carefully for every possible need of her future family. Los Angeles was the great central hall, Pasadena was the drawing-room for receiving her guests, Hollywood was a luxuriant conservatory, the foothill towns were patios for pleasure and profit, Long Beach was a magnificent bathroom, Cucamonga was the wine cellar, and El Monte the larder and granary.

Very few city people are aware to how great an extent the people of Los Angeles are dependent on the agricultural lands of the El Monte Valley for daily luxuries and necessities. If this valley were suddenly to be converted into a Nevada desert, many infants would be stinted in their daily milk, many hot waffles would go butterless, many vegetable dishes would accumulate dust on pantry shelves, the potato kings would have fewer spuds to corner, and the price of walnuts would take a big jump in every eastern city. Of course such a calamity is impossible, for El Monte not only has thousands of acres of rich and inexhaustible soil, but also an underlying ocean of pure and inexhaustible water. Nature and man have so contrived that the larder of Los Angeles can never be found empty. Mother Hubbard's dog will never lack a bone or the cupboard be bare.

Let us investigate some of the sources of this supply. The Raab Creamery Company supplies the greater part of Pasadena and runs an important milk route in Los Angeles. This one concern pays to the farmers of El Monte nearly a quarter million of dollars annually. The Robbins Dairy also does a large and ever-increasing business; in the region em- milk cows to the acre than in any other equally extensive area on the whole Pacific Coast; in proportion to the size of buildings, the El Monte Bank handles more money than any other bank in the country. Carloads of vegetables are shipped from the El Monte peatlands every month in the year; enough potatoes are grown between Basset and Savannah to prevent any cornering of the market, did the farmers but combine and become their own distributors. Six hundred dollars worth of cabbages have been raised on one acre; indeed, the bulk of the cauliflower, cabbage and lettuce for the Los Angeles market comes from El Monte.

But as the center of the San Gabriel Valley and the heart of the English walnut industry El Monte has won her greatest laurels. Nowhere else are the conditions so perfect for growing this profitable crop. The walnut blight is unknown among the El Monte orchards. The quality of the silt and the perennial moisture in the lower stratas of the subsoil produces too healthy a growth for any disease to fasten on. The oldest walnut orchards in the State, planted fifty years ago—fifty feet apart—near the east fork of the river, today are one of the show features of Southern California; a forest of giant trees always loaded with nuts every fall, and forming in summer a solid bower of shade beneath their interlacing branches. The walnut crop brings in on an average about half a million dollars annually to the modest little town of El Monte.

Nor is the town without historical interest. It was the first American settlement established on the soil of the old Mexican dominion. In the fall of 1849, after a pilgrimage over endless miles of dreary desert and rugged mountain, a company of desperate gold seekers dropped into this beautiful fertile valley, green and fresh as the old homestead left far away beyond the forbidding Rockies. So entranced were they with the vision of this delightful haven that not even the golden streams of Merced or Sacramento could tempt the fortune-hunters to further roaming. Here in sweet content they dug and hoed the rich soil which responded so liberally to their efforts, while they left [illegible] fellow to break his heart with gold quest had been accomplished. El Monte became a farming center way back in the fifties, while Pasadena was still a sheep pasture and Pomona still a stretch of sage brush. The first Protestant church built on Californian soil belongs to El Monte; so does the first English walnut tree planted west of the Rockies.

If water is king in California, El Monte must be numbered among the royal thrones of the greatest dynasties. Here is the central point where all the subterranean streams are collected; here is a veritable "meeting of the waters." In a forty-foot well the water will rise to within ten feet of the surface, wherever a steel casing is driven down. For this reason the town has become a wonder of tanks and windmills, and every home has absolutely free water—enough for household purposes and for growing all the vegetables and chicken feed to supply a good-sized family. The steady breeze every summer afternoon always keeps the wheels a turning. For irrigating on a large scale, wells from a hundred to two hundred feet deep, pumped by a thirty-horse-power engine, produce a stream of over 200 miner's inches day after day, from May to December, without sensibly lowering the water in the pit. There is not one dry hole in the whole district, but every well is sure and satisfactory.

In this State where the increase in land values has passed all records, El Monte has no need to hide her light behind a bushel. Ten years ago ranches could be bought north of the Southern Pacific, on the old Baldwin Estate, for $150 to $200 an acre. Today this land is paying good interest to the farmer on a valuation of $600 to $1000. Bearing walnut orchards are hard to buy at any price.

On an average alfalfa field ten tons to the acre is a conservative yield, while the proximity to Los Angeles and the enormous dairy interests in El Monte itself insure the highest market price for every scrap of hay. Under these circumstances the farmers are not worrying the real estate dealers to any great extent. The poor man on an acre of this soil, with an assured supply of free water, can live comfortably and be independent of trusts and high-priced provisions. The capitalist, with cows and alfalfa to an unlimited extent at his command, can increase his income far more rapidly and beneficially to himself and the whole com- Stock Exchange or fighting rival moneyed interests.

Being only twelve miles from Los Angeles and being connected with the metropolis by cheap and frequent car service, the town of El Monte has not grown so rapidly as the farming country surrounding it. So far the inhabitants have been too busy with their varied agricultural interests to attend much to beautifying the town itself. Considerable improvements, however, are promised in the near future and the completion of the good roads section through the main street of the town will give an additional stimulus to the esthetic side of the community. When Los Angeles has passed the million population mark, without doubt many handsome suburban villas will adorn this naturally beautiful section of the country; El Monte will then take its place with Hollywood and Pasadena as a panorama satisfying to the artistic temperament, as well as a cornucopia of good things appealing to the palate of the epicure.

The Muskrat's House.

"The game law of New Mexico permits the trapping of muskrats between November 1 and April 15, but forbids the destruction or injury of their houses at any time," said a man fond of hunting, to the New York Sun. "The purpose of the law was to protect the muskrats, but it has an esthetic value also. The beaver, master engineer and builder as it is, scarcely exceeds the muskrat in ingenuity and system in its domestic arrangements.

"In building its house the muskrat selects a spot on the low marsh land that will be flooded at high tide or high water if on nontidal margins. The animal tunnels from the bank of the stream or lagoon or pond, as the case may be, beginning below the edge of low water mark, to the site it has selected for its house.

"These preliminaries completed, the muskrat cuts with its chisel-like teeth the broad, strong stalks and leaves of the flag and long, coarse grass. These materials the busy little builder carries to the building site where it bends and twists them together in circular form and builds them layer upon layer, gradually narrowing the structure until a firm, cone-shaped house is the result. This is further strengthened and made comfortable by a liberal mixture of mortar made by the muskrat of the marsh mud.

"The interior of the muskrat's

The Ocean Park route, via Center street.

The combination of all the interurban lines under the Southern Pacific system is responsible for many of the changes and improvements going into effect. The old steam road is being converted into an electric line and will soon connect the steam lines with the beach by a short and rapid route. It is expected that Pacific Electric cars will soon be routed out of the Huntington building directly to Santa Monica that all of the suburbs will be brought into touch with the beaches to the west.

People living out in the Southwest part of town already have the advantage of close promimity to the beach because of the Sixteenth street line. Along Sunset boulevard and through Hollywood the same advantage is enjoyed. He building a line from Hollywood into the San Fernando Valley through Hollywood opens up that immense and rapidly growing district to the beach without coming through Los Angeles.

The new line from the Arcade station to Santa Monica will be inaugurated to service on April 26, when 15,000 or 20,000 Odd Fellows from all over Southern California will come in and be transferred directly from the steam roads to the electric line to go to Santa Moncia where the celebration is to be held. All of these conditions are putting a great spur to the activity at Santa Monica in developing one of the famous amusement resorts of the world.

The builders at Santa Monica are planning a Coney Island, Atlantic City and Newport all in one sweep around the shore of the Cresent Bay. At Pier Avenue where they are building the Million-Dollar Pier, the Thompson Scenic Railway and other amusement attractions that will bring the Coney Island crowds. Along the Ocean Front Promenade to the north, which takes the place of the famous "Board Walk," the Atlantic City hotels are being built and at the Palisades and in Brontwood Park the improvements are of the Newport character.

On the south side of the mountain the boring has been uniformly in hard granite, which required little timbering and which was so dry that no trouble was had from flooding. Also the tunnel drained itself.

On the north side of the range, however, the hardships of drilling have been greater. As from the north side the tunnel is on the down grade, all water encountered had to be pumped out and on several different occasions pockets of water were struck which flooded the tunnel and drove the men before it for their lives. The character of the ground has varied from tough blue clay to hard granite, slate and saturated sand. Timbering with 8x8-inch timbers has been necessary almost the entire distance.

Despite these difficulties, John Gray and his men in May, 1910, made the remarkable record of 567 feet, which is surpassed only by the record of Aston's men in the south portal with a run of 604 feet in April of the same year. Up to the time that the men of the Elizabeth tunnel began to attract the attention of mining and construction engineers throughout the country, the United States record for tunnel boring was held at the Gunnison tunnel with a run of 449 feet.

Owing to the difficult character of the ground encountered on the north side of the range, in the summer of 1908, it was feared that the tunnel could not be driven in time, working from only two headings, and so, in September of that year, a shaft was sunk 3980 feet south of the north portal and work started from two headings at this point. Burrowing 160 feet beneath the surface, the men working from this shaft excavated with such precision that there was only a fraction of an inch difference in the lines of the tunnel, as driven from the shaft and from the north portal.

MANY FACTS.

One of the unusual features from the cost standpoint is that, instead of the cost constantly increasing, as might be supposed, as the tunnel was driven farther into the range, it has steadily decreased.

Additional facts:

The tunnel portals lie approximately twenty miles from a railroad, and it has been necessary to haul all machinery and other equipment over mountain roads by traction engines or twelve teams.

To better facilitate the transportation of supplies and equipment, it was necessary to build a road of easy gradient and more than seven miles in length from portal to portal over the summit of the range.

There has been employed at each portal for the past three years and eight months a working force of 100 men, including miners, muckers, mechanics, etc., many of whom brought their families with them. At the south portal the town of Pinchot was founded. With the tunnel opened through, this town now disappears as suddenly as it was created.

The men have worked steadily in three shifts with twenty men underground to the shift. The rate of progress at a heading has varied from eight to twenty feet per day, depending upon the efficiency of the men and the hardness or difficulty of the excavation.

About twenty pounds per foot of high-power dynamite has been required to bore the tunnel. The total amount of high explosives consumed therefore amounts to 537,000 pounds.

Azusa and Surroundings.

VARIED and numerous are the opportunities for every one of energy and initiative to succeed in Southern California. In one part of the country certain resources, such as oil, oranges, alfalfa, etc., are taking the lead, while just a few miles away every energy of the residents is being centered in developing quite another resource. It is this great variety of agricultural, horticultural and commercial resources, which has attracted to Southern California the "brain and brawn" of the East, and those who have come, and taken hold of opportunities, have done well.

FERTILE SOIL.

Azusa is a city of about 1500 inhabitants located on the lines of the Santa Fe and Pacific Electric railways, twenty-three miles east of Los Angeles, in the foothill orange belt. These railways vie with each other in giving Azusa a capital transportation service. For less than 25 cents you can reach Los Angeles from Azusa, on a commutation ticket, with trains every hour or so. It is rapidly gaining a reputation for the healthfulness of its climate, and particularly in curing those afflicted with asthma. It is located at the mouth of the canyon where the San Gabriel River enters the valley.

PROFITABLE ACRES.

From the foot of the towering mountains, with snowcapped "Baldy" in the distance, the frostless orange lands of the Azusa district stretch across the San Gabriel Valley, whereon are orange and lemon groves producing phenomenal crops of the sweetest and juiciest fruits. Some of these groves, in the vicinity of Azusa, have made wonderful records in production. As an example, twenty-two acres in Valencia oranges have averaged $900 an acre income per year, for the past four years. Near by this same grove is another which has produced as high as $1000 an acre. These figures are so unusual that they seem beyond belief, but on account of these large yields these orange groves near Azusa are gross income of $18,000 a year, recently sold for $75,000. While the price seems excessive, the net income from the grove has never been less than $15,000 for the last few years, and that is 20 per cent. on the selling price of $75,000. The former owner will have to loan his money out now at 6 and 7 per cent. The land is really worth $3500 an acre, as an income producer.

AN UNDEVELOPED RESOURCE.

While it must be conceded that Azusa has a splendid orange belt, which has been so far developed as to prove beyond question its great value; and that Azusa also has a delightful and healthful summer and winter climate, yet Azusa has still another resource—one not developed—which, though homely in the naming, has vast possibilities of development, and may be expanded far and away beyond what it is now. I refer to the great deposits of concrete material covering several miles, at the mouth of the San Gabriel Canyon, where are granite cobble stones, coarse and fine gravel, and sharp granite sand, which is destined to be much more extensively used than now in the making of concrete for building purposes. Close to the foothills the stones are large, two and three feet through, but farther out on the "Wash" they are smaller and yet smaller, until they are finally fine gravel and coarse sand, which is said to be 600 feet deep. Beyond this commences the rich orange belt, with its sedimental soil. Of this great deposit of concrete material, only the surface has as yet been touched. This land can be bought now at $75 an acre.

BUILDING CONCRETE HOUSES.

Concrete houses can be built as cheaply as wooden ones, I have been told, and it surely could be "proven" at Azusa, where the principal materials are so cheap. I talked with Messrs.

residents, who said: "What we want now at Azusa is the locating of the man, with his family, who will make his home here, not only for profit but for health and pleasure. We have many attractions for the homeseeker, and our climate is particularly mild Azusa the idea of their building concrete residences instead of wooden ones," I said, "and make Azusa a town of concrete residences—a sort of 'Show Town' in the concrete line? You have all the materials, almost free of cost, and could build concrete buildings of great durability and artistic design very cheaply. You have the rock, the gravel, the sand, and the water, hence need add only the cement and the labor to erect as many residences as may be required."

"Why not suggest," I continued, "the idea of erecting in Azusa 'sample dwellings' built entirely of concrete, which the newcomer himself could build, or assist in building, thus selling his labor at about $4 a day. The cement is manufactured only a few miles distant, and will cost only about 75 cents a sack on the ground; the sand about 50 cents a load, and the gravel about the same. It seems to me a concrete building could be erected in Azusa at a less cost than one of wood, all things considered.

COST OF MATERIAL.

"Yes, it could," said Mr. Frye. "If I understand, I am to give you an estimate on the cost of the material in a concrete building in Azusa, with all the labor left out. You want to get the figures on a five-room house, built here, where the rock, gravel and sand cost only the price of the hauling, and want to know what the materials in the building will cost, without labor, presuming that the owner of the house might want to do the work himself. You think Azusa might be the 'Show Town' of the country for concrete houses and believe that it would be a paying investment for the concrete contracting firms of Los Angeles and other cities, to take an interest in building these houses, as 'samples' of what can be done with concrete as a material, thus advertising the styles of architecture the advantages and conveniences, and the cost of building each one. I have been informed that Lee Callahan, and associates of Los Angeles, have perfected a small portable concrete pouring apparatus which can be rented for constructing a concrete residence anywhere. The great improvements that have been made in the erection of concrete buildings, especially when reinforced with steel, will surprise anyone who has not investigated. Concrete dwellings will soon be the rule rather than the exception in Southern California. I think it would be an excellent idea to have our city the 'show town' of 'sample' concrete dwellings. Our land, material and climate all favor it.

"I am presuming, in this estimate, that a 'pouring plant' has been rented at so much cost per day, two stories, reinforced concrete, with a total of five rooms, the ground floor being on a level with the street, the size being 16x40 feet. The floor, the walls, the upper floor, the roof, the chimney and fireplace, the bath tub, the stairs, etc., are to all be built of cement. Here are the items:

Material in ground floor	$ 14.00
Material in walls, including doors and windows	145.00
Materials in upper floor and roof (Of the above $52 is for steel)	100.00
Materials for chimney and fireplace	20.00
Materials for bath tub	14.00
Concrete stairway	16.00
Painting, Plumbing, etc.	40.00
Total	$349.00

WINTER HOMES.

"Such a house as the one thus built would readily rent, if near the business part of town, for $25 a month, to those who would want to enjoy the winter climate of Azusa. The cost of the labor would depend largely upon the design and finish of the building, the more elaborate, the greater the cost. In this case we will presume on a cost of $800 for labor, and for the land, $100, a total of $1249. Such a house would readily sell for $1600 to $1800. As an investment it would pay more than 20 per cent. on the actual cost. Such houses are cooler in summer and warmer in winter than wooden ones, besides are fireproof. With the material so convenient and cheap, as at Azusa, these 'sample' houses could be built at so little cost, that several hundred of them might be erected and those who would want to build a concrete dwelling need only inspect the residences at Azusa, to find a suitable plan to follow."

CRUSHING GRANITE.

At present there are four large rock-crushing plants at Azusa, employing about 150 hands. When the building of concrete residences assumes the importance it is destined to assume, there will be 1000 men employed in the rock crushers. It is through the expansion of the concrete business that a great growth in population will come to Azusa.

CONDITIONS FAVORABLE.

"With town lots selling at from $50 to $300 each," said Secretary Owen, of the Chamber of Commerce, "with sand, gravel and rock almost free, with the cement costing but little more than the quarry prices, and with the modern facilities for erecting these concrete buildings, the conditions are very favorable at Azusa. This resource could be made to advertise the town far and wide, if 'sample' residences were erected. Nature has given us the material, and man can do the work. Our city would be benefited in the increase of trade. There is a work for our Chamber of Commerce to do in interesting the public in making Azusa the 'show town' for styles in concrete structures in Southern California. Mr. Callahan, and others, who are fully posted in the progress of concrete construction should be invited to address our business men, and show how Azusa can profit by being the place for such an enterprise."

THE CITY OF AZUSA.

"Azusa (said to be an Indian name meaning town) was 11 years of age, as an incorporated city, last December," said Judge George E. Glover, "the population in 1900 having been about 800, which has about doubled since. The present brick City Hall cost, in 1903, $10,000. The municipal water plant cost the city $22,000 in 1900, and later $11,000 more was expended on it, giving us one of the best of gravity systems, and cheap water, the rate for family use averaging 75 cents a month. We also own our electric lighting system, the power only being rented. For city park purposes $7000 has been expended. Through a donation from Andrew Carnegie, and an appropriation of $2500 by the city, we have a $12,500 free library building in the park. In 1905 the High School building was built at a cost of $20,000. Recently a bond issue of $40,000 was voted to pay for constructing four miles of streets to connect with the good roads highway from Los Angeles. A Methodist church building, costing $12,000, is now in course of erection. A new Masonic hall, and an Odd Fellows' hall, one costing $12,000 and the other $15,000, have been erected within the past two years. The demand for a good hotel was very satisfactorily supplied through a company of our business men, who leased for five years the present building, after having had $5000 expended upon it by the owner, A. P. Griffith. During the past year or so our ice and cold storage plant has been enlarged, now representing an investment of about $35,000. The two fruit packing-houses have been enlarged, being now among the largest in Los Angeles county. The Pacific Electric Railway contemplates soon erecting a concrete depot building to cost about $2500."

PROGRESSIVE RESIDENTS.

Azusa is largely indebted to the following residents for her fine schools, her free library and commodious buildings, her park, her proposed street improvements, etc.: A. G. Owen, O. J. Berner, A. P. Griffith, J. A. Anderson, L. Case, N. J. Clifford, H. H. Dolley, G. C. and A. L. Meier, A. L. McNeilley, George E. Glover, T. C. Bouldon, F. L. Clark, W. L. Wade, E. E. Hilsby, M. J. Coffin, R. H. Relics and the Imagination.

While the earlier reports of the finding of a letter from King Assur-Rani-Pal of Assyria to Ahab, King of Israel, have been denied, it is a fact that among the tablets recently dug up in the ruins of an ancient Samaritan palace are fragments relating to that interesting period of Biblical history. The tablets seem to be inventories of the contents of the royal cellars; of oil, grown, perhaps, on the Mount of Olives, and wine made, mayhap, from grapes out of Naboth's vineyard. Trivial relics they seem, but they are contemporary; they may have been touched by the royal personage whose signet they bear; and this is what makes them so interesting. They bridge the gulf of ages and bring one in physical contact with the individual to whom they once belonged.

A pair of breeches once worn by George Washington create a feeling of human community with him such as a transcript of the farewell address would fail to do. So it is that these shreds of clay dug out of Ahab's wine cellar arouse an interest which is more intense, though less commendable on ethical grounds, than that that was aroused by the echoes of Elisha's thundering against the Baal worshipers.—[Philadelphia Record.

Planning an Active Season.

W. D. Egilbert and associates are arranging for an active dredging season with the passing of winter. One dredge is in commission and doing excellent work. The dredge wrecked last year was recently raised and found in excellent shape. It will be thoroughly overhauled and placed in action as soon as spring sets in. The company controls extensive holdings along Clear and Middle creeks, and results have been decidedly pleasing to the stockholders. It is understood that the plans of the company includes the building of a new DuBois dredge before the close of the year. Several Los Angeles men are said to be interested.

Prescott.

CONGRESS MINE IS CLOSED DOWN.

FOR YEARS ONE OF ARIZONA'S BEST PRODUCERS.

Future Plans of Company Are Not Known to Public—Action Causes Deep Regret Among People of the District—French Syndicate Secures Property.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) March 10.—It is reported that the Congress mine, in southwestern Yavapai county, has been closed down and that nothing is being done on the famous property except clean-up work and the handling of some tailings through the cyanide plant. Whether the suspension of operations is more than temporary, the management has not told. The news has been received with deep regret locally, for no mine has had more to do with the prosperity of this county than has the Congress, under the management of Frank M. Murphy.

The Santa Fe, Prescott and Phoenix Railroad was built primarily to tap the Congress mine, then owned by "Diamond Jo" Reynolds of St. Louis. For years the property has been one of the largest gold producers of Arizona. Its surface equipment includes two fine concentrating mills and an unusually well-equipped cyanide plant, with oil roasters. Underground, the workings are the deepest in the Southwest, with a half-dozen superb shafts that follow the slight dip of the Congress and Niagara veins. The former has had the greater development, as its ore has been somewhat richer, across a two to four foot vein averaging $20 a ton gold for even months of mill run. In character it was iron pyrites, concentrating about eight to one. The Niagara ores had a larger percentage of silver. About 100 miners has been the average force of late years. Many of the men were permanent residents of a little town which may now be abandoned. In the vicinity, however, are a number of promising mines, several of them with reduction works and there seems little likelihood that the district will entirely cease production. A few miles distant lie the well-known Octave and Fool's Gulch gold mines.

Territorial Secretary George U. Young has filed deeds in Prescott to the Madizelles Mining Company for his interest in ten mining claims west of this city, near Iron Springs, and for his interest as well in the Derby mine in the same locality. The company has passed into the control of a French syndicate.

W. A. Wenger and J. F. Derrick have sold the Legal Tender group of claims in Cherry Creek district to Dorchester Mapes of Chicago and the Dunkirk and Blake-Baker claims to M. M. Green of Chicago. Both purchasers are acting as agents for others.

Ore from the United Verde Extension mine at Jerome is to be shipped to the Swansea smelter. That already on the dump samples about 5 per cent. copper and $8 to the ton in gold. Development work is being pushed with three shifts of miners. A winze is being started on the 800 level to cut through rich ore lately found on the lower workings.

L. G. Cuthbert is preparing for shipment to the Needles smelter 100 sacks of ore that samples 235 ounces silver to the ton. The ore is from the sinking of a shaft only forty-five feet deep on a claim in the western Bradshaws in the Walnut Grove section.

Work has been resumed on the Mount Elliott property, under charge of W. C. Short, with W. J. Martin as mine superintendent.

PLUMED KNIGHT SOLD.

LIBERTY CHANGES HANDS.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

TUCSON (Ariz.) March 9.—The Plumed Knight mine, eighteen miles southwest of Tucson, has been sold by L. D. Chilson to the Gould Mining Company, the consideration reported as having been $100,000. The property has been operated by Mr. Chilson for more than twenty years, with a copper product that has well repaid the shipment to El Paso.

The Roosevelt Reduction Company of New York has taken over the property of the Liberty Mining Company, comprising twenty-four silver claims in the Arivaca district, sixty-five miles south of Tucson. It is claimed that $1,000,000 will be expended upon the development of the property from which some of the richest silver ore ever found in the Southwest has been shipped in the past.

Rich Ore at Santa Ysabel.

The rich strike recently made in a new section of the Santa Ysabel mines, near Tuolumne, continue to hold out splendidly with development. The vein is an entirely new ore body, and is showing remarkable strength as work progresses. It is said that sufficient ore is already in sight to keep the mill operating for several months, and the stamps will soon go into action on the quartz from the new ledge.

The Los Angeles people, who recently took the property under bond, are arranging for the immediate unwatering of the shaft, and its sinking to considerable depth. The driving of a crosscut from the shaft to intersect the new vein at a depth will also start at once. The owners are elated over the outlook, and confidently expect to develop the Santa Ysabel into one of the greatest properties in the mother lode.

Will Work Quartz Ledge.

T. Manriquez, S. V. Mathews, A. Notine, R. B. Freeman and J. B. Freeman of Tehachepi have organized a company to work a quartz ledge recently discovered by Manriquez three miles from Searles Station on the California Nevada Railroad. A complete camp outfit has been shipped to the scene of the strike.

Globe.

ANOTHER DELAY AT MIAMI PLANT.

Concentrator to be Started Middle of Month.

Inspiration Copper Company to Have Big Mill.

Find of Silver Recalls Old Days in Arizona.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

GLOBE (Ariz.) March 9.—Owing to delay in receipt of machinery, still another adjustment has had to be made of the starting date of the Miami Copper Company's concentrator, within which the wheels are now expected to be turning by the 15th of the month. Tests have been made of most of the machinery, including the pumping plant, a new hoisting engine and the power house generally. F. W. Solomon, late smelter superintendent for the Nevada Consolidated Company at McGill, Nev., has arrived and will have charge of the Miami concentrator. Underground electric haulage will be used. Electric locomotives are now on hand.

W. B. Aldridge, managing director of the Inspiration Copper Company, who has just returned to New York after a visit to the property near Globe, states that work will begin immediately on a 5000-ton concentrator. It is understood that the site of the new mill was to have been near Wheatfields, eleven miles from Miami, a point remote from the mine, yet favored because of the good water supply. There is a possibility that this determination may be altered, due to the development of a considerable water supply much nearer the mine, in drill holes on ground owned by the Live Oak company. This discovery is of much importance to the Miami company as well, for most of the water for the new concentrator is to be supplied from the drainage of the Old Dominion mine at Globe.

Further development of the Pasquale vein of the Summit company shows a continuation of the high-grade ore lately struck. On the 400 level the high-grade streak, averaging over 30 per cent., is now four feet wide, chalcopyrite in character. Between it and the foot wall is four feet of 18 per cent. ore. About the same grade of ore has been demonstrated to continue upward in the upraise now driven forty feet from the 400 level. A winze has been started from the same level. The company is shipping ore to El Paso, on which returns have come of 26 per cent. copper, with some value in silver. Through the past month ore valued at $125,000 has been developed.

The profits of the Old Dominion mine at Globe during 1910 have been published at $450,000 on a production 7,000,000 pounds less than the year 1909. The management is aiming at a 9-cent cost for its copper product.

There is a local report that at a depth of 1200 feet high-grade sulphide ore has been struck by a diamond drill operating on the Arizona Commercial property. A station has been cut on the tenth level of the shaft, where pumps will be installed and from which crosscutting and drifting are to be started very soon.

A churn drill has arrived for the Orphan Copper Company and is to be started on the company's ground about the middle of the month.

The receiver's sale of the National Mining and Exploration Company's property near Globe, which was to have been held February 28, has been postponed until March 30, by which time it is expected that the company will be reorganized and put upon a secure financial footing.

Memories of old-time mines, when native silver worth millions of dollars was taken from the hills around Globe, were brought out last week by a discovery made by Julius Riser in the Rambo district. Under a bush he found a miner's pan and some rusted tools. Further exploration developed the presence of a pit filled with about 600 pounds of extremely rich silver glance ore, probably cached by some miner who had prospected some other man's ground and who had found it inexpedient to carry away the proceeds. This was considered a silver district and within it are the remains of a half-dozen expensive mills designed to treat silver ores. Most of the metal was found immediately on top of the ground, as was the case in the once-famous Silver Nugget mine, where wagons were loaded with slabs of the white metal that lay almost loosely in a hollow of the hills.

RICH GOLD FLOAT.

FOUND IN ASH CANYON.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BISBEE (Ariz.) March 9.—In Ash Canyon in the Huachuca Mountains, rich gold float has been found, Mexicans having brought in nuggets worth as much as $40. The gravel of the creek is yielding richly to a large number of Mexican placeros who have flocked to the ground, though the first nugget was found by Ben Morgan, an old Bisbee miner. American prospectors on the ground are hunting eagerly for the ledge whence the nuggets came.

Many of the miners thrown out of employment by the closing of the Tombstone mines are profitably turning their attention to chloriding, several scores of men having taken leases of various parts of the Tombstone Company's ground. The company is to receive 20 per cent. net of the smelter returns and shall have possession at any time after six months, with 60 days' notice.

Stockholders of the Calumet and Arizona have ordered an increase of the capital stock from 200,000 to 650,000 shares, action preliminary to the acquisition of the controlling interest in the Superior and Pittsburgh Mine on the basis of one share of Calumet and Arizona for three and one-half shares of Superior and Pittsburgh. About 50 per cent. of the Superior and Pittsburgh stock has been deposited for exchange and there seems a probability that the merger will be effected by April 1.

PINE TREE MINE SOLD.

BOUGHT BY LOCAL MEN.

It is reported that the Pine Tree mine near Tehachepi has been bought by J. R. McLeod and associates of Los Angeles, who will start a force of men at work within a few weeks. F. C. Chormicle, the former owner, received for the mine eighty acres of land near Corona.

The Pine Tree has been operated with varying success for the past thirty years. The late F. M. Tracy took out much high grade ore in the early days. The reopening of the property is expected to have a healthy effect on mining operations in the vicinity.

Edge of Activity.

RAY AND CHINO IN GOOD SHAPE.

PLANTS AT THESE PROPERTIES ABOUT COMPLETED.

D. C. Jackling, at the Head of Both, Has Just Concluded a Visit of Inspection—The Guggenheims Have No Connection With Either Property, So Far as Known.

D. C. Jackling of Salt Lake City, vice-president and general manager of the Ray Consolidated Copper Company, has just concluded a visit to the properties of the Ray in Arizona and of the Chino Copper Company in New Mexico. In a statement to The Times Mr. Jackling says:

"We have been somewhat delayed in getting started at Ray on account of the failure at the last moment to receive some necessary machinery, which, while incidental as to quantity, was quite vital as bearing upon our beginning actual operations. However, everything is on the ground now and it will be only a matter of a few days to complete its installation. We are running some of the machinery of the power plant and getting it into adjustment, and are shipping approximately 1000 tons of ore per day from the mines at Ray to the concentrator at Hayden, filling up the ore bins at the mill, and within a week or ten days from the present date (March 5) should have one section of the plant in continuous operation.

"At the Chino properties we have the stripping of the areas at the mine from which our first tonnage will come so well advanced that we are able to ease up on this work somewhat, and from this time forward a portion of the equipment of steam shovels will only be operated on stripping in the day time. Some of these shovels will of course be put on ore when mining begins. At the mill the steel framework is all completed and concrete floors are now being put in place. practically all the machinery for the mill and power plant has arrived, and some sections of the mill and an equivalent portion of the power plant will certainly be finished so that we can begin milling operations at the time we have previously estimated, which is about July 1."

In many recent newspaper articles the Ray and Chino properties have been picked up bodily by the writers and placed in the Guggenheim campp. This is an error, according to the best information now obtainable. The Guggenheims have no interest whatever in either property so far as known, and certainly no connection with the official family of either the Ray or Chino.

Chinese Speak Esperanto.

To see a typical Yankee carrying on a conversation with a Chinaman or a Japanese will be an unusual privilege for Portland residents when the National Esperanto Congress meets here next July. Such an incident will not be down on the programme, but it is likely to happen. To George K. Rogers, one of Portland's leading Esperantists, will belong the credit. Mr. Rogers announced that so many persons are taking up the study of Esperanto that the air is becoming filled with the sonorous twang of the new universal language. The Chinamen and Japanese have caught Esperantitis and have petitioned Mr. Rogers for admission to the classes. The Orientals will not be denied. Separate classes will be organized for both the Japs and the Chinamen immediately and Mr. Rogers agrees to have them speaking the new language fluently by Chinese New Year.—[Portland Ore-

Meet a Demand.

APARTMENTS ARE FOUND TO PAY.

MODERN STRUCTURES FILL AS SOON AS COMPLETED.

Investors Declare Demand Is for Buildings With Latest Types of Appointments—Local Architects Have Plans Under Way for Many Projects All Over City.

The great number of new apartment-house projects in the city reveals clearly what investors think of the future of Los Angeles. There is absolutely no limit apparent to this class of building and promoters and capitalists declare that first-class structures with modern appointments fill up readily with tenants shortly after completion.

Among the apartments now on the boards of local architectural offices, the following are mentioned in the columns of the Southwest Contractor and Manufacturer:

George W. May is preparing plans for a three-story brick apartment house to be built at Seventeenth street and Grand avenue for Frank J. Hesse. It will be devoted exclusively to apartments, containing about forty-three suites of two and three rooms each, with private baths and wall and disappearing beds, steam heat, telephones and all modern equipment and conveniences. The dimensions of the building will be 74x123 feet.

A. S. Heineman is preparing plans for a three-story frame apartment house to be erected on Figueroa street near Third. It will contain about sixty rooms, divided into thirty suites with private baths and wall beds.

Sirey & Gentry are preparing plans for a three-story apartment building to be erected at Twenty-first and Naomi streets for M. E. Mathers. The building will contain fifty-eight rooms divided into two and three-room suites. The building will be brick and plaster. The designers will also act as superintendents of construction.

C. K. Hershey contemplates the erection of a two-story frame store and flat building, 17x52 feet, on Twenty-fourth street near Hoover, to contain one store on ground floor and a four-room flat on the second floor.

W. G. Norris expects to erect next fall a two-story brick store and apartment building at Sixty-second street and Moneta avenue. Mr. Norris has had preliminary sketches prepared for a building 50x80 feet, containing three storerooms on the ground floor and eight apartments on the second floor.

Robert Stoll contemplates the erection of a three-story frame apartment building on Figueroa street between Second and Third streets, to contain about seventy rooms. Mr. Stoll states that he will begin building operations in May or June. No architect has been chosen.

Henry W. Tuttle has had plans drawn for a two-story frame apartment-house at No. 2013 Sunset boulevard, to contain twenty-four rooms, arranged in twelve two-room suites.

BUILDING AVERAGE GOOD.

In Forty-four Leading Cities Construction Expenditure for February Shows Little Change.

Building operations for February throughout the country, outside of New York, of the forty-four cities reported by the American Contractor, Chicago, show an average of expenditure which is almost identical with that of February, 1910. The loss in Greater New York of nearly $7,000,000 for February, 1911, as compared with the same month of last year, reduces the equilibrium to represent an aggregate loss of 18 per cent.

The losses vary from 6 to 74 per cent. Gains of over 50 per cent. were made in the following cities: Baltimore, 198 per cent.; Columbus, 151; Des Moines, 533; Detroit, 185; Knoxville, 372; Little Rock, 72; Milwaukee, 84; Minneapolis, 228; Pittsburgh, 63; St. Paul, 104. BUCKEYE PLANS MANSION.

Cleveland Man Buys Attractive Site in Westmoreland Place and Will Build Handsome Residence.

Wesley Clark, one of the owners of Westmoreland Place, reports the sale of a lot 100x200 feet in size on the westerly driveway in Westmoreland Place, for a stated consideration of $12,500, for $125 a front foot. The purchaser was James W. Farley of Cleveland, Ohio.

It is understood that Mr. Farley will, in the near future, begin the erection of a residence the site to cost in the neighborhood of $20,000. Two other sales in the same tract are reported through the office of Bryan & Bradford, although details of these are not ready to be made public.

EAGLE ROCK TRANSFERS.

The Edwards & Wildey Company, who recently purchased the Haines acreage on Verdugo road, have subdivided the property into acre and half-acre lots and placed these upon the market. Among the purchasers reported are the following: C. E. Cobb of Omaha, Neb., one acre on Rock Glen avenue, $1600; Mrs. H. S. Brown, one acre on Verdugo road, covered with full bearing navel orange trees, $2250; Mrs. B. M. Buck, one acre, planted to full-bearing oranges, $2000; Mrs. M. Alberta Hunting, one acre, improved with seven-room house and planted to assorted

Burgess, one acre, fronting on Rock Glen avenue, planted to full grown peaches, $1700; Daniel R. Roody of Kansas City, Kan., half-acre on Rock Glen avenue, $1050; Myra Jennings, two lots, each one-half acre, fronting on Verdugo road and improved with a four-room cottage, $2700.

RAPID BUYING.

Kansas City Millionaire Purchases Wilshire Place at Noon and Moves Into It Same Evening.

One of the largest realty deals in recent weeks in this city was reported exclusively in The Times Friday. This was the sale by M. S. Kornblum to Charles H. Sharp, a Kansas City millionaire, of the former's magnificent home at the northwest corner of Wilshire boulevard and Shatto Place. The consideration was $100,000 cash. This important transaction was consummated through the agency of Giles and Kells of the Wright and Callender Company, who acted for both buyer and seller.

The site has frontage of 220 feet on Wilshire by 170 feet on Shatto, the dwelling being a large structure of the type of the half timbered houses of Normandy and Brittany. Its interior finish is unusually elegant. It was erected about two years ago from plans drawn by B. Cooper Corbett.

An extraordinary feature of the transaction was that Sharp went through the place for the first time Friday morning, paid a cash consideration for it at noon of the same day and moved into it the same evening.

MONETA AVENUE SECTION.

G. Dombrowson, manager of the Moneta avenue Realty Company, reports the following sales:

Southwest Land Company to Otto LLefevre, 50x130 feet on the north side of Forty-eighth, near Normandie, $1100 cash; D. C. Sates to Mrs. Mamie M. Hardy, six-room furnished bungalow at No. 225 West Fiftieth, $4250; W. H. Norwood to H. H. Burgher, six-room bungalow, No. 713 West Forty-second place, on lot, 40x120 feet, $3400; Mrs. J. Slatten to Paul H. Musseut, 45x127 feet on Forty-seventh street, between Denker and Harvard boulevard, $1050 cash; E. Haglund to Paul H. Muskat, 46x127 feet on the south side of Forty-seventh, between Denker and Harvard boulevard, $1050 cash. These sites will be improved with bungalows.

LOMITA FARM SALES.

W. I. Hollingsworth & Company report the following recent sales of Lomita Farm acres near San Pedro: Hearl Knowles, one and three-fourths acres, $930; J. G. Engle, two acres, $1050; Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Albers, one acre, $525; F. S. Champion, one acre, $525; J. A. & S. A. Barclay, six acres, $2625; William H. Beggo, two acres, $1050; John A. Hunter, six acres, $3135; Mrs. P. J. Cunningham, one acre, $650; LeRay Olcott, one acre, $25; Lois Miles, one acre, $550; W. P Ingersoll, one acre, $525.

BUYS IN VICTORIA PARK.

Judge J. W. Cochran, a recent arrival from Chicago, has purchased from H. M. Allen a fine ten-room, two-story residence at No. 68 Victoria Park, valued at $18,500. Mr. Allen took as part payment, a corner residence in Zion City, Ill., valued at $12,500. Harry L. Heck negotiated the deal, assisted by Geo. S. Phelps.

BIG PERMIT ISSUED.

The City Building Department yesterday issued a permit for the construction of the eleven-story office block which is to be erected by the Union Oil Building Company at the northwest corner of Seventh and Spring streets. The contract price was placed at $700,000. The structure will occupy 103 feet on Spring by 155 feet on Seventh.

VERNON LOT SOLD.

R. C. Gibson has sold to W. Rick, through the agency of C. W. Watson, with Black Bros., a residence lot 50 feet wide by 146 feet deep, on the west side of Vermont avenue, just south of Clinton, the consideration being $1500.

The Janss Investment Company last week added eighty acres to its Ramona Acres Tract to accommodate buyers and option seekers. The addition comprises acreage immediately adjoining the original tract. The land is of similar location and fertility and with the same access to transportation. There were 500 acres in the Ramona suburb when it was laid out and put on the market. This week saw but twenty-five of these acres left and it was expected that they would be sold before the end of the month.

Manganese and Iron.

PASADENA, Feb. 2.—[To the Editor of The Times.] My neighbors have found a large deposit of manganese ore that assays 25 per cent. manganese.

Some have told me that manganese ore that contains hematite, or magnetic iron ore, as this ore does, is of no value. They say that the combination of iron and manganese destroys the ore as to commercial value.

I have consulted several assayers in Los Angeles, but no one could answer the question.

Several iron-foundry people know nothing at all in regard to manganese.

This question is of especial interest to mining men.

Thanking you for your courtesy, I remain, yours truly, F. L. R.

ANSWER: Your question is a most interesting one, and to reply to it properly, calls for comparisons, references, and descriptions of the mixed ores referred to.

If the ores carry hematite and magnetic iron ore, the magnetite could be easily concentrated by pulverization and use of the magnet; if the ore consists of magnetite and manganese dioxide, all of the iron values could be so separated.

"Manganiferous iron ores consist of a mixture of iron and manganee oxides in varying proportions."

Hematite and magnetic are, each and both, iron oxides.

"The iron is generally in the form of limonite (yellowish, hydrous iron oxide) . . . though frequently it occurs as hematite, as in the Lake Superior ores. The manganese is mostly in the form of psilomelane, though pyrolusite is often abundant.

"The manganese and iron oxides may occur togther as a coarse mixture, easily separated, or they be so closely associated as to be indistinguishable to the naked eye. In most deposits where the individual oxides may be recognized the manganese seems to have penetrated into the mass, while the iron is nearer the surface. . . . The amount of metallic manganese in manganiferous iron ore varies from less than 1 per cent. to 40 per cent. or more."

Metallic manganese never occurs native. The manganese referred to in the quoted matter (supra) is, as , the result of analysis and on the order of phosphorus in iron ores.

The high and medium grades of ore are used in the manufacture of spiegeleisen and ferromanganese, but the ore that contains only a small percentage of manganese is not used for this metal, but for its iron only.

"Ores that are too low in silver and lead to be used directly as a source of these metals and too low in iron and manganese to be used for the manufacture of spiegeleisen and ferromanganese are sent to the smelter to be used for fluxing purposes on account of their content of iron and manganese oxides."

Chevron (Belgium) commercial iron-manganese ores analyze as follows: Managanese oxides, 28.42; iron oxides, 29.62; aluminum oxides, 3.87; calcium oxides, 3.90; magnesium oxides, 1.15; silicon oxide, 23.22; phosphoric acid, .55; carbon dioxide, 10.63 which equals 101.36 per cent. oxides, dioxides and phosphoric. Many of the pockety manganiferous iron ores of California, including those of San Luis Obispo county, of the Maria Mountains and the ores near Elsinore, Riverside county, will, on analysis, give approximately the same results.

Spanish manganiferous ores—the bulk of the ores—vary in manganese content from 10 to 20 per cent and the iron content from 20 to 35 per cent.

The Amalienhohe mine near Waldalgesheim, Germany, produces ore varying from 5 to 22 per cent. manganese and up to 40 per cent. iron and mining is still going on at 377 feet depth in the earth. Many localities could be given from different commercial deposits the world over showing ores of much less value than those by you referred to.

It is well to bear in mind, however, that such ores for fluxing purposes would bring but $2.00 per ton at the smelters—probably f.o.b. cars near locality in some instances—and the iron-manganese values would eventually go to the slag-dump.

At present the iron-manganese ores of California meet with but little demand, but it is reasonable to believe that the many useful salts formed from manganese ores and the many uses for iron-manganese ores such as hardening of steel; in forming ferromanganese; spiegeleisen; cupromanganese; manganese bronze; manganese aluminum alloys; coloring of glass; printing and dyeing of calico; in brick manufacture; in the paint industry; in the mottling of certain soaps; in the manufacture of chlorine and certain chlorides; in combination with nickel, silicon, and chromium; carbides etc., will in time be sources of considerable revenue to the California industry.

Why not make attempts to concentrate and separate the iron oxides and manganese oxides from the ores referred to, and, thereby probably bring the concentrates up to 95 per cent. iron oxide values—with concentrates of 75 to 90 per cent. manganese oxide contents?

Such ores as you refer to are of undoubted commercial value, but it will require a plant to obtain products that could be readily and continuously disposed of; sufficient water near at hand is a prerequisite.

Chalcopyrite.

LAS VEGAS (Nev.) Feb. 3.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending you in tobacco sack enclosed a sample of ore from a ledge between here and the Colorado River. As you will find, the samples carry quartz, lime and sulphides.

I am unable to determine just what this sulphide is—it may be iron.

Will you please test the samples and give me results in "In the Earth" column. Yours sincerely, A. T. T.

ANSWER: The rock matrix you refer to correctly.

The microscopical sulphides present in the mass are those of chalcopyrite.

If concentrated, the concentrates would carry 35 per cent. copper, 35 per cent. sulphur, with 30 per cent. iron.

The sample was not tested for gold or silver, and it is remarkably free from iron disulphide (pyrite) and arsenical pyrite.

Feldspathic Rock.

YUMA (Ariz.) Feb. 3.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The enclosed samples come from a blow-out near the Salton Sea. I suspect that the rock is greisen, like that of South Dakota, and the black spots are tin ore. Am I right?

Please let me hear from you through "In the Earth" column. Oblige,

Yours respectfully, W. A.

ANSWER: The rock is not greisen, it is simply impure feldspar (orthoclase,) with "black spots" of disseminated iron oxide and manganese dioxide scattered through the mass. Tin is not present.

Black Jack.

BOULDER (Colo.) Feb. 3.—[To the Editor of The Times::] The samples with this come from a claim at Sunshine, Boulder county, Colorado, and from a shaft ninety-two feet deep—siding on to the Inter Ocean mine.

I have run into this ore in many different claims between Sunshine and Ward; some of the ore I have gathered together in small lots and ore buyers would give me the full smelter penalty on account of the ores being refractory.

What I particularly desire to know is this: (1) Is tellurium in the samples? (2) What are the round, isolated spots of white crystals? (3) Is lead in the ore? (4) Can you state the mineral or metal in the ore that places it in the refractory class?

Any information on the ores will be highly appreciated by a lot of prospectors and miners here.

Yours very truly, B. & G.
"Prospectors."

ANSWER: Glad to hear from you. Zinc (blende) "black jack" is the cause of your tribulations. (1) Tellurium is present in the sample as nagyagite (lead telluride.) (2) Crystallized and radiated gypsum. (3) Yes. (4) Black jack is the main refractory element, which is disseminated throughout the mass in massive forms—not crystallized.

With the ore we detect a small per cent. of calamine (zinc silicate.)

Zinc does not occur native. Its five chief ores are calamine, zinc (blende,) known also as sphalerite; smithsonite (zinc carbonate;) zincite (zinc oxide,) and gahnite (aluminate of zinc, or zinc spinel.)

Willemite, it may be added, is one other zinc silicate.

Spelter is simply crude metallic zinc.

"Although black jack is the bottom ore from which all other zinc ores have developed, it is the smallest actual producer of the two or three principal ores, and is the most subject to malediction of all ores. It is very refractory in the furnace, and makes refractory all ores of other metals that it may be mixed with. The silver men especially are worried by it, and its presence in the silver mines in many western localities is the bottom reason for non-payment of dividends by some smelting companies."

Strontia.

SAN DIEGO, Feb. 4.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The sample with this is from a small ledge two inches wide, on government ground, very near the Mexican line.

I believe it is nitrate of strontia and a very valuable mineral.

Please refer the sample to the proper authority, and I will thank you for an answer in your column.

Yours respectfully, A. J.

ANSWER: "Nitrate of strontia" does not occur native; it is manufactured from sulphate of strontia (celestite,) and from carbonate of strontia (strontianite.)

The sample you submit is celestite; the secondary formations, and also in volcanic localities.

An author, in referring to celestite, describes it as "The mineral is very handsome, being just a faint shade of heavenly blue; hence its name."

It may be added, however, that the mineral is found often of a reddish-white color.

Rocks.

ARIVACA (Ariz.) Feb. 12.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I send you inclosed several samples of local rock found sixty-five miles from Tucson. I received your short note about samples. I am working hard to get the district started.

I will look for the rock answers in The Times. With kindest regards, I am, sincerely yours, "B."

ANSWER: On each of the samples you attach a tag with descriptions quoted as follows: "No. 1 occurs between a belt of granite and feldsyte. Kindly name." The sample is a rock composed of hornblende and orthoclase, and appears to be a part of a coarse-grained granite, probably pegmatite.

"Kindly name this one (No. 2) also. Granodioryte?" This sample is so badly altered that it can not be definitely determined, but appears to be possibly a diorite porphyry.

"Dite rock under agglomerate, ore occurs with it; kindly name." This sample is No. 3; please refer to 4.

"No. 4, apparently a dike, occurs under agglomerate also; kindly name." No. 4 is apparently a weathered part of No. 3.

"No. 5. This rock occurs in bands almost like a dike, in feldsyte that is usually closely associated with it. Is it the feldsyte altered by vein solutions?" Rock (No. 5) might well be a part of the dike altered by silicification.

The above determinations were made without the use of the microscope, and by qualitative analysis only.

To properly determine names for rocks submitted—other than as stated—it would call for a quantitative analysis and microscopical examinations.

Pyrite.

MARICOPA (Ariz.) Feb. 4.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will you tell me in your mineral column what sort of ore these round samples are? They were taken from a claim near Silver Bell. I believe it must be nickel or copper of some kind. Thanking you in advance for your trouble.

Yours truly, D. B. A.

ANSWER: The samples carry no nickel or copper values; they are simply a rounded form of pyrite (iron disulphide) and have on many occasions been forwarded to this department of The Times by correspondents who classified them as meteorites, tin ore, etc.

Volcanic Glass.

YUMA (Ariz.) Feb. 11.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will you kindly classify the sample with this. It was taken from a strip of land at the Salton Sea. Has it a commercial value?

Yours respectfully, J. J. H.

ANSWER: The sample is a very good grade of obsidian.

Volcanic glass—such as sample—is used in the manufacture of ink wells, beads, brooches, paper cutters, etc. Like meerschaum, a very little goes a great way, or in other words the supply is far greater than the demand.

A Fearful Sentence.

An almost ominous stillness held full sway in the Sunday-school room where the trial was held.

He who had presided throughout the hearing arose and, pointing a bony forefinger straight at the cowering culprit, pronounced the verdict as women wept and strong men held their breath—

The best investment today is that which is based on real estate, which never deteriorates in value, but always advances and improves. Such an investment is offered in Associated Realty Company's stock. This company, successfully operated for ten months, is making large and regular dividends for its stockholders. It owns lands, improved and unimproved, to the value of $300,000, located in Los Angeles, San Bernardino, Glendale, Inglewood, Riverside, Orangehurst, Long Beach and Redondo. The company is building homes as fast as its present equipment will permit.

The Board of Directors have decided to issue $200,000 in stock to provide capital for the building of more homes that have already been sold. The Associated Realty Company is on a splendid basis of solid security and strength. Its stock in ten months has increased from par value—$1.00 to $1.40—which is the selling price today. On April 1st the price will go to $1.50.

Thousands of people are flocking to Los Angeles. The demand for homes is far in excess of the supply. Enormous profits are being made in meeting this demand—that is the purpose of the Associated Realty Company. You are now offered an opportunity to share its profits. If you are interested—and you certainly should be—come and see us tomorrow, or write for further information. Remember, on April 1st, the price will go to $1.50.

WORKERS' PAGE—The Great Campaign for Industrial Liberty in America.

OPENING THEIR EYES.

[EDITORIAL.]

AT a recent gathering of trade unionists in the northern part of the State a prominent laborite calmly told his hearers that they were slaves to trade-unionism. It was a great concession for a labor boss to make, but a truth, nevertheless, and a truth which the rank and file of the unionites are beginning to realize; and realizing it, they are casting off the yoke of bondage and rebelling against the tyranny of the labor bosses. For years the union wage-earners have been deluded into believing that their leaders were God-sent and commissioned to guide them out from the wilderness into the promised land. Now, however, they are beginning to see that for years they have been living in a state of bondage and servitude that outrivals that of the negroes in ante-bellum days. They see that industrial freedom, or any other kind of freedom, can never be secured through the trade union movement. We have all along contended that the laborites are the enemies of industrial freedom and we believe that the day is not far distant when those who have opposed this contention will join with us in trying to hasten the dawn of a new era of real freedom.

To the union wage-earner the term "freedom" means very little if anything. He knows nothing about freedom from practical experience. He has nothing to say as to whom he shall work for. The labor boss regulates his wages, a certain percentage of which is levied as tribute by the boss who often brags how he whips his subjects into line. He is ordered on or off the job by the labor boss who usually is as void of humane feelings as the slave driver who used to crack the whip across the naked backs of his bondsmen. Like the slaves of former days the union wage-earner has no chance for redress. He must obey his master or suffer the consequences, and a refusal to obey often results in his being denied the right to earn a living at his trade. The union masters, for such are the professional labor leaders, dictate to the union slaves how and where they shall spend their hard-earned dollars. They must purchase the products of other union slaves and these purchases must bear the label of their bondage for which they are charged exorbitant prices. Added to this, the slaves must contribute to the support of the union masters who revel in the luxuries of life. The union master who recently taunted a gathering of trade unionists with the fact that they were in a state of bondage, himself lives in the lap of luxury. His children are students in a university. He rides about in a high-priced automobile and maintains a city and country home. His subjects, many of them hungry and penniless, are walking about the streets in search of employment because the master has decreed that they shall not work for certain employers who refuse to sanction the methods of the union masters.

There is no freedom for man or woman in the trade union movement. The union wage-earners are living in a state of abject bondage. They are awakening to their deplorable condition, however, and the time is surely coming, and coming soon, when they will arise in the strength of their manhood, rebel against the tyranny of their masters, throw of the yoke of union bondage and say: "We are no longer slaves to trade-unionism; WE ARE FREE AMERICAN WAGE-EARNERS."

---

on their wives, their children, their sweethearts, or themselves? and today when the Federation president is asked for money to bring on and support a strike in Los Angeles, he answers "nothing doing." Yet the Federation has money in the bank drawing interest to the extent of $4500 a year. Why will American labor persist in selling its "birthright for a mess of pottage?"

WAGES ABROAD.

Laborers in West China are paid 5 cents American currency a day and board themselves. If we let down the tariff bars, we run the risk of being flooded with the product (cotton goods, etc.,) of this 5 cents a day labor. Wages are but little better in either Japan or India, in both of which countries cotton goods are made. In China and India cotton is also grown. Home-grown cotton and extra low wages if their products entered here full or even at a low rate of duty, would play "Old Harry" with American wages in American cotton mills.

In France the average daily wages of coal miners have increased in twenty years from 78 cents to $1.11 for inside miners, and from 57 to 76 cents for outside miners, or from 73 cents to $1.15 for both categories of miners.

The Tariff Commission, in its investigation of wages paid abroad, finds that in Germany (the best European example, as it has a protective tariff) many workmen in factories do not receive much more in a week than the same class of workmen in this country receive per day. If the tariff bars are let down, German competitive goods will flood this country. Remember that, American wage-earning voter, and all other American voters, when you come to the congressional and presidential elections of 1912. Pote for the American factory and American high wages, not for the foreign factory and foreign low wages.

Note the following from the Augsburg (Germany) Chamber of Commerce: "The average wage of a weaver of ordinary efficiency runs from $3.75 to $4 per week. The probable difference in favor of the American weaver is in the proportion of two or two and one-half to one."

WAGES IN GLASS TRADE.

And in the glass trade, with Belgium as our chief competitor:

	American wages. Per month.	Belgian wages. Per month.
Blowers	$120.50	$60 to $80
Gatherers	90.25	40 to 50
Cutters	124.00	28 to 38
Flatteners	120.00	40 to 60
Lehr tenders, girls	48 to 60	15 to 18
Shove boys, girls	48 to 60	15 to 18
Roller boys, girls	48.00	18

To say nothing of the inhumanity of putting this hard labor on girls. Still, in Germany, according to official reports, three million women do work in the fields, which is done by animals or machines in this country. That is a horrible labor condition, and one that disgraces the German nation. Public opinion would not allow it in this country.

WAGES IN CUBA.

In volume 4 of Tariff Hearings is this: "With their small cost for land and no fertilizers used, the Cuban grower of pineapples has a maximum cost for labor of 80 cents per day, and at times, much less figures, whereas we have a minimum cost for labor of $1.25 per day, with the average for a large part of the season above $1.50 per day; and a part of the year we pay as high as $2 and even $2.50 per day."

WAGES IN WORSTED INDUSTRY.

Senator La Follette, (Congressional Record of June 25, 1909,) gives these figures of wages paid in the worsted industry in England and United States.

	England. Per week.	United States. Per week.
Boss spinner	$12.00	$18.00
Sorters	7.30	12.50
Mule spinner	7.30	9.50
Weavers	4.00	9.00
Washers or dyers	5.60	7.00
Fullers and pressers	6.00	7.00
Carders	3.90	6.00
Gill boxes	3.00	6.00
Comb winders	3.00	6.00
Ring spinner	3.00	6.00

In Italy and France these wages are less, considerably less, than in England. Do we want to let in English, French, or Italian worsteds? No! say you—then so vote in 1912 as to keep them out.

WAGES IN SWEDEN.

Here are some Swedish Wages:

	Per week.
House carpenters	$5.25
Machinists	7.70
Firemen, eighty hours per week	6.25
Stationary engineers, 75 hours per week	5.60
Bricklayers	6.48

Given in the Senate by Senator W. A. Smith of Michigan, (Congressional Record, May 23, 1909).

support the strike of those employed by the wholesale firm of Austin, Nichols & Company, Francis H. Leggett & Company, and Clark Chapin & Bushnell. The police department will guard against a repetition of the riots which attended the strikes of the New York express drivers (one innocent man murdered) and the chauffeurs. Some of the present strikers were employed on automobiles in parts of the city.

One hundred and fifty miners employed at the Concepcion Mine at Puerto Llano, Spain, struck and were all discharged from present and future employment.

Because of excessive labor demands, the lapidaries are opening up diamond-cutting plants outside of Antwerp, Belgium, which up to the present has been the only diamond-cutting center of Belgium. The cutters and polishers are receiving wages, such as no other industry could afford. Apprenticeships are so controlled by the labor syndicate that a newcomer, even if he be the son of an employer, cannot get work unless some other apprentice withdraws in his favor. At the same time, repeated reduction in hours of work are compelled by the labor syndicate. Talk about trust, this diamond labor trust of Antwerp is a "trust" par excellence. Even San Francisco has nothing stronger in the labor-control line. All the same, Antwerp is losing thousands of dollars a year in wages by the opening of the outside plants, and may eventually lose it all. Monopoly in anything eventually kills itself, the world over.

INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS.

The importance of potash to the industrial interests of the United States has become so great that the Geological Survey has been asked to explore for deposits of potash salts and see if relief from almost absolute dependence upon Germany cannot be obtained. At the present time Germany is stated to have the undoubted world's monopoly of soluble potash salts. During 1910 the United States imported 1,798,388,772 pounds of potash, valued at $11,615,130. Ten years ago the importations were 717,471,453, valued at $5,237,558. The regions just east of the Rocky Mountain wall and the Great Basin region are considered not unfavorable to the discovery of large bodies of potash salts, and the work of the Geological Survey will include deep drilling in these regions.

At the present time Pittsburgh is the vanadium center of the world, and the entire industrial world must look to the Pittsburgh companies for its supply. One of the companies owns extensive deposits of vanadium sulphate in Peru, South America, and reduction works at Bridgeville, just outside of Pittsburgh. The newer company has secured 400 acres of a lead vanadate deposit of unknown quantity in fissure veins in the Caballos Mountains of Southern New Mexico, twelve miles from Cutter, on the Santa Fe Railroad. The mines produce a lead vanadate with 55 per cent. lead sulphate and 9 per cent. vanadium. This is the richest body of vanadium known outside the Peru deposit.

The new Pittsburgh company has just completed a concentrate plant at its mines, two of which are opened, and also an oxide plant which separates the lead sulphate from the vanadium ore at Cutter. The latter plant is the largest industrial building in New Mexico and has caused no little wonder in that State. The concentrate plant at the mines has a capacity of 150 tons a day, while the oxide plant at Cutter has a capacity of 12,000 pounds of lead sulphate a day, and the vanadium ore that will be shipped from the oxide plant will be equal to between 1500 and 2000 pounds of pure vanadium a day.

The company ships its lead sulphate direct from Cutter, N. M., to consumers and ships its vanadium ore to Rankin, where it is made into ferro vanadium in a newly constructed steel building that will begin shipping the finished product on March 15. The total production in weight appears small, but not so, when values are considered. Vanadium is now selling at $5 a pound and lead sulphate at 5 cents a pound. At this rate the plant at Rankin will be turning out vanadium at the rate of from $7500 to $10,000 a day. At the same time the bi-product plant at Cutter, N. M., will be turning out lead sulphate at the rate of $600 a day.

The Besshi copper mine, one of the largest mines in Japan, owned by the Sumitomi family, is to have equipment installed for the manufacture of phosphate fertilizer produced from the sulphuric smoke of its furnaces. The new equipment will greatly increase the revenue of the mine as American experience shows that the fertilizer business may easily prove more lucrative than the mining work itself. It is estimated that the mines will produce 1,800,000 bales of fertilizer a year.

Local Situation.

FOOLISH GIRLS OBEY BOSSES.

Quit When Employer Tries to Help Them.

Predicted General Strike Sure to Be Fizzle.

Independent Workers Scorn Unionite Overtures.

The utter imbecility of striking for higher wages without consideration of the employer's situation was demonstrated in Los Angeles last week. A dozen or more girls, employed by a local manufacturing concern, demanded higher wages. Without waiting for any explanation, a strike was called.

The manager announced that the wages complained of were given to the girls to tide them over a dull period. He stated that the work was in large part created, so that the young women might be kept. The strike relieved the concern of a financial burden, small though it was.

In other words, here was a case where the employer was doing his best to retain help during a dull period, but the employees considered it an opportune time to declare a strike unless their pay was raised.

Efforts towards unionizing some of the trades here have proved almost farcical. At a meeting of laundry-workers, called at Labor Temple, several days ago, only a score of men and women were present. The walking delegate, who tried to organize the laundry employees, gave out the statement that fear of discharge was the sole reason for the remarkable lack of enthusiasm in his project.

The best laundries in the city have been run on the open-shop principle for several years. The employees get good pay and work short hours. The majority of them are contented and see no reason for paying in $25 each for the privilege of joining a laundry-workers' union.

There is every indication that the much-vaunted laborite strike set for May, will prove an absolute fizzle. Even in the trades supposedly controlled by the labor trust, less than 25 per cent. of the workers here are union men. Stone-cutters are supposed to have a union that is absolutely autocratic, yet in a local strike a year or so ago of granite and marble cutters, the employers were able to defy the despotic laborite bosses and secure plenty of non-union men from the East.

The imported bosses declare that the Building Trades Union is the backbone of the local labor agitation yet less than 20 per cent. of the carpenters, masons and the like are members of the union here.

That Los Angeles is prepared to face any so-called invasion of I.W.W.'s was shown a short time ago, when a gang of the dissolute fellows came here from Fresno. Within an hour of their arrival, the rabid laborites were lodged in jail. The police judge suspended sentence, upon the assurance that the men would leave the city.

A few sporadic attempts to picket certain foundries in the industrial district were promptly squelched. The East Side police have been especially active in getting after the law-breakers, and the police judges have reinforced the effect of the arrests by administering stiff sentences in all cases where convictions of violating the picketing ordinance were obtained.

There has been little, if any, violence during the week past. It is admitted by the laborite organizers that some of their most trusted agents have joined the insurrectos, where dynamiting, assassination and criminal assaults are regarded as promising indications of "patriotism."

Peppermint growers of New York and Michigan will meet competition from the reclaimed lands of Louisiana. A party of expert agriculturists who recently inspected the region, were convinced that this can be grown in limited quantities at a good profit. Peppermint oil was imported into the United States during the fiscal year to the extent of 1238 pounds, worth $6416, while the exports of American peppermint oil amounted to 161,811 pounds, worth $288,318.

Citizens of Paducah, Ky., are interesting western capital in a million-dollar cement proposition. The plant, which seems assured, will be on a 400-acre tract, containing a large deposit of limestone adapted to the manufacture of Portland cement. The plant will employ 300 men and have a monthly payroll of $25,000.

OPEN SHOP WORKMEN SHOULD HAVE PUBLIC SYMPATHY.

Friends of Equality Under the Constitution Should Recognize the Contest Being Forced Upon the Country by Gompers and the American Federation of Labor.

The use of the union label on all goods and the wearing of a union button by all union workingmen are two things constantly advocated by labor leaders. The union man is constantly reminded to look for the union label on all goods before making a purchase. It does not matter what crimes in the name of organized labor may have been committed by members of the unions which have attached their labels to articles of wear or utility, which unionites are expected to buy, and which the public are also expected to purchase to the exclusion of other classes of goods. The presence of these union labels is rarely ever made known to a purchaser and many a person wears a suit of clothes made by unionites who have attempted to murder non-union men or women who have sought work in shops where the unionites have gone on strike because of the refusal of their exacting demands. The same is true as regards hats, or shoes, or other articles of utility. The friends of the open shop thus innocently aid the domineering members of the American Federation of Labor. Were such people to insist upon being sold open-shop goods, the same as unionites insist upon union-made goods, it would have a tremendous effect upon the organized labor movement. Only a comparatively small proportion of the working people of the country belong to the ranks of organized labor, but the minority are so noisy and insistent that their number appears to be magnified a thousand times or more.

Consider the many murderous assaults that were made upon non-union workmen during the recent boycotts of hat makers of Danbury, N. J., and of Philadelphia, Pa.; also upon non-union garment makers of New York; also upon non-union clothing makers of Rochester, N. Y.; also upon the non-union cloak makers of Chicago; also consider the ruinous fight that was made by organized labor upon t Buck Stove and Range Company b cause the owners of the business co sidered that they had a right to ope ate their own establishments undi tated to by their employees. The numerous and murderous assaults a still fresh in mind and, having neve been condemned by unionites anywhere they have therefore been indorsed a legitimate methods for the promotio of unionism. For the friends of th open shop to refuse to purchase good made by any of the unions indorsin such murderous methods, would go long way toward putting an end t such methods.

The same murderous spirit has bee manifest right here in Los Angeles b the striking iron workers during th past season, and it is promoted by th head official (Gompers) of the American Federation of Labor. The anarchistic and revolutionary spiri breathed by this leader in criminal unionism was shown in the September issue of the American Federationist, o which Gompers is editor, in an articl referring to Los Angeles, wherein h said:

"On the Pacific Coast one city o refuge for supporters of the 'ope shop' has already been established. I is a walled city, and the 'philanthropists' are attempting to extend th wall until it encircles the whole coas Merchants, manufacturers, 'captains o industry,' judges, legislators and professional men are engaged in the attempt to build the wall. . . . A atmosphere of deep gloom always hovers over this city of refuge, established by the 'philanthropic promoter of the open shop,' and over the inside portals the miserable lotus eater always sees the heart-chilling inscription, 'Abandon hope all ye who ente here.' . . . The 'City of Angels' where the dream of the 'philanthropists of the open shop' has been realized, is a city of slave owners, slave drivers and chattel slaves."

Such is the drivel served to the organized workmen to encourage them to rebel against their employers, and consider themselves as down-trodden slaves. Of the same passion-inflaming character was an editorial in the American Federationist for June, 1908, wherein the following public threat was made:

"If our critics have any regard whatever for the public welfare, they would do well to consider the present industrial situation from a somewhat broader point of view than they usually assume. . . . Not only to the press of this character, but to its masters—to those who control such policy—we would direct a word of warning.

On Van Nuys and Lankershim Lands

The eyes of the whole world are on Los Angeles. Its fame has spread around the globe. Tens of thousands—yes, hundreds of thousands—are headed for this wonder city. They may not all reach here for several years—but they'll get here just the same. About the wisest thing any man who is right here "on the ground" can do is to secure a piece of land that is closely united to this great city by an electric line. He can make an excellent living from the products of his land—GROWN WITHOUT IRRIGATION—and sell it later for many times its original cost—perhaps in 50-foot lots at $1000 or more each. The best suburban buying opportunity today is VAN NUYS AND LANKERSHIM LANDS. This magnificent stretch of land — at the very gates of the most rapidly growing city in the world—is being improved with over $500,000 worth of asphalt boulevards—depots are being built, homes erected and contracts for scores of others are in preparation.

Buy now at original prices—in advance of the car line—contract calls for completion in April. Go with us and see the fertile peach, apple, apricot and grape lands—grows fruit without irrigation, owing to the moisture-retaining character of soil.

We have the best facilities for showing you Van Nuys and Lankershim lands. Make arrangements for a personally conducted visit. Automobile excursion leaves this office at 9 a.m. daily.

BOYCOTT IS PLAYED OUT.

SAN FRANCISCO LABORITES SEE THAT IT'S FADED.

Picketing Serves to Boost Baker's Business and He Asks for More. Young Fellow Named Beck Coming to Los Angeles to Organize the Culinary Workers.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 8.—Recognizing that picketing by the labor unions in this city has come to be a joke, and that such methods only serve to boost an employer's business, the San Francisco Labor Council has issued a general order to affiliated unions to refrain from boycotting or picketing "unfair" houses except in such cases as the Executive Committee of the Labor Council shall direct.

For some time past it has been common knowledge that union pickets served to increase business of firms that had been declared "unfair to organized labor."

We know of one case where a union issued circulars telling the public why it should not patronize a certain bake shop. Pickets with a donkey were stationed in front of the man's place of business, and yet his business increased to such an extent that he was compelled to employ additional help. He finally requested the unoin to furnish him with 5000 copies of the circular declaring his place "unfair" and agreed to distribute them free to the residents in the neighborhood of his bakery.

In connection with failure of boycott, it would not be amiss to relate an incident that occured this week. One of the culinary unions had placed a picket on an "unfair" restaurant. An hour later the secretary of the union received a telephone call from the proprietor asking him to call at his place of business at once. The secretary, believing that the house was about to be "signed up," lost no time in getting on the scene of trouble. Imagine his surprise when he found that his picket was drunk and was being cared for by the proprietor of the resturant who had taken him in to prevent his arrest on the charge of being drunk and disorderly. In return for this kindness the union the next day placed two pickets, one to take care of the other, in front of this restaurant. The pickets have since been removed by order of the Labor Council and only non-union men are employed in the house.

We have been told that a man by the name of Beck is in Los Angeles trying to cause dissatisfaction among the culinary workers of that city. We cannot understand why he did not remedy conditions here before extending his labors to Los Angeles

Beck has been living on the unions in San Francisco for the past ten years. For the meager salary of $40 a week, he has been sacrificing himself for the culinary workers of this city. In spite of his efforts during the past ten years there is not a strictly union restaurant or cafe in San Francisco. Cooks, waiters and waitresses are working for anything they can get and are willing to work any hours for the sake of getting employment. As far as the cooks' helpers are concerned, there is hardly a house in town that recognizes the union, preferring to pick up their help from the streets, rather than take chances on the class of men furnished by the union.

A man who at present travels under the name of Collins, and who is a business agent for a labor union here, was arrested in a Barbary Coast dive the other night for being drunk and disorderly. Arriving at the City Prison, he showed his union badge and after a "heart to heart talk" with the police officials he was turned loose only to proceed to "tank up" and then entered a cafe, where he was so insulting and abusive that he was forcibly ejected. He is still on the job, and is drawing a salary double that earned by members of his union working at the craft, despite the fact that a number of employers have advised the union that he will not be permitted to enter their places of business.

After soliciting subscriptions from practically every labor union in San Francisco and vicinity in order to start a labor journal, A. E. Fowler, friend and former associate of Tvietmoe, Yoell and other prominent laborites, has disappeared with the cash.

Fowler's game was to arouse the wage-earners to the alleged dangers of our present immigration laws that, according to Fowler, permit "undesirables" to compete with the American wage-earners.

He started a little magazine protesting against the "system" and collected a large sum of money to finance the scheme. After two issues, the magazine ceased to appear, simultaneously with the disappearance of Fowler and the funds of the company. Now the laborites are unkind enough to hint that Fowler is also one of the "undersirables" against whom he was preaching.

Big Mexican Industry.

With a capital of $35,000,000 invested in plants and factories the guayule output of Mexico during 1911 is estimated at $50,000,000. This industry has now grown to be one of great importance in Mexico. The crude rubber manufactured from the juice of the shrub guayule during the year ending July, 1910, was valued at $16,760,068, and the value of the shrubs exported amounted to $9,568,121 for the twelve months. During the previous year the value of the crude rubber was only $8,040,074 and the shrub $4,541,642, or as twelve is to twenty-six.

It is stated in the report that almost all of this output was exported to the United States, the greater quantity being consigned to the factories at New York. The shrubs exported went principally to Marathon, Tex., where they were converted into crude rubber.

The actual production of crude rubber in the Mexico factories was 3,000,000 pounds a month, and the value was $1 gold a pound. New factories have been built in the past six months and conservative estimates are that the production during the present fiscal year will reach $50,000,000.

A company of Spokane business men organized as the International Lead and Iron Company, controls iron mines on the Pend Oreille River, and a large group of claims just north of the international boundary line in the Northwest, and it is their intention to develop a great iron ore and steel industry. The ore so far developed averages 62 per cent. metallic iron, with only one-half of one per cent. sulphur and fourteen one-hundredths phosphorous. With such a mine as a base it is considered possible to start a pig iron plant of at least 500 tons daily capacity.

MUST SUPPORT EQUAL RIGHTS.

It is dangerous to ridicule and deride the honest, peaceful and lawful efforts of the workers to protect their rights and obtain redress for their wrong. Being human, the workers have many emotions, many primitive passions, many powers as yet little exercised. Deliberately convince the masses of the workers that they have no chance of redress or protection either from Congress or the courts and you invite a disregard for law and dislike for peaceful measures which may be most disastrous in its consequences to the country."

Waving the red flag as a public profession of anarchial disposition is not to be compared with such inflammatory publications as the above. Falling upon a weak mind it is provocative of assaults and other criminal acts. The iniquity of this teaching and its dangerous effect was recognized by Justice Wright in his decision of the Bucks Stove and Range case wherein he said of the American Federation of Labor:

"There is a studied, determined, defiant conflict precipitated in the light of open day, between the decrees of a tribunal ordained by the government of the Federal Union and the tribunals of another federation, grown up in the land; one or the other must succumb, for those who would outlaw the land are public enemies."

The final decision is with the public. The friends of fair play, of equal rights, must some time take a stand upon this question. Silence and indifference is an endorsement of the murderous and anarchistic methods used to terrify employers to recognize organized labor, and to close their establishments to those workmen who do not belong to the Gompers band of labor marauders. The purchase of union made goods by the friends of the open shop is an encouragement to the manufacturers who have closed their shops to free workmen, to continue such violation of the American spirit. Surely the working men and women who believe in their God-given rights to sell their labor to whomever they may please, are entitled to the support that is theirs by right under a Constitution that declares that every man is born equal.

UNIONITES IN ACTION.

Strikers Throw Acid.

The mealy-mouthed daily newspaper organs fear in every way to offend the unions, and therefore have made slight or no mention of a new method employed by striking milk drivers in Oakland. This is a novel invention, and it consists of throwing nitric acid on horses driven by free drivers.

The police of Oakland have arrested one individual guilty of the practice, and upon appearance before a police judge the miscreant was discharged. In another case where the acid-thrower escaped, two men passed a milk wagon on a motor bike and smashed a horse driven by a free workman over the head with an acid bottle. The poor dumb beast shrieked in agony as he sank to the pavement. In the meanwhile, other strikers arrived on a car, evidently following in the wake of the motor bike, and attacking the driver who was ministering to the horse, threw the contents of the wagon, milk, butter and eggs, to the four winds.

Acid throwing is something new. The owners should arm their milk men and tell them to shoot to kill, in every instance.—[San Francisco News Letter.

Weak Union and Poor Workmen.

Statements of employers of machinists and iron molders as to the lack of principle in the closed shop demands of the unions of these two crafts, may or may not have been entitled to much weight heretofore. That the general public and the press of the country, however, is at last awakening to a realization of the incongruity of the closed shops as well as the animus behind it, is shown in the following extract from the editorial columns of the New York Times:

"It is the weak union and the poor workman who uses methods springing from fear of competition with competent wage-earners under terms of lawful equality. There can be no public sympathy with workmen who seek to outlaw other workmen, whether under public law or trade-union law. It behooves prudent wage-earners to keep these two laws from clashing, because the public law must prevail whenever the issue is made."

Decision Against Union.

"Strengthening the forces of a labor union to put it in a better condition to make its claims in controversies that may afterward arise with employers is not enough to justify an attack upon the business of an employer by inducing his employees to strike."

This is a part of a decision of the Supreme Court handed down at Boston, March 3, in which it affirms the decision of the Superior Court in the case of Lucius B. Folsom and others against the officers of Boston Photo-engravers' Union No. 30. The decision says:

"The master was undoubtedly right in finding that the purpose of the defendants, and the real object of the strike, was not so much to obtain certain slight advantages referred to in the proposed agreements as to compel the employers, by inflicting this injury upon them, to submit to an attempt to obtain for the union a complete monopoly of the labor market in this kind of business by forcing all laborers who wished to work to join the union and by forcing all employers to agree not to employ laborers except upon such terms as they could make with the combination that should control all labor in this business. This has been held to go beyond the limit of justifiable competition."

When Labor Is Arrogant.

Labor is never so arrogant as when the demand exceeds the supply. But when the reverse is the case labor is usually willing to give a dollar's worth of work for a dollar. If with the restriction that may be temporarily necessary in the direction of new extensions, labor is laid off, it seems that a man is eagerly awaiting an opportunity to take another man's place. Men who are employed are sufficiently intelligent to recognize that inefficiency and laziness will not be tolerated while efficient and energetic men are knocking at the door for work. Under such circumstances labor as a whole braces up and the better results are equivalent to a reduction in wages.—[New York Commercial.

Strikes Without Grievance.

Crazy unionist teamsters, not satisfied with a milk wagon drivers' strike on their hands, have taken up a strike against the Sunset Lumber Company of Oakland. The teamsters had no formal grievance to register, and it is suspected that the walkout was engineered by a rival lumber firm, using the unions to draw trade chestnuts out of the fire for them.

The Sunset Lumber Company keeps union hours, and pays union wages, we are told. They have declared for the open shop, being tired of union domination in their business, and none of the old help will be taken back when this number firms of Oakland, except the Hogan Lumber Company, are lending the Sunset people sympathy and help. People who believe in the open shop should make a note of the above facts.—[San Francisco News Letter.

More Unionite Violence.

A dispatch from Amherst, N. S., of March 2, says:

"The defection of a score of mechanics from the ranks of the striking colliers at the Spring Hill mills of the Dominion Steel Company was followed tonight by a riotous demonstration, participated in by nearly five hundred strike sympathizers in which John Sharp, manager of the mine, was injured. Troops were called out, but before the soldiers arrived the homes of the mechanics had been wrecked. When the troops appeared the streets quickly were cleared.

"Leaders of the strikers who are members of the United Mine Workers of America, secured warrants for the arrest of Manager Sharp and the chief of the company's special police, charging these officials with having incited the riot. Both men were arrested.

"Tonight's outbreak was the most violent of a series of demonstrations which have occurred since the United Mine workers began, twenty months ago, their effort to secure recognition of their union, as against the provincial Mine Workers' Association."

IN THE DOMAIN OF SCIENCE.

Paul Heroult, the celebrated inventor of the Heroult process for making and refining steel, and whose patent rights for the United States were about two months ago, sold to the United States Steel Corporation for several million dollars, in relating his experiences and failures to discover a cheap method of reducing aluminum from its ore, among other things, said: "About twenty years ago (in France, of course,) I had a friend who since then became my partner, and we were both dead broke. We had pawned everything in sight, and also other things which were not in sight. Finally my partner had a bright idea. He had brought from home a stick of aluminum valued high in his family as a souvenir of Saint Claire Seville, the celebrated scientist. As we handed it to the pawnbroker the latter said: 'What is that bar, silver?' We said, 'better than that, it is aluminum and worth 60 francs a pound.' He said, 'it is hollow—well, I will give you 2 francs (40 cents) on it.' On a hot summer's day that was better than nothing, and we took the money with the firm intention of buying the stick back and restoring it to my friend's family, but we, of course, never did."

The principal uses of aluminum are: 1, in the steel industry as a deoidizer; 2, as an electric conductor; 3, in the reduction of refractory oides, and in welding by the aluminothermic process of Goldschmidt; 4, for cooking vessels; 5, for the base of alloys with nickel, chrome, tungsten, etc., for use in automobile and airship construction; 6, in the chemical industries for making aluminum bronze, etc. Dr. Charles Martin Hall, the inventor of the elec- Oberlin College where he took the classical, not the scientific course. Shortly afterwards he made his startling discovery, and when on the point of starvation, was "taken up" by the Pittsburgh Reduction Company. He is now many times a millionaire, and how many millions the company has made the public does not know. This company was the first to rent electric power from the Niagara Power Company, and for that reason got a special rate of $20 a kilowatt year.

In obtaining nitrogen from the atmosphere two methods are now in commercialy successful operation; one is by electric arc discharges, and the other by the formation of calcium cyanamide. In the former the inert elemental nitrogen in the air is transformed into nitrate, and in the latter into cyanamide. Both processes are effected by electricity; in the former one kilowatt-hour produces 70 grams nitrate containing 16 grams of nitrogen; in the latter it produces cyanamide containing 70 grams of nitrogen. Both products are artificial fertilizers. In the United States no works are in operation for making either product, but on the Canadian side of Niagara Falls is a plant for making cyanamide. Several large plants are in successful operation in Norway for making the nitratas. There electricity can be had for $3 a kilowatt-year while in the United States it costs $30 at least.

The principle of the fixation of atmospheric nitrogen by electric discharges through air is this: Air is blown through a furnace in which are a large number of small electric arcs. These arcs combine a small quantity of the nitrogen and oxygen in the air into a colorless gas No. 1, which passes into a tank of water and from there, when cool, to a chamber where it combines with free oxygen of the air and becomes No. 2, which is then passed through a tower of coke particles, through which water runs down, absorbing the No. 2, and forming nitric acid. The nitric acid is finally passed off into a receptacle filled with limestone and forms calcium nitrate, the fertilizer. All the processes for the "fixation" of the nitrogen by electric discharges through air are the same, and differ only in mechanical differences of construction.

Sir Robert A. Hadfield, the celebrated steel (especially manganese steel) metallurgist, who was here recently, read a paper the other day before the Institution of Electrical Engineers on the "Magnetic Properties of Iron and Its Alloys in Intense Fields," in which he stated that there is no alloy of steel with carbon, nickel or manganese having a higher specific magnetism than pure iron. This is at variance with the claims heretofore made that alloys—especially of nickel—had a higher specific magnetism. Magnetism is to the electrician what dough is to the baker, it produces the magnetic field from which electricity is produced, and any slight improvement increasing the specific magnetisms in the iron cores, or of effecting the quickest demagnetization—the prevention of lagging or "hysteresis" as it is called, is of enormous benefit and profit to the electrical industry.

In New York City an "Inventors' Guild" has been formed, the object of which is to advance the application of the useful arts and sciences; to further the interests and secure full acknowledgment among those who have made notable advances in the application of the useful arts and sciences. The membership is limited to fifty, and includes the names of such men as Peter Cooper Hewitt, Dr. L. H. Baekeland, Charles W. Hunt, Charles S. Bradley, etc.

Mr. Hansen of the General Electric Company, Schenectady, reports that a number of workmen after a run of copper at less than 1300 deg. C., were attacked with acute nausea which lasted twenty-four hours, and with all the symptoms of grippe. He attributes it to copper volatilized at points directly beneath the electrodes, where the heat would be very intense. He says it never occurred before apparently, and thinks that but for the perfect ventilation of the building very serious results would have followed the inhaling of the volatilized metal.

Air dried peat is not alone an excellent fuel for domestic use, but for the production of power it proves an ideal fuel in the peat-gas-producer. Dr. Haanel, director of mines, Canada, says it is better than coal for this purpose because it is generally free from clinkering ash, and will not cake in the producer. It is claimed that with peat, producer gas running a Koerting four-cycle single-acting gas engine directly connected to a Westinghouse 50-Kw. direct-current generator, the consumption of peat per brake horse-power is about two pounds, or the value of about 1¼ cents.

Cylinders of aluminum bronze can, it is claimed, be cast both in chills and sand molds to withstand a water pressure of eighteen tons to the square inch. The alloy best suited is 91 per cent. pure copper and 9 aluminum; it commences to stretch slightly at about twelve tons pressure. The bronzes were perfectly homogeneous with these proportions, and their corrosion in fresh or in sea water extremely slight. No other bronzes possessed this combination of properties.

In making castings of phosphor-bronze for the British Admiralty, fifteen times more weight of metal frequently goes into the mold than is ultimately left in the finished product.

Evolution of Human Physique.

The physical decay of men over forty must be more frequently mentioned lest we forget the fact that our physique was evolved for only thirty-five or forty years of strenuous use, says American Medicine.

It was not so long ago that forty-five was extreme old age, counting time in the large way of evolution. Lengthening of life has been possible only because civilization has let up the physical strains, so that if we continue them we must expect to break as of old.

Athletes stop their efforts merely because they are beaten by younger men, but the non-athletic seem to think that it is necessary to keep up excessive exercises though the tissues simply cannot stand it.

There is no mystery in the large number of damaged hearts now being found, and they will continue to increase in number and severity until the medical profession succeeds in impressing the lesson. Let us repeat it over and over again until every man over forty or forty-five realizes that he has lived his allotted time of physical

The Age of Fish.

It is not generally known that there is hardly any limit to the age of a fish. Prof. Baird of the United States Fish Commission is the authority for the statement that there is authentic evidence to show that carp have attained the age of 200 years. Prof. Baird also says that there is a tradition that within fifty years a pike was living in Russia whose age dated back to the fifteenth century. "There is nothing," he says, "to prevent a fish from living almost indefinitely, and it has no period of maturity.

"There are gold fish in Washington that have belonged to one family for over fifty years. They do not appear to be much larger than when they were originally placed in the aquarium, and are every bit as lively as they

HOW TUNNEL WAS DUG.

"A whisper went around in January, 1864, that a tunnel was being dug. Those of us who were upstairs could not learn anything definite. Early in February we were told that the tunnel had been completed. Persons who have heard of that remarkable piece of engineering work will remember it was conceived and carried out by Col. Thomas E. Rose, of Pennsylvania, assisted by Maj. Archibald G. Hamilton, of the Twelfth Kentucky Cavalry. All the tools they had were a broken penknife and an old chisel. Their time for work was from 10 o'clock at night until 4 o'clock in the morning.

"With many others, Rose and Hamilton were imprisoned in a large room on the ground floor of the warehouse. They dug into the wall of the fireplace, going down about eighteen inches to the ceiling of a storage room in the basement. There was a drop of eight feet from the hole in the ceiling to the earth floor of the basement, which was dark at one end and filled with boxes and rubbish. The tunnel began in the basement and went through a stone wall and under a street to an old building fifty feet away. The digging was done by Rose, Hamilton, and fifteen other men. All of the dirt was piled in the dark part of the cellar and under the boxes and refuse. After the diggers left the large room upstairs each night, the bricks were put back in the fireplace and the joints rubbed with soap and ashes.

"Three of us agreed that when the break came we should go together. One man, however, did not get away. William L. Watson of New York, therefore, was my only companion. We had planned our flight and reasoned out the details to our own satisfaction. All the escaping prisoners, we thought, would leave Richmond and travel toward Williamsburg, forty-eight miles distant. So we determined to steal a boat, cross the James River, and make our way to the coast, hiding by day and walking at night.

"When I was creeping through the tunnel on the night of February 9, the head of another man would occasionally touch my feet. He was Lieut. Frank Moran. Neither Watson nor I was acquainted with him, but coming out of the tunnel, one after the other, was all the introduction we needed. Moran, a very intelligent man, argued us out of our plans, and, to our sorrow later, we changed our course and followed him. We walked straight through Richmond. It was then about 3 o'clock in the morning. A good many Confederate soldiers were passed with fear and trembling. Watson pretended to be drunk, and Moran and I acted as if we were taking him home, whistling 'Dixie' and other Southern tunes to increase the deception.

PICKETS WERE ASLEEP.

"It was almost daylight when we ran into the picket line outside the city. Soldiers were on the ground at a fire. They seemed to be asleep. Maybe they were. However, we crept off on all fours and crossed the line farther away, still crawling on the ground and looking, I suppose, like animals. At the break of day we hid in a briar thicket, some distance from the road. During the morning we heard men hunting in the woods. We knew the home guard would be sent to beat the brush, but we were so deep in the thicket that we thought we were safe.

"Early in the afternoon a party of soldiers passed so near that we could see their legs through the bare stems of the bushes. A second party discovered us two or three hours later. They had been told in Richmond that we were desperate men and were armed with revolvers. So they passed on but came back just before dark reinforced in number. A dozen or fifteen loaded muskets were stuck into our faces and we surrendered.

"That night we were kept under guard. The next day we were marched into Richmond. The streets were crowded with women and children to see the return of the Yankees, all dangerous men, it was said. Of the 109 prisoners who crept through the tunnel, fifty were recaptured. Moran, Watson and I were put into a cell underground. Inside of two hours we were in communication with the prisoners above by means of a quickly bored hole in the ceiling. Notes were sent back and forth and all the news of the prison was thus passed from cellar to garret. One day a guard came to the door and said: 'Six men out.' I was near at hand. Watson, back in the cell, came to the front with a rush. Life in the dungeon with us was over.

"Three months later, we set off for the prison at Macon, Ga. We traveled in box cars, sixteen to the train. Guards were inside the cars and on top. Much time was spent on side tracks and at stations waiting for orders. Prisoners accumulate a good deal of junk. Having nothing but what is on their backs and very little of that, the smallest thing they can pick up is of value. A rusty nail becomes of large prospective importance. Carrying all we had onto the cars, we looked like a caravan of beggars. Before the train was fairly out of Richmond, some of us were slowly digging a hole through the bottom of the car, while our associates sat on the floor near the guards and played cards to conceal our operations. In the meantime holes were being made in every other car of the train.

SLIPPED THROUGH HOLE.

"When we stopped, late one night, at Milan Junction in Georgia, I went through the hole. A thrill passed up and down my body as my feet touched free ground. I kept under the edge of the car, bending over and going toward the engine as fast as possible, on the theory that if I could get to the head of the train before it started and lie down on the ends of the ties, as near to the rail as was safe, I would not be discovered when the last car passed the spot where I was hiding. The theory worked out perfectly.

"After the train had disappeared in the darkness, I got up and looked around. Nobody was in sight. In a few minutes, however, I met two other prisoners. Strange as it may seem, I have forgotten their names. I didn't investigate any further. Three were enough in that sort of an adventure. One night, we walked forty miles. We buried ourselves in the woods during the daytime. Once, followed by dogs and men on horseback, we reached a deep, swift river. Two of us could swim. The other man, a Union soldier from North Carolina, couldn't, but he plunged in just the same. We helped him all we could. It seemed to me he was on the bottom most of the time. He not only got across, but he beat me and the other fellow and was shaking the water out of his clothes when we climbed the bank of the river.

"We were often compelled to wade creeks for considerable distances to fool the dogs that were following us. The food we ate was obtained from negroes. At 9 o'clock one night I left my companions in the woods and went to a cluster of cabins on a large plantation. I secreted myself near a door. By and by a colored man came out into the open. His name was Horace. He and I foolishly agreed to meet him in a corner of a field, instead of the timber where we belonged and should have remained. The negro had to be careful and we lay on the ground for a long while waiting. Presently somebody appeared, but he was another slave and not our friend Horace. While we were talking to him and explaining we heard some one say: 'Surrender.'

"Looking around, we saw a man covering us with an army revolver. The negro ran away. We argued with the man for some time. He had been slightly wounded and sent home, and being a miller, was grinding corn for the Confederate army. Hearing us talking in the field, having just come from his work, he had slipped up behind us and made us prisoners.

"'I shall kill you,' he said, 'if you try to run away.'

"We told him he could shoot one of us without doubt, but that the two of us remaining would then shoot him with his own revolver. After arguing the matter up and down, we let him march us to a house. Next day we were taken to Augusta and put in jail. Thence we were sent to Macon, where we met the fellow-prisoners whom we had left at Milan Junction. They had ridden, you see, while we had walked. That was the only difference.

GUARDS WERE WARNED.

"At Macon we went instantly to work. We had three artistic tunnels under way, when a traitor among us told the guards. By that time I had become an inveterate escaper. On the Fourth of July about eight hundred of us were taken to Charleston, S. C., and placed on the water front. The commander of the Federal fleet was then notified that if he bombarded the city he would probably kill several hundred officers of the Union Army. On the way to Charleston, we organized the most glorious exploit of the war. We even chose a colonel, but he backed out at the last minute, declining to assume responsibility for the lives that were sure to be lost. Our purpose was to disarm the inside guards, fight the outside guards, cut the railroad and telegraph line, surprise and capture the nearest Confederate fortification, and then notify our warships off the coast of what had been done.

"I had yellow fever while at Charleston. No attempt at escape was made there. After being sent to Columbia, S. C., I got away twice. The first time I was out but a day and was caught in the woods at night. The next time Capt. M. R. Baldwin of the Second Wisconsin; Milton Ewing, captain of my own company, and myself told the guards we had been detailed to get firewood. Baldwin and I afterward served together in Congress. That night, we met at a rendezvous in the forest agreed upon several days in advance. We hoped to reach the sea coast and signal one of our vessels on blockade duty. The third night Ewing, who was ill and weak, delayed us. At daylight we found that we were in an open country of plantation. Negroes saw us and soldiers came and took us to the county jail at Warren. From there we went to Columbia, where we began two tunnels. Sherman's army was approaching, so we were quickly loaded on cars and started toward Savannah.

"Deep in the night of February 14, 1865, I again went through a hole in the floor of a freight car. I had been in prison many months and was much reduced in strength. The night was bitterly cold and a sleet storm was covering everything with ice. My feet were wrapped in rags and my clothing was in tatters. The night was so rough that I was the only man in my car to take the chance. I ran forward, just as I did at Milan Junction, lay on the ties and the train passed. I joined four men who had escaped from other cars. One of them was Honeycup, of East Tennessee, and another was Beck, from I don't know where. All were strangers to me.

RESCUED BY NEGROES.

"We walked along the railroad in the sleet and wind and I increased my pain and misery by falling into a cattle guard. Soon after that I gave out. I was frozen to the bone. We saw a light and found a cabin. The negroes took us in, warmed and fed us and hid us in the woods. We remained in the neighborhood several days and then the negroes guided us to a slashing far back in the forest. We slept on the ground, lying close together to keep warm. The smoke of Columbia, which was burning, drifted across the sky and we understood that Sherman was

CONSULAR NOTES.

Shipment of tin from China, in which the United States is materially interested, are likely to be largely increased. Practically all the tin mines of the country are in Yunnan Province, exported almost entirely through the port of Wengtze and by way of Waiphong to Hongkong, whence they are distributed all over the world. China's exports of tin the four years 1906-9 were:

	Pounds.	Value.
1906	9,063,177	$2,783,067
1907	8,196,790	2,667,342
1908	10,635,345	2,913,986
1909	9,931,775	2,599,049

A modern ore dressing and smelting plant is being installed by German interests in Yunnan. Antimony mining is now permitted in Yunna ad Kwangsi Province, both rich in that mineral.

An American company has opened 5 and 10 cent stores in London, Liverpool, Preston, Leeds, Hull and Manchester, England, and is planning to open others in that country.

Coffee crops now being harvested in Salvador and Guatemala bid fair to be record breakers.

Though the harbor works at Salina Cruz are being pushed forward with all possible rapidity the commerce of that port is increasing even faster.

There is a building boom in New South Wales. During 1910, 5470 buildings were erected at Sydney, costing $30,941,174, or $2,000,000 more than in 1909 and $8,000,000 more than in 1908. American skyscrapers are proposed. This year, 1911, will give a building record of $30,000,000.

The new Chilean 5 per cent. loan was subscribed ten times over in London after being open only one hour on January 23.

Conductors on the electric railways of Prague, Austria, expect and receive from each passenger a tip of two hellers (one-fifth of a cent) from each passenger. Last year 49,500,000 passengers were carried. The tips amount to as much as the conductor's regular pay. That is the "Pullman" American custom as to porters only more of it.

Seoul, the capital of Korea (now Chosan) has one American dentist and several Japanese ones, but dentists are very scarce through the country generally.

Thousands of oil palm trees in Portuguese Guinea drop their nuts annually. As there is no one to take them away they are allowed to decay and thus valuable produce is lost.

The new railway to the Nigerian tin fields, 100 miles long, will open up this new field and increase notably the world's supply of tin.

In thirty years the electric railway mileage of the United Kingdom has increased from 300 to 2,562 miles, the capital invested from $20,000,000 to $360,000,000, the number of passengers carried yearly from 146,000,000 to 2,743,000,000, and the net receipts from $1,123,947 to $24,068,672.

An American firm has secured a $500,000 contract for machinery and equipment for a ship-repair yard at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. The contract specifically calls for everything to be of American manufacture.

Advertising matter is dutiable in Canada at the rate of fifteen cents a pound. This is not generally known.

In 1909, the port of London had an import and export trade of $1,570,001,000, or only $28,573,000 less than Germany's entire export trade of that year, $1,598,514,000. This great business was done on a single river, the Thames. Standing on London Bridge, one can see a forest of ships. In twenty years—1889-1909—the tonnage entering the port of London increased from 13,308,000 to 20,245,000.

The Argentine government has decided to work its petroleum deposits in the far south.

Markets for American automobiles exist and are of increasing value in the United Kingdom, Spain, Greece, and New South Wales (particularly popular there).

This is how foreign trade in American autos has increased:

1908	$ 4,948,504
1909	7,786,617
1910	13,190,296
Increase in two years	8,241,792

American ready-made clothing and working apparel will sell in Brazil, British Guiana, Chile, Mexico, Dominican Republic, Guadeloupe, Honduras and Paraguay.

Electrical Engineering and Machinery is to be held at Olympia, London, from September 23 to October 21, of this year. It is a manufacturers' exhibition, promoted by the large electrical manufacturers of England, and open to exhibitors from the United States, Germany, etc.

The Japanese have opened hundreds of shops in the open ports of China for the sale of novelties, where other foreigners are not represented. In some of the ports of China, the whole of this business in novelties is in the hands of Japanese.

Great Britain has 260 experimental plots, devoted to the growing of the sugar beet.

Foreign purchases of American cottonseed oil in 1909 reached a value of $19,567,067, and of cottonseed cake and meal, $10,660,760. Only a few years ago this industry did not exist. Its total output in 1909 was worth $107,538,000, a gain of 154 per cent. in ten years (census report.) Principal foreign buyers are Italy, Great Britain, Germany, France, Netherlands, Denmark, Canada, Mexico, Central America and South America.

Rhode Island capitalists have erected a smelter at Otillia, Ont., for treating senic. Twenty tons of ore will be used daily, including Sundays.

Panama is increasing its import duties on silks of all kinds, jewelry, furniture, silver or plated tableware, and perfumery, from May 1, 1911.

Piano players would sell in San Luis Potosi, Mex.

A society for the study of English has been formed in Bulgaria.

Irrigation projects are receiving serious government attention in Brazil, particularly in the northern States of Ceara, Rio Grande do Norte, and Parahyba, with their total irrigable area of 500,000 acres, and their 2,000,000 people. The proposed dam at Lavaras, State of Ceara, will hold in reserve only slightly less water than the famous Roosevelt dam in Arizona.

An American shoe store has been opened at Moscow, Russia.

The production of wine in France fell from 1,438,296,493 gallons in 1909 to 753,676,459 galons in 1910, but the value rose from $192,936,689 to $214,250,047.

British over-seas trade made large gains in 1910 calendar year, and continued gaining in January, 1911. In that month Argentina, Australia and India were large customers for steel rails, and India of locomotives also.

FINE HOSTELRY IS PROJECTED.

OHIO CAPITALIST MAY ERECT Orange County Grove Traded for

Site Just West of Bilicke Hill Leased for Proposed Tourist Hotel. Orange County Grove Traded for Large, Improved Frontage in South Pasadena.

SOUTH PASADENA, March 11.—M. Durnbaugh, of Orange, has sold to A. R. Graham, of this city, a thirty-five-acre orange grove, highly improved, for $45,000. The seller was deeded two lots in this city, with 275 feet frontage, improved with buildings and valued at $43,000, the difference being adjusted in cash.

Mrs. Sherman Douglas has traded to Los Angeles buyers her house and lot at No. 1931 Milan avenue, for a handsome home and ten-acre ranch in Hemet. The Milan-avenue property was acquired for investment.

Mrs. H. E. Hanchett has sold to Dr. Sweet, of San Diego, 50x150 feet, on El Centro street, between Pasadena avenue and Orange Grove, improved with a five-room cottage, for a reported consideration of $3500. L. Watson has transferred to Mrs. Margaret McEnery, of Ohio, 50x150 feet on El Centro street, Lincoln Park, in the Cawston tract, the price paid being $1200. Mrs. Mrs. McEnery will immediately commence the erection of a seven-room house.

Clifton J. Platt of Pasadena has sold to Roy L. Swavely 50x150 feet, improved with a six-room bungalow, on Elm avenue, between Monterey road and Oak street, the consideration being $3800. Mr. Swaveley purchased this property for a home.

According to a statement given out by Harris A. Miles, a Cleveland capitalist, this city will have another big tourist hotel in the not distant future. Mr. Miles, who is president of the Miles Realty Company of Cleveland, O., stated that he had leased five acres just west of the Bilicke Hill on Monterey road, but that his plans were not far enough matured to be made public.

He said his company had sufficient funds for the erection of a hostelry which will be a credit to Southern California, and he also stated that he thought this city had the best sites for a hotel of any city in the Southwest.

One of the finest bungalows in this section will be built in Oneonta, by Paul Judson, plans having been prepared for a six-room patio building, which will have a concrete foundation, cobblestone porch and rustic exterior. H. B. Duff will build a fine seven-room bungalow in the same section.

SUBURBAN ACRES POPULAR.

Settlers Flocking in in Great Numbers—Agents Report Many Sales and Inquiries in New Tracts.

SAN DIEGO, March 11.—Suburban ranch lands are being taken by settlers who are flocking into this section of California in large numbers. Agents report more sales and more inquiries for producing tracts of land at this time than ever before.

Every suburb in any direction from San Diego is feeling the effect of outside interest. One of the growing sections is Chula Vista. Loren Hunt of Chula Vista. He will erect a home to cost $5000.

P. A. Gushurst, former Mayor of Lead, S. D., and an ex-State Senator, and Malcolm Campbell, of the same place, have bought two lots. Each will build a fine home. Gushurst is a stockholder in the Homestake mine. Campbell owns the principal hotel in Lead and is a director in the First National Bank.

William H. Drew of Boston has purchased the Frank Garretson place of five acres for $8500. The tract is highly improved with fine lemons. Drew will bring his family from Boston.

Alfred Jenson of McCook, Neb., has bought of C. F. Mohnike one and one-fourth acres for $1000. Mohnike also sold to Maj. C. W. Darling of San Diego an undivided one-half interest in ten lots in blocks E and F, Chula Vista, for $4500.

David and W. B. Jones of Loyalton, Cal., this week purchased of George E. Buxton twenty acres in El Cajon Heights for $4800. They will build a residence and plant the tract to alfalfa and fruit.

Thornton E. Davis of Sierra Valley has bought of George E. Buxton ten acres adjoining that bought by the Jones for $2400. Davis will plant grapes.

At Lakeside Farms the San Diego Land and Improvement Company sold five acres to Mrs. Maud Kidd and five acres to A. F. Thore, both of Chicago. The purchasers will plant lemons.

Another rapidly growing suburb which is within the limits of San Diego is the Mission Hills district. J. W. Goings, who recently came here from Topeka, Kan., contemplates erecting a residence to cost $25,000. Goings formerly was president of the Kansas State Fair.

Nathan Rigson will soon begin the construction of a Swiss chalet to cost $4000. He will build at the corner of Lewis and Ibis streets.

J. E. Castien of Seattle has bought of Charles F. O'Neall 50x100 feet with a six-room cottage, on First street, between Ash and Beech, for $6000. O'Neall has sold to J. H. Lang 50x100 feet on Twenty-ninth street, between Beech and Cedar, for $8500. Land will build a residence to cost $2500.

John S. Hawley, a local capitalist, has taken out a permit to build a residence of tile at the corner of Second and Laurel streets, to cost $10,000.

H. J. Sparks will build a two-story frame rooming house on Campus street, between Van Buren and Tyler, to cost $6000. Porter & Forbes will build two cottages, each to cost $1800, one on L, between Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth, and one on Twenty-ninth between K and L.

John Hale will erect a two-story frame residence at the corner of Orangewood and El Cajon avenues, to cost $4000.

REALTY MARKET LIVELY.

MANY NEW HOMES IN WHITTIER.

WHITTIER, March 11.—Building activities continue to increase rapidly and the real estate market continues as brisk as usual. Since the first of the year more than $40,000 worth of building permits have been issued by the City Clerk, and, with the exception of the one issued for the Presbyterian Church, which is to cost $5000, all have been for cottages to cost on an average of about $2500.

J. Howard Johnson reports the following deals: One hundred and sixty acres of unimproved land near Perris, B. J. Adams to C. G. Warner, $10,400; house and lot on East Bailey street, C. G. Warner to B. J. Adams, $2500; house and lot on South Milton avenue, Ruby Keith to Mrs. Pettit, $1500; house and lot, South Painter avenue, for C. G. Warner, $2500; two lots on West Philadelphia street, R. G. Colvert to John R. King, $1050; lot on Berkeley way, Mrs. Hunt of Lindsay, to C. F. Moore, $800. Mr. Moore will improve the site with a home.

NEW TRACTS OPENED.

EIGHTEEN ACRES SUBDIVIDED.

GLENDALE, March 11.—During the past two weeks, two important tracts have been opened at this place. One is known as the Peidmont Park Tract and consists of eight acres, lying at the corner of First street and Glendale avenue. This tract is so laid out that there is a large court in the center, with the lots surrounding.

A new tract, opening announced this week, consists of ten acres adjoining the Leavitt property and the Piedmont Park Tract on the north. This has been cut up into acre lots, which are offered at $2000. The Piedmont Park Tract lots average about $3000.

LAWNDALE ACTIVITIES.

The Guy M. Rush Company reports among recent purchasers the following: M. M. Aycock, one acre; E. R. Moser, two acres; H. A. Irish, five acres; J. M. Cox, one acre; H. F. Anders, one acre; Sylvester Lord, one-half acre; Caroline Lano-Peterson, three acres.

FIFTH AND BOYLSTON.

C. C. C. Tatum of the Tatum-Winstanley Company, reports the sale of the lot at the northwest corner of Boylston and Fifth streets, being 150 feet on Boylston by 65 feet on Fifth street, for Frank Walker to Dr. S. J. Peters for the sum of $12,500, all cash. The purchaser contemplates the im-

PLANT NEARLY FINISHED.

Huge Beet Sugar Factory Will Employ Over Five Hundred Men—To Be in Operation Soon.

ANAHEIM, March 11.—The huge plant of the Anaheim Sugar Company is nearing completion and will probably be in active operation early in the summer. It will be the fourth beet sugar factory put in operation in Orange county.

The buildings consist of a main building, 240x60 feet, and three stories high; a warehouse 130x60 feet, a two-story office building and a separate group of buildings, comprising the boiler house, machine shops and kiln room. The construction is of steel, concrete and brick.

The factory will consume the product of 6000 acres annually. The project was financed by New York and Southern California capital. The plant and investment will represent an outlay of about $600,000. The factory will employ about 500 men.

NEW TOWN BOOMING.

Van Nuys, on the Map Less Than a Month, Reports Great Activity in Building Lots.

The stormy weather of the past week did not check the demand for lots in Van Nuys Townsite, sales for the six working days aggregating nearly $30,000. The outlook for the early completion of the double track electric railway to the district, the $500,000 boulevard, the rapid building up of the townsite, and the development of the great 47,000-acre Van Nuys-Lankershim tract all have contributed to this activity.

The names of buyers during the past six days are: S. V. Rebart, Glendale; Geo. W. Earle, city; Miss Caroline Weber, city; D. C. Williams, city; A. H. Baker, city; Mary E. Dosh, city; Carl H. Edeler, city; J. B. Langum, San Dimas; M. W. Hardenberg, city; Sophia Balchen, city; Miss Gertrude Myers, city; H. O. Jett, city; J. P. Hamerlund, Walnut Lawn; Florence Kauffman, city; J. B. Brackett, Imperial; W. P. Whitsett, city; Thomas H. Keefe, city; W. J. Sickles, Van Nuys; H. E. Van Nuys, city; S. M. Shultz, Avalon; Wm. Vincent, Ventura; D. C. Williams, city; W. J. Porter, city; Mrs. L. Altman, city; J. Baum, city; J. B. O'Dell, city; Jane E. Wren, city; Margaret Dolan, city; John Coxen, city; A. B. Dodge, city; E. B. Gale, city; Elizabeth Pfaffinger, city; Mina Pfaffinger, city; Fred Crowther, Chicago; G. E. McGilvary, Pasadena; V. V. LeRoy, city; W. L. Morton, city; Mrs. J. H. Amis, city; Miss Ethel Amis, city; Oron Lieb, city; H. H. Lieb, city; Mrs. H. M. Pratt, city; Edward F. Rauer, city.

NEW BUILDING COMPANY.

The incorporation of a new building company, the Guarantee Building and Investment Company, capitalized at $500,000, for the purpose of building and selling homes, has recently been consummated. The officers of the company are: President, James B. Eddie; vice-president, W. M. Keeling; secretary, S. N. Ayres. The directors are John F. Manning, Ira F. Thompson, W. M. Keeling, James B. Eddie and S. N. Ayres. The offices of the company are at rooms 422 and 423 Chamber of Commerce building.

Butler Brothers have prepared plans and will build for David E. Spangle at Seventh street and Kingsley drive, a two-story, ten-room Swiss chalet, 48x60 feet in size.

Ralph Hamlin will erect a ten-room frame and plaster residence on Oxford avenue, between Sixth street and Wilshire boulevard, to cost $7000. The house will be of rustic exterior.

Frederick L. Roehrig has completed plans for a large frame and plaster residence to be built at Montecito, near Santa Barbara, for William H. Bartlett, Sr., of Chicago. It will be two stories and basement and contain about fourteen rooms.

Sircy & Gentry have prepared plans and will build a two-story, nine-room frame residence at Fourth and St. Andrews place for B. A. Rogers.

Train & Williams are preparing plans for a two-story, eight-room Mission residence to be erected on Fourth avenue, near Pico street, for W. E. Baxter.

Charles F. Helmle has prepared plans for a six-room bungalow to be erected on West Vernon avenue, near Vermont avenue, for John Murray.

Architect Myron Hunt is preparing plans for a large residence to be built in Berkeley Square for Russell McB. Taylor.

SAN REMO IS SOLD.

Recent sales by the Jones-Cutter Company are reported as follows: San Remo apartments, No. 463 Bixel street, Crown Hill, lot 39x108 feet, improved with sixty-three-room house, Charles Goff to H. Kaufman, for investment, purchase price, $22,000; property at No. 1054 West Edgeware road, lot 50x137 feet, improved with five-room bungalow, Charles J. Boulder to Sophia Goff, for property at No. 1862 West Ewentieth street; property owner by H. Kaufman, consisting of two lots, being each 44x137 feet, between Figueroa and Centennial on Sunset boulevard, sold to C. H. Goff for cash consideration of $12,000; lot at Ocean Park, 35x143 feet, improved with four-flat apartment, known as the Strand Apartments, W. C. Jones sells to Noah Crystal, $15,000; property at No. 1373 proved with five-room bungaetaoi,-.. proved with five-room bungalow, D. J. Thomas to Harry Brasch, $3800. Mr. Thomas took in exchange two lots, Milton Terrace tract, each 40x140 feet.

RESERVOIR COMPLETED.

A reservoir, with a capacity of 5,000,000 gallons, was completed during the week on the Yorba Linda orange land property of the Janss Investment Company. Work was at once started on an auxiliary tank to hold 1,000,000 gallons as a reserve supply. A number of important sales are reported in the district by the Janss Investment Company since the first of March.

IN THE SOUTHWEST.

The McCarthy Company reports the sale to Charles Severance, a lot on Seventy-fourth street, between Vermont and Hoover, 40x135 feet, for $675, and to Mrs. J. B. Sharp, a lot in Normandie Avenue Square, on Fifty-first street, between Halldale and Denker avenues, for $800.

SPECULATIVE PHILOSOPHY.

The age in which we find ourselves is given much to materialism in its everyday life and in its highest aspirations. But there is a drift of thought to something better than the purely practical. It is disputed by some that there is anything better than the practical. The idea involved in the term is [illegible] by most of us. Speculative thought a few years ago seemed destined to be banished from the earth. We are learning to see the value of pure speculation. It is well.

Centuries before our era the conflict between the practical and the speculative began. Among some peoples there was no practical philosophy worth the name. The peoples of western Asia to whom we owe so much [illegible] to the contemplation of man's spiritual nature excepting in the crudest, most partial way, paid no attention to the things of this world and the matters that related to the life we now live. Quite naturally from these peoples we have the two most important religions of the present day, the Christian and the Mohammedan. But the Hebrews and Arabs and cognate races have not given the race very much in the way of natural science. We are not considering isolated individuals or the men of those races who in modern times have come into close contact with the races whose thought has run much to "natural sciences." The Jews since the dispersion have added much to the speculative thought of the world, as is made evident by bringing up men like Spinoza in medieval times and Heinrich Heine in modern days. The Arabs and their cognate tribes have not in many centuries been fecund in any line of mental progress.

It is not quite easy to say which class of thinkers has done most for the race. Aristotle and Plato among the Greeks stood for a period of very great advancement in thought, both speculative and practical. These spheres of investigation hardly touched at any point and seldom even approached each other. In modern times this is seldom found to be the case. With us the two lines of thought generally run close together, seldom parallel, but always at some point or other crossing from one side to the other. If the thinker be a pure rationalist, intent upon the practical or devoted to the study of matter, our way of learning through the senses, and impatient of mere speculation, of anything merely psychological, he will cross the line from the material to the speculative hemisphere to combat the other idea, and so he is driven to a consideration of the purely speculative.

Again the most intense and uncompromising of materialists are likely to be the most intense in their probing into subjects purely speculative, matters that can hardly ever admit of solutions, but must remain to all men subject to doubt. And although the work of the realist, the thinker who concerns himself with hte study of matter, may leave results that are more lasting, subject to less questioning and less change than the purely speculative student, yet the latter is often of the greatest help to the former while the materialist never contributes anything to his antithesis excepting what comes from friction, the impetus that earnest opposition always affords the antagonist.

The work of the really able man who devotes his mind to the study of matter in any form may be wrong in detail, he may make many mistakes, but his work cannot perish. Aristotle passed away, and for ages he found no disciple to carry his work on even a short way toward more correct views of matter. But inasmuch as he had hit on the right way of investigating material things it was inevitable that some powerful mind in the future should take up that work from which the master had been called. The task had to wait for ages for the man to be born. The Greeks lost their greatness of all kinds and became a moribund race. The Romans who succeeded to the treasures of Greek thought were too practical to go on with the working-out of the great problem. The Saracens followed the Romans and made the acquaintance of the Greek philosophers, but added nothing to what they found. The Crusades brought the various peoples of western Europe into contact with the thought of Greek philosophy, and the works of Aristotle became known in France, Germany and England. In due time came Francis Bacon, the first true disciple of the great Greek master, and from his writings, his new system of investigation founded as it was on Greek thought, we date all the modern sciences which have sprung up in the last 2000 years.

In the interim Plato was all supreme. The later Greeks were very Platonic; the Romans were so far as their small ability at speculative thinking permitted them to be. At the time of the appearance of the Christian religion the learned world was permeated with modifications of Platonic philosophy. Some germs of thought came up from Hindustan through the Assyrians and Copts to make the modification. Neo-Platonism had a great deal to do in the final cast that the Christian religion took when it got out of the hands of the Hebrew peasants to whom it had been confided. The Apostle Paul was born when European thought changed almost entirely the purely spiritual conceptions of Hebrewism. He gave the final trend of though to the new cult at its inception. The Apostle Peter, the true Hebrew, has left us one short letter, all on practical affairs of religion. Paul contributed to the New Testament much more than half the writings, taking out the Gospels. Origen of Alexandria was more imbued with the way of thinking left the world by Plato, and his influence on early Christian thought was very great. So all down through the Middle Ages, all the schoolmen who left great impress on the thought of their times were very Platonic. Augustin was so. Thomas Aquinas was so. The Pope Leo X was a notable disciple of Platonic thought modified by the Christian religion.

So, too, with the early thinkers who gave their attention to psychological study to the neglect of mere matter, they were all full of the influence of Plato. Spinoza, Erasmus and others were very Platonic. But Aristotle was far from dead, and so Descartes and that school came up tinging their Platonism with the more practical, material way of the other Greek. After Bacon's time Plato fell into almost complete oblivion among the real thinkers whose writings are pregnant with force in modern days. All the students of matter whose work has resulted in chemistry, in geology, and in all modern sciences, have left Plato and his thought entirely outside their studies as not merely useless but as being an obstruction to progress. Tyndall, Huxley, Darwin, Herbert Spencer, may be said to owe no least debt to Plato.

The writings of Immanuel Kant, Platonic in their plan, may be left to students of a purely historical turn of mind, or to theologians whose way of approaching life is Platonic, but who seldom if ever understand Kant. The work of Hamilton, Reed, Dugald Stewart and Hume and that entire school of powerful Scotch thinkers with their irrefragable logic may be antiquated. But if Sir Isaac Newton had not worked out the speculative theory of gravitation, Herschel never could have weighed the suns. If some mathematician had not spent weary days working out algebra we could not measure the distance between the stars, nor foretell an eclipse. Darwin's studies were practical, but his ways of looking at facts were very speculative. Spencer's theory of evolution may be incapable of a mathematical demonstration. But the speculative work of Darwin and the questionable theory of Spencer, his pupil, may be credited with very valuable results in the improvement they have led to in the breeding of domestic animals and of plants and may be applied to the improvement of our own race. Natural selection may be brought into question so far as the genesis of species goes, but artificial selection is a fact.

The early chemists were the natural successors of the alchemists, and their researches were purely speculative. So were those of the first geologists. Hugh Miller little thought his delving into the rocks could ever be improved upon and made a valuable ally to agriculture. Benjamin Franklin, when he set out to prove a fact that the electricity generated in a laboratory in a curious experiment and the lightning in the clouds were the same thing, did not foresee Edison, Bell and Morse. A French chemist and his wife working in their laboratory came by accident in touch with a new force in nature. They formed a theory that it came from a new kind of matter or from a new combination of chemical atoms. Their work was to prove their guess true, and they gave us radium. But they had no conception of what their discovery meant. As Franklin's kite led to Morse's telegraph and Bell's telephone, so the discovery made in this French laboratory led to Marconi's wireless telegraphy. Franklin made it possible to flash a message around the world in Puck's moment of time; the discovery of radium makes it possible without a wire to talk across oceans and continents. Really it may well be claimed that the practical materialists owe a great deal to the speculative dreamers who have no commerce, no fortunes in land, but who simply aim to discover a new truth and care nothing about a new material product.

The Spell of the Song.

BY WILBUR D. NESBIT.

> So is he that singeth songs to an heavy heart.—[Proverbs xxv, 20.

You sing me a song of the long ago,
And I turn my face from the sunset glow
To the crimson blush of the trembling dawn
Of the days, of the wondrous days agone;
And the song you sing is a song unheard,
For my heart leaps up at a whispered word
That is echoed now from the melody
Still sung in the land of the used-to-be.

And I sit and gaze through my half-closed eyes
At the olden hills and the olden skies—
At the olden hills that were high, so high
That they seemed to reach to the bending sky;
So high they were that at night they kept
The paths of the stars as adown they crept,
And they stood as a shelter roundabout
From the hungry world that was barred without.

And I see again as through a mist
The reddened rose that the dew had kissed,
And the apple blooms on the swaying trees,
And I hear the chant of the humming bees
As they staggered home from the flowered vine
With the drunken joy of the honey wine;
And I see the path, and the lazy gate
Where the hollyhocks stood guard in state.

You sing me a song of the long ago—
And you sing of things that you cannot know;
Of the laughing brook and the meadows green,
And the country road that was white and clean,
Of the little house with its open door
And the sunshine dancing across the floor
And the morning glories that climbed the wall,
And the scent of the roses over all.

A KENTUCKY MAIL CARRIER'S ADVENTURE.

One of the greatest adventures made by Frank Forbis, the Cub Run mail carrier, was with a consignment of pills. Charlie Richardson, the postmaster, got a large supply of pills directed to people on Frank's route. There were 25,000 pills, which required an extra mail sack to hold them, and Frank was considerably packed up.

Going over a rough place in the road, his horse heard the pills rattling in the boxes, took fright and ran a long distance. The people along the route were apprehensive that Frank was in danger of great bodily injury. Paul Revere never made so fast a run. The faithful horse finally fell from exhaustion. Frank never moved in his saddle and never lost a pill.—[Elizabethtown News.

THE HEART OF LIFE.

You were not beautiful—and yet,
  Such level brows—such quiet eyes—
  It was as when a sun ray dies
And leaves us breathless with regret.

Not beautiful, I said . . . And then
  I looked again . . . And lo! I knew
That all the beauty in the world
  Began, and lived, and died with you.

Ephesus in 1911. By Frank G. Carpenter.

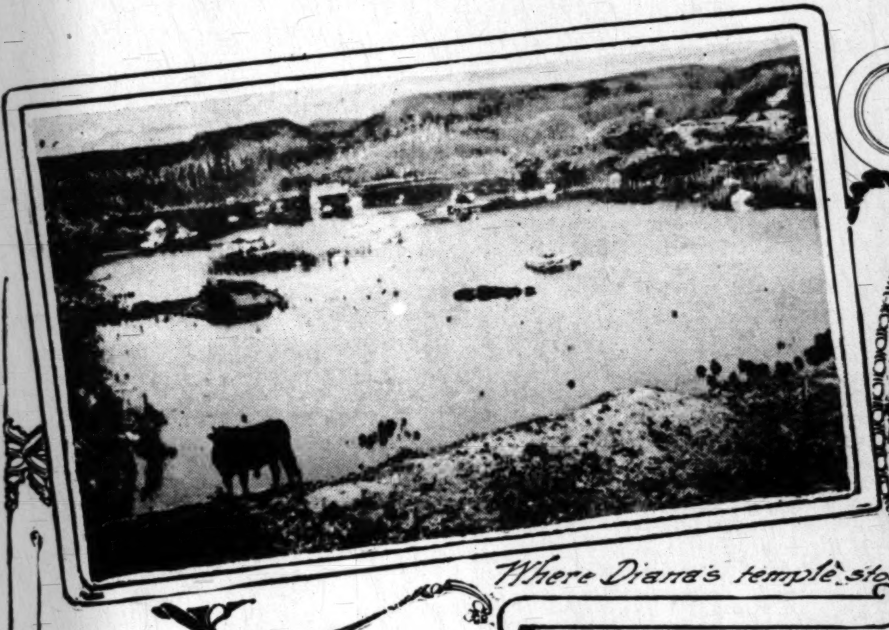
ANCIENT CITY OF DIANA.

HOW IT HAS BEEN EXCAVATED BY THE AUSTRIANS.

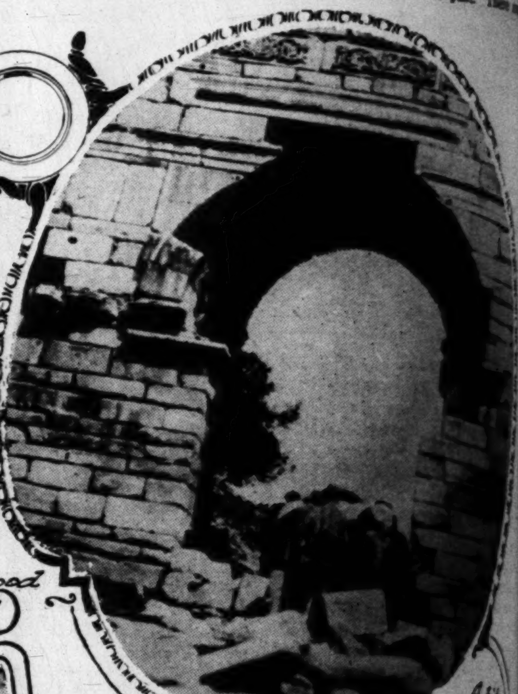
From Our Own Correspondent.

EPHESUS.—Come with me for a walk through the remains of the famed city of the Ephesus. We shall wander over the site of the great Temple of Diana, tramp the ground where St. John was living when he wrote his gospel, and stand in the marble market where St. Paul preached. There is also a tradition that the mother of our Lord was buried here, and that here lies the dust of St. Anthony.

The Ephesus of the past has been recently brought to the light of the present by the excavations of the Austrians. They are among the great historical explorers of the day. I have told you what they are doing in the Holy Land, and especially on the site of old Jericho. They are also engaged in digging up the ruins of other cities in Asia, and here at Ephesus they have recently uncovered the site of the Temple of Diana and have opened up a theater which had seats for 30,000 persons. They have been excavating the great marble docks which led in to the city, and have done much to show us what this great commercial center of 2000 years ago must have been in the height of its glory.



Where Diana's temple stood



A bit of the ruins

But first let me tell you something of the Ephesus of the days of St. Paul. It lay here on the coast of Asia Minor, just opposite Greece, and in what was almost the center of the then known world. It was the chief Roman city of Asia. It had a population of a million or more and was famous for its learning, art and beautiful buildings. It was far above Smyrna, which was founded before it, and in which it is said the poet Homer was born.

Ephesus dates back to a thousand years before Christ. Some say it was started by the Amazons, but we know that it was largely built up by the Greeks, who came from the Ionic Islands over the way. It was a great city in the days of Croesus, who besieged the town 540 B.C.; and later was so famous that Alexander the Great wanted to change its name for his own.

The Temple of Diana.

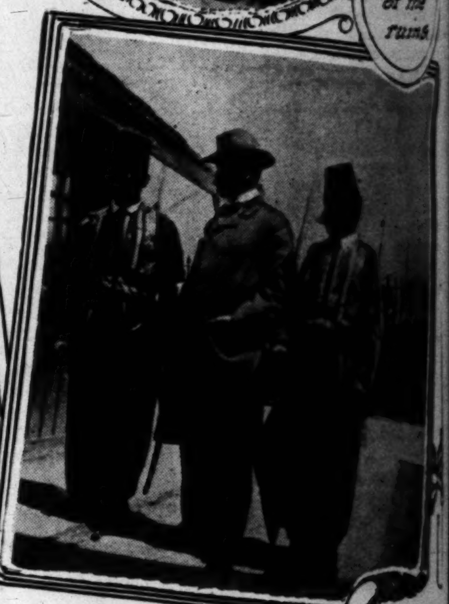
Among the greatest wonders of Ephesus was its temple to Diana its favorite goddess. People from everywhere came here to worship her, and her temple was considered one of the seven wonders of the world. It covered more than two acres, and its mighty roof was upheld by 127 marble columns, each as high as a six-story house. The worship of the goddess was so famous that a business grew up in making statues of her and portable shrines which could be carried away by tourists and pilgrims. Athletic games were connected with the worship, and the month of May was sacred to her. The temple itself is referred to in the Scriptures; and in the Acts we read of "the great goddess Diana, whom Asia and all the world worshiped."

1 But come let us have a look at the site of that temple today. We have taken a special car at Smyrna and have been carried by a little French locomotive over the railroad to the station of Ayasoluk, which is forty-eight miles away across country. We have gone through a land of vineyards and olives, where baggy-trousered peasants are pruning the vines and working the fields. They dig about the trees with three-tined hoes, and till their crops with donkeys and bullocks. The plows are one-handled and about the same as those used in ancient days. We go over the plains which must have fed the Ephesians, wind our way in and out through the hills and finally come to a little station where we get horses which carry us out over the valley to Ephesus.

The site of the temple is surrounded by hills. It is in the valley not far above the level of the Mediterranean, which we can see shining in the sun not more than five miles away. History says it was swampy and that the great structure was erected upon columns. This statement is borne out by the present. The excavation made in removing the ruins is now filled with water. It is a mud puddle or miniature lake filled with broken pillars and capitals lying half in and half out of the water. We stand on the banks beside fluted columns of snow-white marble, and see broken marble everywhere near. That man who plows on the southern ridge of the sand turns up marble bits at every step of his bullocks, and the girls behind him, who are planting, uncover stones from the temple at almost every stroke of their hoes.

As we look we see no sign of the activity which prevailed here 2000 years ago. Birds fly across the lake and sing in the trees which bend over it. A stork sleepily sits on a marble rock in its midst and a frog croaks out a welcome. A red cow is grazing there on the edge of the water, and at my right a hog is rooting the debris.

Inside the theater which seated 30,000 spectators.



Our Consul General and his kavasses

A Theater Which Seated 30,000.

Now let us take horses and ride on down the valley to visit the theater. This has been so uncovered by the Austrians that we can sit on the marble benches and look at the stage which once held the actors of the chief playhouse of Asia. Think of a theater which would seat 30,000! We have nothing like that in the United States, and there is none that I know of in any part of the world. The wigwams of our national conventions, thrown up for the time, have accommodated that many, but this great open-air structure was built largely of marble and altogether of stone. The entrance to the stage was by tunnels, and the stage was upheld by marble columns. The seats were built of common stone, covered with marble, and they ran around the stage, or rather the pit, in the shape of a half-moon, rising high up the hills at the back. I should say there were 200 feet of such seats. They were in three stories and contained sixty-six rows.

I measured the outline of the stage. It was about eighteen feet wide and six or seven feet high. There are long underground passages leading to it, and it has eight two-story rooms which were probably used as dressing-rooms by the actors. I walked through the pit, which is now filled with marble columns and blocks of marble beautifully carved, and then climbed up the seats from tier to tier, sitting down now and then trying to imagine the audience and the acting as going on upon the marble stage far below.

In Ancient Ephesus.

Leaving the theater, having tied my horse to a bush, I strolled about through the wide streets of marble which have been partially uncovered, and made photographs of bits of the ruins. There is enough marble here to build a structure equal to our national Capitol at Washington, and this is mixed with mosaic and the broken statues of the palaces of the past. There are pieces of friezes, columns and capitals lying out in the open; there are torsos of statues, the heads and feet of which have been broken off and carried away; and also exquisite carvings which would be treasures to any museum. Here lies a piece of marble drapery, the remains of a goddess; there the broken-up limb of an athlete, and farther on an exquisite bit from the front of the temple.

Among the ruins are the remains of stores, houses and markets. I climbed over marble blocks along the street which led to the ship canal, and stood among shattered columns in what was once the stock exchange and wool market. In one place is an artificial terrace on which stood the great gymnasium, and in another is a market place 200 feet long, surrounded by a portico back of which were halls in which the market men stood. In the mosaic floors of these halls thirteen different kinds of marbles were used, and marbles of various colors were employed in the structure.

Farming the Ruins.

Today the peasants are working all over these ruins. Here they are planting grain, and there cleaning the fields, a gang of a dozen girls, working under a based man in full, baggy trousers. Here women are digging, and farther on a man drives a camel harnessed to a one-handled plow.

The only town near Ephesus is Ayasalouk, which has a few hundred inhabitants. It has, perhaps, a dozen small stores, a railroad station and a hotel. While at the station I saw a white, fat-tailed lamb awaiting shipment. It was tied to the platform, and a card fastened to one horn bore the name of the commission merchant in Smyrna to whom it was consigned.

Running past the hotel are seven high columns which once supported the aqueduct which supplied Ephesus with water. Each of these has now a stork's nest on its top, and the great birds may be seen any day standing there. Each stork supports itself on one leg. I am told that they come here only for the winter, and that they leave every spring for Holland, or, perhaps, for some other faraway part of the world, each transporting a baby.

In Smyrna.

I spent a day in Smyrna before coming to Ephesus, and I shall return there to go on to Constantinople and Greece. Smyrna is the largest city in Asia Minor, and it has about the same position here now that Ephesus held. It is the chief port of this part of the Levant, and does a big business in shipping wool, wine, grapes, olives and figs. It has a foreign trade of about $50,000,000 a year, and steamers from all parts of the Mediterranean come to its docks.

The city lies at one end of the great Gulf of Smyrna, which is thirty-four miles long and surrounded by silver-gray mountains, some of which are a mile high. Its harbor is excellent. The town begins on the shore, with the slopes of Pagus in the rear. It is largely composed of modern buildings, and among its people there are more Greeks than Turks. They are shrewd traders, and just now are alive to the possibilities of doing business under the new Turkish government, which promises to be far more liberal in matters of trade than that of the past.

Smyrna is much interested in the railroad projects for the development of Turkey, and the Germans are alive to the securing of mineral and other concessions. The various roads planned to reach Persia will open up Asia Minor, and there will be considerable demand for American goods. The same conditions prevail in Syria; and the United States should wake up to the possibilities which may come with the reorganization of this empire. A great part of Turkey is practically undeveloped, and if an honest government is to take the place of the corrupt rule of the past the population will rapidly increase in numbers and wealth, and there will be a demand for foreign goods of all kinds.

American Opportunities in Syria.

While traveling in Syria I saw many openings for American goods. The farming there is after the methods of centuries ago, and our plows, reapers and other agricultural machines might be sold. I understand that the more progressive of the native landlords are ready to buy. One man, who owns more than a thousand acres of rich grain land on the high plateau between the two ranges of the Lebanon Mountains, has offered to lease it to any American company who will cultivate it for two or three years at 75 per cent. of the profits, and will bring in American machinery for the purpose. The landlord also agrees to pay for the machinery at the regular price upon the termination of the contract. Some of the Syrian farmers are now using American threshers and reapers, and some are bringing in American plows. The first thresher imported was upon the advice of G. Bie Ravndal, our Consul-General at Constantinople. Mr. Ravndal is a Dakota man, who understands the farming conditions in the Northwest. He tells me that the possibilities of grain raising in this part of the world are remarkable, and that dry farming might be practiced in many localities which now go to waste. He thinks that old Mesopotamia can be redeemed by irrigation, and a new Egypt created there. He says the new governmental conditions point to a revolution along many lines of industry and commerce, and that American capital should take advantage of the situation.

Raw Silk From Syria.

Syria and Asia Minor are now raising a great deal of silk, which is sent to France and shipped from there to the United States. The American residents tell me that there is no reason that we should not buy this raw silk direct, and thus save the Frenchman's profits and the double transportation charges. I saw mulberry orchards everywhere during my travels in Syria. The plains about Beirut are covered with them, and they are to be found on both sides of the Lebanon Mountains. The trees grow to the height of a man's head, and are then cut back. Their branches are cut off every year, and the green leaves from the new shoots form the food for millions of silkworms. In riding from Damascus I saw women and children picking the leaves to feed the worms, carrying them to sheds erected for the purpose. Rearing the silkworms is largely in the hands of the women. They take care of the trees and sell the cocoons, this forming the chief source of their pin money.

Money in Olives.

"He who plants an olive tree lays up riches for his children's children." This saying is a current belief throughout the Levant. The olive crop is the money crop of a great part of Palestine, Syria and Asia Minor. Many of the trees are hundreds of years old, and some of them were planted before Columbus discovered America. Mr. Ravndal tells of an orchard near Tripoli, in Syria, which the papers show was established about [illegible] years ago, and he says the trees are still bearing. On the way from Jerusalem to the Sea of Galilee I saw olive trees which looked old enough to have been planted by Jacob, and some of gigantic size which were hollow and had been filled with stones to aid in their support.

Many of the German colonies of the Holy Land have set out new orchards, and the Americans who live at Haifa by careful cultivation have brought their trees into bearing fruit every year. I am told that the crop is very profitable, and that under the new government and reduced taxation many more trees will be planted. The fruit is raised for the oil, of which a ton of olives yields about seventy gallons, worth $136. Asiatic Turkey already leads the world in its production of olive oil, having about two or three hundred thousand more barrels per annum than either Spain or Italy.

Smyrna Figs.

Another crop of the region about Smyrna is the fig, which grows better here than in almost any other part of the world. In some years over 300,000 camel-loads are raised, and they are shipped all over the world. The trees begin to bear in their sixth year, and are at their best ten years after planting. The figs ripen about the first of August, and when fully matured fall to the ground. They are dried in the sun, and then packed in bags for the market.

A great many of these figs go to America, and you will find them in all our grocery stores. Our part of the crop is carefully packed, there being several American firms here who do nothing else. The figs are first sorted according to the thickness of the skin and size of the fruit. The poorest are thrown away or used for distilling purposes, and the best are put up for export in boxes and jars. The price here is from 2 to 8 cents a pound, the very finest of the figs bringing the latter.

A great deal of the packing is done in the city of Smyrna, the fruit being brought in from all parts of the country. Some of it comes on the railways, on cars especially built for the traffic, and some is carried on camels. It is important that the fruit be not bruised, and that carried in the cars is laid upon shelves which are placed one above the other, so that there is no danger of the figs being mashed.

The "Tinder Spot."

A BOOK ON PSYCHOLOGY VERSUS PUMPKIN PIE.

By Kenneth Carlyle Beatson.

THE Widow O'Toole thoughtfully closed the book she had been reading, and keeping the place with her finger, tipped the greasy chair that supported her (and seemed about to disintegrate in doing so) against the drainboard. Absently taking a hairpin out of her hair and replacing it, she began: "Shure, Mary, an' it's a foine book this is, indade."

"What book is thot, mum?" inquired the dish washer, going on with her work.

"Th' book on 'New Ideas' it is, an' Oi bought it fr'm th' peddler wot was here yisterday. (Opening the book and reading from it.) 'There's a tinder spot in th' heart o' ivery man. To foind thot spot is to gain thot man's love. Y'u should stidy th' habits o' your gentil- he loikes fick-shun, an' loikes t' talk o' it. It may be thot he loikes fick-shun, an' loikes ' talk o' it. It may be thot he loikes t' see a womin do her hair pritty. He may kape up th' inven-shuns. At eny rate, if you show an intirest in his hobby, y'u kin make him love y'u, jest as shure as th' flo-owers blu-um in th' springtoime.' Oi tell y'u, Mary, there's lots o' things loike thot in here, an there's more truth than foolishness in thim, too. Oi've had some o' these same thoughts moiself, but Oi could niver put thim in wur-rds loike thot."

"Shure, mum, an' Mr. Dewey was askin' me today if youse iver took an intirist in 'Soicology,' wot iver thot is. Oi wasn't shure, so Oi told him yes."

"Go wan wid youse! Oi don't think more o' one o' my boarders than th' nixt. They're all as foine a lot as iver bra-athed. Wot else did Mr. Dewey say?"

"He said thot Oi was as foine a gur-rl as iver was—an' thot was all."

"H'm!" the widow arose to leave the room, and as she went out the door, she flung back over her shoulder: "Oi admoire his taste, to be shure."

But that evening at supper, Mary had a chance to smile when her employer took a seat beside Blackie Dewey and began a conversation. If she had been closer, she would have smiled some more to hear the good-looking widow inquire: "Oi hear, Mister Dewey, thot it's some foine books thot y'u have on 'Soicology.' (Oi wonder wot thot wur-rd means, she thought.) Oi'd loike th' loan o' thim if it would not be askin' too much o' y'u. Oi've always wanted t' read on th' subject, but Oi have niver had any books on it thot were very good."

Blackie turned an interested ear. "Wall," he drawled, "I dunno. I hev got some purty good books on th' su'ject. Of course the're yours fer th' askin, but I'm afraid y'u won't make much out of them. Y'u know that's a purty deep su'ject, an t' pufectly understand it, y'u ought t' hev some one t' explain it t' y'u." His eyes fairly radiated as he looked at her.

"An' wud y'u do it?" tremulously asked the wise widow.

"Y'u bet your boots, an' de-lighted. S'pose we say tomorrow night?"

And the widow put that night's work down to profit and loss—on the positive side.

As for Blackie Dewey, his heart was beating like a bass drum as he walked to his store from the boarding-house.

"Wall, I'll be durned," he thought, "I guess that book wasn't so looney arter all. She shure did warm up when I let on 't I was interested in her 'Soicology.' Wall, I reckon it's up t' me t' read up on it. I guess th' first step'll be t' find out what th' word means, but where I'm goin' t' find that in this little Ariz burg gets me. Now I think on't, Jeb Pierce's got a dictionary. I'll look it up fust, an' then I guess I'll hev t' go t' town fer some books on't. I'll hev t' read 'em before tomorrow night, though."

The next evening he presented himself at the boarding-house, a little late, with a great pile of books under his arm and with his brain fortified with ten hours of conscientious study. The widow smiled sweetly at him as he entered, and he noticed a little later that his piece of pumpkin pie was larger than that of any of the other boarders. And this meant something, for it was this same pumpkin pie that had gained for the Widow O'Toole the reputation of being the best cook in Yavapai county.

Dinner over, the two retired to the parlor, and the oil lamp was lighted. Then, for two hours, the storekeeper expounded on the subject of their mutual interest, with vehemence and words that would have put to shame any ordinary professor, while the widow listened attentively and earnestly, if not with a thorough understanding.

That night, as she was getting into bed, she thought to herself: "Oi tho't thot book was all roight, all roight. An' Oi guess Oi don't des-arve some credit fer foinding his 'Tinder Spot' so sudden! Lord, though, but Oi do hope Oi kin make him fergit thot 'Soicology' whin Oi git him."

And Blackie Dewey, as he pulled his night cap down tighter on his partially bald head and turned toward the store, muttered: "Gad! but she's th' real stuff, all right! That book was shure right. I dunno 'bout th' Soicology, though. Mebbe she'll like me enough t' fergit 'bout it, later on."

The next night there was another session, and at the end of it the widow leaned far back in her chair and said: "Does it iver same stra-ange to you, Mr. Dewey, thot two beings should be so similarly incloined as we?"

Blackie started and commenced to pull at his long mustache—a sure sign of nervousness in him.

"Ef I only hed th' nerve," he thought. "Wall, yes, it does, when yuh come t' think on't," he answered.

"I'll do it, by gad!" he thought fiercely. "Mrs. O'Toole, I love yuh. Will yuh marry an old stiff like me?"

There was a startled cry and a murmured: "This is so sudden!"

. . . .

She was sitting in his lap and smiling into his eyes. "And y'u niver ra-ally loiked 'Soicology?' And you had one of thim books too. And y'u did all thot t' pla-ase me? Thot lyin' Mary! But let me git y'u some more o' thot punkin pie."

A few minutes later she asked: "An' whin did y'u foirst begin t' love me?"

"Th' first time I et your punkin pie," he answered, cramming a huge piece into the already-filled mouth.

"An' t' think," thought the widow, "Oi found his 'Tinder Spot' long ago, an' niver knew it!"

ANIMALS KILLED FOR FUR.

It is surprising to read the following list of animals killed in a single year for use in Great Britain only, says Fashionable Furs.

North America sent 128,000 foxes, 2100 wolverines, 82,000 beavers, 15,500 otters, besides 2000 sea otters, 103,000 martens and nearly 9000 fishers (these two latter are a species of weasel), 202,000 mink, 594,000 raccoons, 867,000 skunk and 2,000,000 musquash. America also sent 500,000 opossums; Australia 2,250,000 opossums, and 216,000 monkeys came from Africa.

The hare is killed by millions, and rabbits in countless numbers. Then there are the deerskins, mostly used for gloves, also the goats, of which India sends close on 8,000,000 skins a year. Of kangaroo, now almost extinct, London uses about 120,000 a year. The supply of mole skins is said to come chiefly from Scotland, and as one mole catcher killed 12,000 moles in six months the process of extermination may advance quickly. With regard to the usefulness of moles, a farmer, J. P. Clark, wrote to the Rev. J. G. Wood as follows:

"An old mole catcher came and asked me if I would have the moles killed on my land. I said to him, 'No; if I had no moles I should have no crops.' He replied. 'Sir, you are the first I have ever heard say that, but you are right.' He then went on to say, 'I killed moles once for a gentleman who had a field with a large hill in it. The soil was sandy and full of moles, and yet it used to grow nice crops. I killed the moles and it never grew anything to speak of afterward. The wireworms and cockchafer grubs used to eat the roots of everything that was sown, and the young plants died off."

INSURANCE AGAINST BANDITS.

The bandits of Manchuria and Mongolia have adopted a new way of acquiring at least a portion of the goods of the traveler. These mounted highwaymen in bands not only constantly attack the peaceful native population but even rob travelers in broad daylight.

As a provision against this danger, says the Oriental Economic Review, an insurance bureau where one buys a banner, at a cost of about 1-500 of the value of the property to be insured, is established there.

This banner carried by a traveler will save him from the bandit's attack; for curiously enough they themselves conduct this insurance business. But it has its limitations.

"We paid our premium at the insurance bureau," says a Japanese traveler, "secured a red banner, and our party then started from Harbin, using several sturdy ponies for ourselves and the carrying of our luggage. After traveling about ten miles, we reached a small town called Takiu, where we put up at an inn for the night in order to do business with our customers there.

"Several of these customers came to see us in the evening and warned us that there were many mounted bandits in the neighborhood. When we told them there was no cause for anxiety on their account because of the insurance, they informed us that by it our safety was guaranteed only on the highways, but that the bandit bureau was not responsible for what might happen inside of any building."

New Impressions of An Old Land. By George W. Burton.

LIFE IN OLD MADRID.

A MOST UNIQUE AND INTERESTING FEA TURE DESCRIBED.

By a Staff Writer.

I WISH to describe if I can one of the most interesting features of life in Madrid, a feature peculiar to Madrid among all the cities of the world as far as I am informed. It is a long way in life albeit short in distance from the Prado to the Rastro. The extension of the Prado into the Paseo de Castellana leads one to the part of the city where flats give place to detached dwellings and where mansions are seen that match in grandeur almost anything seen along Riverside Drive in New York. I did not see anything to match Chester Place, Los Angeles, or Pacific Heights, San Francisco. Not only the houses in this part of Madrid are grand, but the equipages are as fine as may be seen anywhere and the horses exceed anything I ever beheld in horse flesh. The teams are well matched and the animals stand fourteen to sixteen hands high, each hand representing nearly 100 pounds of finely-put-up horse flesh and bone. They are, taking them all in all, the finest, rangiest animals in the world. The heads and ears are small, the neck long and arched, holding the head high without painful hitching. The fore shoulders are high and so are the haunches, the back straight. The fore legs are straight as a whip stalk, the chest is deep, the haunches and thighs are powerfully muscled, and the bodies are round as a barrel. If I were a rich Madrileno I would not take a $10,000 limousine as a gift if I could sit behind a team of these splendid Andalusian horses.

The rag fair

Seen on Sunday.

The Rastro is not along the Prado, and no splendid turnouts are seen there. The street is in the center of the city, a short walk from the Puerta del Sol. It is a narrow street surrounded with old houses, begins in an alley and ends in two which fork into still narrower alleys farther on. The English name for the peculiar institution that has its home there is the Rag Market. Sunday is the day to see it. The people who carry on their trade in the Rastro are there every day in the week in small numbers, but Sunday the whole place, 1000 feet long by fifty feet wide, is packed so densely that one makes his way through the throng slowly and with much difficulty. To present a general view of this motley gathering in words or in picture is impossible. It must be taken bit by bit, and analyzed carefully. As one enters the long, narrow street a mass of humanity, men, women, boys, girls, decrepit age and tenderest youth, moves about in an interminable maze beginning nowhere or everywhere as you may please to see it. The ground space is encumbered with big baskets filled with all kinds of what we call in America "garden truck" and fruits. In and out ply women each with half a dozen to a dozen fat chickens hung around their necks, tucked under their arms and held in any way most convenient for the moment. Eggs, game, anything the poor may have to sell, is here, and here the poor come to buy. If one gets there about noon there may be seen a peasant woman who has sold out her basket of cabbage, cauliflower and lettuce, and has turned the debris out on the ground. At once this is pounced upon by some poor wretch of a woman who has not a centimo to get a little something to eat. She bends down and rakes about the leaves of the vegetables and picks out every bit that is in any way possible of cooking. Each scrap is put in a bit of a basket, in her apron or in a leaf of an old paper, or in an old box. One is irresistibly reminded of a hen in the yard scratching for a tid-bit from the kitchen.

Just beyond the vegetable market the booths are reached where other wares are on sale. The first may be a shoe store, if you please. But it is something that no one who reads this letter ever saw or thought of. All days in the week men, women and children range the streets and pick up anything that promises a cent of gain. No old shoe is too poor to be passed by. These are taken to the Rastro in strings, in baskets, in ones, twos, and tens, according to the wealth of the shoe merchant of the Rastro. Here the lot is sold for a few cents to a cobbler—rather to a family of cobblers. This family sits on the ground in the Rastro from early till late daily working as busily as ants. There may be an old man and an old woman, or two, a couple of young people, and two to six children on the cobble stones of the street, on a bit of matting or a board if the circumstances of the firm will permit such extravagance. Here the old shoes gathered from the streets are soaked well in water, then carefully taken to pieces. Each part is placed in a neat pile by itself, uppers and soles carefully selected and the heels by themselves. It is a sight not to be forgotten. These people work with a will and a persistence not to be surpassed. A woman of 60 or more, her gray hair exposed to the cold air, with a pair of pincers pulling the nails out of the soles of the old shoes as if her life depended on getting out so many each minute in the day. If a nail comes out straight it is put away in an old cap or some other receptacle to be used in repairing another shoe. The best ones in the treasure trove are selected as capable of repairing. The pieces taken from the bad ones are used as patches. It is astonishing what good results are brought out of this very small economy. By Sunday there are a few dozen pairs of footgear not to be despised ready for the fair. And they are not despised. The poor of Madrid come here regularly and for a peseta or two get a pretty good pair of shoes.

Booths in the rag fair

A Hat for a Peseta.

The next booth may be a hat store where all kinds of headgear are displayed for sale. Tall hats and caps, soft hats and hard, the luxurious head dress of the hidalgo and the plain one of the workingman, find themselves here in the most intimate company. Some are soiled and full of holes, but such keep some of the cold off of a poll bereft of hair. If one has a peseta he may get a pretty good bit of headgear; if his purse contains but a 10-centimo piece he must needs take what it will buy. So the fair goes, old garments of all kinds, for men, women, boys and girls, age and infancy, all may be accommodated. And then follows the booth where household furniture, from a pair of old bellows out of which the wind comes out at the wrong end to a brass bed, may be bought. All kinds of tools for all trades, agricultural implements and antiquities, are all [illegible] place.

Antiquities? Oh, yes, these are the chief [illegible] the Rastro. They are for foreign consumption [illegible] These occupy more of the Rastro than one [illegible] pect. Antiquity produced things that were [illegible] tic, and as was natural the unfittest, being in [illegible] majority, insisted on surviving in spite of all [illegible] theories. Furthermore, the artistic [illegible] Europe has found out a way to create [illegible] order. The stuff found in the rag fair is [illegible] worthless. But here and there a diligent [illegible] find a genuine bargain. It may be a small [illegible] arabesques inlaid in the steel, as well as [illegible] the hilt. It may be a bit of enamel of [illegible] which the man at the stall fails to appreciate. [illegible] old books of real value are found than [illegible] While we were here an artist from America [illegible] in a heap of rubbish a bundle of drawings made [illegible] hand of the man who taught Rubens to draw. [illegible] a few pesetas for the lot, about one-third of the [illegible] asked, and he claimed he had what was worth [illegible] $5000. Do not come to Madrid in the hope of [illegible] luck.

"Baratissimo."

The eye is not the only organ that finds [illegible] in the Rastro. The appeal to the ear is quite as [illegible] No one pays the slightest attention to what [illegible] does or says. Never were there people who [illegible] ter the art of attending to their own business. [illegible] vender cries his wares in his own way, [illegible] style of oratory. As there are scores of merchants [illegible] the fair and all speak at once, the clamor is a [illegible] to be described. One morning I picked out a [illegible] larly noisy fellow and stood for ten minutes to [illegible] his voice would ever give out. He was a lump of [illegible] about 20, short, strong, red of face and large of [illegible] He had a lot of cast-off garments, some [illegible] others pretty good. He stood behind his [illegible] facing the passers-by and called in one [illegible] sound: "Barato! Barato! Barato!" Perhaps [illegible] times this word fell from his lips, or rather [illegible] fast as the sounds could come, the "r's" rolling [illegible] end of his tongue like the roll of a snare drum [illegible] band. Then he varied the call to "Muy barato!" [illegible] many times, as fast and as furious as [illegible] Next he made the adjective superlative [illegible] "Baratissimo!" as many times as the [illegible] there was a higher step to reach. He blew [illegible] cheeks fatter than ever and howled "[illegible] compound superlative formed from the simple [illegible] the pause between each successful effort and [illegible] to compare the adjective he varied his [illegible] nouncing several times the price. It was a "[illegible] store" in the sense that he would not at retail [illegible] asking figure, and also in the sense that every [illegible] went at the same price. "A un perro gordo," [illegible] dog," he sold anything he had. If the reader [illegible] quire the pronunciation of the Spanish word [illegible] each phrase about twenty times in succession [illegible] as he can and without intermission, rolling [illegible] with the proper force, he will gain a good [illegible] square feet of the Rastro; then if he will [illegible] whole area, 1000 by fifty feet, to the same [illegible] and will add as many others as there are [illegible] ing in similar accents, he will hear what I did [illegible]

But they are not all "one-price stores" in [illegible] When a merchant offers anything in his [illegible] "perro gordo" or at a "perro chico," who will [illegible] It might do to select a couple of pieces of [illegible] second very poor, and drive a bargain for [illegible] price of one. If a vender has a price of a "[illegible] goods, you are safe to bargain. Offer him [illegible] gordo" or a "perro chico" and it will [illegible] nine cases out of ten. An Expert on Courtship.

THE LATE ROMEO DISCUSSES THIS LOVE-MAKING BUSINESS.

By Irvin S. Cobb.

I THOUGHT over all the famous affinity sketch teams that I could remember offhand—Romeo and Juliet; old Abie Lard, the French one, and his soul mate, Miss Hell Oise; Dante and Beatrice; Rock and Rye; Hero and Leander—or was it Leander and the Hellespont? Anyhow, one or the other of them—Louie Kahns of France and Madame—but I recalled right there that I was writing these interviews for a family newspaper and I stopped with Louie. Then I canvassed the list over, and I decided that Romeo was probably the best of the whole lot for my purposes, so I went and looked up Romeo. And I said to him:

"I have come to you, you being one of the best-known and most popular lovers of history, to get your professional opinion on a number of subjects that are now prominently before the reading public."

"Well," he said, "I guess in one respect at least I was a perfectly regular and orthodox lover—I made a fliver of the job. You'll remember I met my finish in a mouldy family vault in a private cemetery under circumstances which caused the intelligent police force to put it down as a case of murder and suicide. The story ran in the Capua Evening Journal for several weeks with special articles by Winifred Bunk, and created much talk. Not until old Bill Shakespeare came along, did the true facts come out that it was all due to a general misunderstanding which wouldn't have happened if I had been able to exercise any intelligence at the time. But, being in love, I naturally didn't have any of that commodity in stock. When a young man falls in love, his brain turns to a cup custard, and if the gentle passion persists long enough, the custard is prone to sour. But you'll excuse me for talking about my own case—what was it you particularly wanted to find out?"

I told him briefly that I was interested in knowing what he, as an expert, thought of the most recent and conspicuous of our international matrimonial events.

"I know the one you mean," he said, "hands across the sea and thence into the dough bag up to the armpits. Blood is thicker than water and often just as muddy. The Anglo-American alliance cemented some more by a union of hearts and hands, with your British cousins to furnish the bricklayers, and you providing the mortar, the masonry, the pay check and the other necessary ingredients. And all that sort of thing. And now the great burning question of the hour with you, I suppose, is how can a girl so young fall in love so violently and so abruptly with a man so much older than she is?

"Of course, it's none of your business anyhow, but I'll tell you what I think. You must remember that the circumstances in this case were unusual. If a plain North American (white) whose remaining hair, like his remaining years, was mostly on the western slope, should come a-wooing of a girl who'd just stepped out of short dresses and into the kind that are short at the other end, the result might be different. He might have a rating in Dun's like a barrel of XXX patent flour, and half a dozen or so of those million-dollar stone cottages scattered along the eastern seaboard; he might have a tongue in his head like a young Demosthenes and a check book that a fair young bride could tear the petals out of, one by one; meanwhile saying pensively to herself: 'He loves me—he loves me not,' until she wore corns on her young pink thumb, but the same glamour wouldn't be there.

"There's something mighty alluring about a coronet, even if most of its present jewels do represent the highest art of the Brazilian glazier. A suitor has the call on the native product when he comes bearing a title with some of the nap still adhering to it and using the true accent of the British aristocrat, that sounds like a quantity of broad A's hashed up fine in hot cornmeal mush and inhaled slowly through the nose while still warm. I don't care whether he's only 48 years old or rising of 448. Doesn't he bring along with him a half portion diadem with memorial-window insets in it? And can't he work the house manager for comps for self and wife to one of those first nights at Sin Jimses'? Isn't every female child of wealthy parents in your country as anxious to get into court on the other side as her father is to stay out of it at home? To be sure she is.

"Then, anyhow, it's much better sometimes for a young woman to get what she thinks she wants in the way of a husband at 18 than to wait until she's 28 and then get what she doesn't want but can't do any better. If you don't win your true soul mate, you're disappointed,, and also if you do. It's those who can worry through the initiation that stick for the thirty-third degree of matrimony. Marriage is the acid test for love, and the golden honeymoon that doesn't turn green in three months and begin to taste like a brass baggage check is the one that enables the more or less happy and hardy couple to live happily ever after, or, at least, to let on so before the neighbors, which amounts to the same thing."

"You speak as one with the authority," I said, admiringly.

"Well," said Romeo, "I've given the subject some considerable study. To be sure, the system of lovemaking has changed in a measure since my day. A true love no longer warbles sonnets under the balcony of his lady fair, accompanying himself on the mandolin. Mandolins aren't class any more, anyhow. You only find them in college glee clubs and Italian barber shops. Along with the garlic breath they've become the national weapon of the Neapolitan orchestra. If a young man thinks a young woman ought to hear a love sonnet, he picks out one by the author of 'They Used to Call Her Birdie Because She Had the Thrush,' and other popular song hits, and he sends the record up to her by messenger with a note saying to try it on her pianola. But the main idea of falling in love and falling out again, or being thrown out, has remained practically the same through all the ages. No male, or female, either, unless caught very young, ever really marries the fancied soul mate of their imaginative and romantic youth. And perhaps it's just as well, judging by results, and the table of percentages.

"A young man just starting out conceives that he will choose as his life companion a maiden who is slight and willowy and who will lean up against his manly form for aye, even as the ivy clings to the sturdy oak, and she'll always be dressed properly, no matter what the hour may be, and always have her hair beautifully done. Or, if he's been studying the kind of illustrations that go with a Robert Chambers book until his mind has become affected, he pictures her as being about sixteen hands high and wearing riding togs and forming a pleasing combination of a cloak model, a Harrison Fisher poster, and a Persian's dream of what Paradise looks like. Or, maybe, he thinks he wants a dark, mysterious poetess of passion, with hair like the raven's wing and eyes like the stars of night, and an emotional temperament.

"What happens? The youth that craves a soulful poetess who'd sit for hours with her limpid lamps fixed on illimitable space and thinking out great, burning thoughts ranging in depth from twelve to fourteen feet —what does he get? The books show that on an average of ninety-nine times out of a hundred, he connects with a fluffy young pullet who has one consecutive idea about twice a year and spends the next six months rallying from the shock to her system. The swain who pined for the tall, tailor-made vision is found eventually leading to the altar a young person about five feet high, with a fretwork face and a way of dressing herself up in white so that she looks like a bundle of week's washing coming undone. As for the lad who would never be satisfied by any except the willowy, wand-like, adoring creature, the probabilities are that he gets one who is ethereal, if you are speaking hippopotamusly. Generally he waits until he has reached the age of ripened observation and then hooks up with the widow of a prosperous retired contractor. After that, he goes comfortably through existence with a lady who looks like a golden-oak sideboard when she wears yellow, which she does frequently, and who is given to hanging jewelry on herself at night until she reminds people of a railroad yard full of block signals with an all-night drug store just beyond.

"It's even worse with a young woman. Her fancy paints for her a kind of idealized Bellew and Faversham, only handsomer than either of those parties, and absolutely pulky with pulchritude, as it were. She adorns this fascinating apparition with the carriage of a young demigod and the profile of a young Viking and the voice of a young James K. Hackett. She feels that to be absolutely a finished and complete piece of work, he must also have a hidden sorrow in his life and dark locks curling athwart a marble brow, and piercing eyes and a frown which will make her tremble before him like a quaking aspen or a lemon jelly. But mostly she feels that he will not frown. No, he will call her endearing love names in Spanish and sing to her in a deep, rich, thrilling voice, meanwhile thrumming a guitar with the touch of a master.

"Innocent child that she is, how could she know that the really gifted guitar instrumentalist never is anything else, and that she who weds one should do well to qualify first in plain sewing or take a course in stenography, so that he will not have to suffer for the actual necessities of life? But she rarely weds one who can stru mthe strings like an angel, rarely ever.

"She learns in time that he who looks like a demigod in his youth is apt to be more like a demijohn later on, or, if she doesn't learn it, her parents break the news to her. Also, she discovers, if she has any luck, that the brow which is marble is liable to continue marble all the way back, with possibly a stratum of trap rock at the base of the skull.

"So, one by one, the flowers of her maiden fancy fall shattered to earth, and at a slightly later period of her life, she is discovered in the act of helpmating a party who looks as much like Kyrle Bellew as a moving van looks like a gazelle. He possibly believes in taking off his shoes after dinner and enjoying a short nap in his sock feet. He has no Spanish love words in stock and very few of the other kind. He may feed himself with such hurried and careless abandon that after he's been wearing the same suit two weeks, it's hard to tell whether his vest was originally dry goods or groceries. But he's apt to have one attraction—in an unexcited and unemotional way, he is frequently a steady provider.

"Or, instead of the nine-foot Apollo that she built up from her study of the clothing-store ads, she's likely as not to get a tall, rangy gentleman addicted to weak lungs, health underwear and the kind of side whiskers that make him look as if he was just stepping through a set of Japanese portieres.

"But, even so, those who go into matrimony with the misfit mates, find themselves fairly comfortably off, because in time they make the great discovery of life."

"Which is?" I asked.

"Which is," said Romeo, "that beauty rarely goes with a meal ticket."

Bingley had found a $10 bill.

"But it's not yours, Cyrus," said his wife; "you're not tempted to keep it and say nothing about it, are you?"

"I was at first, but I overcame the temptation."

"Then you advertised it?"

"Sure," rejoined Bingley, with some irritation; "I'm trying to find the owner, all right, Jane, but I'm hoping I shan't."—[Chicago Tribune.

For the Study of Irish.

THE GAELIC LEAGUE ENTERS UPON PATRIOTIC TASK.

By Edward Padgett.

TO save his national language from decay and death and to awaken from their educational and industrial slumber his brothers back on the "ould sod" every mother's son of an Irishman in the United States will be appealed to for support in a special campaign—beginning this St. Patrick's Day. With its avowed object that of preserving the Irish language, publishing Irish literature, fostering Irish music, pastimes and industries, the Gaelic League is making its appeal to the sons of Erin in this country to fit Ireland intellectually, morally and materially for a place in the brotherhood of nations, preaching love of the Emerald Isle, first, last and all the time.

Two Irishmen, Father Michael O'Flanagan and Mr. Fionan MacColum, have come from Dublin as delegates of the league to visit the Irish centers in America and explain the workings of the Gaelic movement in the land of the shamrock. That they do not come entirely into a strange land is attested by the fact that there are already flourishing branches of the Gaelic League in most of the large cities. For some weeks they have been active in New York, where they have established headquarters at 624 Madison avenue. These delegates will, with the help of prominent Irishmen in the communities visited, organize mass meetings and set forth their propaganda.

First they will attempt to arouse in the Irish-American a personal, active interest in his mother tongue, Gaelic; and secondly, to raise by popular subscription $25,000 with which to carry on the work of teaching Gaelic in the schools of Ireland.

On St. Patrick's Day in the "ould country" approximately $75,000 will be raised for furtherance of the work of the league. This is three-fourths of the necessary amount and America is looked to for the remainder. To obtain this, say the delegates, Ireland asks only one-eighth of a cent from each of her 20,000,000 sons and daughters living here. In most instances the meetings will be followed by concerts at which Irish dances and songs will be given. Lectures will also be delivered at many universities and colleges throughout the land. While no concerted effort will be made in this country St. Patrick's Day proper, the holiday is counted upon to rekindle the ever-burning flame of Irish love of Ireland.

Long before the dawn of history the Irish language, called by those who speak it Gaelic, was spoken in Asia Minor, central and western Europe, Spain and in Ireland. As time went on, other peoples crushed the Celts, who either remained in the conquered territories and forgot their native tongue, or fled westward until they now remain but a mere fringe of Celtic speakers in Wales, Brittany, the Isle of Man, the Highlands of Scotland and in Ireland—some 3,000,000 souls in all.

Until the latter part of the seventeenth century Irish was practically the only language spoken in three-fourths of Ireland. The eighteenth century marked the beginning of its decay. In 1831 the English system of national education was introduced and elementary schools were opened all over the country. The little Irish children flocked to them by the thousands to learn the foreign tongue (English) and to be soundly flogged when they ventured to speak their own. With the great famine in the forties the tide of emigration to America set in, and the poor Irish-speakers either rushed across the Atlantic or starved to death at home. The wealthier classes, who despised the native tongue, remained and multiplied.

In 1861 there were but 1,500,000 Irishmen in Ireland who spoke their mother tongue. From then on until some twelve years ago, when the Irish movement began to check the decay, the decline was steady and rapid. As an instance, the census of 1901 gave the number of Irish speakers in Ireland as but 641,142.

The system of state education now existing in Ireland is an English one, and Irish patriotism, so far from being encouraged, is dreaded. How, then, ask the adherents of the movement, shall the gates of his country's past be opened to the Irish child? By means of the native tongue, they answer, which will make the very names of hill and valley, river and lake eloquent to him, and which will enable him to ridicule the fable, long imposed upon his ignorance, of a barbarous, gibberish-chattering Ireland that owes all things—civilization, prosperity and the possession of a Christian tongue—to her Saxon conquerors.

And what of his mother tongue that has been snatched from oblivion just in the nick of time? With the exception of Basque, it is the most ancient language of Europe, and until the Cromwellian settlement it was practically the only language spoken in Ireland, both by high and low. Today, in many parts of Ireland it is still the only language understood by most of the people. In County Galway alone there are over 9000 Irishmen who know absolutely no English.

It has a vocabulary of at least 70,000 native words, and even the uneducated Irish-speaking peasant uses as large a vocabulary as the average educated English speaker. Like German, it possesses the power of making an unlimited number of new words from pre-existing native roots. It is said to be grammatically complete, having all the genders, all the inflexions, all the moods, most of which have been lost in English, French and other modern languages. Next to Russian, it possesses more sounds than any other European tongue; it has ninety-five sounds, as against about forty-five in English. Its characters, sixteen in number, are not vastly unlike the Greek, as a page of it shows.

The number of pupils who "passed" the inspectors in Irish that year was [illegible]. A corresponding advance has been noted in the various schools in which Irish has been introduced as a regular study.

There are two important principles of the Gaelic League. The first is that it is non-sectarian and the second that it is non-political. Every effort is made to observe the rule of strict neutrality. No political are allowed at Gaelic League meetings and no one is allowed to qualify its membership by any of their views, religious or political.

years ago less than 100 students were studying in the primary schools. Now, besides the three-thousand schools in which it is taught, there are classes of the Gaelic League attended by both old and young. It is estimated that at the present time there are over 200,000 earnest students of the national language. The most important part of the work of the League, however, is not connected with the teaching of the language in the public schools. The principal work is carried on through organizers and traveling teachers who penetrate every parish in Ireland. In districts where the language has disappeared the traveling teacher holds classes and continues his work until local teachers are competent to take charge of the students. The organizer influences public opinion, organizes meetings and urges on the people the importance of propagating the native tongue, native music, native pastimes and native customs.

The work done by these teachers has been most successful, for all over Ireland there are thousands of young League workers overflowing with zeal and earnestness. There are 120 of these traveling teachers and organizers. In addition to the work done by them, the League trains teachers, publishes up-to-date text-books, reprints masterpieces of Gaelic literature and keeps alive interest in the music, dancing and games of

The salaries of these traveling teachers vary from [illegible] per year. This amount is raised with difficulty from the very small fees paid by students or from the proceeds of concerts or entertainments given during the year. Very often—and that means a large portion of the districts—sometimes apply to the central executive for a grant toward the payment of their teacher. As the resources of the league are limited, many of these cannot be granted.

Of organizers, there are ten employed by the League. It is the duty of these organizers to go from parish to parish, each within the district assigned to him, and call together meetings at which the people are urged not to let their ancient tongue die out, but to speak it among themselves and to their children. They visit the schools and report on the state of the Irish instruction in them, help to start classes for adults and children where Irish is not taught in the schools, and to organize Irish concerts, etc. Where a large portion of the people are Irish speakers they induce the parochial clergy to preach in Irish, at least occasionally, and to allow religious instruction to be given the children in that tongue.

Serious as this part of the work is, there is another and a lighter side. Combined with the work of teaching the Gaelic language is included the task of reviving the national pastimes. So the various Gaelic League festivities form a pleasant background for the more sober task of studying the language. Of these festivities there is the feis, at which are held all kinds of competitions, the aeridcheacht, or outdoor fete; the ceilidh, or concert, and many others, all regular features of country life in Ireland. Of these, however, none can compare with the ard-fheis, or congress, which is held annually in Dublin, the headquarters of

In August the league holds this congress, called the oireachtas, at which the year's work is reviewed, officers elected and other duties performed. The festivities include contests in playing the harp and the Irish pipes, dancing, singing in the "traditional" style, story-telling. Each evening there is a concert, all given in Irish, and several short Irish dramas are presented. On the last day of the week an excursion is made to some place of historic interest in the neighborhood of Dublin. Combined with this, there is also an exhibition of Irish goods.

A striking change has taken place within the last few years in connection with the various industries of Ireland. The other people, who have joined the league, but have not the time to study the language, have adopted the motto: "Support Irish Industry," with the result that nearly all Irish manufactures bear the trade-mark which has been granted to the Irish Industrial Development Association, and which is a protection against the many spuriously marked "Irish goods" palmed off on the Irish people for years.

Besides the ard-fheis, there are lesser feiseanna all over Ireland, varying from the provincial feis, which is often on as large a scale as the oireachtas itself, down to the little village gathering at which local talent is displayed.

The money which supports this organization is obtained, in Ireland, principally from the Irish language week collection, which is the name given to the week in which St. Patrick's Day falls. At that time every effort is made to secure a large amount of money. Posters are pasted to walls calling on the people to contribute; collectors stand with boxes outside the churches on Sunday; handbills are distributed, houses are visited, and other means resorted to.

The work which the Gaelic League has done within the last few years has won approbation from many sources. During the time he was President, Theodore Roosevelt said that he hoped "That an earnest effort will be made to endow chairs in American universities for the study of Celtic literature and for research in Celtic antiquities."

While that has not come to pass in a very great degree, there are now four universities at which there are at least Celtic departments. It is to Harvard University that the honor of being first in that field belongs. The movement started there a good many years ago with the establishment of a department of Celtic.

Then came the Catholic University, at Washington, D. C. This, while being the second in the movement in one sense, was the first to establish a chair of Celtic. The credit of establishing this chair belongs to the Ancient Order of Hibernians, as they did so in 1896. The present holder of the chair is Dr. Joseph Dunn, while the president of the Washington Gaelic Society is Mgr. Shahan, a member of the faculty of the same university.

Following close upon the heels of the Catholic University came the Columbia University of New York City, which established a department of Celtic. Then a comparatively short while ago, the University of California established a department of Gaelic.

"We found Ireland imitation-English; we are leaving it genuine Irish," is the way in which Dr. Hyde sums up the work being done by the league. And concerning the advance made in Ireland by the Gaelic League since the Irish in this country were last asked to help the movement he said:

"Five years ago the principle of bilingual education, which the Gaelic League has been advocating from the first, was unknown in practice. Today there are 181 schools in Ireland in which the whole course of study is conducted through the medium of the national language, as well as in English, and the whole number of primary schools in which Irish is taught as an ordinary or extra subject is 3060, out of a total of eight-odd thousand in all Ireland.

"More than all we pride ourselves on the establishment of six Irish summer colleges and two winter colleges, where teaching is conducted entirely in the national language, and at which the attendance this year was not less than 1200 grown students, at least one-half of whom are themselves teachers.

"But the climax and highest point to which Irish Ireland has yet risen was when the senate of the new National University, in response to the expressed wishes of nearly every representative body in Ireland, passed a resolution by a generous majority that a knowledge of the Irish language should be, after the next two years, an essential subject for matriculation, while during the next two years all who did not take it up as one of their subjects at entrance must attend lectures in it."

COST OF LIVING ON THE RIVIERA.

The English-speaking visitor to the Riviera too often simply pays the price demanded, whereas any other visitor would make an offer of 10 per cent. or more or less, and the offer would be accepted. Even hotels have in reality no fixed tariff. They cannot have one, because the demands of visitors differ.

A hotel may offer board and room at 15 francs a day; an English visitor, accepting that arrangement, might find his week's bill contained extras amounting to 4 francs or 5 francs a day more; but a French visitor would try to arrange that the 15 francs a day would also include baths. And he would succeed in most cases, especially if his stay were to last for a month or two. It is the same with the rents of villas and apartments, and with the prices of things in the markets and shops.—[The Queen.

WHY HE KEEPS HIS FIRST DOLLAR.

"I was reading a joke in the paper the other day," said a successful Cleveland business man, "about a man who boasted that he remembered the first nickel he ever earned. He was a notorious tightwad, and when he told about it a member of his party said: 'Let's see it.' That's a good joke, but I really and truly remember the first dollar I ever made. I remember it because—don't laugh—I really did save it, and I have it yet—right here in my pocket."

"Well," exclaimed the man he was talking to, "I still want to know how you were able to keep it so long."

"It was the first I ever made," repeated the plutocrat, "and it was so imperfect that I was never able to pass it."—[Cleveland Leader.

TO A CHILD'S MUMMY.

Thou shriveled leaf upon the stream of Time!
These thin, small feet once played on Nilus' sands.
How sound you've slept in your straight swaddling bands
That tears once wet. Queen Cleopatra's prime
Is yesterday to thine. The world's grown drunk with crime
Since then. And Pharaoh's dread commands
Are hushed, and men build empires in new lands.
Not wars, nor tumults, broke thy peace sublime.
These small, frail hands were chubby once. You kissed
Your mother's cheek, and laughed—and when you died,
She, poor Egyptian, hung o'er you and cried,
And hugged the empty breast where you were missed,
As we do now. Change, priest and eucharist,
But Death and Sorrow changeless as the tide.

THE TALKATIVE WOMAN.

FORCEFUL EXAMPLES OF A NEW PART OF SPEECH KNOWN AS "INTERROGATIVE INTERJECTIONS."

By Lannie Haynes Martin

Talk? Why, that woman will talk at her own funeral if her jaws are not tied up! She talked all through a bridge party last week, and at a lecture a few days ago where I had the misfortune to sit beside her she talked the entire time.

At the card party I sat opposite her—her partner, mind you—till we found we had to pivot and progress, and I was so overwhelmed with her recondite esoterics concerning cards that to save my life I couldn't tell what were trumps a single time, and tried once to take the ace with a two-spot. Besides learning that I did not finesse when I might, and that I failed to return the lead, which was proper (but unfortunately impossible,) and that it was not always best to try to exhaust the trumps of one's opponent, I also learned why her hair had turned gray at 20, how many lots she owned in Los Angeles, how she had suffered when she broke her arm (cranking her own automobile, of course,) how many clubs she had refused to join, and how she was just "mad" over the drama.

Although I could not remember afterward just where the other assortment of information fitted in, I remembered that she had acquainted us with the fact, or fiction, that she owned a $300 motor coat, that an Austrian lord had gone mad for love of her, that at the last dinner she gave she had such an array of spoons and forks that nobody knew how to use them, that all the young men were just crazy over the divinity fudge she could make, and that her husband was wildly jealous of her.

Looking at my ringless hands she said: "Were you so afraid we were going to gamble this afternoon that you left your jewels at home?"

"I have no rings," I said. "I do not care for them."

"Why, how queer!" she exclaimed. "What ever gave you such a curious notion as that?"

"Oh, I read Mr. Ruskin's 'Ethics of the Dust' when I was a child," I replied.

"Is it a work on tuberculosis? You don't think rings can carry germs, do you?" she asked, all in one breath.

"No, not tubercular germs," I said, "but probably some just as deadly." But she did not stop to inquire what kind of germs, for just then she was promoted to the head table.

The lecture was called "An Hour with the World's Greatest Literature," but it came nearer being three hours, and then you felt sure you only had been there about twenty minutes. It began with Moses and went straight through to Maeterlinck, and her first interrogative interjection was: "What in the name of heaven is a pentateuch, anyway? Isn't it an old-fashioned cowhide or something to whip children with?

"Mount Parnassus? Is that in California? Is he talking about a hill-climbing contest? They have those in Altadena, don't they?

"Did he say S. K. Lusk? Isn't he the agent for the Arlington car? Hasn't he a garage on Twelfth street? Oh, just look at that yellow hat over there trimmed in black! Isn't that a dandy, though!

"Well, what is he talking about, anyway? I don't believe he knows himself, he jumps about so. Bay leaves? Did he say bay leaves? They put them i soup, don't they? If he's going to give us a lecture o cooking, we'd better sent our maids. My, did you se that woman's rings flash in the box over there Sappho? Oh, I know all about that. That's grea Ever see it? No? I saw Nethersole in Paris.

"Gracious! look at that woman over there. Oughtn' she to know she is too fat to wear plaid?

"Horace—who is he talking about now? Horace who? I don't believe in calling people by their given name in public. My, this is awfully stupid! Say, do you see that man over there with the black mustache? Isn't he handsome? I bet he could just beat the Jews making love! He's looking right over here! Did he say Anglo-Saxon? It doesn't seem like that was his last name, but I am sure I saw some of his pictures when I was abroad. What did he say about a wolf? Bay a wolf? I guess he's going to give us some natural history now. I wish my little boy was here, he's so fond of animals.

"Oh, say, that woman down there just two seats in front of us has the loveliest Persian waist with kimono sleeves! Well, for goodness sake, look at that woman, won't you, standing up in the box over there! Is she trying to show off her hobble skirt? Pope? Does he mean the Pope-Toledo? Oh, no, he's talking about somebody that wrote a book. Didn't Pope write a piece called 'The Raven?'

"I wonder how they make those tucked sleeves set so well over the shoulders. Mine just draw and pucker. Well, I never! What is the man talking about now? Renaissance? Can you make that kind of lace? My sister certainly can make a lovely pattern. Oh, he's talking about poetry. My husband's mother has a cousin who has printed a book of poetry. It is called 'The Golden Harp with the Silver Strings.' Never heard of it? That's strange.

"Well, he must be talking about rabbits now. I heard him say something about Belgians. My little boy has two lovely ones. No, it's birds he's talking about—bluebirds. Well, for my part I'd rather have a canary. Just look at the spangles on that woman's scarf over there! They look like real diamonds."

And then I heard her saying to the lecturer: "Oh, we certainly enjoyed all the wonderful things you told us! How can you remember so much about so many things?"

Uncle Sam's Bounty.

MANY THOUSAND PRIZE PACKAGES GIVEN AWAY YEARLY.

By John Elfreth Watkins.

BEFORE the last peach blossom bursts into bloom to give the final signal for spring garden planting to begin in the East your Uncle Samuel will have distributed among his people no less than 60,620,000 packets of vegetable and flower seeds, besides 377,000 of such garden luxuries as bulbs, strawberry plants, grapevines and orange trees—a free gift costing more than a quarter million dollars and weighing in all 1,300,000 pounds.

Whether you receive your share of this 700-ton prize package depends upon your Congressman. Are you on his list? If not, it is up to him alone, and there is not the least use of your bothering any one else about it, unless he has delegated some local organization in your district to scatter the gifts for him.

Here is what he has to give away this spring: Twenty thousand packages of vegetable seed, and 2000 packages of flower seed (each containing five packets,) 30 packages of lawn grass seed (a mixture of Kentucky blue grass, red top and white clover,) 20 boxes of Dutch bulbs (each containing two hyacinths, eight narcissuses and ten tulips,) 40 grapevines and 150 strawberry plants.

Now, since the average Representative has 50,000 families in his district and since each representative has 22,050 packages of seed, there is not enough of the latter to give even half of the constituents one package apiece. But the distribution is not so uneven when you omit those constituents who live in the heart of town and who have no personal use for garden seeds.

Members Don't All Get Alike.

But the Congressmen themselves are not all treated alike by Uncle Sam. Extra quotas are given to members from belts of the country to which certain products of the soil are limited. Thus each Senator and Representative from the cotton States is this spring allowed 100 pecks of the seed of new varieties of wilt-resistent or early-maturing cotton. Furthermore, each Congressman from the tier of States extending from North Carolina to the gulf has been allotted, for this season's distribution, fifteen fruit trees of a species known as "citrange"—a cross between the Japanese trifoliate orange and our ordinary sweet orange. These will be sent by the United States Bureau of Plant Industry only to growers who have been named by each Congressman and who have agreed to report results of planting to this bureau. Southern members have, of course, profited far more than their northern colleagues also in this year's special allotment of tobacco seed, 150 packages of which have been allowed each Senator and Representative from the tobacco-growing sections.

Then, in addition to all of these things, there have been granted to members, this spring, indefinite allotments of some special leguminous and other full-crop seed which the Bureau of Plant Industry wants to try out in certain localities. These include cowpeas, soybeans, sorghum and various grasses.

In addition to all of these allotments to representatives, the Secretary of Agriculture is allowed, this spring, a quota consisting of the following number of seeds of the varieties mentioned: Vegetable, 1,000,000; flower, 150,000; tobacco, 4350; cotton, 1000, and lawn grass, 3000; as well as 1000 boxes of Dutch bulbs, 11,800 grapevines and 18,300 strawberry plants. Of this, "the Secretary's quota" will be used chiefly for exchanging vegetable for flower seed, or vice versa, to meet the wishes of Senators and Representatives who have more city or more country constituents than others, as the case may be. The Secretary will distribute from his quota this spring, also, 140,000 packets among the school gardens, and 10,000 packets will be sent by him to Alaska.

The flower seed to be sent out this year totals 43,592 pounds, and includes thirty-eight varieties, those distributed in greatest abundance being nasturtium, 14,130, and sweet peas, 14,000 pounds. The others are in much smaller quantities, ranging from five to 2100 pounds. Practically all of these flower seeds included in the distribution can be grown in some portion of every State in the Union. Of the vegetable seed there are two dozen varieties, including all of the garden staples, besides brussels sprouts, endive, kohl rabi and okra.

Different combinations, of course, go to different States. Thus sweet corns are not distributed in the south, where the rust kills them, while for climatic reasons, okra and collard are not sent farther north than the upper limit of the cotton States.

The whole matter of distributing the spring prize package has been reduced to the nicest kind of a system. This was explained to me yesterday by Prof. William A. Taylor, who is acting as chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry in the absence abroad of Prof. B. T. Galloway. In the first place Congressmen are requested to send into this bureau, during the fall, their thousands of "franks"—labels which carry their packages free in the mails—each addressed to a constituent to be favored with a part of the annual gift. But inasmuch as a Congressional election fell last autumn, this part of the work was greatly delayed by members.

[illegible] distribution is grown, argus-eyed inspectors—who see that everything is done as it should be. Other inspectors watch the plant where the seeds are packeted.

What Good Does It Do?

"Now what good does your annual prize package do?" asked Uncle Sam.

"In the first place it supplies poor people throughout the country with high-class seeds," was the reply. "It also raises the standard of seed sent out by seedmen, whose output comes in competition with those sent out through the Congressmen. And, besides, the farmers are being educated to demand better seeds. The cotton seed distribution enables growers to secure stock seed of varieties which will enable them to grow a profitable crop on land infested with wilt and the boll weevil. And the result of the grass-seed distribution is better lawns throughout the country. Then there are the boxes of bulbs, which go out with directions for [illegible]. They educate the people in the growing of [illegible] from bulbs and they supply thousands of homes with flowers at a season when the common annuals are not in bloom. For many generations Holland has had a monopoly in growing these Dutch bulbs—those of the hyacinth, narcissus and tulip—and we are importing [illegible] worth of them a year. But we are now demonstrating that they can be grown on a commercial scale in this country."

New Things to Eat.

"Are you now introducing from abroad seeds of many new things to eat?"

"During the past year nearly 3000 separate lots of seeds and plants were introduced. This material includes hardy alfalfas and legumes from Siberia, sorghums and other forage crops, fruit trees, shrubs, vines and plants from China and other foreign countries. These imported seeds and plants are first thoroughly tested at the plant introduction gardens in California, Florida, Texas, Iowa and Virginia, and those that are found of value are propagated for distribution.

"The visitor walking down the rows of these nurseries sees both strange red fruits from the upper Yangtse in China; carob fodder trees from the hillsides of [illegible]; hardy bamboos from Japan, chick peas from [illegible], pistache trees from Mount Etna, remarkable [illegible] from North Africa and evergreen oaks from [illegible]—all thriving and showing promise of [illegible] in some portion of the United States.

"But these foreign introductions will not enter now into the Congressional distribution. After our gardens have tested and multiplied their stock it will be distributed among a carefully-selected list of individual growers, who sign contracts to grow these things under the directions of government experts. Thus we are now testing the East Indian mango, the alligator pear, new varieties of dates and of bamboo. One grower in Florida is now co-operating with the bureau in the planting of twenty acres of bamboo."

How Congressmen Get Names.

To get names of constituents really deserving of the seeds some Congressmen make a very systematic canvass of their districts. Others forward their allotments directly to granges and other farmers' organizations. Still others use the poll-tax or registration lists of both parties, while some obtain from the committees of their party carefully-selected lists of voters of their own faith. Many Congressmen whose districts lie entirely within the cities are now turning over their quotas of vegetable seeds to the [illegible]. In fact, many Congressmen from the [illegible] are commencing to furnish considerable portions of their quotas to the rural school gardens. But, of course, there are still those Congressmen who either sell their quotas outright or turn them over bodily to the political heelers. Now and then there have been rumors of the favored partisan, who [illegible] hundreds of packets of seeds especially [illegible] bird food or chicken feed.

[illegible] blew in upon the March winds the other day the tale of a Congressman's particular henchman who last year received several thousand packets which, [illegible], had all contained one and the same variety of forage crop seed. This year when asked what he wanted from the annual prize package this trusted [illegible] made haste to wire his Representative:

"Duplicate last year's order of that there breakfast food; two or three hundred gross of packages. It cures my dyspepsia and agrees with the old woman."

RELIGIOUS HOUSES OF BELGIUM.

The latest census of Belgium shows that mortmain is [illegible] there. Since the last return the number of monks has increased by 3 per cent., while the [illegible] of women show an augmentation of 15 [illegible]. At the present time there are 1983 monks of [illegible] in the kingdom, and 16,870 nuns. Of recent years the property of the religious houses has increased enormously, in consequence of the accession of [illegible] young ladies, daughters of rich parents. It is estimated that the population is 6,524,372, of which [illegible] are Roman Catholics.—[London Globe.

Letters from Lowell.

PLEASANT CORRESPONDENCE WITH A WOMAN NOW IN CALIFORNIA.

By Mary A. Clarke Colquhoun.

IN the spring of 1890 a discussion arose between a friend and myself regarding the following sentence in Lowell's "My Garden Acquaintance:" "The robins are not good solo singers; but their chorus, as, like primitive fire worshipers, they hail the return of light and warmth to the earth, is unrivalled."

The argument was rather one-sided. My friend spoke with the conviction born of his long and close observation of the robin. I could only urge my confidence in the correctness of Mr. Lowell's statement.

At length, feeling my ability to defend my favorite author, I resolved to write and ask Mr. Lowell himself to explain the passage. By return mail I received a letter in Mr. Lowell's own hand, which read as follows:

"Elmwood, Cambridge, Mass., May 2, 1890.

"Dear Miss Clarke: I used to be thought a fairly good observer; indeed, Darwin once paid me the doubtful compliment of saying to me: 'You ought to have been a naturalist.' I have lived in the same house (except when in Europe) for seventy-one years, and robins find good building sites in my trees. I once counted seventy on my lawn at the same time. As the males sing without any reference to each other of a morning, and as there are many, I spoke of it, loosely, perhaps, as a chorus. Considered as a thrush, the robin is surely inferior to most of his kind; I am tempted to say all of them. Now and then there is a better singer among them. I have heard one this year who entertained me with some very agreeable variations on their habitual ding-dong.

"As for their singing through the day, I am surprised that your friend has never heard their 'rain song' which times itself by the forefeeling of a shower in the air. Nay. I heard the performer of which I have just spoken at about half-past 4 in the afternoon. If yours don't begin matins until 5 o'clock they are lazy creatures. Ours salute the day. But perhaps they don't build with you? That would make a difference in the singing; for though, as I think, rather bourgeois, it is love that makes them sing, as it made Polonius, no doubt, when he 'suffered great extremity for love.'

"All the same, though I can't quite give in to your friend, I like her* all the better for taking sides with a bird against a man. The worst of them are better than we deserve. Faithfully yours,

"J. R. LOWELL."

I received this letter just as I was starting on a visit to the home of the Hon. Charles Anderson, a brother of Col. Robert Anderson, and ex-Governor of Ohio. I resolved to delay answering the letter—for of course I must write and thank Mr. Lowell—until I had shown it to Gov. Anderson.

As I anticipated, Gov. Anderson was much interested in the letter. He told me that years before, when he was a lawyer in Cincinnati, he had entertained Mr. Lowell during a political convention. In replying to Mr. Lowell, I mentioned this circumstance, adding: "Gov. Anderson, with characteristic modesty, says that you have doubtless forgotten him; but I do not believe that any one who ever met so charming a man as Gov. Anderson—Col. Anderson, I think he was when you saw him—could forget him."

This is Mr. Lowell's reply:

"Elmwood, Cambridge, Mass., May 2, 1890.

"Dear Miss Clarke: Do I remember Charles Anderson—colonel, Governor matters not—the handsome, fair-haired, brilliant Norseman who, with all his refinement, had a look as if he would cheerfully have gone out with his battle ax to a holmgang? One is not blessed with such apparitions so often as to forget them. I suppose the yellow hair is silver now, but men like him do not grow older. May I ask of your kindness to convey to him my warmest salutations?

"If I said that birds were better than men I was not to be taken too seriously. But you shall not put me down in that peremptory fashion. I didn't say they were better than women, did I? You know I didn't, nor ever will.

"I have listened more warily to my robins since your letter, and find that I was right, though I take no credit to myself for what was merely a matter of familiar memory. During the lovemaking season they may, and often do, sing at any hour of the day.

"You will be glad to hear that my few acres are very birdy this year, and many trees are full of new homes and songs. I had heard such stories of the usurping habits of the English sparrow which had been naturalized here that I feared to find our native birds diminished. But I think it is not so. How I love creatures that can both fly and sing! 'Tis what we would all do if we could.

"There is something very pleasant to me in your letters, and I thank you for them. For the first time in my life I have been seriously ill this winter, and am still to a certain extent invalided by my physician. The less I feel myself worth, the pleasanter it is to hear that I have been something to somebody, especially to one who loves Tennyson, so easily the master of us all.

"Faithfully yours,

"J. R. LOWELL."

In my second letter I had ventured upon an expression of my admiration for Mr. Lowell, and, feeling that no words of my own would express my meaning with sufficient delicacy, I had made use of a quotation from Tennyson. It is to this that Mr. Lowell refers in the last paragraph of his letter.

But now I found myself in an embarrassing position. I felt that I ought not to intrude longer upon Mr. Lowell, and yet would it be courteous to one of his age and position to permit him to write the last letter? I asked the advice of every friend who I thought might be able to help me decide so delicate a question, but these friends only laughed at the dilemma in which I found myself. I finally decided there could be nothing presumptuous in writing again, if I made it evident that I did not expect him to respond.

But his unfailing courtesy would not permit him to drop the correspondence in that manner, as the following letter testifies:

"Elmwood, Cambridge, Mass., May 27, 1890.

"Dear Miss Clarke: A line more to thank you for your very cordial and in all ways welcome letters. You will understand why I cannot undertake any additional regular correspondence, however agreeable.

"This gives me the chance to make a correction. In my first note to you I mentioned that I had been led to raise my opinion of the robin as a solo singer by the fine performance of one which I had heard this year. The bird which had shaken my opinion turns out to have been a rose-breasted grosbeck. All the first part of his song is so like that of the robin that I am still puzzled by him sometimes; but as he goes on, he is tempted into variations, voluntaries, and raptures, of which the robin is quite incapable. It is the difference between Shelley and Shenstone. I have seen him only once before in my life, and never heard him. But this year two pairs of them are, I hope, building within my boundaries, and the males sing amorpeans from the tops of neighboring trees. It is a pleasure to see as well as to hear them sing, for this lyrical ecstacy makes their wings quiver with the delight of it. 'Tis a great joy to have them in my old age.

"I mustn't have more of your sympathy than I deserve—pleasant as it is. I am feeling very well, but have to be very careful of myself, which is a bore. I have made the wholesome discovery that at 71 one gets beyond middle age. Faithfully yours,

"J. R. LOWELL."

I did not know then that these letters were penned when Mr. Lowell was suffering from a disease which had compelled him to give up outdoor exercise, and continuous literary labor, and which a few months later ended his life.

[*He evidently thought the friend a woman.]

THE DOCTOR'S FEE IN JAPAN.

A Japanese doctor never dreams of asking a poor patient for a fee. There is a proverb among the medical fraternity of Japan: "When the twin enemies poverty and disease invade a home, then he who takes aught from that home, even if it be given him, is a robber."

"Often," remarked a recent lecturer on "Life on Japan," "a doctor will not only give his time and medicine free to the sufferer, but he will also give him money to tide over his dire necessities. Every physician is his own dispenser, and there are very few apothecaries' shops in the empire.

"When even a rich man calls in a doctor he does not expect that he will receive a bill for medical services; in fact, no such thing as a doctor's bill is known in Japan, although nearly all modern practices are in vogue there. The strict honesty of the people does not make it necessary for the doctor to ask a fee. When he has finished his visits to the patient a present is made to him, just as much as the patient can afford. The doctor smiles, bows, thanks his patient, and the transaction is settled.—[Tit-Bits.

DISTANCE COVERED IN A WALTZ.

Every one has observed that the lady or the beau who objects strenuously to taking any sort of exercise and pleads incapacity to endure strain will dance through a full and exhaustive programme, being in this fashion seduced into a most vigorous, and under proper conditions beneficial, exercise.

It seems that in a normal little dance the parties travel something like eleven and a half miles, and do it in much more strenuous fashion than they would if they calmly set out to walk the same distance. An average waltz takes you over something like three-quarters of a mile, and the various old-fashioned square dances are at least half a mile long.

To make dancing beneficial the room should be thoroughly ventilated so that a constant supply of fresh oxygen is available for the overworked heart.—[Chicago Tribune.

IRISH MOTHERS.

They are shapen to the music of the tides upon our shore;
The first breath in their nostrils has the sharpness of our spray;
The very milk we give them has the savor of our sea:
But our children go away—our children go away!

Oh, the long, long time of waiting with our eyes upon the door,
Through the whitening of the hedges and the slash of of autumn rain!
Far, far away they weary for our faces, it must be;
Will they never come again? Will they never come again?

HASTY JUDGMENT.

"I can never consent," she was saying,
"To my daughter's becoming your bride,"
"Then sad is my fate; I am doubly Forsaken," the young man replied.

"For the goal of my twofold desire,
I foolishly fancied I saw—
A bride with the grace of an angel,
And a young-looking mother-in-law."

Then her voice, it was sweet with emotion:
"I'm oftentimes hasty, I find,
And if here I have erred, I should do you
But justice—in changing my mind."

A Sea Captain's Story.

ADVENTURES OF A YANKEE BOY AMONG SOUTH SEA CANNIBALS.

Written by Himself.

IN the year 18—, at the age of 17, I shipped on board the barque Dragon, of Salem, Mass., for a trading voyage to the Fiji Islands, New South Wales and the Philippine Islands. How well I remember the day, the 22nd of February, a bright, crisp day with a blue sky and a good breeze.

The barque was a handsome vessel of 400 tons, clipper-built and rated A1. At 10 o'clock a.m. we finished taking in cargo and cleared the decks of all shore people, cast off the lines from the dock and dropped down the harbor where we let go the anchor and cleared up the decks. At 11 o'clock the crew of ten men arrived from Boston and came on board, when the order was given to "weigh anchor" and "loose sails," and we were soon speeding toward the outer harbor, under a spanking breeze.

There was another boy on board, by the name of Jack Barry, and we soon struck up an acquaintance and became chums for the voyage. We had both eaten a hearty meal of salt junk, hardtack and coffee, and as the ship mnt the big waves outside of the harbor she began to pitch and roll, and in a short time we were in the throes of seasickness. I remembered what an old salt said to me, as I was bidding some friends on the dock good-by: "That's right, my lad, bid everybody good-by, but your dinner; you'll see that again," and so I did. And when the pilot left us and started back for the shore, oh! how gladly would I have gone with him, as I had had all the sea I wanted.

But as that could not be, I watched him until his boat was a mere speck on the water, and as houses, trees and hills gradually merged into an indistinct outline, which in its turn slowly sank beneath the horizon, I bade my native land a long farewell. The night closed in dark and cloudy and by 8 o'clock a furious northeast snowstorm, so common to our New England coast in the winter time, came on, and as the wind increased and the sea rose higher and higher, we heard the cry: "All hands reef topsails."

Oh! how I wished that I was safe at home. Seasick and homesick I crept down into the forecastle, where I listened to the heavy tramp of the men on deck and heard the shouts of the sailors high up in the rigging, hoping that I should be missed in the general confusion. Vain hope, for I soon descried a big pair of cowhide boots backing down the forecastle ladder and heard a loud voice exclaiming: "You George, where are you?" "Yes, sir," I faintly responded from below, "I'm sick." "Oh, you are sick, are you? Well, you just tumble up on deck and go aloft and you'll find it good medicine."

I will not attempt a description of my feelings on this, my first night at sea. A night of horrors, I thought, but though the night was long and dreary the morning broke clear and beautiful and showed no signs of the angry storm through which we had passed.

Nothing of special note occurred on the passage to the Pacific. We crossed the equator on the twenty-first day out. The next day we spoke the ship Forester of Boston, ninety days from Callao, bound to Baltimore.

On May 15 we had doubled the dreaded Cape and were sailing on the broad Pacific, in latitude 56 degrees south. One night, in the middle watch, while the men were seated on the fore hatch the air grew suddenly cold, and in looking about to ascertain the cause we were surprised at seeing a large iceberg on our weather bow. It was a beautiful sight, and we gazed long upon it. The next day we were startled by the cry of "Land ho!" and saw three islands on our weather bow, which proved to be the "Three Kings" (so called,) on the northwest coast of New Zealand.

On May 19 the Fiji Islands were in sight. The joyful cry of "Land ho!" as it rings out and is echoed from the masthead is a welcome sound to the ears of the weary mariner who has been for weeks and months tossed upon a restless sea.

At 8 o'clock the pilot came on board, but as it was too late to venture in through the reef we were obliged to tack ship through the night as required. As the sun arose the next morning in a cloudless sky and cast its bright beams over the water I stood enraptured at the scene. Islands to the right, islands to the left, all clothed in a beautiful variety of tropical verdure. Language is inadequate to describe this scene in all its glory and convey a true conception of its loveliness as I saw it from the deck of our ship. It was the Sabbath dawn, and from the eastern sky the first faint streaks of light were gradually dispelling the shadows of the night and ere long the golden disc of the glorious sun peeped forth from his watery bed, shooting his bright rays across the calm waters, gilding the tops of the trees and bathing all nature in a flood of glorious light, and as the tall palms that lined the shore waved in the gentle breezes of a tropical morning, gracefully bending their tall tops as if to look at themselves as tney were mirrored in the clear water below, it made a picture of surpassing beauty. A holy calm seemed to rest upon the hills, and God's smile was over all. As I stood gazing upon this scene, watching the white-winged seagulls as they skimmed over the water in search of their morning repast, and the tiny wavelets, as they chased each other far up the white sands, only to be drawn back again into the arms of Mother Ocean, I asked myself this question: "Can it be possible that these beautiful islands, clothed in perpetual green, and nestling upon the bosom of this soft summer sea, furnish a home for cannibals, for man eaters?" Alas! it is true, and now we must dwell for a time in a land where, as the poet says: "Every prospect pleases, and only man is vile."

As we came to anchor off the town of Lavooka, on the island of Overlou, large canoes put off from the shore and made directly for the ship, and as the savages came on deck, each one having a war club or spear, I began to feel a little nervous, but we were told that there was no particular danger to be feared from the natives of this place, as their constant intercourse with the white men had partially civilized them, and the occasional appearance of a man-of-war had a tendency to keep them under wholesome restraint.

Looking shoreward from the ship, the first thing that attracts the eye is a long strip of white sandy beach, fringed by cocoa palms, which remind one of tall sentinels on guard, and behind these, nestling almost to the water's edge, is a collection of native houses or huts, with thatched roofs and sides.

A few days after our arrival at the islands we sailed for "Bau," which is the capital of Fiji. King Thakumbau and many chiefs resided there.

After dropping our anchor, the King and his counsellors came on board, and I never shall forget the sensations I experienced when, for the first time, I shook hands with the "King of the Cannibal Islands." Handshaking is a favorite custom with the natives, and as the royal house of Fiji came on board there was a general handshaking. As it came my turn to take the hand of the King, he greeted me by saying: "Sar-venaka nungony na papalagi marloor sar lago ge merica no wanga lib." As the Irishman once remarked: "Faith, I knew what he said, but I didn't know what he meant, sure."

In appearance, the King was tall and good-looking, with a long full beard, very dignified in his bearing, and fully conscious of his importance and influence.

The next day we set sail for the coast of "Vanua Lavu," one of the large islands, to commence collecting our cargo of "Beche-de-mer," a small specimen of marine life found on the sea reefs at low tide, about as large round as an egg, and from six to eight inches long. It is an article of commerce and is much sought after by the Chinese, who consider it a great delicacy.

Passing a number of islands, we finally dropped anchor near the mainland, close to a small island called "Newcombatti," where there was a fine sandy beach and a luxuriant growth of cocoanut and lemon trees, with a great variety of small trees and shrubs.

In the afternoon my friend Jack and I got permission to go for a ramble on shore, and jumping into our boat we started for the island, where we soon landed, hauling our boat far up on the sandy beach, out of reach of the tide. After rambling about for some time Jack proposed that we gather some cocoanuts, but we soon found that we had undertaken a very difficult task, for the cocoanut tree grows tall and straight, with a very smooth bark. We finally found a tree growing near the water, in a slanting position, not so tall as the others, and with large clusters of cocoanuts ready to be gathered. We "pulled sticks" to see which should do the climbing. I drew the shortest stick and started up the tree, where I was glad to rest a bit. I drew my sheath knife, and was about to cut some nuts from the tree when, to my horror, I saw coiled up on one of the branches a large black-and-white snake, about as large around as my wrist. He appeared to be asleep, as he showed no signs of life. My first thought was to get out of that tree immediately, but I noticed that his head, instead of being thrown back, was lying flat upon the center of the coil. Remembering the hard struggle I had had to gain my present position, and seeing the delicious nuts hanging within reach, I made up my mind that I could dislodge the snake and concluded to try my chances with him. Not knowing whether he was poisonous or not, I wrapped a long scarf around my hand and arm, and taking deliberate aim, drew my knife quickly and heavily across each coil, throwing him to the ground at the same time.

As the snake struck the ground, within an arm's length of Jack, that individual jumped from the ground and took to his heels, but on looking back and seeing that the snake was not following him, he slowly made his way back to the tree, and when he saw that the snake was dead, his courage revived. Looking up, he said: "Bad luck to me! is that the kind of nuts you are giving me?"

After quenching our thirst with the cool, delicious cocoanut milk, we started across the island, and, after passing through a beautiful lemon grove, came to a solitary native house, or hut, "Buri Kalo," as the natives call it, meaning "House of the Spirit." After satisfying ourselves that no natives were lurking about, we entered the building. The house was about twelve feet square at the base, running up to a point about twenty feet from the ground, with a long spear securely fastened at the top. The only furniture in the place consisted of a war club, a spear, a bow and arrows, with some partly decayed banana and cocoanut on a small mound near the center. We afterward learned that it was the grave of a chief.

Resuming our rambles, we soon came to an opening, where an arm of the sea setting in formed a bay. I proposed to Jack to take a swim and we were soon splashing in the water. I pointed to a large, smooth rock which was being lapped by the waves, and told Jack that there was the place where the Fiji mermaids sat and combed their hair. Jack started to wade out to the rock, and got about half way when he yelled out: "Howly Mither of Moses! the divel has got me; help!" I surely thought a shark had got him, but when I saw him hurrying out of the water with a large crab fastened to one of his toes, my fear gave way to merriment. I hastened to Jack's relief, and we soon secured the crab, and while Jack sat rubbing his toe and indulging in a good deal of percussion English, with his eyes fixed upon the crab, I gathered some sticks and made a fire and we soon had the crab toasting finely.

We received orders from the captain to be ready to start at 5 o'clock the next morning for a pull of twenty miles up the river, into the interior of this great island, to carry letters and stores to a missionary. The sailmaker had fitted two small sails to the boat, in order to take advantage of any breeze and to lessen the labor of pulling all the way. A cask of fresh water and some sea biscuit (hard tack) were put into the b for an early start. I retired to my berth

A REAL AND STARTLING ROMANCE OF THE BUSINESS WORLD.

By Richard Spillane.

No one would suppose from the appearance of things that there was anything unusual happening in the bank. It was more than an hour after closing time and the scores of clerks were still engaged on the day's accounts. Now and then one of the young men would look at the clock and estimate how much longer it would take him to dispose of the mass of detailed work before him. Wall street was only fifty feet distant, but its hum and roar sounded far away. There was little conversation, for the clerks were well trained. Now and then you could hear the scratching of a pen or the crackle of paper as the pages of big ledgers were turned.

In a little room in a far corner of the bank the president sat at his desk smoking. A sheet, which showed the condition of the account of one of the bank's clients, was before him. Occasionally he glanced at it, and when he did he frowned.

For a mild-mannered man the president bore a queer reputation. No one about the establishment ever had seen him angry, but from high official down to the humblest clerk there was a wholesome fear of him. He was courteous and fair in his treatment of them, but he had a way of rebuking an offender that made others loath to merit his displeasure. There was a sting in his words at such a time, softly though he uttered them, that hurt. And then his eyes expressed so much and suggested so much more of his real feelings.

The vice-president entered, and the president glanced at him inquiringly.

"I fear it is as you think," he said. "Morse reports that an appointment has been made with Clapton, his counsel, for tonight at his home."

"We'll wait five minutes more," said the president. The vice-president went out and the president resumed his smoking. He leaned far back in his chair as he blew the smoke ceilingward, and seemed to enjoy to the fullest the quality of his cigar. When the five minutes were up, the vice-president again appeared. "Nothing yet," he reported.

"Ask Roberts to telephone to Thompson to come here," said the president. There was a phone on the president's desk, but usually the president had others do his telephoning.

"Roberts tells me Thompson says he is too busy to come now; that he'll be over in half an hour," the vice-president announced a little later.

"Have Roberts tell him I say to come at once," said the president. The president had not raised his voice. In fact, he spoke slower than before, but the vice-president almost ran to carry the message to the cashier.

A few minutes later a large man, who had too much flesh on his frame for a person under middle age, was ushered into the room by the vice-president. The newcomer was perspiring.

"Pardon me," he said, as he came forward and extended his hand, "I would have been here an hour ago, but this has been a terrible day, and I have been rushed to death. I am sorry if I detained you."

"Sit down," said the president, not noticing his call-extended hand, but pointing to a chair in the corner. Then, addressing the vice-president, he said: "We are not to be disturbed on any account. Understand?"

"Yes," replied the vice-president. Then he departed. The president threw the stub of his cigar away and turned to his visitor.

"Mr. Thompson," he said, "you owe this bank money."

"Yes, I know, and I'm doing all I can to——"

"Mr. Thompson," said the president. "I know exactly what you are doing. Roberts, our cashier, certified your checks today. He should not have done it. But here in Wall street we have to take chances, and he foolishly took too wide a chance with you. He tells me that when your last check for $186,000 came in you promised to send the securities to cover your overdraft in the bank within thirty minutes. Is that true?"

"Yes, but it has been such a fearful day," said Thompson. "But we are all in a tangle. As soon as I can get things straightened out I'll make my overdraft good."

"Why lie to me?" asked the president. Thompson flushed and half rose, but the stern eye of the banker checked him.

"I did not come here to be insulted," Thompson sputtered as he wiped his brow in agitation.

"Mr. Thompson," said the president, "you've been on the wrong side of the market and you're broke. There is such a thing as failing honestly and such a thing as failing dishonestly. You're preparing to fail dishonestly. You plan to rob this bank. You took a desperate gambling chance today in the hope of saving yourself, but when you did not succeed you determined to shift the burden on us. The checks we certified were to pay for stock that was to be turned over to us after delivery. You have that stock in your safe now. I know it."

Thompson's face was red. He closed his fist convulsively as the president spoke. It was not the spoken words, however, that made his heart beat so fast and made him fearful. Somehow the eyes of the cold-blooded man sitting looking at him so keenly, searching his very soul, as it seemed, carried more of a message than the words themselves, bitter as they were.

"You do me a great wrong," Thompson declared. "I assure you you are mistaken. I assure you I mean to turn that stock over to you as soon as I can get my affairs out of the tangle they're in. This has been the worst day the Street has had this year. Just as soon as——"

"Why lie to me?" the president repeated. "I told you I knew exactly what you were doing. You mean to rob us. You mean to fail tomorrow. You have an appointment with Clapton for tonight. He is to engineer it for you."

"You seem to have been spying on me," Thompson exclaimed, in a rage. Then, losing control of himself, he declared with an oath that it was true he was going to fail, and he was glad of it, so long as he could revenge himself on the man who had been so cowardly as to put a spy in his office to watch him. He was sorry only that his debt to the bank was not double, treble, quadruple what it happened to be.

He was not looking at the president as he talked, but when he did look at him something in the glint of the president's eye caused him to stop suddenly and sink further back in his chair.

"Mr. Thompson," said the president, in the same cold, calm voice as before, "I have had various experiences with men of your kind, and they never have succeeded in robbing me yet, and you are not going to succeed now. Let me tell you about the first of the lot. I was only a young man then. It was out in Nebraska. I was telegraph operator in a small town there, a boom town—one of those towns that blossom in a year and fade in a month. There was a Jim Crow bank there, and the cashier gave up his job, and the owner of the bank offered the place to me. I didn't know much about banking, and one of the first things I did was to lend $6000 to a cattleman. He was a plausible rascal, and he had my confidence just as you had the confidence of Roberts. He needed the money to buy a bunch of cattle, which he would drive to Omaha and sell. Well, he bought the cattle, and he drove them to Omaha, and then he came back. The blight was on that boom town when he returned. He came into the bank smiling and gay and chatted with me in the most friendly spirit. I asked him about the cattle deal, and he told me he had bought the herd and had driven them to Omaha and had sold the lot but had not received as much for them as he expected. He had made a profit, but was a trifle disappointed. Then he talked about other things and started to go away. I called him back. 'Mr. Jackson,' I said, 'how about that money you owe us?'

"He laughed. He was a big, rawboned man. I was about as I am now, but perhaps a bit stronger then than I am today. 'That money!' he said. 'Why, I need that money. This town is withering and is going to blow away. The cattle business is no good. This town is no good. I'm going to pull up stakes. That $6000 will come in handy out in Colorado.' Then he laughed again. I told him the loss of that money would be serious to the man who owned the bank, but he didn't care. I told him it meant that there would be a stain on my name, for I had lent the money to him, but he seemed to think that was no concern of his. We were standing near the door, and I closed it and locked it before he realized what I was about. Then, with the key in my hand, I turned and said a few things to him. One of the things was that I'd get that money or there would be a funeral. We stood looking into each other's eyes a few moments, and then he lost his courage and begged me not to do anything rash. He thought I had a gun then, but I only had the big key I had taken from the lock. 'Where's the money?' I asked. 'I haven't got it,' he replied; 'as God is my judge. 'I haven't got it.'

"I went behind the counter and got a real gun, and when I got it I put it on him for the moral effect it would have. The moral effect of a gun in the hand of a determined man is excellent, Mr. Thompson, I can assure you. Next I went outside and shoved the muzzle of that gun against the stomach of that cattleman and told him to throw up his hands. He threw them up just as high as they would go. While they were up I went through him. There wasn't a dollar in his pockets, and he didn't have on the money belt that he sometimes wore. If the money was anywhere it was at his home, so I decided to go there. His pony was hitched outside the bank, but Mr. Jackson had to walk. He never made a move while I was unlocking the door. We walked across the prairie to his home. It was a long trip, and he had to walk in front of me. When we got to his house I made him turn every drawer upside down, the bed inside out, and even overturn his woodpile. There was not a hiding place on the ground floor or the attic that I did not make him explore, while I stood by gun in hand. As a last resort I took him into the cellar. There was a lot of junk there and he raked that over. In the pile of junk was a keg.

"In the keg I found the missing money. Mr. Thompson, there was no more doubt in my mind when I started over the prairie with that man Jackson that I would get the money he owed than there is that I am going to get from you the securities that belong to us. I would not let Jackson rob that bank in Nebraska, and I'll not let you rob this bank in New York. Human nature is the same in the West as it is in Wall street. A thief is a thief the world over. I am the same man today that I was in those early days. You are another Jackson. I want an order on your managing clerk to turn over to us all the securities that are in your safe. There was $6789 in that keg, and I returned to Jackson what belonged to him after our debt had been liquidated, just as I'll return to you what belongs to you after we get what belongs to us."

"I'll not be intimidated," said Thompson, who showed on the surface a spirit of defiance he did not really feel.

"Intimidated!" said the banker. "Intimidate you? Why, you craven creature, you are trembling with fear now."

Once more Thompson started to rise, and once more when the banker was ordered to sit down he sank back into his chair.

For two or thee minutes Thompson sat and stared at the president or looked about the room. There were no decorations on the walls, for the room was severely plain. The desk with its equipment, a stock ticker, a hat and coat rack and a few chairs were all the furnishings of the private office. Once when the president opened a drawer Thompson saw a shining object within that made him shudder.

The stillness of the sound-proof room, the calm of the man at the desk and the turmoil he had been through during the day began to affect the visitor's nerves. He could hear the ticking of the watch in his pocket, and mechanically he began to count the beats. Then he studied the face of the man at the desk, and somehow he could see in his mind's eye that same implacable man, pistol in hand, marching across the Nebraska prairie and searching for the money in the cattleman's house. Then he got to wondering who had been the traitor who advised the bank of conditions in his office and of the plans to leave the bank in the lurch.

He felt a mad desire to throttle the traitor. But whatever his mind turned to it was not for long. Always it returned to the man before him. What did he propose doing? What would he do if Thompson sprang up and defied him? Thompson's fast-beating heart told him such an act would be extremely hazardous. Thompson's eye told him, too, that the banker watched him like a hawk. But something had to be done to break the strain, and Thompson, after swallowing hard several times, attempted it.

"I must return to my office," he said. And when the banker did not reply to him he raised his voice. "I tell you I must return to my office."

"Don't excite yourself unnecessarily," said the president in his cold, even tones; "you may leave here after the securities are in my hands, not until then. You are verging on the hysterical now. Calm yourself. That door is locked. It will not be opened until I so desire. If you know of any way of getting out of here until I want you to go, you are at liberty to avail yourself of it. The telephone? It is disconnected. The door? Absurd. Windows? There are none. I am inclined to think you are not going to keep your appointment with Clapton this evening. You and I will remain here until this little matter of ours is settled."

"But this is shameful, outrageous, preposterous!" exclaimed Thompson.

The president did not answer him, and soon he was still again. It was not long before the ticking of his watch got on his nerves once more. He wondered how long this torture would continue. His judgment told him there was no yielding to the cold-blooded man at the desk. Nature had not given the banker that square chin without reason. The more Thompson thought of the possible duration of his detention the more acute became his mental and physical distress.

"I cannot stand this any longer," he acknowledged at last. "I'll write the order you demand, but I warn you now I'll fight you in the courts. This is illegal, unheard of, outrageous."

"We'll take our chances in the courts if we have to," replied the president. "Don't worry yourself about us. Just sign this. I had the order written before you came over."

Thompson looked at him, and for a moment he felt like tearing the paper in shreds, but he thought better of it and signed. Then the banker touched a buzzer, and soon the door opened. The vice-president entered. The paper was handed to him.

"Now are you satisfied?" asked Thompson.

"Just a few minutes more," said the president. "The securities will be here presently."

Thompson sighed. It seemed a long time, but it was less than ten minutes when the vice-president returned.

"Now, Mr. Thompson," said the president, "if you care to wait while Roberts examines these, all well and good. If you prefer to have what does not belong to us returned to you in the morning, I'll see that it is done."

Mr. Thompson said he did not care to wait. He rose from the chair and drew a long breath as he straightened himself out. Then, as he passed the desk to get his hat, he was impelled to look into the drawer. A pistol has a strange fascination for some persons.

But Thompson did not see a pistol. Instead, he beheld a heavy, massive key, highly polished and of old design.

The president saw him looking at the key, and Thompson was impelled to explain.

"I thought that was a gun," he said. "I could see the glint of light on a portion of it from where I sat.

"That's odd," said the president. "That old key is my mascot. It's the one that we used in the door of that Nebraska town I told you about."

SAFE.

My dream-fruit tree a palace bore
  In stone's reality,
And friends and treasures, art and lore
  Came in to dwell with me.

But palaces for gods are made;
  I shrank to man, or less;
Gold-barriered, yet chill, afraid,
  My soul shook shelterless.

I found a cottage in a wood,
  Warmed by a hearth and maid;
And fed and slept, and said 'twas good,—
  Ah, love-nest in the shade!

The walls grew close, the roof pressed low,
  Soft arms my jailers were;
My naked soul arose to go,
  And shivered bright and bare.

No more I sought for covert kind;
  The blast bore on my head;
And lo, with tempest and with wind
  My soul was garmented.

Here on the hills the writhing storm
  Cloaks well and shelters me;
I wrap me round, and I am warm,
  Warm for eternity.

The Spy.

A FEW SAD EXPERIENCES OF LITTLE TOM JENKINS.

By Grace C. Barton.

"D' YOU 'member Hank Bigelow as was sint t' Cuby t' spy?" Jim Green, perched on the railing of the little piazza in front of the general trading store, took his corn-cob pipe from his teeth long enough to address this query to the other loafers around him.

"Yep, what of 'im?" questioned the one on the sack of sweet potatoes.

"He's a-comin' back here ter settle."

Tom Jenkins blew three circles of smoke into the air, watched them thoughtfully for a minute, then drawled out: "Wonder 'f he 'njoyed spyin'? I layed out ter be a spy onct when I was a kid, an' that cured me fer good."

"What did yer do?" queried Hank.

Tom tipped back in his chair, blew some more rings of smoke, and began his story.

"When I was 'bout knee-high to a grasshopper, there war two fellers a-courting Sal to onct. Zeke Skinner was as lean as a rail, an' Bill Cook 'u'd tip the scales at two hundred an' forty, though he claimed they'd stop at a hundred an' sixty-eight. It looked fer a while 's if Bill was a-havin' more sun ter bask in than was his share; but I reckon he was doin' most of the shinin'. 'T any rate, Zeke was most nigh totally 'clipsed. Howsumever, Sal still held out a straw ter him, and he did not know how bad off he was. Wall, one night, when I was a-drivin' the cows home, Zeke, he come chasing down the lane, desprit-like, an' all out of breath, an' axed me if I wanted a dollar. Does a fish want water? I says: 'You bet cher boots,' without ever axin' the terms.

"'Well,' says he, 'I want ye to hide in yer parlor t'night an' watch everything that happens. Will ye do it?'

"'Jiminy-Ann!' says I. 'Do ye want to hide in the woodshed tomorrer and see what goes on thar?'

"'Go 'long,' says he, 'you're too smart to git catched,' an' he pressed the dollar inter my hand and said he'd give me another when I told him about it. What with ticklin' my pride an' the pa'm of my hand to onct, he won me over, an' I bound myself to his service.

"All the way home, I kep' a-wishin' that Bill wouldn't come thet night; but, as soon as I set eyes on Sal, my heart went kerthump agin the soles of my bare feet. Her hair was all frizzled an' puffed, and she had on a starchy pink calerco dress. I was doomed to go on duty shortly. My bed was up in the garret, an' thar wa'n't anybody ever went up thar 'cept me. I calc'lated I wouldn't be missed, an', 'f I jest wouldn't get caught in the parlor, everything 'u'd be all right. I didn't feel just right in my in'ards as I sneaked inter the parlor an' crept under the sofy. I chuse that thar point of view 'cause I reckoned they'd set opposite by the fire.

"I'd been a lying thar what seemed to me a intolerable time when I heerd what sounded like a circus elephant on the front porch. Sal fluttered to the door an' ushered him in, an' he never made no move to sit down near the fire, but just sat right down on one end of the sofy, and Sal, she set down on t'other end. All I could see was one pair of twelves; Sal's sixes war out of my range of vision, unless I turned my head, an' I didn't dare do that.

"Wall, they talked 'bout the weather, an' pa's cows, an' Bill's new ranch, and I listened th' best I could; but it warn't no way exciting, an' I reckon I dropped off; for the furst thing I knew, I woke up with a start. I peered round. Bill's feet had moved two inches nearer me, and Sal's war in sight. Bill was a-sayin' somethin' about a new house he was a-goin' to build on his ranch and how as he'd like Sal to give him some p'ints. Sal moved an inch er two nearer to give 'em, an' Bill moved down to git 'em. Things war coming my way. You all know how big Bill was, and Sal ain't no featherweight. There warn't any too much room under there when the springs was up, and, when there ware up'ards of 400 pounds nigh the center—wall, it was worse. I tried to cheer myself a-thinkin' of the dollar in my hip pocket, an' of that other dollar I was a-goin' to get, an' I tried to listen.

"I reckon they hadn't been wound up very far that night, 'cause they only spoke now an' agin; an', when they did, it was so soft an' low I couldn't hear what they was a-sayin'. Onct, the thought flashed in my head, they knew I was thar and was whispering so's I couldn't hear; but that made me so sick that I begun to think about my dollar agin. Perty soon, I glanced at their feet again. They war slam-bang together. I felt two springs and a loose slat sinkin' into my back and sides. You've hearn people talk about comin' in touch with their surroundin's? Wall, this was a case of the surroundin's comin' in touch with me. I felt as thin as a piece of paper, an' yet I could feel the hull shape of them springs right down in me.

"I thought Bill was goin' to stay all night. I jest got my mouth shaped to yell, when I thought of the woodshed, an' I almost groaned instid. The spiral spring sunk one inch deeper, an' then a bright idea struck me sorter sudden like. Sal is scared clean out of her wits of mice, an' I reckoned, if I'd scratch on the floor, she'd fly the coop, an' Bill 'u'd foller. Then, I aimed to go through the window.

"Wall, I scratched. Sal screamed, and the spring went two inches deeper in a hurry. As soon as I came to after the shock, I took invent'ry of the shoes—one pair number twelve, an' them right square in the middle of the sofy. I thought lovely things of Zeke, until I wore out the supply. Then, I called Bill and Sal beautiful names—under my breath. Next, I set to calc'late how long it would take the spring to reach the floor. Runnin' through all these thoughts like strained music, I heard two voices; but they hadn't learned to talk words yet, it was all cooing and purring. Per'aps it was a new language they'd learned 'long with their space-savin' notions.

"Directly, I heard somethin' more familiar. It was pa's voice at the foot of the garret stairs a-calling me.

"'Tom,' he called, sorter quiet-like.

"Silence followed.

"'Tom!' he called again louder, but still no reply.

"'Tom!' he shouted. Then, I heard heavy steps on the stairs, muffled sounds above, and heavy steps on the stairs agin.

"A cold sweat burst out on me, and I had a prickly feelin' 's if a million of needles was a-stickin' me. I heard the steps comin' toward the parlor an' a pair of feet appeared at some distance from Bill's. Pa stuck his head in the door.

"'Hev you seen Tom?'

"'No, pa. What's the matter?'

"'He hain't locked th' barn door, an' the key's gone, an' he hain't in bed.'

"Alas! the cruel hand of destiny had caused me ter fergit the barn door an' leave the key in my pocket. Bill offered ter hunt for me; an', as he riz up, the spring went up ker-whack! I knew it did, 'cause I heard it; but I felt 's if it war still in my back. They all left the room, an' I made fer the window; but I war reckless in my haste, an' pa heard me. He was on me like a flash, and the shed scene war acted in the parlor without any formalities. When he'd rizzed the indentions made by the springs into respectable welts, he asked fer a explanation. He took away thet hard-earned dollar an' threatened ter disown me.

"Bill and Zeke had a big fight next day, an' Zeke got the worst of it; so he never paid up. Sal threw Bill over 'cause he picked on some one smaller'n hisself. I had to dodge Bill fer two months, an' that was 'nough 'sperience in spyin' ter last me a lifetime."

ODD WAYS OF TELLING TIME.

THE COCK, THE SUN AND THE CAT'S EYE THE CLOCKS OF TURKEY.

A watch or a clock was about as rare in Turkey fifty years ago as an aeroplane is in America now. Even today in the smaller cities and villages a timepiece in the house is a convenience and luxury indulged in by a few of the wealthy class.

Nature is the clock of that land, a clock which never stops or fails to serve its purpose. The crow of the cock is the simplest, says Armenia, the sun the most dependable and convenient and the cat's eye, the most difficult and to Occidentals the most humorous of timepieces.

The cock crows regularly morning, forenoon, noon, afternoon and evening, and serves the purpose of the striking clock of a belfry tower. Sometimes a cock crows at irregular periods. Woe unto him! for superstition demands that his head be chopped off, a demand which is complied with without delay, for to tolerate an ill-crowing cock is to bring bad luck—so the natives believe.

It needs little experience to be able to tell whether it be morning, noon, afternoon or near evening by merely noting the position of the sun. The time is more accurately told by judging the shadows cast by the sun, which is the mode most popular with the shepherds in the fields.

Still another method, more accurate, is the following: They hold their thumbs touching each other horizontally, and extend the forefingers up perpendicularly. Then they divide the thumb and forefinger of each hand into six parts, nominal hour points, one hand representing the morning and the other the afternoon.

Where the thumbs join being 12 o'clock, the tip of one forefinger representing 6 o'clock in the morning and the tip of the other 6 o'clock in the afternoon. By holding the hands in the described position toward the sun the shadows cast by one forefinger upon the other will point to the correct time, as judged by the hours nominally marked in mind. The hour divisions may be divided into additional parts, as the quarter hours.

To tell the time by the cat's eye sounds at first humorous, but it can be done. The average person perhaps is not aware that the shape of the cat's eye undergoes changes during the day. In the morning the pupil is normally circular, but gradually it narrows until noon, when only a narrow streak is left. As the day progresses it resumes its normal shape, becoming oval about 3 o'clock in the afternoon. In Turkey it is common for the old folks to call the cat to their sides in order to ascertain the time.

As an illustration of how accurately time can be measured by the shadow cast by the sun can be cited a trial in the courts of Omaha, Neb., held in the first week of January, 1911, where a man was acquitted of the charge of attempted murder through the alibi established by the shadow of a church steeple cast upon a photograph, which contained the two accusing witnesses, who had testified seeing the man between 2 and 3 o'clock in the afternoon while returning from church, after the photograph was taken.

But from the angle formed by the shadow and the horizontal boards of the church in the photograph Father Riggs, astronomer at Creighton University, calculated the time the photograph must have been taken and testified that the exact moment was during the afternoon at 3:21:29, one hour later than the witnesses had testified they met the prisoner. The testimony given by the astronomer was so concise and clear and the impossibility of the witnesses having seen the accused man at the scene of the crime at the time it was alleged to have been committed was shown to be so absolute that the accused man was acquitted.

The House on the C

A LOVERS' QUARREL THAT HAPPY ENDING.

By Alice L. Bryant

THE decks of the Cabrillo were deserted, across had been unusually rough. Only a girl sat in a sheltered corner of the her eyes eagerly scanning the land, as the the pier. Yes, that must be the house, on the edge of the cliff, the hills rising tic beyond it—the house that was to have The passengers came from their staterooms ashore. Still the girl stood there, her gaze dreamily on the house.

"This is Catalina Island, Miss," said a sailor, her on the arm.

In a daze Lois made her way along the the idle, happy throng of pleasure seekers, quite breathlessly up the hill that led to the heart gave a bound as she saw that it was he had cared enough to keep it sacred to the the past. That was like Jack. She stepped veranda timidly, almost reverently. Then the little cupola that they had planned happy, faraway summer. She climbed up down.

A quick step on the veranda below made Could it be—but no, he was in Europe.

A businesslike man with a bunch of keys was standing at the door.

"I hope I've not been intruding," she said down the stairs.

"Oh, no," answered the man pleasantly, been empty a long time."

"Yes," said Lois expectantly.

"It's one of the stories we always tell he went on. "You're from the East?"

"Yes."

"Jack Field built this house for his bride ago," he continued, not noticing Lois's "but they say that they had a quarrel just wedding. I don't know anything about it that's the story. Mr. Field wrote to me house in repair, but never to sell it for consideration."

"And has he never come back?" asked conscious eagerness.

"Never; but he's coming back soon." breath. "Just had a letter from him, the house in order to receive ladies by week." He was fumbling with the keys see that his companion was clutching "Perhaps they've patched it up," he lously, "or perhaps he's found another—"

"Perhaps," choked Lois, as she started She stumbled blindly down the hill, mechanically among the throngs of people and approaching an officer on the pier, does the next boat leave for Los Angeles?"

"Tomorrow at 9 o'clock."

"But I must get away at once. I can't longer."

"Sorry, madam."

She turned and walked along the to fight away the weight that seemed her.

"Boat, lady?" said some one at her

"Yes," she answered stepping into "I can row quite well," she said, as he after her; "I prefer to go alone."

"Tide's strong tonight, lady," he said doubtfully.

"But I understand boating perfectly, outside the bay," said Lois, putting a his hand and taking up the oars. She skillfully between the small boats until she had reached the broader trance. Letting her oars rest, she drifted ing the sunset colors fade out of the sky thinking.

Suddenly she noticed that her boat down with an unsteady motion. Her looking around, she saw that she had the bay. Trembling she seized the all her strength to pull the boat back was too strong. She was being into the channel. She tried to calm think. To the north she saw the launch approaching. She called the chug, chug of the engine drowned was too dark for her to be seen, and by. She felt her strength waning and up trying to row against the current getting rougher, and it required all keep her frail craft from upsetting.

The first panic of her fear had spent could think sanely. "At least, Jack mured, "whatever happens, I'm away before you arrived with rather anything would happen to me should see me there. I'd rather die," here all alone. Is that light coming Yes," she breathed, her heart lightening.

As the light came nearer, she saw to a small yacht. They were within now. At her call a man on the deck the railing and peered out into the ing in her boat, saw him turn, as if The yacht slackened speed and called: "Can you row alongside?"

"Yes," answered Lois.

A few seconds later she was lifted side.

A TENDERFOOT'S TRYING EXPERIENCE AMONG THE MOUNTAINS.

By Emma Younglove.

"HOW d'ye do?"

"How are you? All right?"

"All right."

"Going to listen to the Chatter Box?"

"Thinking of it. Want to go along and help?"

"No, thank you; the sun is a bit too fierce for me."

So the young man in gray tweed moved on alone. He was correctly dressed—almost too correctly for a camper. But he walked with a strong, firm step and an easy, confident gait. He soon left behind the three who, clad in flannel shirts and rust-colored khaki trousers, were lazily lounging in the shade of their tent.

Bert Hamilton was only half-conscious of the attitude of mild chaffing whnch the Californians had assumed toward him, and was good-naturedly indifferent to the fun they might get out of his ignorance as a "tenderfoot."

The heat was intense, the dry, lifeless heat of the desert. Before he was half-way up Chatter Box Canyon the climber agreed with Jack Chandler that the sun was a bit too fierce, and longed for a tree or a boulder which might afford a comfortable shadow. Each movement dislodged loose shale, which went rattling down the mountainside. In the nerve-racking heat the sound, caught up and echoed and re-echoed by the thousand rocks of the canyon walls, suggested the senseless chatter and hollow laughter that bespeak the vacant mind. Progress was slow, for every time the man stepped his foot slipped back almost as far as he had advanced it. But he pressed pluckily on, with coat hanging over his arm.

At length the thought occurred to him that return down that steep trail where was no firm footing, would be almost impossible. He paused for an instant. Then he recalled hearing some one say that there was another trail by which one might descend. Already he was far on his way toward the summit, and again he turned his face upward.

Finally he reached the top. What a magnificent view stretched out below him and around him! All about rose rugged mountain peaks, many of them higher than Indian Head, on which he stood. Here and there was a dome of snow, solitary, sublime. Below, the valley lay quiet, brown with the drouth of summer, save where the river, only a thread in the July sun, had its silver edged with emerald, or where the live oaks, straggling or in groves, broke the golden brown with their dark, somber hue.

He sought out the white tents which glinted among the dark green of the trees. Obeying an impulse for comradeship, he waved his coat in air, that in the doubtful event of his existence being remembered and his movements followed with a glass, his triumph over the difficulties of the ascent might be recognized.

After a time he began looking for the other trail. But search as he would he could not find it. Again and again he rounded huge rocks and made sallies in one direction and another. Every time he returned to the starting point.

Finally he began to descend by the difficult trail up which he had come. The loosened shale went tumbling, rattling down at every step, until it sounded as though countless fragments were tossing about in an empty, hollow world. Then to his overwrought imagination it became a babel of the harsh voices and discordant laughter of a host of demons.

Cautiously, yet slipping and sliding, Hamilton descended with unwished-for speed. Half-way down he suddenly swerved and went over the edge of the trail. One moment of swift sliding down the rough, crumbling, almost precipitous declivity—a quick glance, an accurate clutch, a firm grasp—and the man hung motionless, his hand holding a strong bush.

For a few moments the clatter of tumbling stone was deafening. Then all was quiet, absolutely quiet. The cessation of the tumultuous din was appalling. It shocked the sense like an earnest of the transition from time to eternity.

Hamilton moved a foot slightly to dislodge a fragment and break the stillness. As it fell he seemed to hear the mocking voice and soulless laughter of a fiend.

He looked down. Directly beneath him and at only a little distance was a mass of writhing black coils. He was poised above a nest of rattlesnakes! If he should fall, nothing could save him from their fangs.

He studied his surroundings, seeking purchase for hand or foot. Not a firm inch of soil or rock appeared, and bushes were insecure and at rare and uncertain intervals.

In desperation he called again and again. Would that he had made friends with the young men of the camp! What a fool he had been to dare such hazards alone! How slowly the time passed! Yet he would have had it pass a thousand times more slowly. The sun sank low.

Then he caught the sound of falling fragments—or did the wish stimulate the imagination? Alternately he listened and shouted. Surely the Chatter Box was once more active! And—yes, his shouts were answered. Again he called, that his voice might guide the footsteps of possible rescuers.

A familiar face bent over the edge of the trail above. It was Jack Chandler. Beyond Chandler, supporting and assisting him, were Towne and Burgstrom, also of the camp.

Directly they let down a rope with noose. Slowly, with fingers stiffened from the tightness of his grasp during the previous two hours, Hamilton adjusted the rope about his body and was drawn up the stony slope.

There was no longer lack of cordial feeling between the "native sons" and the eastern man. Taking hold of the rope the four started down the trail together.

In a few minutes darkness fell, the sudden, black darkness of the mountains. Hamilton had never before known the meaning of "darkness which could be felt," but he instinctively put up his hand to ward this off. It was like a pall.

The men dared not move. Minutes passed, which seemed endless to Hamilton. The thought of spending the night on the mountain side was unendurable. He questioned his own power and his neighbors' power to outlive the night.

Then a tiny speck of silver appeared in the east. Rapidly it spread until it became the great round moon.

"Isn't she a glorious old moon!" shouted Hamilton. "I am more glad to see her than anybody ever!" He leaped up and down like a child in ecstasy, and tears ran down his cheeks. "Three cheers for the old moon, men!"

Right heartily all joined in the cheer.

Then the companions resumed their march, and the clatter of the falling stone sounded merry in their ears. Once they paused. In the canyon below shone with the moon's reflection a mountain stream, and its murmur, multiplied a thousand times by the echo of canyon walls, broke the stillness like the voices of maidens in glee.

THE DAILY LIFE OF A KING.

"King Alfonso is one of the hardest working men in all Spain," says Kellogg Durland, in Woman's Home Companion for March. "Ordinarily he rises at 7 to 7:30, and after breakfast in the Queen's boudoir he is steadily occupied until half-past 1 or 2 o'clock. Mornings when he reviews troops he leaves the palace at 6. After lunch he attends to affairs about town—opens exhibitions and bazaars and performs such other social duties as devolve upon a sovereign. At 5 o'clock he plays polo or goes shooting till about 7:30, when he returns to the palace and looks over the news of the day gleaned from forty-six leading newspapers of the world. At 8:30 he dines, and in the late evening goes to other social functions, the theater or the circus. The circus he is particularly fond of, and during the several months of the circus season in Madrid he attends regularly every Thursday night. He is as delighted with the performing horses, the trained monkeys and the tumbling clowns as any small boy in his kingdom. Any one who knows how strenuous is the life of King Alfonso from early morning until 5 o'clock in the afternoon marvels at his strength and energy, yet constantly one hears and sees in the newspapers that he devotes all of his time to polo playing and shooting! Without this hour or two of daily exercise he could never maintain the energetic routine of his life."

OXEN IN LUMBER CAMPS.

After nearly fifty years retirement from active service the ox has again come into recognition as a motive power in the lumbering industry of northern Minnesota, northern Wisconsin and among the frontier settlers of these States. The reason is the high price of feed for horses.

There is little or no expense for the "keep" of oxen as compared with that of horses. It is estimated that there are now in northern Wisconsin and Minnesota 2000 yoke of oxen used in hauling logs which have replaced high-priced horses. This is nearly double the number employed a year ago. So satisfactory are these animals proving in the cultivation of land from which the timber has been cut that it is likely their use will become general and remain so for many years.—[St. Paul Dispatch.

MAUD.

Ah! Maud, what warm attachment gleams
  Through those dark eyes of thine!
And in thy smile's bright sunny beams
  What pleasing graces shine!
The lily and the fragrant rose,
  And all things fair to see
That earth and starry heavens disclose,
  Are but faint types of thee.

Oh, ne'er, sweet girl, that glance employ
  For vain coquettish arts;
Nor with that smile find ruthless joy
  In breaking lovers' hearts.
To glow with sympathetic ray
  Those lustrous eyes were given;
To cheer the sad, to charm the gay
  That smile was lent from heaven.

That voice which floods the eventide
  With glad or plaintive song,
While hearers all enwrapt abide,
  Nor think the theme too long;
Should some day prompt a manly soul
  To trample base desire,
To fight life's battle's spirit whole,
  And conq'ring, still aspire.

That hand, from household duties freed,
  Which strikes the harpstring now,
Be it stretched forth in time of need,
  To cool the fevered brow.
Those feet which can so gaily tread
  The light fantastic toe,
Let them as willingly be sped
  To aid and comfort woe.

So shalt thou bear a nobler name
  Than title handed down
From distant age to haughty dame,
  With coronet or crown.
So shalt thou be in very truth
  What we would have thee, Maud,
A perfect woman, therefore, sooth,
  The noblest work of God.

City of Durango.

A DELIGHTFUL PLACE NOT OFTEN VISITED BY TOURISTS.

By Eoline G. Aldrich.

AS a rule, Durango is overlooked by the ordinary tourist to Mexico because it is situated off the main traveled road between El Paso and Mexico City. It stands on a level plain near the Sierra Madre foothills, is the capital of the State of the same name, has a population of about 35,000 and is 6207 feet above sea level. Among its inhabitants are many wealthy natives of the best class who own large haciendas: conservative folk who cling to all the old-time customs. The Americans number about 300, and there are in the neighborhood of 100 Germans and French, but these progressive foreigners have had little effect upon quaint, sleepy Durango.

Leaving Torreon early in the morning the train passes over the Nazas River, through fertile fields of cotton and alfalfa for several miles, skirts a mountainous district, passes within sight of one of the largest smelters in the republic and on into a broad valley. During the last few hours of the ride one sees well-kept haciendas, each with its group of white buildings nestling against the foothills, and finally about 2 o'clock in the afternoon the train arrives at a clean-looking station surrounded by large cottonwood trees. Looking toward the south the church spires of the city make an attractive picture, and the hungry traveler loses no time in engaging a coche to the hotel. If he is experienced in the ways of the country he will be able to overlook the poor furnishings of his room and feel grateful for the large porch upstairs, protected by an old stone balustrade, and he will undoubtedly resolve to have his evening meal served there among the blooming plants and singing birds, where he can enjoy the excellent band concert and survey the gay throngs parading in the Plaza Principal opposite the hotel.

The outgoing train leaves shortly before the arrival of the incoming train, therefore in an itinerary of Mexico two days must be allotted to Durango, if one desires to see it. More time should be allowed if one wishes to collect curios, for they consist of old English porcelain, quaintly-set jewelry and ancient books, some of them very choice, that must be searched for and purchased in a leisurely manner. New hand-made zerapes and steamer rugs (machine made,) in beautifully blended shades of brown and gray and red, can also be bought—all at astonishingly low prices. Occasionally diligent search is rewarded by finding a genuine old-time Indian zerape, of unusual design and coloring, that will be a joy as long as it lasts. The Durango pottery is inferior from an artistic standpoint and consists chiefly of cooking vessels and dull red, undecorated water bottles.

I shall never forget how agreeable were my first impressions of the place, upon my arrival early in April. Shortly after the noon meal our party went for a stroll. We were charmed when we emerged from one of the narrow, ill-paved streets onto the Alameda and saw the fine old trees, the little pond full of swans and white ducks and the many walks bordered with the pale pink rosa de Castile, then in full bloom. The four entrances are guarded by life-size plaster lions, mellowed to an agreeable ivory tint, and opposite the east side of this plaza stands the old bull ring where performances are given every Sunday. Leading from the west side is a long driveway, shaded by four rows of immense trees, which ends in a garden inclosed by a hedge of boxwood—El Jardin de Patoni, a lover-like retreat full of mulberry trees, then bearing an abundance of fruit. Along one side of this drive is the largest of the ditches used in irrigating small haciendas adjacent to the city, and it is spanned by several bridges that add charm to the landscape.

The churches do not differ materially from those to be found in all Mexican cities, but I consider three worthy of mention. One is a small chapel that is built on a very high, rocky hill, called El Cerro de los Remedios. Afflicted peons climb on their knees to this chapel to pray, believing that their pains will thereby be alleviated or cured. This hill still has embankments, showing where cannon were placed years ago, which bear out the legend of many encounters between the first settlers and hostile tribes of Indians.

There is a very small church standing at the end of a short street that reminds me of San Gabriel Mission. It has four or five bells of various sizes set in square openings made in the high front wall. The structure is calcimined pale pink with white markings. Beyond it the blue mountains are seen through the square openings for the bells, and even in broad daylight one has the impression that it is a bit of painted scenery from some Spanish opera. The old beggar taking a siesta on the steps confirms this fancy.

The third church is that of San Francisco, and is said to be very ancient. It occupies almost a block of ground and consists, besides the church proper, of many queer patios, weather-stained domes and square towers with prison-like grated openings that must have been used long ago as lookouts in times of trouble. One of the courtyards is now utilized as a meson, a boarding place for the humble burro and his master when they bring to town charcoal and country produce. It contains an artistic view of one of the old domes and of a many-pillared corridor. The interior of this church, as is also the case with the large cathedral, has been spoiled from the tourist's point of view by redecorating.

The gardens of Durango! The very words hold a charm for the initiated, and the city is full of gardens. They usually occupy from one to three acres of ground and are surrounded by high adobe walls, the house forming part of one wall. They are full of old apple, pear, peach, apricot, lime, pomegranate, orange, banana and fig trees; some of them contain fountains and flower-bordered walks, with tall grasses and old-fashioned flags growing alongside the irrigating ditches; all are full of a certain charm, especially in the early spring, when the gnarled trees are covered with blossoms. In them all kinds of flowers will grow and bloom profusely the year round. Large violets, with stems from ten to fifteen inches long, can be picked any month in the year. Strawberries bear two crops, and I believe selected plants, properly cared for, would produce berries eight or nine months in the year, as in California.

The high-class natives have a pleasant custom of serving afternoon "tea" on the wide portico overlooking the garden or under the old trees near the flower-bordered walks. The meal usually consists of very sweet chocolate and sugared buns, and is called merienda. It is quite the pleasant, gossipy affair that 5-o'clock is with the English and as universally observed. Later, between 8 and 10, the heavy dinner is served in the house.

The figs of Durango are famous. The large as those of California, although The trees produce enormous crops wholesale price of these figs is hundred. Everybody eats them, who are without teeth. The his tortillas and frijoles, and to; but when he can get fruit cane he eats as much of each in addition to the staple food. the children in the spring is very which quite likely is due to the fruit, much of it immature, and they eat continually throughout

The Mormon Indian.

SEEN ONLY AT THE SHOSHONE VILLAGE OF WASHAKIE, UTAH.

By Frank R. Arnold.

"WHAT a curious mixture they are of the negro and the Chinaman!" This is the first thought that came to me as I sat in the Mormon meeting-house of the Shoshone Indian village of Washakie and watched the redskin Saints at their devotions. I had driven that morning seventeen miles in order to visit this village, situated in the midst of the Malad Valley in northern Utah, had arrived just in time for the afternoon meeting, and now I, tenderest of tenderfoots from effete Massachusetts, was for the first time in my life brought face to face with the descendants of the aborigines. The group of huts and wigwams lying in the midst of vast tracts of sage brush had seemed to me typically western and had come up to my idea of what an Indian village should be, but its inhabitants were not the Cooper Indians of my childhood dreams.

They came straggling into the meeting-house, which on week days is a schoolhouse, and according to the Mormon country fashion the sexes separated at the door. Yes, these men were more like mulattoes than Indians, these men in shirt sleeves, with their dark skins and eyes, their graceful, well-rounded bodies; but then their straight black hair, although carefully parted in the middle, was that of the Mongolians. This was not my preconceived idea of the red man. The squaws did less damage to my early illusions. They wore gaudy blankets that, to be sure, were not fashioned by their own fingers, yet they hung on the broad shoulders of the women and concealed their shapeless waists with an inimitable Indian air. In the loose fold of the back of the blanket several women carried babies, each kept in place by a strap fastened under the mother's chin and passing under the body of the infant.

As I watched the Indians during the service I saw little of the recueillement that is supposed to pervade a religious service. Back of the stolid Mongolian faces were signs of the unctuous mirth and emotional nature, so characteristic of the negro. Old men and boys delighted in giving each other sly pokes in the ribs and, as the communion was passed, many were the surreptitious slaps administered to the unwary, while waiting for the holy wafer, and during the long harangues no one dared doze for fear of becoming the butt of practical jokes. One would have said this was a pack of negroes on a lark or a crowd of schoolboys with the teacher's back turned. After service seven or eight of the men accompanied the bishop to his house and sat around on his piazza, where the bursts of laughter were so prolonged and loud that one would have thought that choice bits from Life were being rtailed. I was even beginning to wonder whether the stranger within the gates were not a bit out of the ordinary when the bishop explained to me that they were only discussing a project of forming a company among themselves to buy a threshing machine. These constantly-smiling lips revealed many gold fillings beneath, and I mentioned this later to one of my friends as an evidence of the advanced civilization of these Indians. "It's more than that," he retorted, "it has a religious significance." I admitted that it might be a foreshadowing of a golden crown. "No," he said, "it simply shows that they are good Mormons. Every Mormon believes he will need all parts of his earthly body in the future life and so is uncommonly careful of them in this."

This Mormon bishop, the only white man in the village, gave me also many interesting facts about these Indians, whose language he spoke fluently, and among whom he had long occupied the position of tithe collector and high priest. The church owned the farm on which he lived and had "set him apart" to do this missionary work. Above all the bishop insisted that they were good Mormons, preferring to homestead their land, to work in the beet fields of their neighbors, and to be self-supporting under the wing of the church rather than to become the spoiled children of the nation on the Wind River reservation with the rest of their tribe. He praised them as faithful tithe payers, men whose word could be absolutely depended on, men who understood and believed implicitly the intricate Mormon creed. Can a sect that bows down before the commonplace name of Smith work such a miracle as this, I wondered, and strolled away to visit the village.

Here I found civilization represented by log cabins, cooking stoves and farm wagons and one man who owned stock in a Mexican rubber company, financiered by leading men in the Mormon church. The other side of the medal showed primitive man eating and sleeping on the floor, abandoning in summer his log house for a wigwam, and, nomad-like, keeping his various small possessions done up in baskets and bundles, while his industrious wife makes moccasins of deerskin in her petits moments perdus for the faraway tourist in Salt Lake City. This was all very interesting, but did not offer any solution to the problem whether the only good Indian might be a Mormon Indian, in spite of Mark Twain's confident assertion about the virtue of dead redskins. So I had to explain to myself that the excellence of these Shoshones was due probably to temperament and environment and that any other church, working with the same subjects, could produce the same results.

"You are right in your conclusions," said to me afterward the same friend who had seen religion back of the gold fillings, "and yet, according to the Mormon creed every Indian in the United States should be in the Mormon church. The Mormon church purports to owe nearly everything to the Indian and yet has done almost nothing for him. It teaches that the American Indians are a branch of the Jewish race, the descendants of Lehi, who in the sixth century B.C., fleeing from the enemy, sailed from the Holy Land, landed on the coast of Chile and thence populated all of North and South America; that the Inca ruins of Peru and the Aztec remains of Mexico are evidences of their high civilization; and that the golden plates, revealed to Joseph Smith by Moroni and translated into the 'Book of Mormon' are a record of their history. Hence the degenerate Indian should rejoice at the coming of a gospel which is to him a patent of nobility and makes him a brother of the Jew. But strange to relate, the Indians, with the exception of the little band at Washakie, still remain outside of the Mormon fold, though in the early days many attempts were made to lure them in. The apostle Heber Kimball even went so far as to have a revelation on the authority of which he proclaimed that the skins of Mormon Indians would gradually become white—miraculously, so ran the revelation at first, and then, conforming more to science than to inspiration, it declared that the blond Indian would be a result of intermarriage. Among the 150 Washakie Indians who, as I have said, are the only Mormon Indians of today, there are but two bleached faces, and these are attributed to a white father rather than to the mysterious influence of a belief in the prophet, Joseph Smith."

SPONGE FISHING IN FLORIDA.

A VACATION AMONG THE KEYS THAT CAN BE MADE TO PAY FOR ITSELF.

[New York Sun:] "One of the most enjoyable of my winter vacations was spent in sponge fishing among the Florida keys," declared a young married woman. "We went down to Key West and there made arrangements to take a trip with a sponger who owned his own boat, which was also his family home. When I asked what supplies we must take along in the way of food the question brought a hearty laugh from both the sponger and his wife, with a chorus of giggles from their two young daughters.

"The wife explained that food was the one thing they never thought about down there. All they had to do was to drop a line overboard for their meat and take a walk along some beach for fruit, while at any habitation vegetables were always to be had for the asking.

"The mistake I made was not thinking to ask about the water. Before we were out a week that very necessary commodity became uncomfortably scarce. You see the sponger had depended on replenishing our supply from a cistern on a certain key. When we reached that key it was found that something or somebody had not only emptied the cistern but destroyed it. That meant going without water for another six hours, and was not at all enjoyable for me at least.

"As that was the only time it happened and was the only thing that was the least bit unpleasant on the cruise I always tell it first and then go on to the charming and unusual incidents.

"To begin with the boat we were in was both commodious and comfortable. When it was recommended to my husband by a merchant he told us that unless we could go in a good new boat we might find the odor of the sponges rather unpleasant before we finished the trip. We didn't, not because there weren't enough sponges taken, but because we gradually became accustomed to the odor.

"The actual fishing is done by two or sometimes three persons in a skiff. On our boat the wife and each of the girls had a skiff. During the second week a skiff was assigned to me, and I can truthfully say I never enjoyed any possession more thoroughly. All we women did was to scull, while the man who accompanied us did the fishing. This man was supplied with a water glass and a sponge hook.

"It is one of the oddest sights to see these sponge fishers being sculled about with their heads in these wooden buckets, which are thrust almost rim-deep in the water. The fisherman's hand goes back, reaching for the sponge hook, the sculler stops the boat until the hook is adjusted about the roots of the sponge and it is pulled up and into the skiff.

"Looking through the water glass at the sponges growing on the bottom of the bays and rivers some of them are like fairy trees in a fairy forest. It almost seems a pity to tear them up. Once they are out of the water much of their beauty disappears, though they are not a bit more unsightly than seaweed. The odor that so many people object to is produced by the decomposition of the gelatinous matter.

"So far as the cost of such a trip is concerned it can be made to pay for itself. We paid our way, though my husband had not planned that we should. We were taken on the sponger by the owner for a stipulated price, not very much to our northern ears, but when one considers the cheapness of all food supplies and the simplicity of our accommodations it was doubtless quite ample to the boat owner and his thrifty wife.

"There was the understanding that we were to have all the sponges we took. As I have been accustomed to handling a canoe and rowboat all my life it was not long before I could manage to scull my husband around in our skiff. On two occasions we brought in more sponges than any of the other skiffs, and you may be sure were praised.

"The skiffs always return to the large boat for dinner and to sleep. The three meals a day are bountiful, and in our boat one would not have found better cooking in any first-class restaurant, that is of the articles we had. Fish we had in an almost unlimited variety. Fruit was as abundant as fish, and vegetables were usually served for dinner.

"One old sponge fisher was one of the attractions of our experience. He could remember the keys as they were in the days before the government built lighthouses and when the wreckers reigned supreme. He had any number of yarns about the exploits of these outlaws. One was the way they would tie a lantern to the horns of a cow and chase her back and forth over some dangerous key during a storm. When we showed too much horror he would usually end his story with the assertion that such things only happened occasionally and when there hadn't been a wreck for a good long while."

An Absent Courtship.

THE BOY AND GIRL COME TO A COMPLETE UNDERSTANDING.

IT was an ideal spot for a moonlight revery, the happy little moonbeams dancing in and out among the tangle of climbing roses—yellow roses that had a wild, spicy odor and blossomed in long sprays which swayed in rhythm with the wind. In vain they nodded and beckoned to the slim, girlish figure trying to hide from every one, herself included, her face buried in the downy depths of the big, comfortable cushion which always received her confidences in a silence which seemed to betoken the truest sympathy. Thus she failed to hear the footsteps which passed the house, paused uncertainly, and were hastily retraced as the sound of muffled sobs was wafted streetward through the tangled masses of yellow roses. At the first step on the little porch, however, the figure in the hammock straightened instantly to angry erectness, while the tear-stained cheeks were treated to an application of a very damp handkerchief with more vigor than kindliness.

With no attempt at a preliminary interchange of polite civilities, Harold Clifton plunged into the subject nearest his heart. It was not the first time he had tried to make this tantalizing slip of determined girlhood listen to his sound, masculine common sense, but he certainly intended it should be the last.

"Now listen to me, Frances," he began, as he tried to take the rigid little figure into the arms so ready to fight all her battles for her. "You are to stop this foolish search for a position, right here and now! Forget you want to be a business woman, and let me take care of you and your mother! Don't you believe me when I tell you that your mother will be more than welcome in our home? Don't cry your eyes out——"

"I wasn't crying! I was just a little bit discouraged—because—because——"

"Yes, I can imagine it all, d—— (I beg your pardon.) I mean I want you to cut it out! Just think how much cuter you would look cooking breakfast for me than you would running a crazy typewriter downtown for some numskull of a man who'd growl if you failed to eliminate every error from his dictation."

"I don't see why you are constantly insinuating that business men are numskulls, and I'm sure I could write letters as well as most of the girls who do such things. I'm not so frightfully stupid——"

"Except when you get a perfectly senseless notion in your head and won't give up even when you know——"

"When I 'know!' I have told you more than once that I won't marry you now, and maybe I won't ever! if you won't listen to anything I say or sympathize with anything I want to do before we are married, I don't know what would happen afterward!"

"Frances, can't you see how you are hurting me?"

"You don't seem very much worried about how you are hurting me!"

"But, dear, you must see how unreasonable and unjust you are. Don't you understand how I want to help you?"

"Then if you are so dreadfully in earnest about helping me, ask Barker to try me out in his office!"

"Not Barker! No, by Jove! nor any other man! If you can't listen to reason, I'll let you alone till you can!"

"I shall most certainly appreciate it!"

"I love you, little girl, and I can't bear to see you going out into the rough old world trying to do things beyond your strength, and keep my temper. If you ever want me, just let me know, and I'll come from the ends of the earth, but I'll never thrust myself into your life against your will again. If I have seemed brutal it's because—well, just because I'm a man and I love you!"

"I—I don't want you to think——" She caught at his arm in a dazed sort of way.

"I shall never think any but the tenderest thoughts of you, dear," he said, and kissed her softly. "Good-by!"

There was no answer, and he slipped out into the moonlight without a backward look at the slender figure sitting motionless in the gently-swaying hammock.

"I just knew it would come!" Frances announced to her mother, joyfully, as the postman left a brief but significant letter from a law firm in San Francisco, asking her to wire her acceptance and start immediately if she was willing to take the position offered.

Not a word of dissuasion did her mother offer. Only, when the excitement of the packing was over and the good-bys said, she turned back into the house so suddenly cheerless and forlorn, and stood by the sunny kitchen window looking off to the hills, the tears running down her withered cheeks unheeded and unchecked. At nightfall, when the heartache was beginning to become unbearable again, Harold came, knowing that Frances was far away and realizing the depth of the little mother's loneliness.

From the first Frances was mystified by the knowledge that her mother, who would scarcely speak to a stranger, had actually consented, "at his earnest request," to take a boarder (who remained nameless) to "help out a little on expenses and keep her from feeling too lonely." When the letter came breaking this astonishing news, Frances was provoked, knowing how her mother felt the least extra tax on her scant store of strength, but as the weeks wore away and she learned of his unvarying kindness and thoughtfulness, her gratitude knew no bounds. She sent comical messages to him, which were answered by others equally absurd. Often there crept into her cheerful letters a wistful little note of longing. "You never mention Harold," she would suggest. Or "is Harold still in the city?" To which, after due consultation with the person in question, she would naively answer that "she saw him sometimes, and he seemed much as usual." It struck Frances as very strange that her mother, who had always guessed her thoughts before they were spoken, should so persistently ignore her guarded inquiries. The only explanation appeared to lie in the fact that she was so completely engrossed with the innumerable kindnesses lavished upon her by "the Boy." It became evident that her mother was getting along quite nicely without her, that even the weekly check she sent was not absolutely indispensable. Then over her gratitude to this stranger there crept an unaccountable feeling of antagonism that he could so completely usurp the place which Harold had coveted in her mother's life.

It was with an effort that Frances kept her attention fixed on the endless piles of letters and legal forms which she ticked off on her typewriter. Every day it grew harder instead of easier, until even the gruff old senior partner himself saw there was something wrong and suggested a week's vacation. But Frances refused with a flash of her obstinate pride returning at the thought of giving up for even a week.

. . . .

"Couldn't I write for your mother to come for a little visit?" the nurse suggested for the third time, as she lifted her patient a little higher on the pillow.

"Oh, no! Please don't!" the girl begged. "Get some one to write a little note on the typewriter—just a little note, saying I am very, very busy"—she smiled faintly—"and will write a long letter in a day or two. Mother would be terribly alarmed, and she's not strong, you know." She closed her eyes wearily and babbled about the moonlight and the roses—and now, at last, the nurse caught the whole name!

"Harold Clifton, I will not marry you—not now, and maybe never! Mother needs me. Is that plain

A little later a very guarded message was sent, care of Frances' mother to Mr. Harold Clifton.

He read it at the breakfast table with Frances's mother sitting opposite, but he did not allow his face to change as he grasped the meaning of the ambiguous little note. The trouble which had been growing in his heart, an anxious, worried feeling that things were not going as they should with their little girl, was changed to joy that at last he was free to play a man's part without subterfuge.

"It's from a friend of mine in 'Frisco," he replied in answer to the questioning eyes of Francis's mother. "I have been expecting it for several days. I must run up there this afternoon. I shall be gone only a week or so. Of course I'll run in and see Frances, and if possible I will persuade her to come home for a little visit at least.

"Oh, if she only would!" breathed the little mother.

"The little girl may see some things differently by this time," he suggested, smiling cheerily back at her.

"Oh, Harold, I hope so!" she answered earnestly. "Dear boy, you have waited so patiently. I don't see how she can hold out much longer."

"If she shouldn't be well I shall bring her home anyway," he announced, with a hearty assurance which set the mother's heart at rest.

"If you are with her I shan't worry a minute, my boy!" she said.

. . . .

"You will be very, very quiet?" the nurses admonished, as she led him to the room where Frances lay. "She thinks you are staying away to tease her."

Just a moment he looked into the clear depths of the nurse's eyes, and she read a story of devotion too sacred to be lightly uttered.

"I can't tell you what to do or say," she said softly. "Your love will teach you, but remember that her will is broken and you must be strong for her."

They opened the door and caught the broken murmurings of the fevered lips. "If you can't understand me now, what will it be after we are married—after we are married?—but we will never be married—if I want you, you said you'd come. I can't find you, Harold!"

He knelt beside the bed and took her hot cheeks between his strong, cool hands.

"I have found YOU, little girl!" He barely breathed the words, but they pierced the torturing fog that shut her in, and she opened bewildered eyes that gazed into his with questioning joy; closed them and opened them once more. Then with a little cry of happiness she drew him to her. They needed no words to complete their understanding, and none were spoken.

The fever was broken with the cessation of the mental strain under which she had been working, and a couple of days saw a wonderful change for the better. She greeted him with a roguish smile, and there was a hint of color in her pale cheeks.

"I wish you would write mother and tell her something for me," she suggested tentatively.

"I have written her that we'd be home the end of the week," he answered in as matter-of-fact a tone as he could command under the circumstances.

"Yes, that will be lovely, but there is something that is bothering me," she insisted.

"I am all attention," he assured her.

"Well, you see mother was naturally lonesome, after I left."

"I know," he assented gravely.

"Did you ever see her boarder? 'The Boy' she called him." Frances' eyes were averted, and she failed to catch the gleam of merriment which shot into Harold's eyes. "But I guess you weren't there. Mother never mentioned your calling."

"No, I didn't—call," he acknowledged.

"So this 'Boy' is staying with mother, and—I wish you'd tell her to send him away! He's doing all the things you wanted me to let you do for mother, and mother loves him, and I don't see how she can after knowing you so well! I want him to go away! Please write and tell her, won't you?"

"Never mind, little girl. It'll be all right. He isn't there now," he told her soothingly.

"But mother was so perfectly taken up with him. You can't imagine the way she wrote about him all the time, and I couldn't make her tell me a single thing about you, though I asked and asked!"

"Only five times," he answered, not thinking
"Five times! How do you know?"
"Why, you see, dear, she mentioned it to time, and, naturally, I wouldn't forget it,
"Oh, I suppose she told 'the Boy,' shouldn't be so childish in her ideas. What pose he thought?"
"He was probably delighted!"
"Oh, no! I don't think so. He used to send sages, too. I suppose I would have thought derfully funny if any one else had sent them really gone away?"
"Temporarily."
"Oh, then you think he'll come back,"
"From present appearances I should judge

[illegible] his love, he sought the mystery in her eyes and, brooding not on unremembered things, he led her to a lonely balcony where crouched a tiger-covered divan rich with the civit perfume of the East. And there the lovers watched alone the feasting of Eleusis.

The slow hours of the night one by one faltered and crept away toward Athens and the portals of the dawn. The reed-ignited palm oil grew dim and lack-luster, and curled in sickly spirals through the thin air. The youths grew weary of the feast, and their eyes began to lose their starriness. The feet of the dancing girls grew heavy on the Parian marble blocks. The music fainted and the singing died. Yet Lais and Hippolochus looked on from above, silent with their love.

When there came that infinite stillness which foretells the flushing of the hidden dawn, Lais leaned over and touched the garment of Hippolochus.

"Let us depart," she whispered, bending her full lips. lips.

He touched her jeweled hand, and, watching the flame-touched vapor in the east, said half-warningly: "I fear for thee."

"Why shouldst thou fear for me, Hippolochus?" she asked him. "Do we not love each other?"

"'Tis true we love each other," he told her gently. "And still I fear for thee. Thy strange eyes haunt my soul. Thy mouth makes me forget the fear of death. Thy breath is like the charm of other stars that I have known in earlier worlds, yet which are unremembered."

"Then why, beloved, shouldst thou fear?"

"Once I loved in Thessaly an old Egyptian's daughter—Lahsara, a girl with unforgetting eyes of sleeping passion, eyes in whose depths lurked all the sorcery of the East, eyes where vengeance hath a home. And when I came away she said to me: 'Hippolochus, I will await thee.'"

At these words Lais only smiled and drew closer to Hippolochus. She put her languid arms about him and drew his head close to her lips.

"Thou thinkest, then, that she awaits thee? Thou dost not know Egyptian hearts with their poetic wickedness, their passing hates and fleeting loves. Ere this she hath forgotten thee. She may have loved thee as the bulbul loves the rose in early spring, but it was only an eager fancy, Hippolochus. There is naught to fear from her."

Ere she had ceased her speaking, a clamor arose from the court below and a hundred voices shouted: "Lais, Lais!"

From the midst of the throng Praxiteles stood forth, a wreath of grape leaves in his hand. The time had come to crown the queen of the festival.

But Lais crouched against Hippolochus and hid herself beneath the balustrade. Again the voices from the court below called: "Lais, Lais, the queen of the festival!"

But as they waited for her to appear, of a sudden a shout went up from where the flaming lights dyed the waters of the sea to crimson. All eyes were turned upon the beach. There Phryne stood, swaying from the sweet havoc of the wine, her white arms toward the sky, her hair a mass of dishevelled gold—all Aphrodite's beauty in her grace. And when all eyes beheld her, she flung a red rose to Praxiteles and ran into the shallow waters of the sea. There she stood, glistening with the surf, wringing her hair, the falling of the silver drops making a diaphanous sequin veil about her form.

Praxiteles, drunk with olden wine, forgot the charm of Lais. He saw in Phryne the ideal of his heart. For in earlier days he had given her to the world as the Venus Cnidian; and he sought the sea, proclaiming Phryne queen of the festival.

Then Lais quickly arose. She cast a glance first toward the weary remnant of the throng, then to the morning-reddened vapor wraith beyond which sang the grain of Thessaly. Leaning upon Hippolochus she said: "Come, let us hasten."

But he did not move.

"Come, my beloved." Again Lais put her arms about him.

Still he did not move. He merely whispered as before: "I fear for thee."

Slowly she drew his lips downward and whispered again her love and longing, urging him against his will.

So they departed, Hippolochus reluctantly, Lais with the happiness that comes of love.

Out toward the dawn they were borne on lecticas. They heard the music hush in the far distance behind them, and saw the blood-red torches wane beneath the dim flush of the morning. Through the early gloom rose dew-drenched myrtle scent. The marshes grew still of the cricket song, and oleanders blew amid the dawn.

All day, from time to time, Hippolochus would say: "I fear for thee."

But Lais only smiled and drew closer to him.

Upon the second eve, Larissa's towers stabbed the blue expanse in white array. Lais sang joyfully and gloried in her happiness. But Hippolochus was sick of an old love and trembled with an intuitive fear.

The slanting rays of the sun, pomegranate red, emblazoned the citron orchards and the golden grain, and made the hills vast heaps of purple ashes, when through the city's gates they rode. A wonderful city it was, with saffron streets, with flame-touched cupolas and glittering towers half-smothered in the green of trees.

As soothed by hope and sunset fire they dreamed of their love, a sudden startle shook Hippolochus. His whitened face bent nearer to Lais. He pointed to a postern by the roadway and whispered low: "This moment she was there. Lahsara stood by yonder gate and saw us. And in her eyes was an old vengeance, and in the curl of her lips was a new hate, and as she looked at thee I saw the sign of death."

A primal terror clutched the heart of Lais. She gazed about her helplessly, trembling with fright. In the distance, through a mesh of tangled palms, she saw the low bronze portals of a temple, and without a word she slipped away and fled into the cool enclosure of its walls.

With lips pallid as snow, she threw herself face downward on the altar and prayed to Venus for the grace of life.

But even as she prayed, a lithe young figure watched behind her in the shadow of the wall. Above a silken vitta two passionate eyes flashed upon her. No longer were they shy like a gazelle's, but terrible as the sorcery of the east. As Lais rose the temple was filled with a cry which echoed all the ages' maddened hate. And Lahsara hurled a poisoned kriss into the heart of Lais.

Far into the star-white night Hippolochus sought for Lais. Weary and desolate he made halt before the altar of the temple. The Grecian moon, high on the milky stair, had melted through an alcove from above and flooded the altar with light. Then suddenly at his feet Hippolochus beheld the form of Lais, hushed and beautiful, like some pale Phidian statue made marble-white by the moon.

A moment did he stand, and then like a man distraught with savage grief he sank upon the altar, where he lay moaning: "Lahsara! oh, Lahsara!" through the night.

EXAMPLES OF "AD." WRITING.

The following advertisements which appeared in various papers some years ago were compiled by Life:

"Bulldog for sale; will eat anything; very fond of children."

Wanted, a boy to be partly outside and partly behind the counter."

"Widow in comfortable circumstances wishes to marry two sons."

"Annual sale now on; don't go elsewhere to be cheated; come here."

"A lady wants to sell her piano, as she is going abroad in a strong iron frame."

"Wanted, by a respectable girl, her passage to New York; willing to take care of children and a good sailor."

"Lost, near Highgate Archway, an umbrella belonging to a gentleman with a bent rib and a bone handle."

"Mr. Jones, furrier, begs to announce that he will make up gowns, capes, etc., for ladies out of their own skins."

"Wanted, an airy bedroom for a gentleman 22 feet long and 11 feet wide."

Recently this line appeared in a daily paper: "A carload of bricks came in for a walk through the park."

I RISE TO REMARK.

Many things are well done that are not worth doing.

Keep busy and you'll have no time to be miserable.

After all, intuition is but another word for feminine suspicion.

Of two evils choose neither.

All men are equal at birth and death.

Some men's only claim to distinction is a pair of white duck trousers or a three-colored hat band.

Most everybody wishes that he could live his life over again, but few would live much better.

Eloquence is the truth well told.

An echo is the shadow of a noise.

A Christian doesn't have to tell any one.

Imagination causes more aches and pains than all other ailments.

THE LAND OF ADOPTION.

I dream a dream of Scotland, its Highlands wild and grand:
  A long green strath my musing fancy fills;
And I am often longing for the dear old mother land,
  Her heather-clad and mist-encircled hills.
But the snow-crowned proud Sierras have a charm no tongue can tell,
  When sunbeams like God's smile upon them rest;
They 'witch me with their beauty, and I yield me to their spell:
  I cannot leave the mountains of the West.

Full many a noisy Highland stream goes laughing down the brae—
  The robin sings at eve his plaintive strain,
The skylark, mad with gladness, goes to meet the coming day;
  And how I long to hear it all again!
But meadow larks are singing here, with clear and mellow song,
  The "mocker" answers with his wond'rous trill;
They hold me with their silvery chords, and I must listen long,
  And yield my dream, and listen to them still.

The Highland moors are purple, and the woodlands sweet with briar
  Where hawthorns pile their drifts of fragrant snow;
The lilac and laburnum with its "drooping wells of fire,"
  Are blooming where my wanderings fain would go.
But I see the palm fronds stirring in the yellow light of eve,
  When poppies fold their golden hearts to rest;
What warp and woof the roses and the bougainvillea weave
To wrap my soul in loving for the West!

O, dear, old rugged Mother Land—so near—so far away,
  You must not think that ever I forget;
The joys, the loves, the friendships of many a long dead day
  Like faded roses keep their fragrance yet;
But, Scotia, if o'er deserts, and across the restless sea,
  I went to you, I would not with you rest,
The canyon streams would call me, and the palm fronds beckon me,
  And I'd find the trail again that leadeth west.

Old Enough.

A NEW YORK Irishman, apropos of St. Patrick's Day and Home Rule, praised the Irish leader, John Redmond.

"He is a wit, too," he said. "On his last visit I told him about a friend of his, a Derry man, 81 years of age, who married a woman of 79.

"Mr. Redmond laughed heartily at this news.

" 'When were they married?' he asked.

" 'In '96,' said I.

"He laughed again.

" 'Of course,' he said, 'they didn't have any children; but tell me—did they have any grandchildren?' "

Rebuked.

"DON'T tackle the magazines till you have made your reputation," David Graham Phillips once said to a journalist at the Authors' Club in New York.

"Once in Jowett's undergraduate days at Oxford," said a member of the Fifth-avenue Presbyterian Church, "he rose in a debate and said:

" 'We young Oxonians are very proud of calling ourselves agnostics. It's a Greek word. I don't think we're equally fond of its Latin equivalent—ignoramuses.' "

* * *

What's In a Name?

THE REV. D. J. H. JOWETT, New York's second importation of English ministerial talent, has a short way with skeptics.

"I once tackled a magazine editor in this room," he went on. "I told him of my high aims. I submitted three stories to him, saying:

" 'I am convinced I have talent. I know I have a future, sir.'

" 'Well,' said the editor, yawning, 'have it made into a past, and then you'll be able to drive a better bargain with me.' "

The Pessimistic Senator.

APROPOS of Canadian reciprocity, N. C. Goodwin said the other day at the Lambs in New York:

"But you can't rely on Senator Blank. Blank is never satisfied. I visited his ranch one day, and he had the finest crop I ever saw harvested.

"I knew, though, that Blank would have something to complain about, and, sure enough, when I remarked: 'This is a record crop, you lucky rascal!' Blank frowned and said:

" 'Yes, but I'm afraid it's going to be a terrible strain on the land.' "

That Tired Feeling.

"HOME RULE has been a long time coming," said Thomas V. Brady, secretary of the Irish Emigrant Society of New York. "The Englishmen who promised it to us were a rather tired lot when it came to fulfilling their promise. They were as tired, indeed, as Pat Murphy of Ballycoolish.

" 'Pat,' said I, 'don't you ever get tired doing nothing?'

"Pat looked up from his pipe and nodded lazily.

" 'Indade, sor,' he said, 'I get so tired doin' nothin' that I can't do nothin' else.' "

* * *

Very Vivid.

"IN descriptive writing," said William Dean Howells, at a dinner at the Authors' Club in New York, "a vivid phrase is always better than a half-dozen paragraphs.

"The vivid phrase is what every writer should seek. A phrase, I mean, something like that of the baby that shouted to its mother:

" 'Oh, mamma, tum an' see the man a-buttering bricks!' "

Dodged Them.

"THE Tories and Unionists will try to dodge Home Rule," said Thomas V. Brady, secretary of the Irish Emigrant Society, in his office in New York.

"Dodging and retreating, they make me think of Mrs. Smith.

" 'I understand,' another lady said to Mrs. Smith, 'that your husband can't meet his creditors.'

"Mrs. Smith, smiling frankly, answered:

" 'I don't believe he wants to.' "

Splendid Proof

AT the Decies-Gould wedding reception an example of the somewhat caustic wit of the world's greatest woman philanthropist, Miss Helen Gould, was quoted.

Miss Gould, discussing a certain spendthrift bachelor, remarked:

"You are quite wrong in saying that he has no idea of the value of money. He proposed to one of my nieces twice."

Easily Excused.

DR. COOK, of North Pole fame, was the most animated of the frequenters of the smoke room of the George Washington on her last month's voyage, and his smoke-room stories were quoted in the camps of his friends and enemies alike.

Dr. Cook's best story was about an absent-minded scientist.

"This scientist," he said, "being a bachelor, used to dine at his club. One holiday afternoon, he entered the club dining-room and selected a very good table in a corner.

" 'Hold this table for me,' he said, in his mild voice, to the head waiter. 'I'll dine at this table tonight at 8.'

" 'Very good. Very good, sir.'

"And the scientist mooned off to the club library, where he resumed the correction of certain proofs marked 'diplococci.'

"It being a holiday, the dining-room was crowded that evening. Two young bloods entered together and made for the old scientist's table. But the head waitre interposed.

" 'Excuse me, sirs,' he said. 'That table is reserved for Prof. Distie.'

" 'Oh, tell him he has already dined,' said one of the bloods. 'He will be perfectly satisfied.'

"The waiter frowned as the young men took possession of the table, and just then the scientist came absently into the room. He made his way to his corner, and, when he saw his table occupied, he turned to the head waiter with a look of mild surprise.

" 'Beg pardon, sir, did you forget something?' said the head waiter, bustling up to the good old gentleman.

" 'Where am I to dine?' he faltered.

" 'Dine, sir?' The waiter looked astonished, then he allowed a smile to spread over his face. 'Why, sir, you must have forgotten that you dined at 7 o'clock as you ordered.'

" 'Oh, indeed!' murmured the old fellow confusedly, and, flushing with shame, he shuffled back to the library again."

Lincolniana.

GEN. DANIEL E. SICKLES, at a banquet in New York, said of the taxpayers who grumbled over pensions:

"How many of them would stand up and be shot at for $11 a month and hardtack? They forget the horrors of the Civil War. They are as bad as the Pittsburgh woman.

"This woman passed with her little son, one Lincoln's birthday, before a Lincoln statue hung with flowers.

" 'Who is that, mother?' said the little boy.

" 'That's a statue of Lincoln,' the mother answered.

" 'What's a statue?' continued the boy.

" 'Oh, something that looks like somebody,' the woman said impatiently.

" 'Mother, what did Lincoln do?'

" 'He didn't do anything,' was the reply. 'He was shot in a theayter.' "

A Narrow Escape.

LORD DECIES, the fiance of Miss Vivien Gould, was talking in New York about American cab fares.

"They seem to be intended only for the rich," he said. "I was amused by a cabby who, after a drive that would have cost a shilling in London, said:

" 'You're an Englishman, sir, and so I'll only charge you $2.'

"He made me think of a lawyer who, having won a case involving a hundred pounds sterling, kept eighty pounds for his fee and said, as he handed over the balance of twenty pounds to his client:

" 'I am your friend, sir. I can't charge you my full fee. I knew your father.'

" 'Thank goodness,' said the client warmly, 'that you didn't know my grandfather.' "

Answered.

HARRY THURSTON PECK, the critic, was praising Lincoln at a dinner in New York.

"Lincoln, himself a superb writer," said Prof. Peck, could not stand tedious writing in others. He once condemned for its tediousness a Greek history, whereupon a diplomat took him to task.

"The author of that history, Mr. President,' he said, 'is one of the profoundest scholars of the age. Indeed it may be doubted whether any man of our generation has plunged more deeply in the sacred fount of learning.'

" 'Yes, or come up drier,' said Lincoln."

Moissant's Comparison.

"THE late John B. Moissant was a genial as well as a skillful airman," said a Chicago editor.

"I remember well a visit he once made me, with drawings of an aeroplane of his own invention under his arm. I joked him a little about the machine—it certainly had a heavy, awkward look. But he said with a laugh:

" 'Oh, don't judge even an aeroplane by its outside. What if the man who discovered the oyster hadn't stopped to pry open the shell?' "

Remarkable Gifts.

THE late Melville de Lancey Landon—"Eli Perkins"—kept in his library at Yonkers a scrap-book of typographical errors. Perhaps the most striking of these errors was a sentence from the society column of a fashionable New York paper:

"The fair and blushing bridesmaids wore very handsome breeches, the gift of the bridegroom."

THE DANGEROUS GARMENT.

Mrs. Jasper: Mrs. Turnley has given her hobble skirt away; she was afraid to have it around.

Mrs. Davis: Why?

Mrs. Jasper: It nearly strangled her cook the other day.

Mrs. Davis: How?

The House Beautiful—Its Flower Garden and Grou

THE NEW GARDEN.

SOME SUGGESTIONS FOR THE BEGINNING OF WORK.

By Ernest Braunton.

WHEN one begins work in a new garden, the first consideration should be the soil, for it is just as necessary to have the right plant food present and the soil in good physical condition as it is necessary in your own case to have proper food in the right condition. If the lot is covered with rubbish that cannot well be plowed under or shavings, blocks of wood, etc., pile them up and burn them and scatter the ashes evenly over the lot; do not leave them all in one spot. Spread a good coat of stable manure over the whole and have it plowed as deeply as possible; better still, have a "subsoiler" run in the furrow after the plow. You cannot stir any soil too deeply nor get stable manure or other organic matter too far down into the soil.

If your soil be too heavy, black adobe, for instance, use horse manure and, if available, some very fine sand put on at the same time. The stable manure will help arrest the sand and keep it in the top foot of soil where otherwise it would quickly work down below the depth of cultivation and be lost forever. This first treatment of the soil should precede gardening operations by a whole year if possible. But whatever time elapses, the soil should be plowed again and again, for the value of fertilizers, both stable manure and commercial standards, lies in thorough incorporation with the soil. The writer spreads his manures, ashes, sand, fertilizers, all on top, spades the whole as deeply as possible, two or three times, and then passes it all through a large sieve or screen with an inch mesh, the screen propped up at a sharp angle. The result is a good garden soil in the fullest sense of the word.

The work noted should be done before a house is built, if possible, certainly before the walks and drives are laid out, for trees and other plants will need to send their roots under roads and paths and the soil there should be both loose and rich. If the soil is underlaid with clay or hardpan it will pay to dig through it in places, no matter what the depth. In the writer's garden he has dug through clay to gravel in several places, a depth of thirteen feet. This action is necessary if trees are to be grown, for with an impervious clay or hardpan the trees will be shallow-rooted and will never make a satisfactory growth except during the first few years, while it is rooting in the loose surface soil only. An excellent plan would be to dig a central hole to free, loose gravel and curb it with wood, brick or other retainer, cover it in with the top at least four feet below the surface and put in a drain-tile system radiating from the center in every direction. If fruit or ornamental trees are to be grown these drains should be six feet from the surface. Such a method gives you a soil six feet deep. In filling in the trenches over the tiles the soil should be thoroughly mixed with a liberal quantity of well-rotted stable manure. If you have done all that is herein advised you have a splendid foundation upon which to build a garden, with every assurance of success attending your future operations.

A Rare Orchid.

OUT Hollywood way a Mr. Haerle has a splendid collection of orchids from which he picks wagon-loads of the finest floral gems the world affords, to supply our retail florists. Among the many gems to be seen in bloom at this season is a plant of the rare and costly Cattleya trianae alba, a pure white variety of a somewhat common standard species. It is doubtless the first plant of this variety to flower here, at least within the knowledge of the writer, and it has been much admired by all who have seen it.

Planning the Garden.

YOUR garden is for yourself and your family, and you need not be dictated to by any one, either as to plan or contents. It is, however, best to follow the chief three great rules underlying the art of landscaping, which will be given later. Have a well-defined plan, on paper, before you begin a single thing, whether the plan be yours, or better still by an acknowledged authority to whom you have made known your garden likes and dislikes. Do not have your garden for show, except to the same extent that your house is. Comfort, utility, pleasure, this trinity of considerations is for the house and garden alike. Do not copy after your neighbor or any one else; let your garden express your personality.

The three simple yet necessary fundamental rules which should govern all garden planning are: 1. Preserve open lawn centers, planting only in the borders. 2. Plant in masses and not isolated "specimens." 3. Avoid straight lines; also avoid too many or too abrupt curves. When you come to the planting list, choose your largest subjects first, the shade and ornamental trees. These are fundamentals in planting, and shrubs, herbaceous plants, etc., are, in comparison, but incidentals. Let these and all permanent plants be of kinds that are known to thrive at all seasons under like conditions of soil, climate, and exposure. If you wish things of which you know but little or are in doubt about, use them as incidentals, for if they fail and are removed, your original plan is unchanged, except for a trifling detail. Get the plants you know and like; do not buy a plant list with a lot of live stuff attached; neither a collection of labels whereon are written a lot of names to you unknown. If you get a garden of plants that you love and that satisfies you, that garden is a success, even though it contains but a mixture of the most common and cheapest annuals.

Garden Trees and Shrubs.

PLACING in proper position the few trees admissable in a small garden is the most important point in the whole work of garden building. Each year of growth makes them more difficult to transplant and also renders them more obnoxious if out of place. Utility should be first considered. Do we want a tree to shade the kitchen, a particular window, or a porch? If so, these should be the first planted. In choosing be sure they will answer the purpose and then suit your individual taste, so far as possible, as to general appearance, foliage, flowers, etc. Do not choose too hastily for we have an abundance of material in our favored land, and before purchasing one should see one or more mature trees of the sorts you wish. We have plenty of fine garden specimens if you but keep your eyes open.

Much as you may love and appreciate trees, your love will eventually be greater for the shrubs in your garden. Trees by themselves would never make a garden. We need plants nearer to us, those we may intimately associate with, and care for in all their parts; these will hold our affections. Trees make up the skyline of our landscapes, but still more important for the near prospect or small garden is the ground line. Our garden trees will be relatively few in number and the actual composition, framework, or foundation of the picture will be the shrubbery. They will mark the boundaries or outlines of our garden; the frame of the picture and the frame must be appropriate or artistic. With shrubs we obtain variety of form and color, light and shade, bold relief and deep retreats. Shrubs form our chief material for hiding unsightly objects, either upon our own or our neighbors' grounds; also to screen from sight the utilitarian parts of our premises. such as chicken yards, vegetable gardens, etc.

Seaside Plants.

GROWING on rocky shores in New Zealand are two plants, native to that country, that are well known to us and are yet insufficiently used for seaside planting. Coprosma Baueri is a shrub of great beauty, with the most glossy green foliage known to our gardens; beneath it, completely hiding the ground and scrambling over the shrubs is the delicate climber we know as "Wire Vine," (Muhlenbeckia complexa.) The two should be tried on our Santa Monica palisades, for they delight in the decaying rocks of New Zealand shores. Another plant found with them and on the steepest cliffs, is the New Zealand flax (Phormium.) These, with Myoporum laetum, form a fine lot of subjects for rocky seashores, and all grow closely entwined in their native country, in a climate quite similar to ours.

Garden Periodicals.

NOW that the busiest garden season is upon us, many inquiries come in asking what eastern garden periodical is best suited to Southern California and lamenting the fact that we have nothing of the kind in this State. The most ardent admirers of this department are those who would like to take one, or even more, of garden magazines, and while some of the matter in eastern publications is interesting, little of it is instructive. Right at the home and center of our best gardening, where more good gardeners find employment than any other place on the Pacific Coast, is published a garden magazine worthy of far better support than it at present receives. The Pacific Garden, Pasadena, Cal., is worthy of a place in the home of every plant fancier in our State, and is worth many times the price per annum. Do not send East for garden literature that is well-nigh useless, but patronize our own home production, that it may thereby become bigger and better.

Tree Law Needed.

CALIFORNIA needs a law, if indeed we have not, that will allow cities to protect the street trees from pub- service corporations. Many States have just such but municipal officials often remain in ignorance until an appealed suit-at-law reveals it. The forester of St. Louis some years ago found out that Supreme Court ruling had been made which would all telephone companies and other public-utility corporations from trimming the tops out of shade trees order to string wires. This custom has, in Los Angeles, spoiled the appearance of many rows of street trees and it is high time that a stop is put to the practice, for the benefit of the many as against the interests of the "soulless" few.

Vegetables in School Gardens.

IT is earnestly hoped that our local school-garden work may soon be so shaped that clean, luscious vegetabues may be grown in both school yards and at home. The city should hire at least one good, practical gardener to pass from school to school, more especially in the poorer sections, and instruct the children (and the teachers as well) in the useful art of growing the esculent tomato, etc. Such a method would prove of great benefit to the working classes by saving a great deal of money now expended in buying from John Chinaman, who promptly forwards every penny saved back to China. In the meantime the school children would be getting a decidedly practical course in gardening.

Gas Injury to Street Trees.

IN plant life there is a certain adaptability to poisons of all kinds, and such occurs in the case of gas. But wherever the gas leaks continuously, be the leak ever so small, the tree will in time succumb to its poisonous influence. At first gas acts as a stimulus to plants, but eventually it kills the roots. It has been said by a competent authority that there is not a city of 100,000 inhabitants in this country where trees killed by gas may not be found. Do we not need a city forester to look after this and other ills which beset our street trees?

Park Boundaries.

EVERY park should have its outlines marked by a boundary of trees of various kinds, and no matter how large the park, they should be so planted as to lead the visitor to believe them but the edge of vast forests. Our Griffith Park needs such treatment, especially as there is such a natural dearth of trees. By adding this little air of mystery and uncertainty we could at once beautify the landscape and give the impression of much greater area. Roads could be made to return after running a little into this forest and the visitor would never know he had been near the borders of this vast tract.

Playgrounds Across the Continent.

A LARGE part of the children in the New York school playgrounds are to be found in the kindergartens which are held usually on the ground floor of the building. Yankee, Russian Jew, Armenian and Italian boys and girls all sing the lullabies in the same tongue. In the sand bins they build remarkable subways and tunnels, while others busy themselves making paper toys. Sometimes the tales of the "Red Riding Hood" and the "Lion and the Mouse" are dramatized and the children applaud the actors with great eclat.

Checkers and other quiet games are played in the same room with the library—the boys and girls alternating—and so great is the absorption of the players in their games that the readers are not disturbed. Of the various occupations afforded, basketry and caning are the most popular among the older pupils. Sometimes the girls bring their sewing from home, while in one of the yards a great deal of enjoyment was obtained in making scrap-books which were sent to the hospitals.

The shower baths connected with the schoolhouses are thrown open from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m., and frequently children stand in line for hours waiting their turn at the baths in preference to the lively games on the playground. These baths were in many instances installed at a very slight cost. The principal simply placed a perforated shower or spray head on the end of a hose pipe, and the water drained away without doing any damage. The eagerness with which the children availed themselves of these privileges showed that cleanliness is just as contagious as the measles when the children are in a position to catch it.

Relative Width of Sidewalks.

IN Hartford and in many American cities, upon residential streets, three-fifths of the entire width is devoted to roadway uses, and one-fifth upon each side for sidewalk purposes. Thus upon a fifty-foot street, a common width, the roadway would be thirty feet, and the sidewalk space upon each side ten feet.

Public Rights in Private Property.

THE theory of feudal days that every man's home was his castle has been largely superceded by the divine command to love one's neighbor as one's self. The idea that a man can do as he pleases with his own without regard to the rights of his neighbors no longer prevails. The most unpopular citizen is he who builds a high stone wall in front of his flower garden or cuts down beautiful trees to make way for a trolley pole or who leases the privilege of putting unsightly billboards in public places.

Moving Large Palms.

THOSE wishing large palms moved had better let the job to some one accustomed to the work, for it is a matter that few amateurs can successfully cope with. Generally speaking, the Mexican Blue Palm (Erythea armata) is the Tartar of the family, and is exceedingly unsafe to move when of large size. Our most common Phoenix, the Canary Island Date Palm, does not recover its former appearance for years, while all the Washingtonias move with comparative safety. The latter may also be moved at any season of the year, something that is not true of palms generally.

THE ASTRONOMER'S CAT.

The Rev. T. E. C. Espin, who recently achieved considerable fame by discovering a new star, possesses a tabby cat.

The story of Mr. Espin's cat in his own words is this: "Last February, returning from church on a cold night, with the ground covered with snow, I heard lamentations very similar to what Jeremiah would have uttered, and on searching about found a young and quite small cat on the window sill very cold and very starved. I took him in and fed him and made inquiries, but have never obtained the least clew as to his owner. He was then about six months old. We became keenly attached and his affection has been so great that on more than one occasion he has saved me the trouble of eating my dinner by being first in the field."—[London Globe.

A SONG FROM FAR AWAY.

Of your day I claim no part,
Not a look, not a touch,
Not a beat of your dear heart;
That were joy too much.

Only let me take my place
In your dreams through the night.
I will pass and leave no trace
Ere the east grows light.

You shall waken with a smile,
Smiling still as you muse
How you dreamed of love awhile—
But forgetting whose.
—[Amelia Josephine Burr, in Century.

EXALTATION.

(After the French of Victor Hugo.)

Alone by the waves, on a starlight night,
No mist on the sea, not a cloud in sight,
My eyes pierced further than earth's desires;
And nature—all nature, the hills, and the woods,
Seemed to question, with murmur of myriad moods
The waves of the sea and the heavenly fires.

And the infinite legion of golden stars
Replied in a chant of harmonious bars.
While with scintillant crowns they seemed earthw to nod;
And the waves, which no puissance can rule or arres
Made answer, while curbing the foam of each crest
It is God! it is God! it is God!
—[Florence Earle Coates, in Harper's Weekly

THE CRICKET.

A solitary highwayman
Pursued me in the night,
Lunged at me with a thin steel song,
And put my sleep to flight.

His bold stiletto at my ear,
I could not choose but pay.
He robbed me of a sack of dreams
Before he went away.
—[Marion Hamilton Carter, in Century.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

TANGENT OF THE SYSTEMS.

NO GREAT SECRETS IN SUCCESSFUL POULTRY RAISING.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experiences with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

AS a general proposition most any one can raise chickens, but it is not every one that can or does grow them at a profit. Between these two propositions there is indeed a wide field for individual initiative and individual effort fraught with chances of successful result as well as innumerable pitfalls leading only to failure. Allowing for this, it is not at all surprising that the public prints are burdened with announcements of "systems" whereby the novice is to be shown the road to wealth and affluence by the culture of the great American business hen. Usually these inform the reader that they are more or less a "secret," the sole possession of which is enjoyed by the party having them for sale, and of course the few who have parted with their good American dollars for their possession. Now these are not without merit, in so far as they contain practical suggestions and methods, but scarcely any one of them is a "secret" in the sense that they impart information or describe caretaking which has never before been in practice. What with the national Department of Agriculture, the many State experiment stations and agricultural colleges, farmers' institutes, the American Poultry Association, the poultry papers, not to mention similar lines of investigations being carried on by other nations, breeders and fanciers who keep in touch with agricultural progress are quite apt to learn of anything of value to the industry without buying "secret" systems at so much per. As a matter of fact "secret system" fowl culture when compared to the industry as a whole cuts a sorry figure indeed, and will scarcely average in product one-half per cent. of the whole. The alleged profits are "doctored" returns announced only to create business for the fellow selling the system. No less an authority than R. B. Sando in Collier's Weekly for February 9, pointedly says:

"These intensive systems are all right in so far as they encourage people with limited yard room to keep a few chickens for their own use, or to get a little pleasure out of a few fancy chickens; but the scheme is not practicable on a large scale if kept up for more than a year or two, and it never increases the profits above those ordinarily received by skillful poultry-keepers. And let it be said that the chief working rules of the latter do not follow a system, but consist of the application to their poultry operations of the same good sense and shrewd business management which would bring the highest success in any other line of endeavor."

In looking back over a period of twenty-five years, during all of which time the writer has been more or less familiar with economic conditions governing the industry, he can safely assert that the business hen is not a means of becoming a railway president, a J. Pierpont Morgan, nor a magnate in the oil business, either by score card or by comparison. Nevertheless she fills an important niche in our agricultural wealth. The returns she gives under intelligent care are always commensurate but never enormous—what the Baron Munchausen prophets may say to the contrary in their alluring announcements of $13,131.23 net profits from 2313 hens in one year," or "$6.40 per hen" in another case, and so on. Quite to the contrary, a return of from $1 to $2 per bird net for run of flock, and especially if of any size, is a handsome return, which, in so far as it goes, pays as well as any other line of activity in a diversified agriculture. There is really nothing "secret" about poultry culture any more than there is about fruit culture, the grocery business, or cobbling shoes; but when played for a livelihood it is a business, and hence to attain success must be carried on as such. The failures are usually traceable to the fact that the "man behind the gun" is not business and would have failed behind the counter doling out sugar quite as easily as in the chicken yard.

A Great White Breed.

The two dominant white breeds in the American class are the White Plymouth Rocks and White Wyandottes, both of which are deservedly popular with the fancy and commercial breeders. Undoubtedly the White Rock is a sport of the Barred. It has been bred now for nearly twenty-five years, and by careful handling has become one of the most attractive varieties of poultry in the American class. In breed characteristics it is identical with the Barred, and when seen at its best, is indeed a beautiful bird. In economic qualities it ranks with the best in the American class, for carcass as well as for hen fruit. Our illustration shows a fine bunch of youngsters of this breed.

Do a Little Digging.

It is surprising to see what vigorous back-yard fowl will stand in small pens, nevertheless it does not pay to be careless during the rainy season. Get the surface of the pens clean by sweeping and then spade up the ground, leaving the soil loose. Standing puddles of water in the runs are a menace to health. The water should "go down" readily, and so it will where the soil is friable and loose, hence spade it up after each heavy rain. To spade up a few rows across the pen is a tonic for the person of sedentary employment, and besides the upturned earth invariably supplies animal food to the birds in the shape of worms and grubs, than which there is nothing more relished. Where a heavy rain gets a pen afloat dirt from near by should be thrown in. Fowls should be on dry ground. Sweeping tends to remove the dirt, and consequently the hollows should be filled.

A PROMISING LOT OF WHITE ROCKS.

The Profitable Laying Age.

The writer is among those who do not believe that it is always advisable to discard hens at two years of age, and replace them by pullets. The practice is no doubt good with certain breeds which put on flesh rapidly, and so become too fat for prolific laying. It is quite generally conceded that a pullet of a good laying strain will lay more eggs than an eighteen-months or two-year-old hen, but not enough more to pay for the difference in cost of raising her. Besides, a hen lays a larger egg than a pullet, which may mean nothing raises a rumpus on a ranch so bringing in an extra mouth to feed, that is, a that don't do any work. People ain't fond of carting supplies twenty miles for non-producers, and it gives the cook a chance to kick and get ugly, all ranch cooks being grouchy and dyspeptic from eating their own layouts so long.

COWBOY'S OBSERVATION ON NEW METHODS IN AN OLD GAME.

But this time proved to be an exception. Old Man Selzer, manager of the Lazy Y, was tickled clean through as soon as he had sized the stranger up a little.

"Blister," he says, that being the name I go by on account of my face, "where did you come across this chum you have brought back with you?"

I didn't satisfy his curiosity too accurate, but I noticed the Old Man had a little more notice for me after that. Anyway, we stayed, me and Frenchy, that being the name we give him on account of his real one being hopeless—De Vealt, or something like that.

The boss treated him cordial, but Frenchy stuck to me as his steady side pardner. We bunked together, and he tagged around the range with me on a old blue roan that was wind-broke and couldn't run. At first I guess I looked on him like you would a child, sort of pitying him 'cause he was in trouble. I hadn't any idea of making a chum of Frenchy, but the first thing I knew we were as thick as hops. It started one day in the cook shack when two of the boys got in a wrangle and one of them lied like a trooper, to save his face, knowing the other man could whip him. I'll never forget the look that come over Frenchy's face. It seemed sort of comical that a man should take a common everyday lie so serious, but I knew right then that if it ever come to a showdown, Frenchy, for all his puny looks, would go down in the last ditch with colors flying. After that, my sympathy sort of changed to respect.

He stuck around all summer, and all the time I never heard a word out of him about music. I didn't even know what instrument he played. Later on I found out it was a fiddle. That was after I began to tumble that something was going on we hadn't counted on.

It was coming along fall when I noticed Frenchy wasn't sticking to me as close as a good partner ought to. I wasn't long suspecting the cause, and my heart went down in my boots for Frenchy. I knew Lolita had been up to her monkey-shines again. Lolita was Old Selzer's daughter. She had been away to a boarding-school and got her head full of ideas that nobody ever intended to work off on a cow ranch located twenty miles from a water tank. There was a day when some of us had entertained the idea that a cow puncher might aspire to be Selzer's son-in-law, but that day was past. She didn't seem to take us serious at all, which is a mighty irritating way to be treated when you are in earnest.

I ain't meaning to criticize Lolita none; she was about the finest little girl that ever stepped. When it came right down to hard pan, we all knew we couldn't trot in her class, but what's the use of talkin' sense to a man in love? And when it runs through a whole bunch like an epidemic it's that much worse. The first six months after she hove in from Boston she sure devastated the ranch. It was so universal that we couldn't get up no feuds, every man being everybody else's rival.

I reckon that sort of thing is like any other contagion—only lasts about so long. We finally settled down to realize that our attentions weren't distasteful to Lolita so long as we confined them to long-range worship. So we took our medicine, wishing Lolita well, just reserving enough guile and malice to hope that if she ever did fall in love she would get it plumb complete.

That was the way things lay when Frenchy turned up at the ranch. He didn't seem to notice Lolita a whole lot at first, never loafing around the house to speak of, and always riding out with the men. You know yourself that's enough to rile any woman. Lolita took to horseback riding herself, and after that I didn't see so much of Frenchy and the roan. They took in all the points of interest from the Hole in the Rock to the Aztec ruins, and by the time they had exhausted the landscape they didn't seem to need any incentive for strolling off together.

It come out just as we expected—only more so. Frenchy fell like a winged duck. There wasn't any half-hearted lovemaking in his make-up. All the fire and poetry in his nature seemed to have gone on a rampage. If I hadn't knowed him so well I would have swore he was bughouse, but I knew right off that was the only way he could ever make love.

But it was Lolita that stumped the bunch. Anybody could see with half an eye that Frenchy held the aces with her. I don't know what method he used, but nobody could doubt she was taking him serious—just about serious enough to keep her heart aching most of the time, I reckon. From a teasing chatterbox she changed all of a sudden to a blushing, fidgety school girl. Old Man Selzer was watching things out of the corner of his eye, and it wasn't hard to see he was pleased. I'll give the Old Man credit for knowing a man when he sees one, even if he does play a fiddle for a living.

We had all put it down as a settled case, and were just waiting for the Old Man to make the announcement. But time drug along, and no announcement. One day I come on Frenchy shaving in the bunk house. I grinned into the glass over his shoulder.

"Why don't you have it over, pardner?" I queries.

He turned around quick, his big serious eyes looking into mine. I see he wasn't in a joshing mood.

"I will never ask Miss Lolita to marry a failure," he says sober.

That riled me for a minute. "You won't marry her, but you ain't above gettin' her infatuated with a failure. Is that it?" I comes back.

He looked at me sort of pained-like. Then his eyes snapped and he shook his head. "I am going to win my old place back—then I will ask her."

That made me tired. My idea is that the time to close a deal, whether it's merchandise or matrimony, is the minute both parties is agreeable.

It wasn't long after that when Frenchy went back to the city. He was to open the season with a recital, and naturally I was considerable interested, knowing what it meant to him. One day we got a letter from him inviting Lolita and the Old Man and me to come in and hear him. He had fixed us up with a bunch of box tickets and a card to the stage entrance for me. And we went, the Old Man showing he was the real article by paying the bills, even to riding in the Pullman in the daytime.

I got around to the theater early and waited for Frenchy in a dressing-room. He came in finally, and when he saw me he sure seemed tickled, though I knew that wasn't the reason.

I reckon I will never forget the first number on that programme of Frenchy's. I was standing back in the wings when the curtain went up. When he walked out on the stage it seemed to me a million faces were turned up to him out of that human pit. There was a smell of roses and perfume, a flutter of fans, and a murmur of voices. Then a patter of applause as Frenchy bowed across the footlights.

It seemed to me there was something wrong. Somehow that sea of faces seemed to fuse into a sort of critical, indifferent stare. I scanned row after row, but it seemed like I couldn't find an eager, sympathetic face.

But the audience didn't impress me so much. I was thinking about something else. The nerve of him! My idea of nerve had always been a man who wasn't afraid of a pitchin' bronc or some such stunt, but right then my ideas got a jolt. Say, it was plumb splendid. He stood there facing them till the patter had died out, then he tucked his old brown fiddle under his chin and laid the bow across the strings.

I never can remember the name of that piece, though Frenchy has played it for me often since. It was one of them tempestuous things. That night it seemed to me it leaped from Frenchy's touch like the wail of a wild spirit on an orgy. I was so interested I never thought to look at the audience. All of a sudden he finished and backed off the stage. For about two seconds there was a hush, and then it came—the sharp, hard popping of hands that settled into a roar. A man didn't need any stage experience to read that message coming pounding up over the footlights. When I looked out over their faces I knew Frenchy had got his verdict.

After that I just sat back and watched Frenchy in his hour of triumph. To me it was all sort of wonderful. I had always thought of a high-brow musician as a tuneful chap who could train his fingers to play what was put before him. But when I saw Frenchy take his little old fiddle and sweep that audience time after time, I began to understand that there is more than one way of a man showing the power that is in him.

It came down to the last piece on the programme, the house calling for an encore. And then something happened. Frenchy came down the middle of the stage, bowing and smiling as usual. But all at once his face sort of changed. He raised his fiddle and stepped down along the footlights. What he was playing I don't know. It was like nothing I had heard him play before, nor since. All that clarion call and militant business was gone—it just drifted along dreamy-like, sometimes dying out altogether.

But it wasn't the music that was holding me glued to my chair, back among the scenery. I reckon Frenchy had forgot the audience and the applause and everything—but her. He was leaning out across the footlights, his eyes never leaving Lolita's face. He was playing to her, and nobody but a man soured on love's young dream could miss the meaning of that mating song that he wooed out of those strings.

I reckon a woman don't usually have to have such things explained to her with a diagram. Lolita just sat there, pale and staring, till he finished. And then she didn't smile or bow or pass out any roses; she backed out of sight in the curtains with her handkerchief in her eyes.

I never aim to quarrel with a man because his methods ain't the same as mine. I suppose it's natural that Frenchy and me can be first-rate chums and never agree five minutes at a time on how to do things. I never could just sabe his way of making love, and winding up by proposing with a fiddle. But I'll say this for Frenchy—he got results.

MAN TOO UPRIGHT.

Dr. Ernst Klotz, a prominent German biologist, maintains that the upright carriage of man is a mistake and results in many ills. Nature, he says, did not intend it, and since man took to carrying himself erect he has vainly tried to adapt himself to the new conditions.

As a result of his holding himself in a way opposed to nature he suffers from various pathological deformaties, from the displacement of others and from lesions in the blood vessels.

The architecture of man, according to Prof. Klotz, was meant to be the same as that of the other vertebrates. The spinal column was meant to be horizontal and to protect from injury the internal organs and the soft parts of the body which ought to hang from it. The spinal column is in fact properly the roof tree of a man and fulfills this use in the case of the other mammals.

Man's upright position, concludes the professor, hampers particularly the digestive process. This is owing to the organic displacement which it entails. Hence man suffers from many stomachic maladies from which the less aspiring quadrupeds are free—[New York Sun.

Reflected Reputation

MR. A. F. CALL'S article upon curing gum disease is still in demand, but the supply of reports containing it is growing small. It will be published in leaflet form, but in that way it cannot well be preserved in a library. This helpful article is the result of experiments conducted at Corona and by the Leffingwell people. It should be distributed among citrus-fruit growers, as it treats of a malady not found in deciduous orchards. Taken in course with the university publications upon the gum disease it presents a suggestive series of hints, and records of achievements in the control of a disease thought five years ago to be one of a most threatening character. I hope some one will continue the discussion of this trouble at the San Bernardino convention.

The other Call appeared at Sacramento last week with the delegation sent north to advocate a free harbor before the Senate committee. He did this with eloquence and effect, and he was well received by the people at the Capital City. The only disparaging remark that I heard about him was when I heard a northern citrus grower say: "That must be the Corona Call." I made a worse mistake, when first getting acquainted with these gentlemen, in assuming that the Corona brother was a Democrat, because I knew that unfortunate tendency seemed to run in the family. These aggravating mistakes will occur occasionally, but it is all smoothed over now, and I am again in good standing at Corona.

An Ant Barrier.

A GENTLEMAN who has recently visited Japan tells me he discovered a new way to keep ants from infesting fruit trees. It consists of a circle of cement around each tree far enough from the trunk to prevent interference and so constructed that it forms a shallow trough in which water is kept. It is the same principle with which we protect the kitchen safe from ants. As these insects climb the trees for purely selfish reasons, and in so doing may carry scales and other insects with them either inadvertently or purposely, the idea of the Japanese is to protect their trees from pests by keeping the ants out of them. The same effort has been made successfully here by the use of sticky substances attached to the trunks of the trees.

Apple Growers Unite.

THE growers of Gravenstein apples of Sonoma county have organized a corporation upon a permanent basis, and will join the California Fruit Exchange, or some other marketing institution as soon as the movement is well under way. It has taken the corporate name Sebastopol Apple Growers Union. That district produces now about 300 carloads of Gravenstein apples. Over 1000 acres of this fruit are going out this spring in one place and the development along the coast of the county will soon be under full swing under a large San Francisco company. The design is to make a specialty of the Gravenstein, establish standard brands and ship nothing but superior fruit. It is a distinctive proposition, founded upon merit and established upon a firm basis. The hit-and-miss plan is rapidly going into decline in Sonoma.

On Past Achievements.

WHEN Los Angeles placed her arguments upon municipal harbor control before the State Senate an onlooker was impressed with the fact that the accomplishments of the people of the south were speaking as eloquently as the speakers themselves. There is a feeling in the north that Southern California is invincible, and the people here attribute it to the common unity of purpose shown by the southerners upon every question of business moment. Two evenings before the Los Angeles delegation presented their harbor case the Senate chamber witnessed a remarkable demonstration of how not to get together upon a public measure. The wrangle lasted till 2 o'clock in the morning. It was over the bill intended to forward the consolidation of San Francisco and the other bay cities. It must have left some lasting scars.

A Citrus Issue.

THE CALIFORNIA CULTIVATOR of the 23rd of February is devoted almost entirely to citrus-fruit culture, and Mr. Kruckeberg should have the plaudits of the growers of oranges and lemons throughout the State. No special heralding of this valuable number was made. It just came, and it will set many growers to studying some of the problems confronting them. Notably in this will be found articles upon the influence of the stock upon the tree's qualities, articles upon pruning, observations of the year, the orange outlook in Arizona, the insect question and various others. "The Handling of Citrus Soils" is a timely article. This number will be good for the citrus convention at San Bernardino. It shows enterprise and initiative, and is worth while, coming as its subjects do, from experienced and reliable men.

Infected Potatoes.

I HAVE a telegram from faraway Inyo county announcing that Bishop is being supplied with Nevada potatoes from the district known to be infected with the eel worm. Already three carloads have been intercepted in California and returned to Nevada. The worm ruins the pulp of the tuber to the depth of a half-inch, makes the surface rough and warty and injures both the value and appearance of the potato. We know little about this new potato pest, but enough to dread it. One section of Nevada seems to turn out nothing but wormy stock, yet the bulk of the potatoes from that State are as clean and good as they ever were. Some entomologist with the means behind him should go into Nevada and make a careful investigation of this new pest. California has enough to contend against in the pests already here.

A Progressive Industry.

IN an all too brief interview with the manager of the Citrus Protective League I was given some intimation of the renewed activities of that organization. Already we note the literary publications of the League and are carefully filing them away for reference. If these publications are to continue I suggest that they be numbered, for convenience in keeping track of their contents through index files. The last one relates to fungous diseases, which are only too frequent the present season. Whether we are to have an era of Macrosporium or just a sporadic attack, we cannot tell. The prevalence of this form of low plant life this year would be an occasion very suitable for a close examination of its life history and effects. I hope the pathological experts now in the field may be able to advance our knowledge upon these fungous troubles materially.

A Pomelo Sport

A. P. GRIFFITH of Azusa has sent me an elegant photograph of one of his 64-size nectar pomelos. If it were a picture of a big, round Washington navel it would not carry the pronounced appearance of a navel orange with more distinctness. Mr. Griffith writes: "Of course there's no pollen to a navel orange blossom, but where did this navel on the pomelo come from? The fruit grew near two Washington navel groves."

Mr. Griffith sat under a discussion of this very question for a half-hour at Pomona without saying a word, only occasionally asking a helpful question. I will not stop to comment upon this strange fact other than to remark that he was perhaps the wisest man in that very large convention in so doing, or not doing. And now he has gone to the camera to perpetuate a fruit as remarkable in appearance as it is in quality. He is one of the few growers who did not lose faith in the pomelo when all turned against it, but has spent a great deal of money in working out a future for the fruit upon a commercial basis. He tells me it pays. But this grower should help us by working out some plausible theory upon the proclivity of the pomelo to emulate its great rival from Brazil. Then he would be in the same category with his friends of the Pomona meeting and would not have the advantage he now has by remaining silent upon a subject that none of us can elucidate. We are told that the tendency of the orange tribe to go to fruit "sports" is inherent. One of the problems sought to be worked out in the purposes of the Pomona conference is involved directly in bud mutations, monstrosities and blossom-end diseases—splits and fungoid attacks. This season they are unusually severe. Is it low tree vitality throughout the summer of 1910 that has made these troubles so severe this winter? Can we not have a bumper crop without bumper maladies? Whoever could answer would be king of the query column. But the farther we get along in the citrus industry the more we see the need of profound research and investigation, as we find in the fungous attacks this season that there is something more fundamental than the careful handling of fruit, and that Mr. Powell's magnificent achievements in that line cannot forestall weakness and disease in the fruit.

"There's a reason" why Mr. Griffith should not insist upon my telling him why his pomelos run to navels. I don't know. However, he has the most beautiful and vigorous pomelo trees on the face of the earth, and when they misbehave in this way I insist that he should explain it himself.

Pollinating should be done every two or three days, and during the middle of the day when the plants are dry and the air is warm. Above all things, be sure to use plenty of pollen grains.—[A. R. Jenks, in American Cultivator.

The Mango.

IN considering this fruit, one should eliminate from the mind any and all impressions previously formed by direct or indirect contact with the fruit generally known by the name of mango in countless numbers of varieties of mongrel seedlings that have spread throughout all tropical countries from their native country, the East Indies. These fruit we do not consider at all from a commercial standpoint. The cultivation of the commercial varieties of this fruit has previously been defeated by difficulties in propagating true to variety. Prior to my discoveries in the beginning of the present century there had been no way to accomplish this except by the slow and expensive method of inarching, as is still practiced by the Hindoos and all others except myself, other than a few trees, largely accidents in experiments of budding. The methods we apply are similar in results to those applied to all commercial fruits in civilized countries, except that some peculiar habits of the plant make it still more expensive, but fully as progressive.

The Mulgoba mango was introduced into this country in 1889 by the importation of an inarched tree from India, and up to the close of the year 1900 there were less than 100 inarched trees in South Florida of this variety, and about the same number of inarched trees of this and other fine varieties from the East Indies, growing in government gardens and botanical collections on the western hemisphere. Since that time and now growing in orchard places, there are less than 500 trees of this variety except those produced in our operations.

The Mulgoba we consider the only standard commercial variety of mango tested in this country, and there are several thousand trees now planted here in commercial orchards. There were only about 200 of these of bearing age and producing fruit this season, which have given us sufficient fruit to establish in market in the largest cities, and only among a few of the fancy dealers. I find it the easiest fruit product to sell that I have ever offered to the fruit trade. We now consider ourselves over the pioneer days in this, the most promising industry of modern horticulture.—[Rural New Yorker.

Flowers That are Good to Eat.

MOST people used to regard the artichoke as a vegetable, whereas as a matter of fact it appears upon the table as the unopened flowers of a plant. If they are left on the plant they eventually turn into handsome purple blossoms. This statement has reference to that species of thistle known as the globe artichoke.

Dr. Johnson called the cauliflower "the finest flower in the garden." This statement was accurate, for when the snowy "vegetables" of that name are served they are nothing but the unexpanded flowers of a variety of cabbage, says Harper's Weekly.

Among the flowers that are eaten are cloves and capers. The first named are the immature blossoms of a plant of the myrtle order growing in the Moluccas. This takes the form of a beautiful evergreen sometimes thirty or forty feet in height with lovely crimson flowers.

The buds are first light colored, then green and finally red. At this stage they are gathered and dried. The diminutive round knob in the center of the clove is the unexpanded crimson blossom.

Capers, those familiar trimmings for mutton and other meats and dishes, are the unopened flowers of a bramble-like shrub that grows on the shores of the Mediterranean Sea. The trailing plant shows handsome pinkish white flowers with long tassels of stamens. The youngest and tenderest of the buds form the finest capers, known as nonpareil. As they flower they become superfine, capucin and capot capers.

The chrysanthemum is now made the basis of a salad served with sauce made of cream. Another flower, the lily, contributes in a more solid form to the menu in certain parts of China. There are flowers of a particular species of lily highly esteemed as a relish with meats, especially pork. At Chin-kiang, on the Yangtse, these lily flowers account for nearly one-fourteenth of the value of the exports.—[Pomona Times.

One night at a theater some scenery caught fire and the audience began to get very uneasy. An actor appeared on the stage and said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, compose yourselves. There is no danger."

But the people didn't compose worth a cent, whereupon the actor roared: "Confound it, all! do you think if there was any danger I'd be here?" The panic collapsed.—[Philadelphia Star.

Care of the Body—Suggestions for Preserving He CONDUCTED BY HARRY ELLINGTON BROOK, N.D., OF THE TIMES STAFF.

PRACTICAL HYGIENE.

[The Times does not undertake to answer inquiries on hygienic subjects that are merely of personal interest, or to give advice in individual cases. Those desiring personal advice should write to the editor of the department for particulars. General inquiries on hygienic subjects of public interest will receive attention in these columns. No inquiries are answered by mail. It should be remembered that matter for the Magazine Section of The Times is in the hands of the printer ten days before the day of publication. Correspondents should send their full names and addresses, which will not be published, or given to others, without the consent of the writers. Addresses of correspondents are not preserved, and consequently cannot be furnished to inquirers.]

Frauds, Fakers and Fools.

THE State of Kansas has well earned its reputation as a stamping ground for freaks. Among other bills introduced in the Kansas Legislature, now in session, is one providing that all persons appearing on the stage must wear skirts reaching half-way between the knees and the feet, and another making it a misdemeanor for any one to teach a child that there "ain't no sech a person" as Santa Claus.

However, when it comes to the real headquarters for fakers and frauds, all other places must yield the palm to Los Angeles. Perhaps this is largely due to the fact that Los Angeles is a cosmopolitan community containing representatives of every State in the Union, and almost every country in the world.

Any one who comes along with a new "sophy," or "pathy"—especially if he comes from "furrin' parts," and wears strange garments—is sure to find a respectful hearing, and to attract a following of foolish women, and not a few unbalanced men. It does not matter whether he preaches psychology, or "New Thought," or "egoism," or "altruism," or any other physical, mental or moral fad, he will surely find a number of weak-minded people to acclaim him as a new Moses.

Some of these men are not merely fakers. They are also frauds; as for instance, a founder of a school of "Practical Psychology," who sells his lambs worthless stock in bogus companies which he organizes. Really, the victims of such pretenders are deserving of little sympathy. If there were no fools there would be no frauds, just as if there were no filth there would be no flies. Perhaps the frauds are useful, in keeping the fools from multiplying too fast.

When one glances over the advertising pages of the average newspaper and notes the numerous absurd and misleading offers made by quacks to heal diseases of all kinds, and often to do so "absolutely free," although they are paying out hundreds of dollars a month for space in the papers, one is apt to pity the credulity of the public that enables such scoundrels to live.

When, however, we observe the gross ignorance of the great mass of the public, their unwillingness to learn the simplest facts about the laws of health, their demand for some "specific" that will immediately make them "feel good" without abandoning any of their evil habits, and when we note further that they are willing to pay out hundreds of dollars for operations or "dope" that can only harm them, while they hesitate to yield up a few dollars for good literature or advice, then our pity begins to change into contempt.

Recently in Los Angeles an old fool brought suit to recover a hundred dollars that he had paid to a firm of fakers for two "treatments." He was "treated" all right. He happened to see a sign on one of the leading streets. He entered and was told that he could be made young again by means of purple rays with "wonderful curative powers." Probably an electric light shining through a piece of purple glass. They also rubbed his back with some ointment. The charge for this was only $50 per treatment. He took two treatments and then he wanted his money back. The judge expressed much sympathy with him. The editor of the Care of the Body does not sympathize with him at all. He is rather inclined to sympathize with the faker who did him up. If this same man had been asked to put up $5 for sensible hygienic advice he would probably have thought it an extortion. If there were no fools there would be no rogues, just as if there were no filth there would be no rats.

It is no wonder that quacks flourish, when there are so many fools for them to fatten on.

A majority of the people are blind. "Having eyes they see not." They either will not or cannot grasp the simple fact that there is only one road to health, namely, to give up breaking the laws of nature and to let her restore them to a normal condition of health. This, however, requires patience, perseverance, and self-denial, which very, very few people possess, even in a moderate degree. Therefore, they must continue to suffer—with intervals of false relief brought about by artificial measures—until they sink into an untimely grave.

Poor humanity!

The Mystery of Sex.

AMONG the many problems that science has not yet been able to solve is the determination of the sex of the child that is to be. It is said that over a thousand theories on this subject have been promulgated. Thirteen years ago the newspapers contained sensational reports of the claims advanced by Prof. Schenk of Vienna, who claimed to have discovered that sex may be controlled by the diet of the mother shortly before and during pregnancy, a boy or a girl being produced according as the feeding is restricted or liberal. Schenk wrote a book on the subject. As evidence of the utility of his theory he pointed to six boys of his own, all in an unbroken row, and claimed several male heirs of royal blood as being due to his directions. One notable failure was the third daughter of the Czar of Russia, who, it is said, should have been a boy, as Dr. Schenk was employed to arrange for one. Subsequently it was found that his theory, like so many other theories of eminent medical men that have been widely advertised in the papers, was not borne out by the facts.

"The Law of Sex Determination and Its Practical Application" is the title of a book of 250 pages by Laura A. Calhoun (Mrs. E. E. Calhoun.) (The Eugenics Publishing Company, G. P. O. box 935, New York. Price $1.50 net, postage 10c.) Mrs. Calhoun, who is the mother of the talented actress, Virginia Calhoun, lived for a number of years on a ranch in Kern county, California, with her husband, the late Judge Calhoun. There she became interested in the subject of her book, and made an exhaustive study of cattle, birds, and human beings. She states her theory of sex as follows:

"The writer maintains that the sex of the embryo in man and the higher animals is determined in the ovary from which the ovum in question is developed. In the normal female the ovary of the right side yields ova which on fertilization develop as males, and the ovary of the left side yields ova which are potentially female.

"If the above thesis is true, it is possible in human life to determine sex at will by some method which will provide that only those ova of the sex desired shall become fertilized. To this end the influence of gravitation can be utilized." Practical directions are given.

Some medical men, to whom the editor of the Care of the Body has mentioned this theory, claim that a similar theory was advanced more than thirty years ago. They fail, however, to indicate when and by whom. They also express doubt as to the practicability of guaranteeing results by the above method.

This book gives evidence of much patient research on the part of the author. She cites the cases of a dozen women in California—giving the initials and places of residence—who succeeded in obtaining sons or daughters as they desired, by following her directions.

After the Czarina's fourth daughter was born, Mrs. Calhoun sent the Empress a registered letter, giving directions for determining the sex of her next child. The communication was never returned, but the author has no means of knowing whether it was received by the Empress.

In addition to the question of the determination of sex, Mrs. Calhoun discusses the subject of "telegyny." "Telegony" means the influence of a previous male on the children of a woman by another man. "Telegyny" is described by the author as follows:

"I choose telegyny as a word form corresponding to telegony to express a similar idea, telegony meaning the influence of the first male on the succeeding births of the female; telegyny in the same way I suggest as a word to signify the influence of a previous female upon the male, transferred through the influence of matrix plasm."

Some of the striking examples that came under the personal observation of the author were children of American and English parents, fair-haired, fair-skinned, whose children resemble to the point of half-breeds in some cases the native Hawaiians, where their children were born, the inference being that this was the result of sexual relations between the father and some native woman previous to the conception of the children. This explanation would remove the cause of many cruel accusations brought against virtuous and innocent mothers.

Several pages are devoted to the question of "birthmarks." Reference is made to the remarkable case of a negress mother giving birth to twins, one white and the other black.

A chapter gives some good suggestions to women as to precautions they should take during the term of pregnancy. Sixty of the closing pages are devoted to a synopsis of other theories that have been advanced on the subject of the book.

The author asks that scientists give her theory a thorough investigation. It is certainly deserving of such attention.

A Modified Fast.

THE good Bishop Conaty of the Catholic diocese of Los Angeles and Monterey, following the rules and regulations of his church, issued the following orders regarding the diet of the faithful during Lent, which began on March 1:

"First—All days of Lent, except Sundays, are fast days of obligation.

"Second—Those who are obliged to fast are allowed but one full meal a day, except on Sundays, when there is no restriction as to the number of meals.

"Third—General usage has made it lawful to take in the morning a cup of coffee, tea or chocolate, with a small piece of bread. The principal meal may be taken at noon or in the evening, according to one's convenience.

"Fourth—Where it is not convenient to take the principal meal at noon, the collation or light meal set for the evening may be taken either in the morning or at noon, and the dinner then may be taken in the evening.

"Fifth—It is forbidden to use flesh meat and fish at the same meal during Lent, even on Sundays.

"Sixth—Those who are exempt from the precept of fasting are not thereby exempt from abstinence on the days on which abstinence is commanded.

"Certain dispensations from the order are granted by the Holy See of the Roman Catholic church at Rome, and the following are announced by Bishop Conaty as applying to this diocese:

"1. The use of flesh meats is permitted at all meals

Care of the Body.

on Sundays in Lent, and once a day at the principal meal on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays in Lent, with the exception of Ember Saturday and Holy Saturday.

"2. The use of butter, cheese, milk and eggs is permitted every day in Lent, not only at the principal meal, but also at the collation. Drippings and lard may be used in the preparation of all foods not only during Lent, but on other fast days during the year.

"3. Those who are exempt from the precept of fasting may eat meat at the three meals on the days on which it is permitted.

"4. By virtue of a special indult renewed by the Holy See, March 15, 1905, working people and their families are dispensed from the obligation of abstinence from meat on all days of the year except Fridays, Ash Wednesday, Wednesday and Saturday of Holy Week, and Christmas Eve. Those who avail themselves of this indult are not permitted to use flesh meat and fish at the same meal.

"Those who are exempt from the precept of fasting, are reminded, and we hereby exhort them that as they are freed from the obligation of abstinence, they should perform some other act of mortification. A most commendable custom is that of abstaining during Lent from all intoxicating liquors, and we commend this as one form of mortification to those who have the habit, even of the moderate use of liquors."

These rules will evoke a smile on the part of hygienists whose diet, as a rule, is less sumptuous all the year round than that outlined by the bishop for the faithful of his flock during the forty days of Lent, not to speak of the hundreds of thousands who would be glad to be assured of such a menu for the rest of their lives. As to the eating of fish and flesh at the same meal, there are millions of people who eat neither one nor the other, while as to eating only one "full" meal a day, there are hundreds of readers of the Care of the Body who have benefited greatly by adopting the no-breakfast plan, eating a light lunch, and one fair meal in the evening, sometimes fasting once each week from the evening meal of one day to that of the next.

The fast of Jesus in the wilderness, upon which the Lenten fast was founded, was a real fast—a total abstention from food—for forty days. During the past thirty years, since Dr. Tanner twice fasted for forty days in New York, many Americans have fasted for as long or for longer periods, with [illegible] to their health.

However, this cutting down of the dietary, however slight, will do some good, for it is a fact that a great majority of people overeat, to their serious detriment. Many who are suffering from clogged-up arteries, thick blood, poor digestion, and lack of efficiency, would find it beneficial—if they are not willing to try a complete fast—to take a "fruit fast" until the end of Lent, eating nothing but fresh fruit. This would give their systems a fine spring housecleaning, and make them feel ten years younger.

It should be added that during a fast there are certain simple precautions that must be observed, or it will be a failure, among others the securing by natural methods of a regular action of the bowels.

An Epidemic in a Hospital.

A DISPATCH from Baltimore recently announced that physicians of the famous Johns Hopkins Hospital were fighting an epidemic of diphtheria within their own walls. There were thirty cases of the malady, in malignant form, and those ill included doctors, nurses, students of the medical school, and patients.

The dispatch adds:

"That so malignant a disease should have made such headway in so perfectly-equipped a hospital as the Johns Hopkins, with its reputed sanitary methods, has caused surprise. Whether caused by carelessness, negligence, or incompetency of any of the doctors or nurses has not been directly determined."

The fact is that the "regular" medical profession is educated in suppressing the symptoms of disease, not in preventing its outbreak, by teaching people how to live right.

Arguments in Favor of "Race Suicide."

IN the basement of the Y.M.C.A. at Sacramento, while several hundred men and women were attending an entertainment in the rooms above, a young man put a bullet through his brain because of despondency owing to his inability to secure employment. And this in the Land of Gold—the Land of Opportunity.

However, we occidentals know little of real misery and want, on a large scale. A recent dispatch from Peking told that over a million girls have been sold in the famine district of China, by parents who had not the fortitude to refuse food in exchange for their daughters. A majority of these children will be forced to lives of prostitution.

And yet some misguided people continue to prate about "race suicide."

"Karezza" Comes to Los Angeles.

IT appears as if Los Angeles was to be the abiding place of a majority of the geniuses and cranks of the United States and of some "furrin parts." The latest recruit who has yielded to the allurements of the "Sunset Land" is Alice B. Stockham, M.D., author of "Tokology," "Karezza," "The Lover's World," and other well-known and widely-circulated books relating to the hygiene and ethics of sex relations. Some of Mrs. Stockham's ideas on this subject are in the editor's

CARE OF THE EYES.

By DR. M. M. RING.

Let us have a genuine Heart-to-Heart talk about this proposition of glasses. Freedom to think and to speak one's honest thought is the right of every human being. I believe in being frank and candid with my patients on all questions and I believe you will appreciate this fact when you come to me for your glasses and for relief from your eye troubles.

I believe in advertising just what I do and in doing just what I advertise

If I have faith enough in my own ability to guarantee my work and to refund the purchase price of glasses whenever I am unable to make them give perfect satisfaction I believe the people ought to know it.

Suppose you lived in a city where there were just two stores with which to trade. Let us say that Mr. Jones owned one and Mr. Smith owned the other. Suppose that Mr. Jones said to you in regard to every purchase that if everything was not perfectly satisfactory and just to your liking after you have made a careful examination and trial of the goods in your own home just come back and we will cheerfully refund your money. Suppose that Mr. Smith had the reputation of refusing to refund the purchase price of goods bought at his store when the purchaser found that he did not get just exactly what he wanted. Which of these men would you prefer to trade with provided their prices were the same? I believe you would prefer to trade with the man who had faith in his ability to satisfy you in every detail of the transaction. I am sure that I would although I might never have occasion to ask for a refund. The principle of the thing alone would impel me to his store. I would have faith in the man himself.

Advantages of Dr. Ring's Special Toric Lenses

They may be set closer to the eyes without touching the lashes.

They are ground to conform to the natural curve of the eye.

They permit a wider field of vision and allow you to see through them in all directions with equal distinctness—a decided improvement

They eliminate annoying reflections from the back of your lenses.

They are the result of modern skill and methods and are a great improvement over the old style.

They can be ground lighter and prettier in every way.

They are especially desirable in Bifocals, because they give a much more direct focus through the segment, and besides they are so much more elegant in appearance.

If you desire the benefit of my opinion and advice, do not hesitate to consult with me. Your eyes are my first consideration. The sale of a pair of glasses my last.

Don't Think Thoughts Several Years Old

Many people think to themselves—"I do not wish to wear glasses because they make me look old" or "I will not wear Bifocal glasses because they are so conspicuous, etc."

One who thinks this now is thinking in terms of several years ago. All this has been overcome in the recent invention of the KRYPTOK and the TORIC form of lens.

The most remarkable recent invention of the optical world—light, solid lenses—no conspicuous lines—no clouding—no lodging place for dirt.

ABSOLUTE PERFECTION in eyeglasses and in the treatment of eye diseases is my Ambition. Your money back if not satisfied is my guarantee.

NOT ONLY THIS, BUT I AGREE TO CHANGE YOUR LENSES AS OFTEN AS THEY NEED CHANGING FOR ONE YEAR FREE OF EXTRA CHARGE.

This is the strongest guarantee man can make and is the best reason in the world why you should come to me for your glasses and for relief from your eye troubles and recommend your friends to do the same.

MY PRICES range from $1.50 per pair for simple reading (Stock) lenses up to $4.00 per pair for the highest quality of regular compound astigmatic lenses ground specially for your eyes and guaranteed to fit perfectly.

TORICS and KRYPTOKS cost a little more than the old or regular kind, but are preferred by those who can afford them. No extra charge for examination when you take glasses.

opinion, as previously stated, erroneous and harmful. Otherwise, Mrs. Stockham's teachings contain much that is good and helpful. Mrs. Stockham is at present located at No. 1120 East Twenty-eighth street, Los Angeles. She writes that she has purchased a bungalow in South Pasadena, where she expects to be at home after May 1.

Against Public Interest.

READERS of the Care of the Body are aware that—evidently following an injunction from the headquarters of the medical trust to "get busy," all over the country—the political doctors have been making an effort to get through the California State Legislature a bill establishing a State Bureau of Health, with special reference to the school system, that would enable one particular medical school—the drugging and cutting school—to dictate in regard to the care of the bodies of all school children.

Naturally this has aroused a storm of protest. Indignation meetings have been held, and most of the Parent-Teachers' associations of this section have sent strong protests to Sacramento.

Such being the facts, it may be imagined how great was the surprise when the discovery was announced that Prof. George L. Leslie, director of science and health in the public schools of Los Angeles, had been in Sacramento on leave of absence, on full pay, for the purpose of lobbying in favor of this bill, to pass which money has been contributed by interested parties.

The Los Angeles Board of Education disclaims connection or knowledge of the action of Prof. Leslie. He gave them to understand that he was going to Sacramento to look after general legislation affecting the schools.

Penalties of Civilization.

"MAKING LIFE WORTH WHILE" is the title of a book of over 300 pages, by Herbert Westcott Fisher. (Doubleday, Page & Co., publishers, Garden City, New York. Price $1.20, postage 12c.)

The author, who is a brother of Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale, discusses, in a simple direct manner, such subjects as Plasticity, Happiness, Mental Obstacles, Diet, and Fatigue. He gives condensed rules of personal hygiene, and a health manual for office men. In his dietetic suggestions he advises the gradual substitution of fruits and nuts and salads for other and less wholesome foods.

Here are sensible remarks in regard to the harm done by one-sided occupations, forced upon a majority of us by what we call "civilization:"

"But look at the body alone. That is our main concern. Who can doubt that it was intended to run, leap, wrestle, fight, swim, climb, dance and shout—a thousand muscles performing their appointed tasks of mutual yielding, and resistance around a changing point of equilibrium—and none of them discriminated by the joyous captain in the brain? Such a man needs no osteopath to search out a single gland and manipulate it. Nature sends him an impulse to yawn, stretch, shout, or run a mile, and the danger is averted. Turn for a moment to his environment. Who can doubt that the eye of man was intended to rely, for its chemical reactions, upon colors predominantly green and blue, with an occasional splash of scarlet and gold; and upon shapes that are of the jungle—confused, mysterious, exuberant; that the ear was meant to vibrate to the surgings of wind and waves, the rustlings of leaves, the singings and hummings and chirpings of Nature, punctuated by an occasional uproar and a thunderbolt; that the lungs were intended to be penetrated and suffused by perennial oxygen; that the skin was intended to be bathed in alternating air and water, sun and shadow, heat and cold; that the consciousness was intended to ebb gradually with sunset and revive gradually with the slow dawn; and that all the hours of a man's day, aside from those spent in sleeping and foraging and loafing, were intended to be thus occupied?

"This is man by nature. But what is he in practice? Even sailors and farmers do not approximate such a condition of primitive versatility. The sailor pulls well enough on a rope, but his hands become so constricted that he cannot open them wide. The farmer grows muscular over a plow, but eventually he cannot straighten up his body and relieve his vital organs from their cramped condition. The mill hand sits huddled over a lever, and over the lever, he contracts a vertigo, with the endless flapping of a single member. The college professor and the railroad president grow physically flaccid, and, even in their intellectual life, each overworks a single group of nerve centers, sometimes producing what might be called cancers of the mind. Our modern division of labor was invented, partly to accelerate the distribution of products—a noble purpose; but partly it was invented to appease an illusory hankering for passivity instead of exertion as the chief means of pleasure. One by one, man has deprived his hands, his feet, his teeth, his vocal chords and thereby that very essential organ, his diaphragm, of their appointed offices. But there has been a retributary shifting, as inevitable as the law of conservation; a shifting of the undiminished total burden. For all his apparent ease, man has had to compensate by the overexertion of a single member, if he be a laborer; or of his mind, if he be an inventor; or of his appetites, if he be a rich man's son. Hence the sudden upswooping within us of those thousand mysteries we call ailments—hence the dentist, the doctor, the osteopath, the Swedish agitator, the Turkish bath, and the other professional and belated correctives. This, then, our commercial organism, builded on the division of labor, is the burden wherein man's errors have been stereotyped and pre-

The last two days of the fast I was very dizzy—could not lift my head from the pillow without feeling as though I should faint. I weighed 128 pounds at the beginning of the fast, 115 pounds at its close. It is causing extraneous matter to be absorbed, I am sure, as the disappearance of protruding piles took place during the ten days rapidly, and now they are scarcely observable."

Many others who have undertaken to fast intelligently for the cure of serious disease have had similar experience.

The Mann Bill.

FOLLOWING brief dispatch from Washington was published under date of February 28:

"The House has passed the Mann bill, extending the scope of the public health and marine hospital service and changing its name to the public health service. There is nothing in the bill which relates to the practice of medicine or to the art of healing.

"The Mann bill also empowers the public health service to investigate the pollution of navigable lakes and streams."

So it seems that the political doctors managed to sneak this bill through the lower House, in the closing days of the session.

The dispatch is misleading in stating that "there is nothing in the hill which relates to the practice of medicine or to the art of healing." That is an idea that the political doctors have been studiously endeavoring to instill into the public mind, so as to make the people indifferent until the job was completed. The Mann bill contains the following provision:

"The Public Health Service may study and investigate the diseases of man and conditions influencing the propagation and spread thereof."

By a little stretching of this provision in the bill it would be easy for the doctors to constitute themselves a force armed with power to "try" any kind of a new serum on men, women and children.

The bill still has to face the Senate. Meantime, the people should redouble their efforts to prevent the consummation of such an un-American, tyrannical and dangerous project as this. Had it not been for the good work done by the National League for Medical Freedom, and other organizations that have been fighting this scheme, the people of the United States would have found themselves by this time enthralled in the chains of medical tyranny, which is worse than religious tyranny, because, while it is possible that we have souls, we know very surely that we possess bodies.

The people of the United States would stand aghast at the proposition of a State recognition of any particular religious sect. This, however, would not be nearly so bad as the recognition by the United States government of one school of medicine and a school which is being rapidly discredited and discarded.

The "regulars" pretend that if the Bureau of Health is established there would be no discrimination in favor of any particular school. In answer to this it is only necessary to call attention to the fact that there are now in the employ of the United States government about 8000 physicians, and that of these not one belongs to any other than the allopathic school. Do these doctors expect the public to believe that when greater power is granted them they will begin to let down the bars? Do they take the people of this country for idiots? Sometimes one is almost forced to the conclusion that they have a right to do so.

All Allopaths.

THE California State Board of Education issues a limited number of "Health and Development" certificates to physicians. To date, fifteen of these certificates have been issued. Every one of those to whom a certificate has been issued is an allopath. This shows how much chance any other school of medicine would have, should the proposed State Bureau of Health be established.

Open-air Schools

THE beautiful foothill town of Monrovia, in Los Angeles county, has been waking up of late, and making efforts to attract population. Monrovia was the first suburban subdivision resulting from the big real estate boom of twenty-five years ago, the first sale of lots having taken place on May 17, 1886. Its founders "builded better than they knew."

Now Monrovia is talking of making of its new grammar-school as nearly as possible an open-air school. This is an excellent idea. Open air for invalids is one of the sensible hygienic fads of the century. We need not, however, confine fresh air to invalids. Prevention is better than cure. Open air is good not only for consumptives, but for those suffering from other ailments, and for well people also.

While they have open-air schools in the severe climate of the East, surely California, with its ideal climate, should not be backward in this respect. It is of little advantage for people to come from less favored climates to California if when here they immure themselves in buildings.

Get out into the open, and get well and keep well.

Let Me Send You a Treatment of My Chinese Herbs Free

Wonderful Chinese Remedies From the Far East Given Away Free to the Sick and Suffering of America.

To one man or woman in each locality will be given, free, a proof treatment of Dr. Lee K. Chin's wonderful Chinese Roots, Barks and Herbs. This proof treatment, which is offered without one cent of cost, has been used in China for over four thousand years, and has cured more men and women than any known treatment now in existence. To prove what this wonderful treatment will do, Dr. Chin is offering a free treatment so that the skeptical may see and the doubters be convinced.

A cured patient is a doctor's best advertisement.

No matter how many other treatments you have tried; no matter how many other doctors have failed, Dr. Chin stands ready to prove to you at his own expense that his remedies will do the work. Sit down now and write Dr. Lee K. Chin, 409 Hall Safe Bldg., San Francisco, telling him in your own words just how you feel and from what you suffer most. He will then send you a treatment prepared to meet the requirements of your case, and which will convince you that you are not in the incurable state, but can and will be cured. This treatment will be sent to you in a plain wrapper with the postage paid.

Don't put this matter off until tomorrow just because there isn't paper or pencil handy. Look one up now and write immediately. This is your opportunity to get well. Don't waste it.

THE WIDOW WISE

Verses by Paul West ▾ Drawings by W. H. Loomis

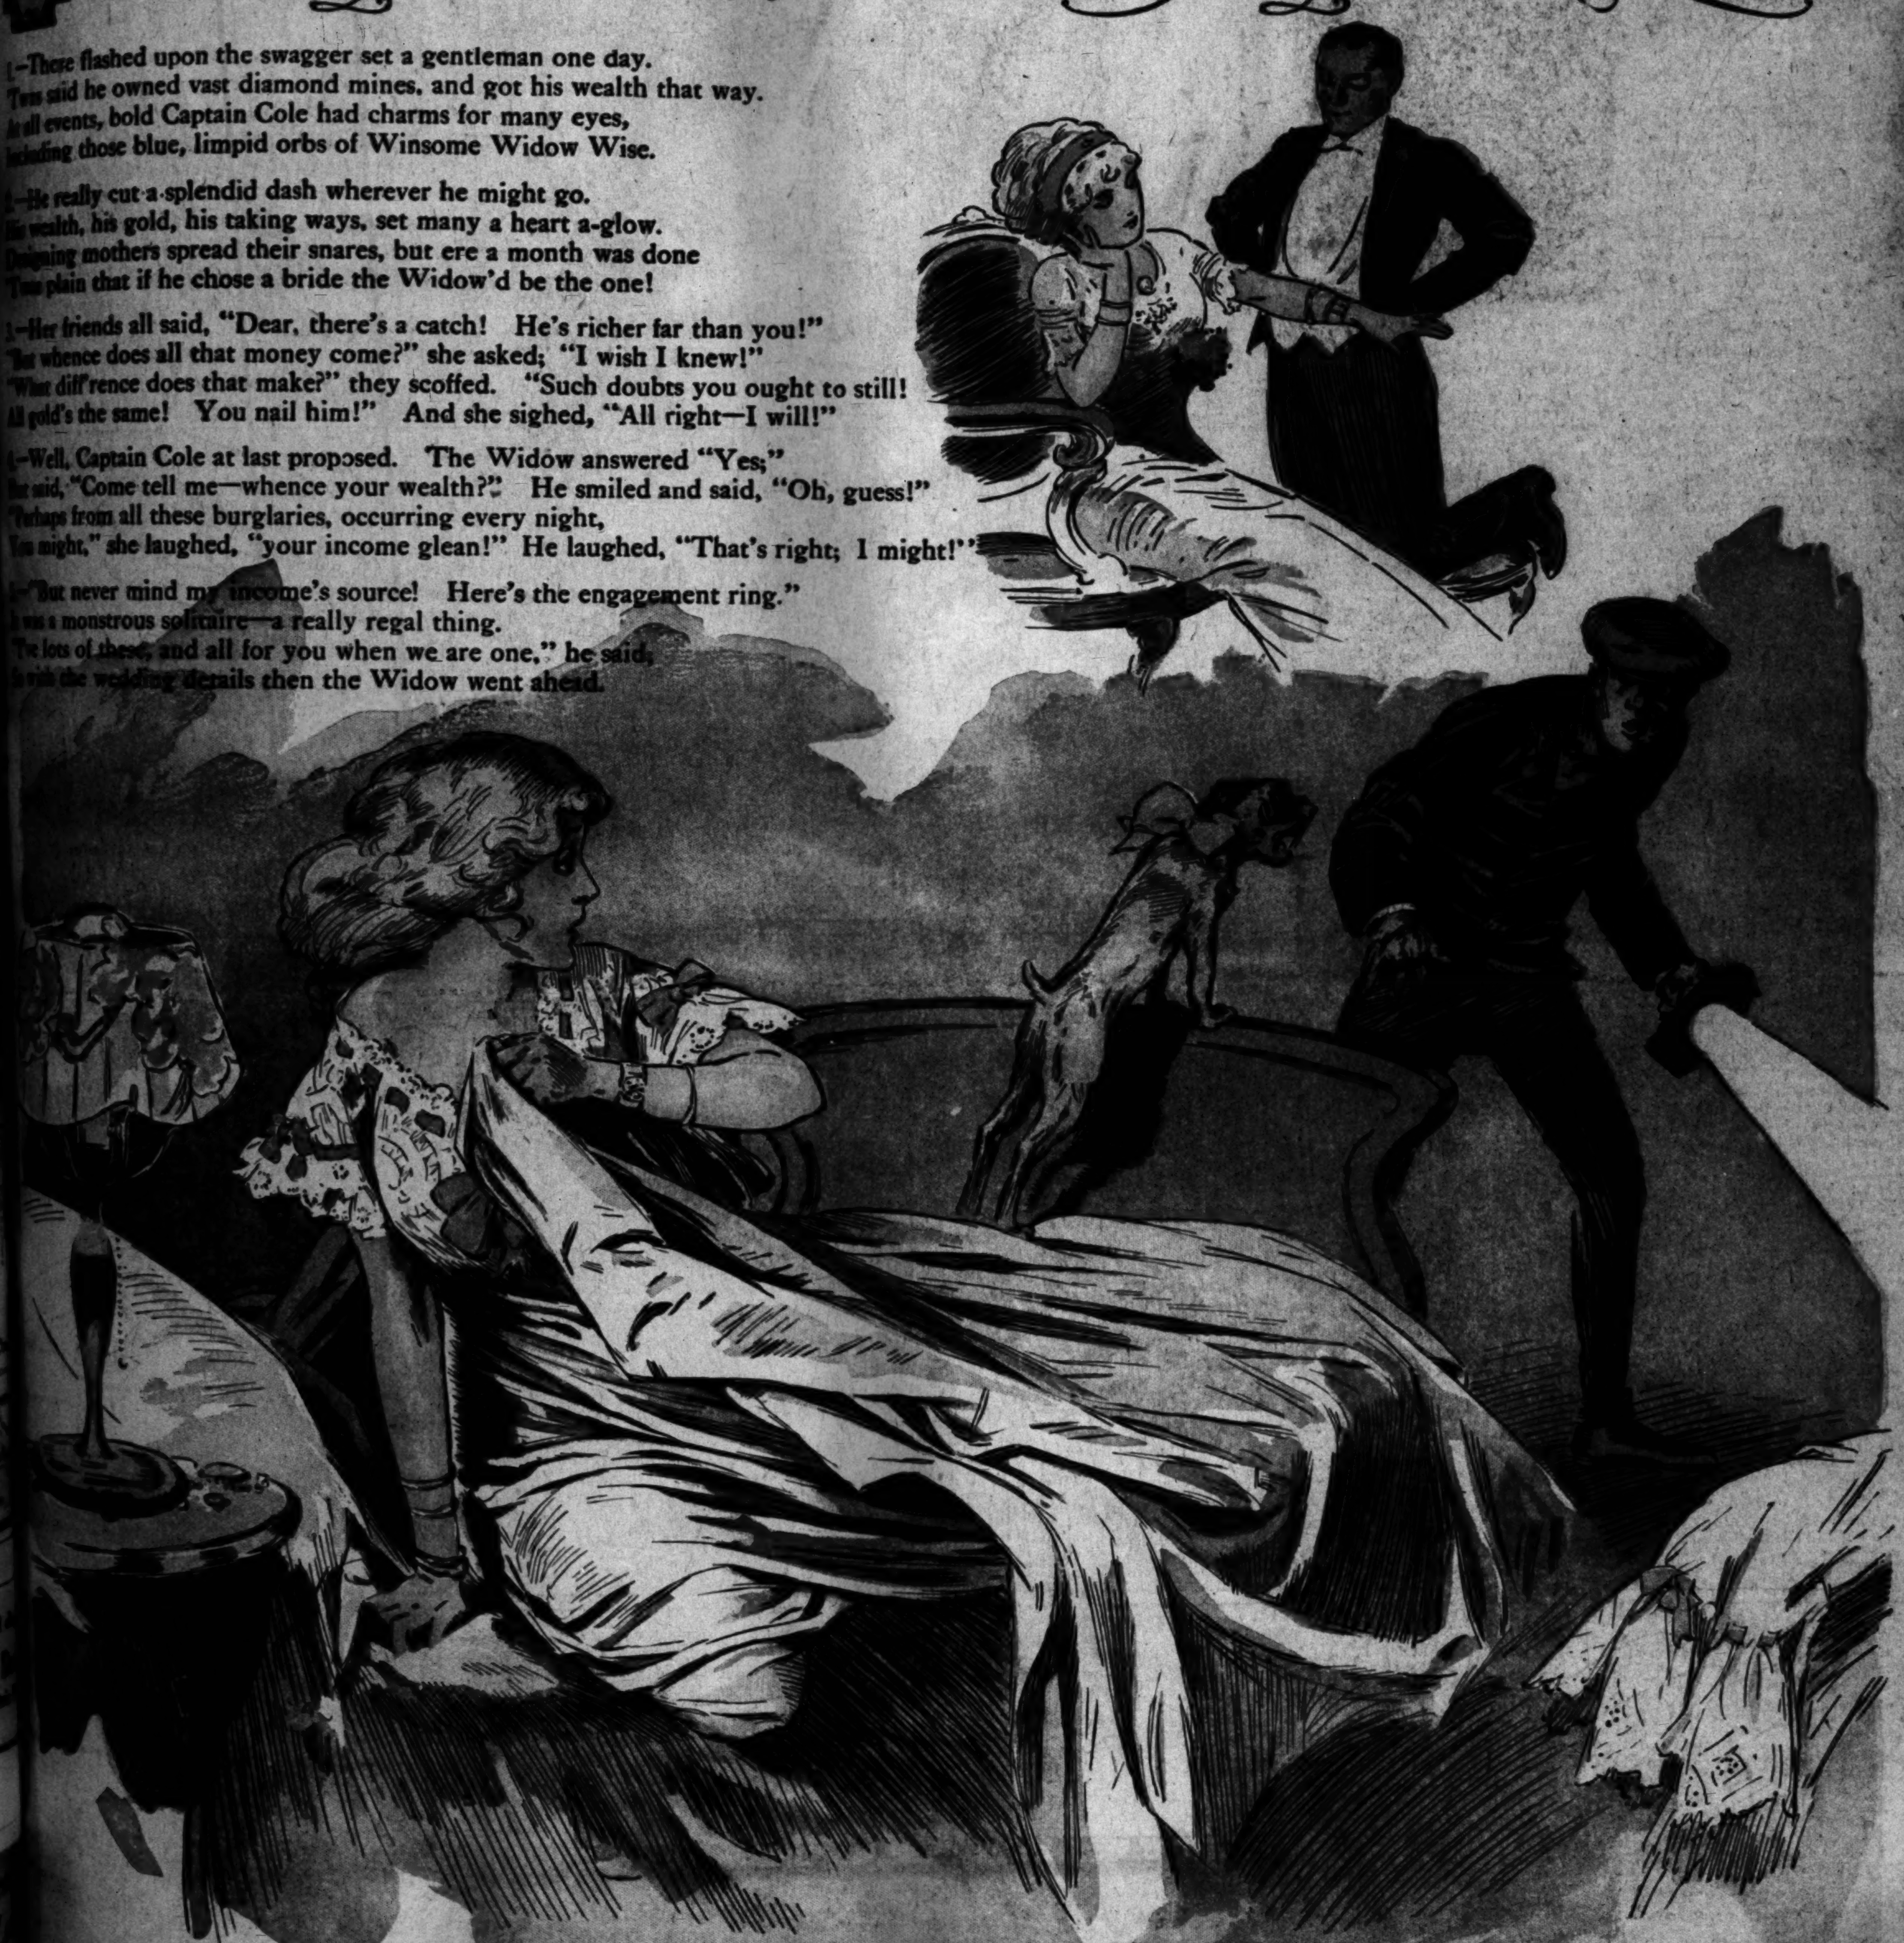
1.—There flashed upon the swagger set a gentleman one day.
'Twas said he owned vast diamond mines, and got his wealth that way.
At all events, bold Captain Cole had charms for many eyes,
Including those blue, limpid orbs of Winsome Widow Wise.

2.—He really cut a splendid dash wherever he might go.
His wealth, his gold, his taking ways, set many a heart a-glow.
Designing mothers spread their snares, but ere a month was done
'Twas plain that if he chose a bride the Widow'd be the one!

3.—Her friends all said, "Dear, there's a catch! He's richer far than you!"
"But whence does all that money come?" she asked; "I wish I knew!"
"What diff'rence does that make?" they scoffed. "Such doubts you ought to still!
All gold's the same! You nail him!" And she sighed, "All right—I will!"

4.—Well, Captain Cole at last proposed. The Widow answered "Yes;"
But said, "Come tell me—whence your wealth?" He smiled and said, "Oh, guess!"
"Perhaps from all these burglaries, occurring every night,
You might," she laughed, "your income glean!" He laughed, "That's right; I might!"

5.—"But never mind my income's source! Here's the engagement ring."
It was a monstrous solitaire—a really regal thing.
"I've lots of these, and all for you when we are one," he said;
So with the wedding details then the Widow went ahead.



6.—The while the Widow's house was being furbished new and bright
She went to stop with friends of hers; but all the livelong night
She'd lie awake and ponder, as the wedding day drew near.
"I love him for his taking ways, but—still there's something queer!"

7.—One night she woke. She heard a sound! Her sharp eyes pierced the gloom.
She saw a burglar's bull's-eye as he crept about the room
To where her jewels lay exposed. Strange courage filled her soul.
She pulled a chain! The lights flashed on, and there stood CAPTAIN COLE!

8.—"Great Scott!" he cried, then fled in haste, and safely got away.
"Farewell, since you my secret know!" he telegraphed next day.
"Poor chap!" she thought. "A crook? Of course; but still—" she dropped her eyes—

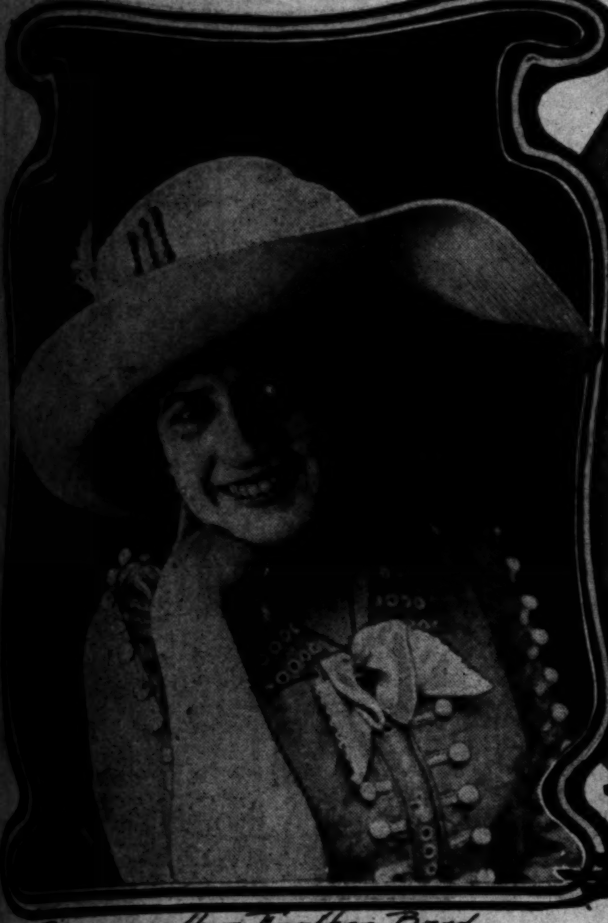
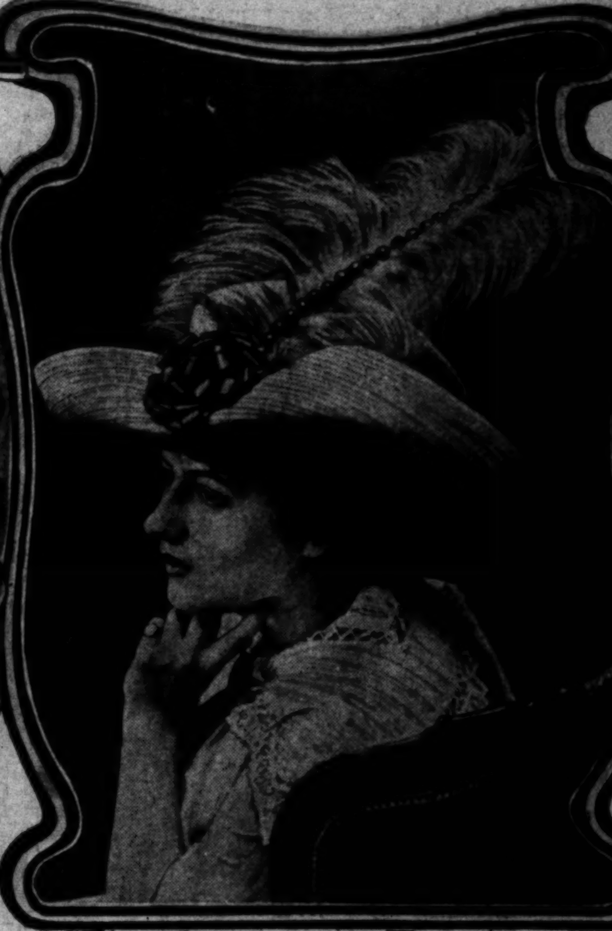
The Newest Turns in Spring Hats



Panama with a Feather Band



The Osprey on Leghorn

OF COURSE the expected has happened! Woman's pretty face, after suffering a partial eclipse, has emerged from the shadow of the mushroom and the Tyrolean shape and is smiling serenely from under the brim of the newest spring models. And the brim, in the majority of cases, turns up! There are other twists and turns in millinery, too, which you will recognize with the alertness that all women show when the ever-interesting subject of hats is suggested.

These models are from France and they are expensive. Indeed, you and I will not pay the prices asked for them; but we can admire them, and if we are very practical we can buy domestic shapes and trim them with our clever American materials at reasonable, appealing prices.

There's a huge supple panama that any woman will rejoice in. Its crown is large and high and its brim flares away from the face and one side. Around the crown is a bandeau of black and white feathers, fastened at the right under a wheel of tiny quills.

Quite its opposite is the little turban of black chip. The high brim rolls abruptly up from the face, and at one side a little cabochon of black feathers holds white aigrettes in a high, upstanding line. This type of hat is excellent for the little woman. If the osprey be disapproved of, a substitute in the form of three or four quills can be used. These may be of straw braid or of metallic gauze over silk.

Leghorn in the newest shape is trimmed with a green osprey and a greenish gold rosette. The crown is quite wide at the top, and the brim is turned up to the base of the crown before the trimming is adjusted. Notice how the vein is stiffened with a row of green beads—just a touch of the unusual, that's all, but copyable.

The hat turned up at the back is shown in an attractive form of burnt straw. A facing of dark brown velvet is given to the under surface, while a yellow coque feather is curved across the front. The high oval crown is one of the season's marks.

Hinting of Spain is the round hat with a crown of black and white feathers. The straw is of bright blue chip, and the large crown allows the shape to rest quite low down on the head. This shape in any other color defies the wind and weather and yet has a charm of line that is generally becoming.

A study in red and black shows one of fashion's turns. The supple straw is red, with an entire under-facing of black velvet. The brim turns up entirely around the edge, and a bright red uncurled ostrich feather gives extra height at one side.

But if you prefer coarse straw, fashion is lenient. The round shape of red is made over a wire frame. Its round crown holds two supple quills of red—and although the story is short, the charm is endless. King's blue, emerald green or a black-and-white mixed straw will be effective if made after this model.

Always popular is the tricorne. Here it is in the favored black-and-white alliance. The straw is very soft and the point is worn at one side. A white wing trims the hat at the right and the white binding of straw softens the line of the brim. This shape bids fair to carry its owner through spring and summer with great success.

These straws show which way the millinery wind will blow. Wise is the woman who can use the suggestions in her own exploitation of the most becoming lines and colors.

WHEN ONE ROAST PLAYS MANY PARTS

MONG many housewives a roast of beef is considered an expensive dish, and the purchase of a oast of fair proportions an ex- gance which is not to be in- d in often. In its place our house- er has, sometimes, a steak, some- chops, sometimes even a shoul- f lamb, and, looking at the bill ach of these dishes, contrasts it what the "best cut" of beef would nd congratulates herself that she aved money.

o not want to dash her pride in rugality, but the beef would have more economical than any other of ubstitutes she has selected. To be the original price is perhaps that of the steak and much more the chops or shoulder of lamb—prime rib roast of beef leaves very of a $2 bill. But what has she after one meal has been supplied ny one of the dishes that I have loned? There is, perhaps, a little f the tough end of the steak, good to add to the stockpot or to put some other cold meat for a stew ash. There never is anything re- ing of a chop except the bone, and s, like Kipling's poor hero in "The t That Failed," one possesses a dog who must be fed on "chop- s," even these will have to be thrown away. Of the shoulder of lamb, after a family of average size has dined from it, there are also bones. These may be converted by slow boiling into the foundation for a white broth or cream soup, but there is seldom enough meat left to furnish even a part of a second meal.

Not so with roast beef. For she who watches well the ways of her household can make much of this popular viand. When it is cut in the shop at which she buys it she will insist that her butcher remove the ribs and roll the meat, skewering or tying it into a sightly round. She will also demand that the ribs and bits of fat cut off—known in butcherly parlance as "trimmings"—be sent home with the roast. The bones are then put into a pot with enough cold water to cover them, with a sliced onion, carrot and turnip and a stalk of celery, and set at the side of the range, where they will simmer slowly for some hours. After which salt and pepper may be added and when the "stock" thus made is chilled and skimmed of all grease that rises to the surface it forms the basis for a delicious beef broth, which may be thickened with barley, rice or sago. So already our roast has given us a nourishing soup for one dinner. Now all that remains of the housewife's purchase is solid meat, without a waste bit of bone.

Even the preparation of the beef for its first appearance may differ with each week. When this is the case the family does not weary of what one man calls "the old standby." There are ways of preparing it that will make it seem almost like a new kind of meat. It may be roasted by itself, with white potatoes browned around it; it may be served in a bed of tender and light Yorkshire pudding; it may have a dressing a la Milanese, which transforms it completely in flavor. To know how to let the meat "play many parts" is to insure its popularity. Good as plain roast beef may be—hot on one day and cold on the next—John and the children will tire of it presented in this way, and this only, week after week.

As long as there is any of the piece de resistance left it may be dressed in some new fashion and be so well disguised that it will not be recognized by its best friends as the Original Sirloin with whom they made acquaintance at the noonday Sunday dinner. The housemother who cannot make one good-sized roast of beef masquerade in three different shapes must be lacking in ingenuity or have an unusually large or ravenous family.

One of the best ways of serving roast beef for its first appearance is with Yorkshire pudding. To make this, put into a bowl two cups of flour sifted three times with a teaspoonful each of salt and baking powder. Into a pint of milk stir two well-beaten eggs, add this to the sifted flour and beat until free of all lumps. Do all this a quarter of an hour before taking the beef from the oven. Dip out six tablespoonfuls of gravy from around the beef, skim off as much of the grease from it as possible, turn into a square pan and set this on the upper grating of the oven until very hot. While it is heating prepare the batter as just described and pour it immediately into the sizzling fat. Bake quickly to a light brown. When done transfer the beef to a hot platter, cut the Yorkshire pudding into squares with a very sharp knife and lay it around the beef.

For beef a la mode select a large roast, not less than 8 pounds—more if you have a good-sized family. Have your butcher lard it with strips of salt pork projecting on each side of the beef. In the spaces left between the bits of pork make incisions clean through the meat from one side to the other. Make a forcemeat of one part finely minced salt pork to three parts of fine crumbs. Season this mixture with salt, pepper, minced parsley, sweet marjoram and thyme, and moisten to a paste with vinegar and a little Worcestershire sauce. Fill the holes in the beef as full as they can be pressed with this mixture. Wind a strip of strong muslin firmly about the meat and fasten it securely. Put the roast into a deep pot, pour about it enough well-seasoned stock to cover it, add a tablespoonful of vinegar, a bay leaf, a minced onion, a sliced carrot, several cloves, 2 blades of mace and a stalk of celery cut small. Cover closely and simmer, allowing fifteen minutes to the pound. When so tender that a fork runs into the meat easily, remove the pot from the fire and let the meat get cold in the liquor. When stone cold take out the beef, put it on a large plate and lay a weighted plate flat upon the top of it. Leave the meat thus weighted for at least twelve hours; longer if possible. Slice with a very sharp knife into thin slices.

For beef a la Milanese roast in the ordinary way. When the meat is done transfer it to a hot platter, skim the gravy left in the pan and thicken it with browned flour. Have ready a generous handful of sultana raisins and an equal quantity of pine nuts. These may be bought at many of the large city groceries, but if you cannot get them, blanch almonds and split them lengthwise. Stir the nuts and stemmed raisins into the thickened gravy, season with salt and pepper and pour over and around the beef.

Instead of serving roast beef on its second appearance cold, prepare it as follows: Lay the slices of cold beef in a dressing made of a saltspoonful of white pepper, twice as much salt, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar and three tablespoonfuls of olive oil. Mix well and pour over the beef. Leave for an hour, then drain each slice, dip into a thick fritter batter and fry in deep fat to a golden brown. Serve very hot.

Another way of preparing beef for a second appearance is in a rice-and-tomato scallop. Boil rice until thoroughly done and drain very dry. Add just enough well-seasoned tomato sauce to make a rather stiff mixture. Put a layer of this in a pudding dish and press it smooth around the sides of the dish, making a rice casing inside the dish.

If this will not remain in place, put a pan or bowl inside the pudding dish to keep the rice in place until it is stiff and cold. Then remove the bowl. This rice mixture must be prepared some hours before you wish to use it. Cut the roast beef into small pieces of uniform size; put them into a saucepan with a well-seasoned and thickened gravy, and stir until heated through. Remove and set aside until cool. Pour this meat preparation into the rice-lined dish; set in the oven until very hot and serve.

If one prefer potato to rice, one may prepare meat as just directed and pour it into a pudding dish lined with mashed potato that has been allowed to become cold and stiff.

A CHEESE PA

DURING the last two or three months one of the favorite amusements among our young people has been what they term "cheese parties." A young lady desirous of entertaining her friends very informally, invites about a dozen of her "intimates" to spend the evening with her and partake of a Welsh rarebit. One of the peculiar charms of this entertainment is "the come-and-go-early" plan, so every one is on hand by 8 or shortly after. The hostess must have one pound of fresh, dry cheese (any grocer will give the proper kind), cut into small pieces and placed in the chafing-dish; salt, mustard, cayenne, butter and a bottle of Bass' ale, or pitcher of sweet milk, must be on the table near by. Mix a cup of milk, or about the same quantity of Bass' ale, with the cheese, light the little lamp and allow the mixture to become partially warmed and soft before calling the guests into the dining room. Then add, when the cheese is somewhat melted, four teaspoonfuls of butter, four (small) of mustard, two of salt and a little pepper. Thin it well and cook until it thickens, being careful not to let it curdle. Some experts consider an egg necessary, but many do not think it an improvement. Half a slice of bread or toast should be ready

BECAUSE of the enormous number of letters sent to the Exchange, I must ask ontributors to limit their communications to 100 words, except cases of formulas or recipes hich require greater space. I ant all my correspondents to ave a showing in the Corner, nd if my request in this respect complied with it will be possi- le to print many more letters.

Question of Baking Powder

OME time ago a correspondent asked about the effect upon baking powder dough of waiting some hours before ooked.

the earlier years of my housewifely when there were "only two of us," recipes as found in cook books were large for us. I formed the habit of g a bowlful of the dough when I cake in the morning, setting it aside cool place until the evening. Then it turned over a pudding dish of pared sliced tart apples and baked as a ling. Eaten with sweet sauce, it was a e favorite with us.

e texture of the cake and that of the ling made from the same batter was unlike. The cake was smooth, soft fine grained; the pudding was lighter, ser in grain and spongy. It was soft rst, but quickly became dry and hard. ave a friend and neighbor who is noted the excellence of her doughnuts. They made with sweet milk and baking der. One of the requirements is to let dough stand in a cold place for some before rolling out and frying. She s the dough directly after breakfast puts it in a cold place to stand while does the morning housework. The hnuts thus made are lighter than if were cooked as soon as they are d.

Boned Ham

Have you room in the Exchange for a recipe I can confidently recommend to my sister housekeepers? It is a pleasing dish.

Stuffed Ham

Remove the bone from the ham with a strong, sharp knife and fill the cavity thus left with a dressing made to suit the taste of the cook. A good stuffing may be made of breadcrumbs wet with milk, 2 eggs, a tablespoonful of butter, thyme and celery and half a dozen chopped oysters.

Bind securely into shape and inclose the ham in a paste of flour and water to keep the juices in. Tie or sew the ham thus enveloped in a pudding cloth; put into a pot of boiling water and boil gently, allowing twenty minutes per pound.

Remove the ham from the water when done and take off the bag and the paste crust. Pare the skin away carefully. Put the skinned ham into the covered roaster, coat well with fine breadcrumbs, set in a moderate oven and cook (covered) ten minutes for each pound of ham.

Mrs. R. M. (Lakeport, Cal.).

A new and toothsome dish. You may well call it "pleasing." The only difficult part of the process is boning the ham. When I try it I shall send the ham to my accommodating butcher to perform the operation. Or, if John have a keen carver and a strong deft hand he may be adequate to the task. The stuffed ham must be especially nice when cold and sliced thin.

A Dust Screen for Registers

1. I would say to the housemother to whom life is made a burden by the dust arising through the registers of a hot-air furnace that by spreading under each register a layer of silk batting cloth she will catch most of the dust and yet not hinder the heat from coming up. A weekly washing of the batting is all that is needed—an easy task compared with the eternal dusting made necessary by the floating dust.

2. I have also discovered that the best Dutch cheese I ever ate was made by myself, at home, in town. I put a big pan of sour milk, or buttermilk, or a mixture of the two, over a register, cover it to keep out dust and leave it there all day or all night. When it is firm, or "loppered," it will be ready to strain through cheesecloth. The slow heat makes the cheese creamy and not hard to dry.

Mix the curd with sweet cream, salt and pepper and serve either warm or cold. If made at night, you may have a very delicate breakfast dish.

I hope you can use this. We have received so much good from the Exchange that I wish to reciprocate the benefit to some extent.

M. B. (Chicago).

By a seeming accident I made a similar discovery anent cream cheese last summer. For forty years I had the same way. My cook told me, with a contrite sigh, that she had forgotten to put a jar of milk in the cellar the day before and overlooked it upon the pantry shelf until it was a "loppered" mass. This was early in the afternoon, and we had planned to have a cold supper, the weather being intensely warm and that being the waitress' "day out." An idea seized me suddenly. I turned the solid curd into a cheesecloth bag and left it to drip for two hours in a cool corner. At the end of the time the bowl set to catch the whey was full of the grayish-green liquid, and in the bag was a lump of smooth creamy cheese. I beat into it a little sweet cream; salted it to taste, and served at the early supper the most delicious cottage cheese we had ever eaten. It was as bland as sweet cream and lacked the granulation inseparable from curd heated to scalding. Since then I have never cooked curds for cottage cheese.

The gentle slow heat applied by our Chicago member would take the place in cold weather of summer warmth.

French Fried Cakes

I send a recipe for French fried cakes, asked for by "Mrs. E. G. S." (Preston, Cuba). They are really "German fried-airis," and very popular with Germans and others who are fortunate enough to partake of them. Once eaten, they are always liked:

One cup of cream, the yolks of 6 eggs (never the whites), 1 cup of sugar, a pinch of salt, 1 tablespoonful of brandy and flour for a soft dough—about 3 cups of sifted flour. Roll into a sheet a fifth of an inch in thickness and cut into squares with a fluting-iron. Run the iron (or tracer) twice across each square. Fry in deep fat about one minute, or until the squares are of a golden brown, turning but once.

Use two forks in putting them on to fry, and twist them into zigzags, so that they will not remain flat. They are prettier formed thus. Do not put too many into the fat at once, as they are easily broken. And take them out as soon as they are done. The flavor is injured by long cooking, as is also the color. They should not get really brown. Nor should the dough be rolled more than once. Handling makes it tough. These are fine! I hope "Mrs. E. G. S." will like them!

Mrs. B. M. C. (St. Paul, Minn.).

She will surely, if once she succeeds in making them aright. I recognize the dainty crullers as old family favorites. We called them "Aunt Margaret's Crooked Jumbles." The dainty gentlewoman from whom we had the recipe twisted the fluted cakes with a swift turn of the fingers in dropping them into the fat. In Common Sense in whom they were named, but we achieved a very fair imitation.

Drawn Butter Sauce

"I. C. H." (Burkesville, Ky.) asks how to make drawn butter sauce for cakes and puddings.

Just as you would make it for meats and fish, but leave out the pepper and add sweetening. Flavor with lemon juice, if one desires to have a tart sauce. If you have no lemons, substitute vinegar. Sweeten to taste and "draw" the butter in milk or water, as you prefer. We like milk for the sweet sauce.

Mrs. L. M. C. (Independence, Ia.).

Magazines for Shut-In

In a recent number of the Exchange you mentioned a shut-in and her craving for magazines. If you will send her address to me, I will mail her some regularly.

HELEN F. L. (Detroit, Mich.).

If you had given the signature attached to the appeal of the shut-in you would have had her address by mail, although it is against our rules to answer requests for addresses when not accompanied by stamps for reply. Our shut-ins who long for reading matter have a warm place in our hearts, and we are ever ready to strain a point in their favor. There are so many of them that we cannot identify the particular case you would relieve.

In the hope that she may guess for whom your kindly offer is intended, I print your letter. Or, perhaps, you have kept the paper and are, therefore, able to aid us in the quest?

Positively Last Appearance

Albeit we have called a halt in the ber would write a formula warranted to bring forth the peaceable fruits of excellent cookery. Also, if the truth must be told in full, because the contributor is a man and "a jolly good fellow."

For the information of "Mrs. S.," of Elgin, Ill.

Peach cobbler a "beverage"? Oh, my, no! In the sunny south it is made in a deep pan, something after the style of a "meat pie." The peaches are peeled and left whole, or halved, properly sugared and a liberal chunk of butter put into them, with a lovely pie crust on top (punctured with a fork), and baked in the oven the same as any good old pie is baked, and served hot with plenty of rich cream. Apple cobbler may be made in the same way. Our southern colored woman says: "Good? Uh huh! Mos' as good as 'possum an' sweet tutehs."

You must have thought it a "beverage" akin to "sherry cobbler"!

Canned Meat

I note in the Exchange an inquiry from R. C. M., Pittsburg, Pa., regarding canned meat. I inclose a clipping from the Dakota Farmer, Aberdeen, S. D., which answers the question. I have much or such disagreeable work as pickling meat, and gives a desirable variety.

You say it is cheaper to buy such supplies if one's time is worth anything. I agree with you, if materials and fuel have to be bought for cash at retail prices; but where wood, meat and fruit are home grown and would not sell in town for very much, the housekeeper's time cannot be used more profitably than in making use of these products.

Mrs. E. G. S., Preston, Cuba, asks regarding a special sort of French fried cakes. They are made by taking chou paste, as for Boston cream puffs, putting it in a pastry bag with a star tube and squeezing in rings two inches across on to four-inch squares of white paper. Put each, paste side down, into deep fat; in a short time the paper may be removed with a slight pull at one corner, which may be elevated with a fork; then finish as any fried cake. If this inquirer will take raised doughnut dough when it is ready for the last rising, form it into small balls and gash each more than half through, put a bit of jelly in the center, moisten the edges of the gash and press together firmly without putting the ball out of shape, then let rise and fry as usual, she will have the bull's eyes requested.

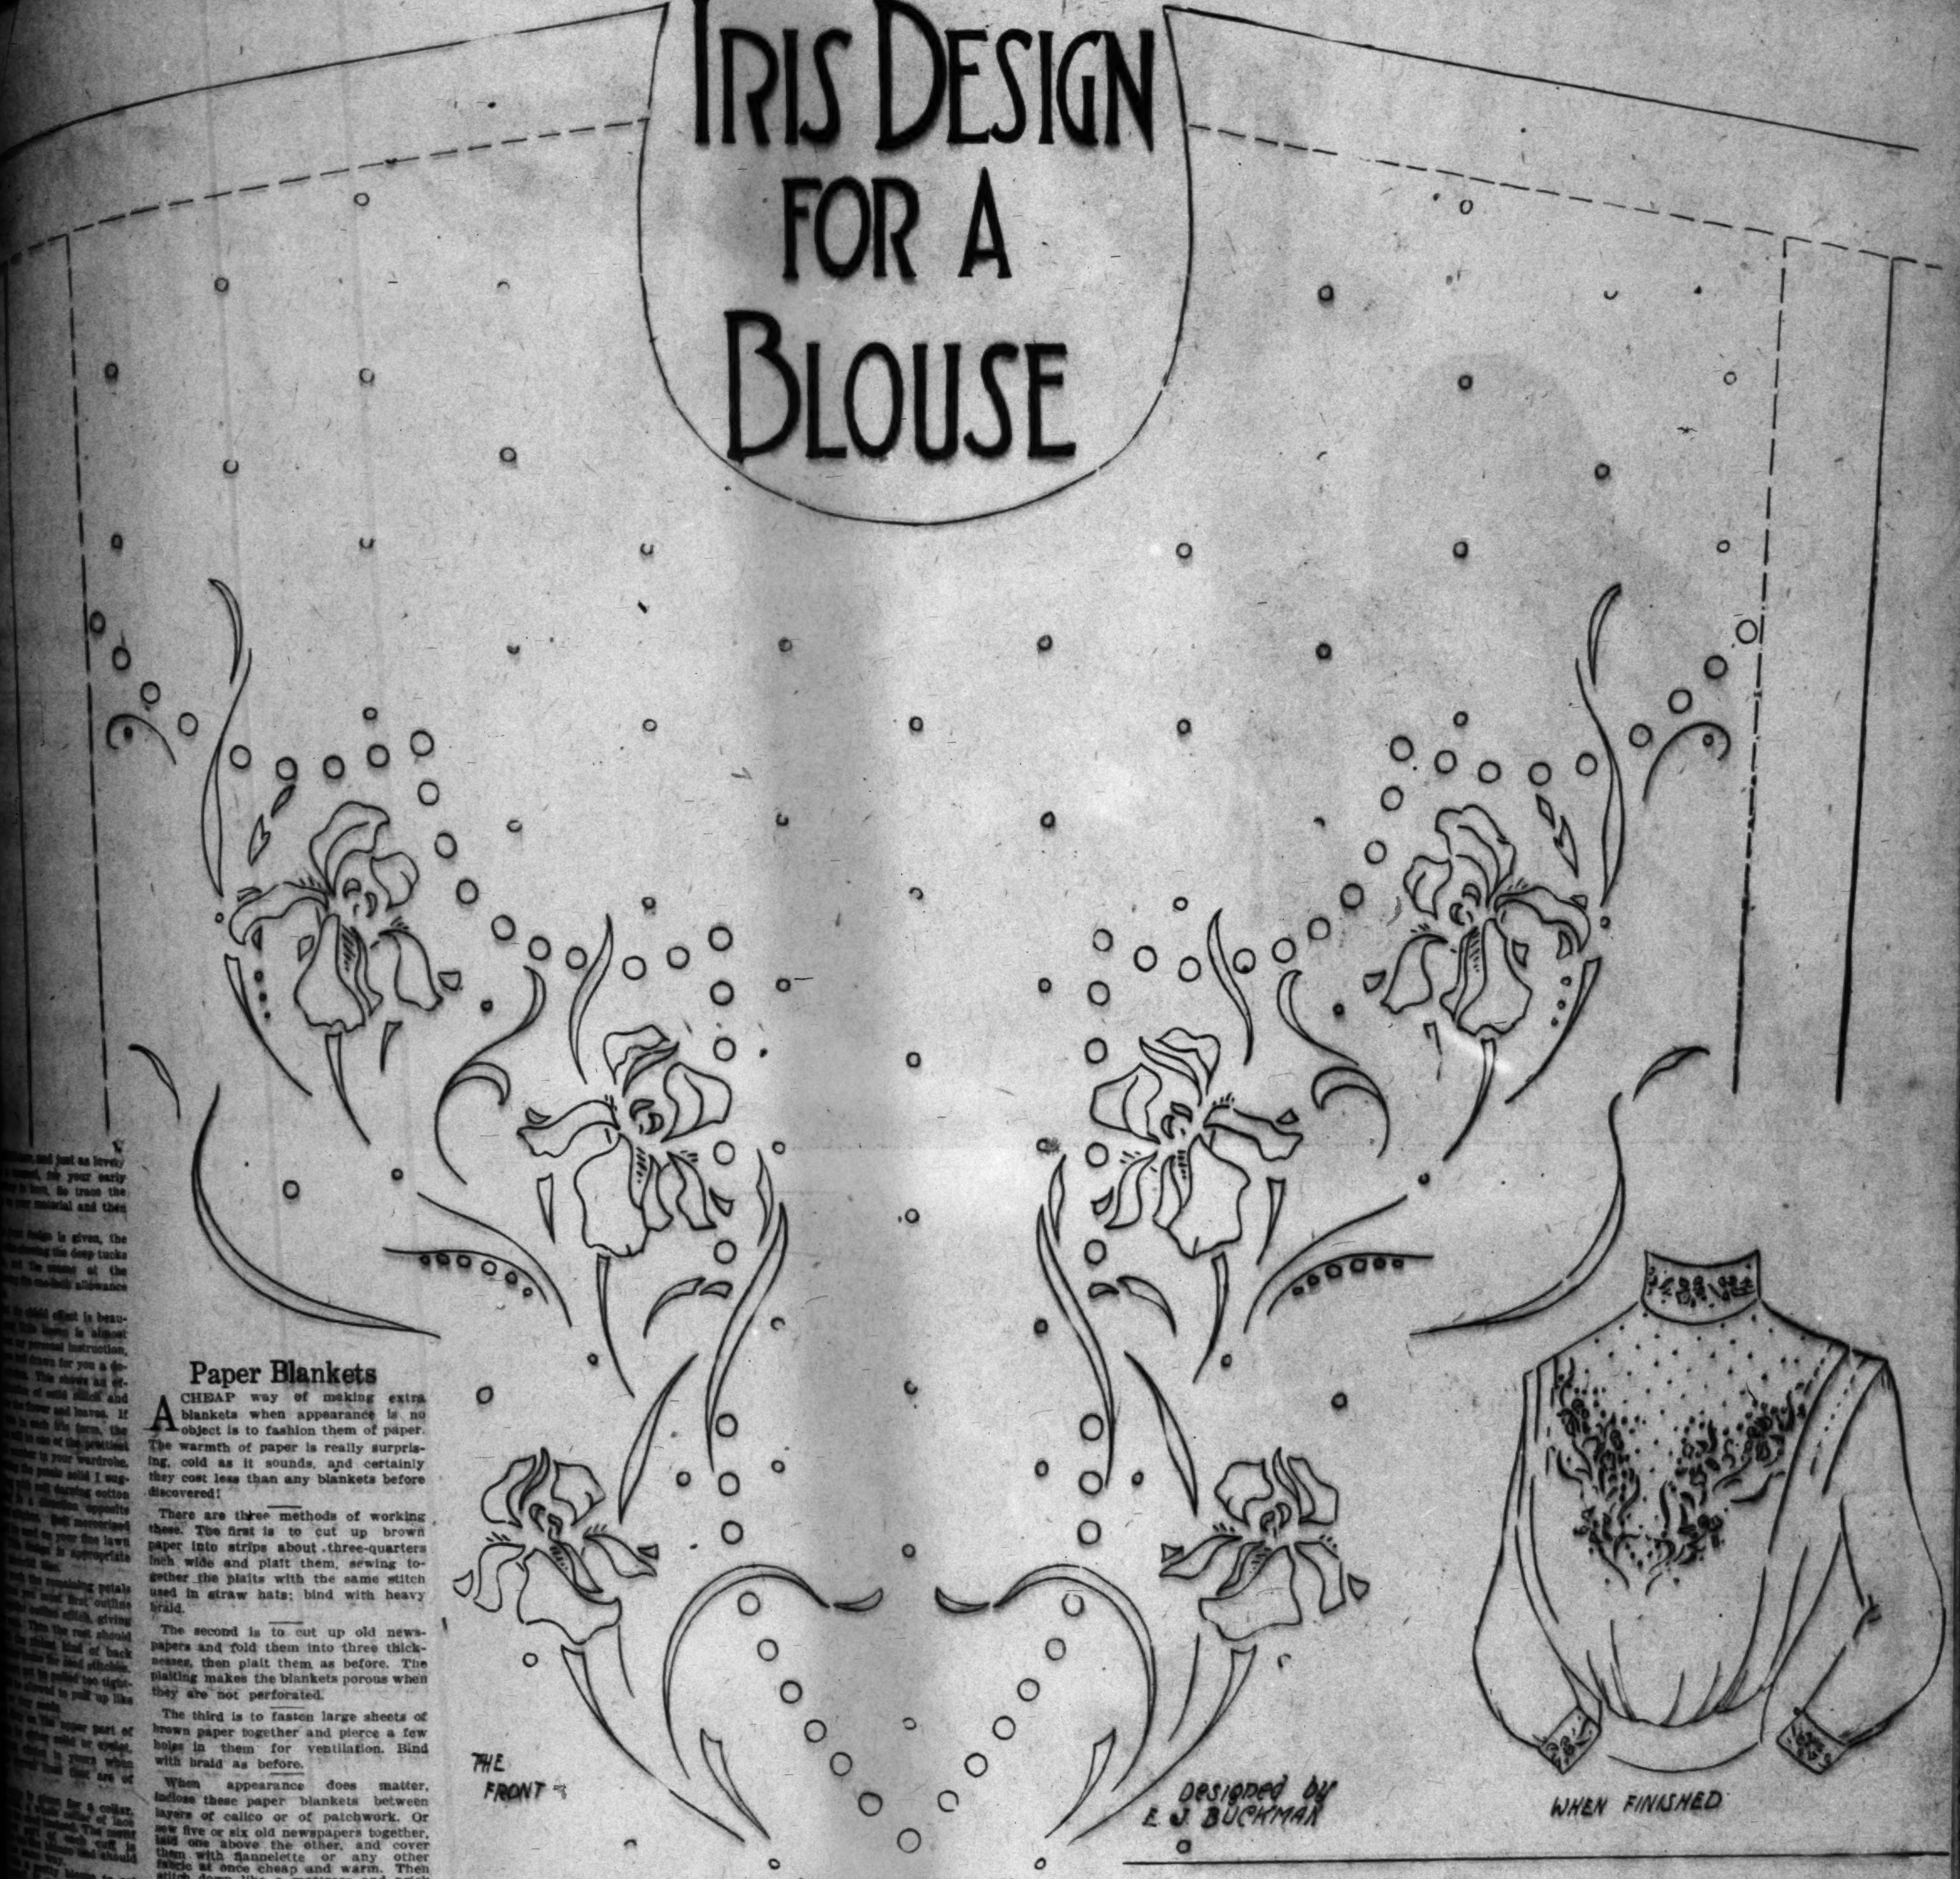
IRIS DESIGN FOR A BLOUSE



Paper Blankets

A CHEAP way of making extra blankets when appearance is no object is to fashion them of paper. The warmth of paper is really surprising, cold as it sounds, and certainly they cost less than any blankets before discovered!

There are three methods of working these. The first is to cut up brown paper into strips about three-quarters inch wide and plait them, sewing together the plaits with the same stitch used in straw hats; bind with heavy braid.

The second is to cut up old newspapers and fold them into three thicknesses, then plait them as before. The plaiting makes the blankets porous when they are not perforated.

The third is to fasten large sheets of brown paper together and pierce a few holes in them for ventilation. Bind with braid as before.

When appearance does matter, inclose these paper blankets between layers of calico or of patchwork. Or sew five or six old newspapers together, laid one above the other, and cover them with flannelette or any other fabric at once cheap and warm. Then stitch down like a mattress and prick with a pin for ventilation.

These blankets are best made by two persons, one working at each side, with the goods laid flat on a large table. In this way one can be made in an hour.
